During our meetings I, with other brethren and sisters, was called to go to Springfield, Ohio, to visit a man that was sick. He knew something of our people but had not mingled with them for many years. We talked with him on the subject of religion, and, although weak, he wished to unite with the church and was baptized. His time here on earth may not be long, but we do trust that he will spend the remnant of his days in the fear of God. Why should we wait till we are sick? Let us take warning while we are in health. After remaining at home for two weeks, we commenced a series of meetings in Georgetown, Ohio, Feb. 2. This is a joint house, situated between the Salem and the Ludlow congregations. We had a very encouraging meeting at this point, with very good attendance and the best of order. We closed on the evening of March 11, after preaching nineteen sermons. Four dear souls made the good confession and were baptized to walk in newness of life. May God bless these sisters that they may be shining lights! I felt sad that I was obliged to close these meetings in the midst of such good interest, but as I had arranged to commence at Pyrmont on the evening of the 12th, I could not remain without causing disappointment here, which I did not like to do. We had our first meeting at Pyrmont last night, with fair attendance. May the Lord bless the work here and every-where, is my prayer! Henry Frantz.

To the General Brotherhood.

We the members and friends of the German Baptist church, of Wallace, Nebr., tender our heart-felt thanks to our Eastern Brethren and friends, who so generously donated their time and money to our aid. We hope and trust that the Good Lord will always bless you, and that not one of you, who so gladly opened your kind hearts and stretched forth your helping hand, may ever see such sights, or go through what we must, before we can raise a crop. By the help of God, we will never forget you. Can our hearts make the pen express words of praise that will do you justice? No, we can not praise you enough, but wherein we fail, may the Good Lord do the rest. The church's blessings rest upon you, who have helped us in our hour of trial!

Allen Cripe,
Elias Shomaker,
C. H. Johnson, } Committee.

We have checked out $99.00, given out thirty-three orders, and aided nearly one hundred persons, great and small. A. Cripe.

In behalf of the brethren and sisters of the Colby church, Thomas Co., Kans., as well as the friends of the vicinity, who enjoyed a share of the liberal donation given us through Bro. D. L. Miller, of Mt. Morris, Ill., we would express our sincere gratitude. We shall ever remember the kind hearts and liberal hands of the donors, and our humble prayer is that the Father above may bless them richly, both temporally and spiritually. We are still in need of some help, especially of corn for feed and seed, but trust that the Lord may graciously supply all our wants C. H. Brown.

From Louisiana.

In answer to many inquirers, I give the following additional information and also answer several questions.

Calcasieu Parish is traversed from the North-east to the South-west by deep, navigable rivers with channels from twenty to thirty rods wide, and thirty to sixty feet deep. There is a distance of thirty to forty miles from one river to the other. There are four or five of them and, as they draw nearer the Gulf, they close together. Jennings is about forty miles from the Gulf. Five miles from Jennings, three of these rivers run together, and twelve miles south empty into Lake Arthur. Lacksine River is fifteen miles west of this and empties into Big Lake.

The immigration here this winter was so great that there was no room to accommodate all that came. Many had to leave. Some never unloaded. With all the saw mills, lumber could not be furnished in sufficient quantity to build houses for the accommodation of all that desired shelter. While I have not answered near all the questions desired in the many letters, I will say this, Take the advice of Bro. Sutter and come to see for yourselves. I have two new farms to lease yet, but can not say how soon they may be taken up. I would be pleased if brethren in good standing would take them.

1. How long have you been in Louisiana?

Ans.—A part of three winters and one summer.

2. Where did you formerly live?

Ans.—Originally in Maryland, then thirty-seven years in Illinois, and came direct from Kansas here.

3. Is the country hilly or level?

Ans.—It is not hilly, level or bluffy, but a gradual slope of rolling valley land, from the rivers and lakes back in the interior of the prairie, to the height of sixty feet above Gulf level.

4. What is the kind, color and depth of soil? How deep to water?

Ans. -Color of soil along rivers and lakes is dark loam; on high land, prairie soil, dark gray. Depth of soil along rivers, several feet. High land, from twelve to eighteen inches. Depth to water from sixteen to thirty feet.

5. What kind of water, kind of subsoil?

Ans.—The water is generally soft. The subsoil in some parts is light yellow, in other parts dark red.

6. What is a fair yield of corn per acre? What of cotton?

Ans.—The estimate of corn to acre is from twenty to fifty bushels; cotton, one bale, gross; neat ginned, one-half bale.

7. What are the main crops?

Ans.—Main crops are rice, cotton and sugar cane. The general products of South-western Louisiana are whatever a man chooses to plant or sow,—either grain, fruit, or vegetables.

8. What of grass?

Ans.—In this part of the Calcasieu Parish, as yet, the native grass is about the same as Northern prairie grass, blue joint first; followed afterwards with gazon blue grass White and red clover will grow here.

9. Are apples raised and are they good? What fruits are raised?

Ans.—The culture of apples is not very extensive. The samples raised here are good and well flavored. Our fruits are figs, oranges, peaches, apricots, nectarines and plums. Nearly all ordinary varieties and many varieties of the Japanese stock of plums and persimmons do well.

10. What kind and quality of timber?

Ans.—We have many varieties of oak, ash and gum pecans, mostly cultivated; also cypress, the most valuable timber for posts, shingles and finishing lumber for buildings, some magnolia, persimmons and other timber, besides some immense pineries.

11. What is the price of land?

Ans.—The price of timber and prairie land is governed by the location. The prices vary from about $3.50 to $12 per acre within three or four miles from town, for unimproved land. Improved land from $15 to $25 per acre, timber from $4 to $15 per acre.

12. How far from the Gulf?

Ans.—About forty miles to nearest point.

13. How far from the railroad?

Ans.—The Orleans, Gulf and Pacific runs through this country.

14. How far from Calcasieu River?

Ans.—Thirty-five miles from Jennings.

15. What of the climate? Any yellow fever?

Ans.—Climate is splendid; we have mild winters, some frost, some ice; temperature of winter seldom runs as low as twenty-five degrees above zero. Summer heat seldom registers here ninety-four degrees above. There is no yellow fever, no snow-storms, no cyclones, no sleets, no hot winds, no over-flowing of rivers.

16. Can you get fish and oysters handy and cheap?

Ans.—Oysters and fish are plenty. Oyster beds are twenty or thirty miles from here.

17. Any game there?

Ans. Plenty of ducks and geese here in winter; very few deer, some turkeys in the timber; also coons, squirrels, quails, etc.

18. How do prices of things needed for living compare with Missouri prices?

Ans.—There is but a slight difference between prices here and of the North compared, for living supplies.

19. Are there any poisonous snakes, spiders or reptiles?

Ans.—I have seen fewer poisonous snakes and other reptiles here than in any country I ever lived in. I saw a few moccasin snakes and one centipede.

20. How far are you from Galveston?

Ans.—I judge it to be 160 miles.

A number of members are here waiting for the Indian lands to open. They might take a look at Louisiana. WM. FUNK.

A Suggestion to Ascertain the Number of Members, and the Annual Increase of Members by Baptism.

In looking over the columns of GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 5, present volume, I notice a report of the number of additions to the church, as ascertained by the weekly reports in the MESSENGER during 1890. Sister Kate Johnson gives the total as 3,150,—not a very large per cent of increase for so large a number of ministers and members.

I can not see, however, how a correct account of the additions by baptism can be obtained, as reported to the MESSENGER at present. A more correct and systematic report could be obtained, if ministers, when called to different congregations to hold protracted meetings, would only report their travels, etc., and leave the reporting of the number baptized to the clerks of the churches where the meetings are held. Then a correct weekly report could be obtained, and it would be very interesting to the readers of the MESSENGER to have the reports of the number, baptized in the various congregations throughout the Brotherhood, inserted in a column specially selected for that purpose. This might incur a little more labor on the part of getting out the MESSENGER, but the interest to the general reader of the MESSENGER would vastly outweigh the labor incurred.

Another important matter of information, which would be of great interest and satisfaction to the general Brotherhood, could be accomplished with little labor or expense. I refer to the reporting, by the clerks of the respective congregations, annually, to their respective State District Meetings, the total number of their members and the number baptized during the year (as we now report in Southern Illinois). The elder, representing the District on Standing Committee, could then compute the number of members in his District, and also the number baptized during the year, and present the total of the number of members, as well as the number baptized. Then the elders of the respective State Districts, represented at Annual Meeting on Standing Committee, could, by adding the number of members of their respective State Districts, and also the number of acquisitions by baptism during the year, ascertain, at a glance, the whole number of members, as well as the annual per cent of increase by baptism. The result could be published in the report of Annual Meeting, or in the Minutes, or in both.

These statistics could be ascertained without much labor or expense, and would be of great interest to the general Brotherhood, inasmuch as every member ought to be interested in the cause of our Master and in the prosperity of the church, numerically as well as spiritually.

The above statistics would give us an insight into the annual progress of the church, and would probably induce us to be more energetic in the missionary cause. S. S. HUMMER.

DANIEL R. PRICE,

From Nora Springs, Iowa.

FEB. 26 Bro. Jacob Murray, of Waterloo, came to our place and commenced meetings the same evening, which he continued until March 8, preaching in all twelve sermons. Though there were no accessions, we know that Bro. Murray labored earnestly, and, had his health been good and the weather favorable, so that the meetings could have been continued, there would have been some additions. Bro. Murray dealt out the Word of God with such power and earnestness that all could understand. Some said they never heard the Gospel preached so plainly.

Our meetings were held in the midst of a severe snow-storm. There were but a few of God's children present, but our brother had much to say to the few assembled. He exhorted all to keep near to Jesus.

Bro. J. F. Eikenberry, of Greene, and Bro. Ephraim Lichty, of Waterloo, were with us a part of the time. Bro. Eikenberry assisted in the meetings. G. M. NOAH.

MATRIMONIAL.

"What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

SIMMONS–CLINE.—At the residence of the bride, Feb. 26, 1891, by the undersigned, Bro. A. S. Simmons, of West Providence Township, and Sarah E. Cline, of Hopewell Township. D. S. CLAPPER.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

FRANK.—In the Green Mount congregation, Va., Feb 2, 1891, of yellow jaundice, sister Catharine Frank, aged about 50 years.

She was the mother of twelve children. A husband and ten children are left to mourn their loss (two having preceded her to the spirit world), but we trust their loss is her gain. Services by the Brethren from 1 Thess. 4: 13–18. JACOB A. GARBER.

MILLER.—In the Green Mount congregation, Va., Feb. 24, 1891, sister Hattie L. Miller, aged 16 years, 11 months and 24 days.

Sister Hattie united with the church over three years ago, and, though young in years, lived an exemplary Christian life. In her death the church loses a worthy member, the Sunday school a faithful scholar, the family a loving and dutiful daughter, but we trust that our loss is her eternal gain. Services conducted at the Green Mount church, Feb. 25 by Bro. J. P. Zigler, and others, from Mark 5: 39. JACOB A. GARBER.

MOSS.—In the bounds of the Four Mile congregation, Union Co., Ind., Jan. 31, 1891, sister Emma Moss, aged 29 years, 5 months and 22 days.

She was a member of the church about eighteen months. She leaves a kind husband and three small children to mourn their loss. Funeral discourse by the Brethren.

JACOB RIFE.

CREEK.—In the bounds of the Four Mile congregation, Union Co., Ind., Jan. 10, 1891, sister Catharine Creek, aged 75 years, 3 months and 27 days.

Her husband, Samuel Creek, (a brother), preceded her fifteen years ago to the spirit land. She was a faithful member of the Brethren church for more than forty years. She leaves an only daughter to mourn her loss, but not without hope. Funeral discourse by the Brethren. JACOB RIFE.

BROWER.—In the Four Mile congregation, Union Co., Ind., Feb. 3, 1891, our much respected Eld. Daniel Brower, aged 87 years, 6 months and 24 days.

The subject of this notice was born in Franklin Co., Va., July 10, 1803, moved with his parents to Preble County, Ohio, in 1807; was married Aug. 20, 1831, to Sarah Shively. To this union were born nine children. His wife and five children preceded him to the spirit land. Four children,—two sons and two daughters,—survive him. All are members of the Brethren church. In the fall of 1831, Bro. Brower and wife moved to Four Mile, near the State line, where he has lived for the last sixty years. He has been a member of the German Baptist church over fifty years, was a minister forty-eight years, an elder twenty-five years. He was a good counselor, and ever ready to admonish to duty.

Though far advanced in years, the church feels that one of her pioneers has gone from labor to reward. He was desirous of complying with all the demands of the Gospel. About two years ago he called for the elders and was anointed according to the instruction of the apostle James. Last fall about twenty members met with him in the evening, at the residence of his son-in-law and daughter, where he had his home, and held a Communion with him, in which he engaged, and performed all his duty in the service of the evening, seemingly much refreshed and strengthened.

The funeral occasion was improved by the Brethren from 2 Tim 4: 6–8. Bro. L. T. Holsinger, who was here, holding a series of meetings at the time, took part with us in the services, which were held in the presence of a large congregation, who came to pay their respects to an aged neighbor and friend.

JACOB RIFE.

SPICKLER.—In the Pine Creek church, Ogle Co., Ill., of measles and heart failure, March 5, 1891, sister Rosa Spickler, aged 21 years, 2 months and 26 days.

Thus is hushed by death another voice at the family altar, in the songs of the public assembly as well as in the songs of our social gatherings. Little did the family and neighbors realize that her end was so near till about twelve hours before her spirit took its flight. She was conscious almost to the last, and realized that she must leave us. Before she died she called for the anointing, and, in a few hours passed peacefully and calmly away. Sister Rosa gave her heart to God at an early age, was devoted to his cause, and being a lover of singing, she added much to its interest in our church. She leaves father, mother, two brothers and four sisters who, with the church and entire community, deeply feel the loss they sustain. One of the hymns she selected to be sung at her funeral was, "Shed not a tear * * * when I am gone." Funeral occasion improved by brethren Wm. Eisenbise and Edmund Forney from Isa. 64: 6, in the presence of a large assembly of sympathizing friends. D. L. FORNEY.

MILLER.—At Frederic, Iowa, Jan. 26, 1891, sister Lydia Miller (nee Eikenberry), aged 84 years and 22 days.

Sister Miller was born in Preble County, Ohio, Jan. 4, 1807. She united in marriage with Daniel Miller Nov. 17, 1825, with whom she lived about fifty-eight years. Bro. Miller preceded her to the home above nearly seven years. Their marriage was blessed with eleven children, five of whom preceded their mother to the home beyond. Six are left here, to battle with the affairs of this life, with father and mother's good life as an example, to guide them to the world beyond. Funeral services were preached by Bro. S. P. Miller, of Mahaska County, from the words, "Be ye also ready."

Aunt Lydia, as all the church called her, always filled her seat in the house of worship when she was able. Her holy and graceful life will be always before us while we live. She called for the elders, and complied with the blessed privilege of James 5.

HIRAM BERKMAN.

FLORA.—In Sangamon County, Ill., Bro. Ezra Flora, son of Jonathan and Barbara Flora, born in Franklin County, Va., Dec. 20, 1865.

His parents, with their children came to Illinois in the spring of 1868, settling in Sangamon County, where he peacefully and calmly passed away. His parents and oldest sister preceded him to the grave. He united with the church while attending school at Mt. Morris, Jan. 20, 1889.

Towards spring his health gave way and he was advised to leave school. He went home, but that dreadful disease, consumption, laid hold upon him, from which he could not recover. He seemed to be wholly resigned to the will of God during his sickness. His sister, Laura, who attended school at Mt. Morris, arrived home in the morning of the day of his death, in time to see her brother anointed with oil. He fell asleep in the evening. Previous to his death he said, "I am ready; they that live in the Lord shall die in the Lord."

He leaves three sisters and one brother to mourn the loss of a loving brother. May the Lord sustain them in their bereavement!

Funeral services were conducted at the Sugar Creek meeting-house by the writer, assisted by Bro. Michael Flora and Bro. Jonathan Brubaker, to a large congregation of sympathizing friends. Text, "Thy brother shall rise again." John 11: 23.

B. F. MASTERSON.

SEYMOUR.—Within the bounds of the Yellow River church, Marshall Co., Ind., Feb. 16, 1891, sister Susan Seymour, aged 33 years and 1 day.

Deceased was the daughter of Bro. John and sister Anna Stockman and wife of friend Geo. Seymour. Four children preceded her to the spirit world. She leaves an aged father and mother, two brothers, four sisters, a bereft husband, a little daughter and son, to all of whom she was greatly attached. Her father and mother, brothers and sisters, with the exception of one, belong to the Brethren church, which was also the church of her choice. We thought, during the discourse, how appropriate the text, "Set thine house in order!" Funeral services were conducted by Eld. J. H. Seller-, assisted by Bro. Wm. Myers. EMMA PURKEY.

MARKLEY.—At Alvordton, Williams Co., Ohio, Feb 25, 1891, Bessie, youngest daughter of friend Westly and Martha Markley, aged 6 years, 11 months and 7 days.

Little Bessie was sick but four days, but suffered greatly before she died with spinal trouble. God saw fit to take her home in her young days, and now she will bloom in heaven. Her funeral services were conducted by Bro. George Mohler, in the Walnut Grove church, from Rev. 21: 25. ELLA SOWERS.

LEONARD.—In the Maple Valley church, Iowa, March 5, 1891, of erysipelas, sister Elizabeth Leonard, aged 74 years.

From the beginning of her illness her chances of recovery were looked upon as very slight, and as her condition grew more serious from day to day, her family and friends abandoned all hope of again seeing her restored to health. The deceased was born Oct. 9, 1816. She was married to Keelin Leonard April 21, 1836, and this bond of union held them together in happy companionship for fifty-five years. She was the mother of thirteen children, nine of whom are still living. She united with the Brethren church in her girlhood, lived the life of a Christian, and died in the assurance of the Christian's reward. Those who knew her will testify to her kindness of heart, the high sense of duty by which she governed her life, and her helpfulness to others who needed the help and sympathy of a friend.

JAMES HARDY.

RONK.—At Middleton, Ind., March 3, 1891, Joseph J. Ronk, aged 75 years, 3 months and 13 days.

Deceased was married to Elizabeth Etter, Dec. 14, 1841. She died Oct. 6, 1874. There were three children by this marriage, who are still living.

Deceased was born in Botetourt Co., Va. He came to Henry Co., Ind., and located in Middletown about 1866, where he has resided ever since.

It is always sad to take up the pen to record the death of any one whom we have known, and to whom we have sustained the relation of friend, but especially is this true in the present instance. Deceased was a man whose superior qualities of mind and heart made him a favorite with all who knew him. All who knew him were acquainted with the sterling honesty that characterized his life. He was a consistent member of the Brethren church for several years, faithful to his religious duties.

His funeral services were conducted by Eld. David F. Hoover, from Rev. 21: 6, to a very large audience, who showed great respect and sympathy for the bereaved. May God bless and comfort all in their sore affliction. GEO. L. JENNINGS.

SUNYFRANK.—In the Santa Fe congregation, Ind., Feb. 8, 1891, of lung fever, sister Elizabeth, wife of Bro. Anthony Sunyfrank, aged 50 years, 5 months and 23 days.

She leaves a dear husband, four sons and one daughter, to mourn their loss. She died in the triumphs of a living faith, which was manifested in her last sufferings. Being assured of the change that was soon to take place, she requested to have the elders anoint her with oil in the name of the Lord, which was done about 1 o'clock Friday morning. On Sunday night, about 10 o'clock, the spirit took its flight to God, who gave it. May her exemplary life and Christian conduct encourage those whom she has left behind, to meet her in heaven.

Funeral services conducted by Eld. Daniel P. Shively and the writer to a large and sympathizing congregation of friends and relatives, from Rev. 14: 13.

ELD. JACOB J. FOX.

RAY.—In the Lower Twin Creek congregation, Montgomery County, Ohio, Feb 27, 1891, of intermittent neuralgia, Bro. Charles M. Ray, aged 38 years, 9 months and 4 days.

Deceased leaves at his earthly home, a wife, mother and five children, to fight the battles of life. Funeral services by the Brethren from 2 Cor. 5: 1. May God comfort their sorrowing hearts, and may all prepare for a building of God.

DANIEL M. GARVER.

BRIDGE.—In the Rockton church, Pa., Oct. —, 1890, Bro. John Bridge, aged 89 years and 9 days.

Deceased leaves his (third) wife and one daughter, and a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn the loss of the departed one. For about ten years he has belonged to the Brethren church, and has been a faithful member. PETER BEER.

BUSS.—In the Union Center church, Ind., Feb. 25, 1891, sister Rhoda, wife of Bro. Levi Buss, aged 53 years, 1 month and 8 days.

The subject of the above notice was called away very suddenly. She had been about her work all day, and about 4 o'clock in the evening was seen out doors, gathering eggs. Shortly after she was found in the house lying on the floor. No one was with her at the time but a little grandchild, about three years old. Her son finding her, and seeing her critical condition, ran immediately for his father,—a little distance out on the farm. When they got to the house, she was dead.

A physician was called to make an examination, as to the cause of her death, and pronounced it to be paralysis. Funeral services were conducted by J. C. Murray and the writer, from Eccl. 9: 5, "For the living know that they shall die," at the Union Center brick church. J. R. MILLER.

Doctor Koch's Discovery.

Dr. Koch's great remedy seems to prove efficacious in those cases where the patient has contracted consumption in low lying countries,—almost all the level European districts where the disease is traceable to purely climatic conditions, the moist atmosphere being a fine breeding region for the microbe. But in the high and dry altitude traversed by the Union Pacific, the Original Overland Route, consumption not only can not exist but is surely curable in its early stages. And this is testified to by thousands who have regained health and strength in the life-giving air of the Mountains. 7t8

That Brilliant American.

Samuel Bowles, the famous editor of the Springfield Republican, said, in recording his impressions of the Puget Sound Country:

"Up here, above the latitude of Quebec and Montreal, we basked in the smile of roses that are even denied to us in New England. Here, within the circle of the softening sea, reigns a year that knows no zero cold, and rarely freezes water or snow; that winters the fuchsias and the most delicate roses, English ivies and other tender plants, and summers them with rioting luxuriance; that grows the apple and the pear and the small fruits to perfection."

The Puget Sound Country is a wonderful agricultural country awaiting development. There is nothing open to the home seeker to compare with it and it is the future goal of the great army of home seekers. In healthfulness it is wonderful and in productiveness unsurpassed. Thousands last year journeyed to this charmed region over the Union Pacific, the original overland route, and thousands more will go this year. 7t8

Europe and Bible Lands.

BY D. L. MILLER.

A new edition, THE TENTH, of this excellent book of travels has just been issued. The extensive sale of the work gives abundant proof of its great popularity. It was thought, at first, that one or two editions would supply the demand, but already ten editions have been issued and yet the book finds a ready sale.

Thousands of copies have been sold outside of our church, and many strong testimonials have been received from those who have read the book. The following partial list will give an idea of the contents of the work:

Life in Germany.—Berlin. The King's Palace.—Dresden.—The Crown Jewels.—Women in Germany.—The City of Prague.—The Martyrdom of John Huss.—The Habits and Customs of the People.—Bro. Hope's Work in Denmark.—Old Castles and Prisons of the Middle Ages.—Paul's Preaching at Mars' Hill.—Old Temples at Athens.—The Seven Churches of Asia.—Ephesus, and the Temple of Diana.—Jaffa.—The House of Simon, the Tanner.—Plain of Sharon.—Lepers and Leprosy.—Mountains of Judea. Jerusalem. Place of Crucifixion. Mount Moriah. Solomon's Temple. Mount Zion.—David's Tomb.—Bethlehem.—The Fields Where the Shepherds Watched their Flocks by Night.—Rachel's Tomb.—Mount of Olives.—The Garden of Gethsemane.—Jericho.—The Dead Sea.—River of Jordan. Bethel.—The Mountains of Blessing and Cursing.—Nazareth. Cana of Galilee.—Capernaum.—Damascus.—Ruins of Baalbec.—Customs, Manners, Habits and Home Life of the Arabs.

Bro. Miller visited the places he describes, and tells about them in an easy, pleasant manner, which makes the book exceedingly interesting. It contains 439 pages, and 40 engravings, among which are a number of full-page illustrations of Palestine scenery. It is printed on heavy, white paper, in clear-faced type, bound in a good, substantial manner, and will be sold at the very low price of $1.50 per copy, cloth, or $2.00 for full leather binding, postage prepaid.

SPECIAL RATES TO MINISTERS.—In order to have a copy of the book placed in the hands of all our ministers, we make them the following liberal offer: Send one dollar for the book, and sixteen cents to pay postage, and you will receive a copy by return mail.

TESTIMONIALS.

We have space here only for extracts from a very few of the kind letters received by the author.

A copy of Bro. D. L. Miller's work on Bible Lands is before me. I like it very much. It contains much spiritual food for the Christian as well as many useful historical facts.—Eld. Enoch Eby.

It is an interesting book and should be in every family, and read by every young man and woman, so that they may know how the people live in Europe and the East. I would not take three times what the book cost me and do without it.—Eld. John Knisley.

I have read Europe and Bible Lands, and I am ready to confess that it gave me more satisfaction than I anticipated. I am especially pleased that the history you give of the Bible lands corresponds in its arrangements so well with the Bible. Since reading your book, I think I can almost see the different cities, mountains, rivers, scenery, with the valley and the river of Jordan.—Eld. John Forney.

Your book brought back to me many pleasant recollections of countries I saw long ago, and which you describe so vividly and truthfully. You have done a good work in publishing a book which contains so much interesting and valuable matter, especially for our young readers, giving the present aspect of many countries and the present condition of many interesting questions.—Hon. R. R. Hitt.

Having given considerable time to the study of sacred history and antiquities, I was especially interested in that portion of the work devoted to the description of Bible Lands, and can truly say that I have obtained from it much information that I have not been able to obtain heretofore, although I have perused volumes. The author has been careful to combine the past and present history of those lands, the better showing the fulfillment of prophecy, which makes it doubly interesting to the Bible student. And then, the cheerful, spicy manner of narration makes it of incalculable worth.—M. H. Robinson, Sherwood, Ohio.

I received your book of travels in the Holy Land, and have finished reading it. I consider it an excellent work, not only for our people, but all who have an interest in the Holy Land and a desire for Bible knowledge. It gives, in a plain, clear style, much information regarding the country, towns, mountains, rivers and seas made sacred by the footprints of our Savior. Another thing which makes your book valuable is the religious character given to all your travels, even outside of Palestine. I would be glad if all our reading matter had such religious character underlying it; how safe and profitable it would be for the Church, our children, and the world to read!—Eld. R. H. Miller.

I admire your book very much, and while it has cost you much work and great anxiety, it will prove a source of pleasure and profit to others long after you and your wife have gone to the Paradise above. I consider the book a credit to you and the Church. When you left us for your trip, I knew you would make a great effort to put your thoughts in a readable shape, and do your utmost to describe everything of interest. In that respect you have succeeded far beyond my expectation, and now instead of reading your work for pleasure, I consult it for solid and reliable information. I hope the book will have a large sale, for it deserves it, and ought to be in every family, especially in the Brotherhood.—Eld. J. H. Moore

Mr. Miller has been careful in collecting his facts, and conscientious in describing what he has seen. He has not sacrificed truth to mere picturesque effect. It is this very quality of simplicity and truth that makes the book interesting. After one has been satiated with the common type of the book or letter of travel, which aims at describing the writer's fancies or saying something fine, but which seldom descends to describing things as they are, it is really refreshing to read this straight-forward and faithful narrative. More than one-half of the book is occupied with Bible lands. There are many books on the Holy Land, and this work will make no pretensions to supersede them; but it will find its way into many homes where the larger works have not appeared. By reason of its simplicity of style, it is well adapted to younger readers, and it will doubtless stimulate in many young minds a greater interest for Bible study.—A. W. Burnett, Strasburg, Germany.

THE Winter Term of the Normal closes this week, and the Spring Term will open on Monday, March 23. The prospects are unusually good for a large turnout, and the rooms in both buildings are all engaged.

THE hardest thing in the world to satisfy is a falsehood. To keep it requires scores of others, and each of these as difficult to satisfy as the original, so that the only way to command a halt is to confess the first one, which knocks the props from under all the others. Yes, confess before the first one is told and the props will not be needed.

BRO. J. B. BRUMBAUGH and wife extended their visit from Waynesborough, Pa., to the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where they had a very pleasant visit of about ten days. Bro. J. B. B. did some preaching while there, and reports good meetings. The membership there has grown considerably, of late years, by immigration from Berks County, Pa. They now have two church-houses and a fair congregation at each place.

"GOD'S will prevails. How grand is the stability of God's will, how comforting the security its unswerving purposes give us! The universe, with all the laws that govern it, is a thought of God's; and since he does not alter this thought, nor take it back to try another way, nor falter in carrying it out as the ages go by, some men say the world is deserted by its Maker, and that it moves on without him. But it was only because he willed it that the sun arose this morning, and simply in that he changes not, may we look for it to rise again to-morrow."

Two wrongs, it is said, will never make a right, yet people are trying the experiment every day. The object is to "even up." But the more we try to even in the way, the odder we become. A right, exercised towards our erring brother, does just what we try to do by our wrongs and fail. We are always ready enough to heap coals of fire on our brother's head, but we do not want to use the right kind of fire. Love kills and burns much quicker than flames.

THE RUM POWER.

THE powers for evil in the world are many and various in their character, but among them all there are none that seem to be so potent and formidable as the rum power. All the descriptive words in our lexicons, ancient and modern, have been called into requisition to portray the misery and ruin that it has been causing in the world, and yet the half has not been told. Poverty, misery and woe are only mild introductories to that which is and has been. As we see, rising up before us, the smoke from the thousands of the breweries planted all over this professedly Christian land of ours, our heart seems to weaken within us, and the question comes to us, "Who is able to withstand this thing?" This smoke that rises up to cloud the clear heavens above, and dim the pure light of the sun, is only a faint emblem of the fire that is being made within. From these centers of evil go forth the fires that are more destructive than the forest conflagration, or the flames that lay cities in the dust, and spread desolation in her tracks. It goes where ordinary fire can not reach. It burns the affections between man and wife, between children and parents, between neighbors and friends as the hot winds from the South. It destroys manhood and womanhood, and ruthlessly sinks their last tinge of honor into the dust. Above and beyond all, it destroys the hope of heaven, and consigns the souls of its deluded victims to the lowest hell. "Lowest,"—did we say? No, it seems to us, such places will be reserved for the manufacturers of the drinks that are making the world drunk—for the venders, for the law-makers who legislate its perpetuation, and for the judges who sit in the seats of justice, so-called, and grant license to men for no other purpose than to impoverish and destroy the peace of homes.

O shame! Can it be that mortal man, created to live for each other's happiness, and honor a benevolent God, will so steel his heart against all convictions of right, as to enter into this wholesale partnership of ruining souls with the assurance that his own ruin in the end will be the price,—his reward? Man's humanity seems to shrink at the thought, and yet it is a truth, — a dreadful reality.

But, for all this, is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician to heal? Must the reputation, the honor and the salvation be jeopardized by this monstrous evil? Must our daughters be robbed of their womanhood,—be made fatherless and homeless, all to fill the coffers of a few godless beer-makers and saloon-keepers?

Yes, there is a time coming when the right will arise in its might,—when the hirelings of iniquity will flee from the light, and the presence of the good, and seek the covers of the earth to hide them from the impending ruin that will speedily come. There is a time coming when God will make the wrath of men to praise him. And in the day of the blackest darkness, will the light come. God has omnipotent power in his own hands, and at the right time he will make his children to look up and rejoice.

Some years ago our orchards, all over the country, were threatened with a complete devastation on account of the caterpillar, which had been, for several years, growing more threatening, so that everybody was ready to give up. During the winter the twigs of the trees were made to glisten with the black cones in which the nits were deposited for the spring brood that was expected to destroy every green thing. But on each of these cones the Lord had placed several scavengers, so small that they could not be seen by the naked eye. By spring time these little workers had opened every cell of the cones and destroyed the insect within, so that the great plague was averted and the people made to rejoice. As it has been with the destructive insects and pests of vegetation, so will it be with this social pest and human curse.

To bring such results about, God uses means, and so he will in the abolition of the rum traffic, and the question with us ought to be, Who shall help in this great work? Shall it not be his own people? We are to combat against principalities and powers, and against wickedness in high places. This is all embraced in the rum power. It is making itself felt every-where,—in politics, in government, in the administration of justice, and even in churches. It tears down and builds up. It makes men eloquent in flattery and, when necessary, seals their lips. In short, it is a great and growing power behind the throne,—and there is but one power greater,—the power of God, as applied through the Sword of the Spirit. With this, the strongholds of sin can be demolished and the giant slain. Like the prophets of old, we should cry aloud and spare not. Though the Lord's purposes may be slow in working out, they know no check. With them, the devil can have no vantage ground. Every step made is one forward, and all we have to do is to move in line, face forward, fully equipped. And when the demon has been sufficiently encircled, there will be a shout and the mighty walls will tumble down, giving a glorious victory.

Let us all stand up bravely against this great enemy of the world, the church, the home and the altar, assured that the Master is with us, and that finally victory will fall on the side of the right.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

SOMETIME.

THE time will come to you, my friend,
The time will come to me;
When we must bow submissive to High heaven's sad decree.
Death, with its cold, relentless hand,
Will strike the dreaded blow,
And those we love the most and best,
Will from our presence go.

With streaming eyes and breaking hearts,
We'll watch the fleeting breath;
We'll pray as we ne'er prayed before,
"Oh! stay thy hand, stern Death,"
But all in vain,—the fiat comes,
The flickering light burns low;
We weep and mourn, and would to God
That this could not be so.

But on the brink the soul now stands,
'Twixt earth and heaven's expanse,
Where mortal power availeth not,
And death bids it advance
To worlds untried, to worlds unknown,
To future bliss or woe,
To stand adjudged before our God,
Who justice will bestow.

Gone, from our hearts and from our homes;
We plead for just one word,
We long for one cognizant look,
We think of joys deferred,
We kneel and kiss the cold, cold brow,
We clasp the icy hand,
We long to keep the dormant clay,
But God has not thus planned.

'Dust thou art and unto dust,
These bodies shall return;
But those who live and die in Christ,
A new life shall discern.
Oh, will our lamps be ready filled,
And trimmed and burning bright,
Or must we fail to reach the shore,
Because we have no light?

No light! no light! In that dark hour,
No gleam from yonder shore,
No hope to anchor our poor souls,
No faith to bear them o'er
The surging billows, cold and deep,
No angel boatman there,
No hand to guide, no arm to save,
We sink in dark despair.

But if we have in God believed,
If Christ has been our theme,
We'll shout, "Hosanna to our King!"
While passing through the stream.
We'll not be left alone to die,
We'll have a helping hand,
We'll have a pilot at the helm,
And angels at the strand.

Prophets and priests and kings of God,
Will bid us welcome home,
And we will shout anew the strain,
"O Lamb of God, I come."
And there beside the Golden Gate,
Most glorious ecstasy,
Our loved ones stand with crowns in hand,
Awaiting you and me.

Go on, ye weary ones, go on,
In faith and hope and prayer,
God's promises are true and just,
And sometime you'll get there.
But, oh, the time will come to you,
The time will come to me,
When none can succor, none can save,
But Christ of Calvary.

SECRET ORDERS.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

THE rapid growth of the various alliances, under the different badges of secrecy, when summed up, is simply astonishing.

It is well known that the resistance with which the Brethren have met these organizations, has been of the most uncompromising character. To this I add, "So mote it be." That the principles of secrecy are incompatible with the principles of our holy Christianity is apparent from the following:

1. The Christian, in attaching himself to a secret order, violates the apostle's teaching: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?" 2 Cor. 6: 14.

In joining a secret order, how manifestly do we become joined to, and yoked with, unbelievers of all grades and classes! This impious blending, this unholy alliance must prove detrimental to our most holy religion; for "he which is joined to an harlot is one body." 1 Cor. 6: 16.

2. Those orders whose objects and aims are said to be charity, when examined, fail to stand the Gospel test of charity. To illustrate: Let some poor, penniless pauper knock at the door of one of these so called institutions of charity, for admittance, and it is a fact that not a door will open for his admittance. To whom will they open for admission? Simply to the able-bodied and him who has money,—such as are not objects of charity. Hence it is a union of persons for mutual benefit, who need no help. Besides all the widows they support, and orphans they feed and clothe, their so-called deeds of charity are done by actual contract, hence no charity in it at all. To explain: I join such an order. I pay my initiation fee, and my fixed monthly dues with the contract, that, in the event of my sickness or death, such aid shall be rendered me and my family. Hence they are paid for their service.

Elements of this secrecy are a species of robbing God. Mal. 3: 8. A member of a secret order remarked to me that "they were doing more good for the needs and good of humanity in the order to which he belonged than his church." To this we replied, "Perhaps you are. If so, what are you doing? Building two rival institutions side by side. In the one, built by Christ, you meet to sing, pray and preach to the honor of him by whose merits you expect to go to heaven. In the other you meet, support it with your time and means, and, although built by man, you say it is doing more in relieving the needy, doing more deeds of charity than the church. This is manifestly the grave sin of "robbing God." These deeds of charity,—visiting the sick, widows, and fatherless, relieving the needy,—is a work of the church, by which her light is to shine, "that men may see her good works." In the church, in the Gospel, we are provided, are "well furnished unto every good work." There is no need of our union with secret alliances to do good.

4. The burial services of the various orders are vain, useless, and much of it contrary to sound doctrine.

In the service of the Odd Fellows, they pray at the open grave, that "this our brother may be taken from the Lodge below to the Grand Lodge above." In intelligence this sentiment is parallel with the deluded prayer of the poor Indian for the return of his "happy hunting ground."

"Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Col. 3: 17. In the Masonic service the prayers are all in the name of the Father. There is no Christ in them. Think of professed ministers, elders and bishops, as prominent divines,—leaders of the people,—offering up prayers, leaving Christ, their only advocate, not once named!

Secret societies border on sacrilege. The late "Farmers' Alliance" and "Mutual" are simply unions,—monopolies,—to fight monopolies, hence, in principle, they are wrong. All these unions have some commendable features about them, but they inculcate a principle that is wrong and ruinous, a violation of the Gospel. I deplore the vast number of our brethren's sons that are being caught in this baneful net of secrecy.

As a remedy I name:

1. That our ministers teach and warn more faithfully against it. Watch opportunities to warn the young against it. Show up its evils!

2. I urge that brethren, raising families, subscribe for the Cynosure, a weekly paper, published in Chicago, Ill. The editors and writers are able and they make a specialty in exposing the corruptions of secrecy. A father said to me, "I have taken the Cynosure for twenty years. It has done me much good by keeping my four sons out of all secret orders."

GALILEE IN THE TIME OF OUR LORD.

BY SELAH MERRILL.

IT is difficult for some minds to realize that Christ actually dwelt upon the earth, that he was a child, that he had youthful companions, and that he grew up to manhood in a town which still exists, and in a region which even now a multitude of devout Christians visit every year.

Nevertheless, all these things are true; and Nazareth, Capernaum, and the Sea of Galilee are names that are specially dear to the Christian because they are so intimately connected with the early life of Christ. His birthplace was Bethlehem, and his burial-place was Jerusalem; but we do not think of either of those places when we think of the home of our Lord. Our thoughts turn rather to Galilee, with its picturesque hills, its quiet valleys, its beautiful lake, and its prosperous towns and villages that, almost without number, dotted and adorned the country from the Jordan to the Mediterranean, and from the Great Plain far up to the slopes of Hermon.

Had it been left to men to select the place where Christ should pass the years of his mission, a decision would have been impossible. Athens, Rome, or Jerusalem would have been suggested; but nothing short of divine wisdom would have chosen the desert for the forerunner of Christ, and Galilee as the region best adapted for the home of Christ himself; while we have no right to say what the designs of God may have been, we may—from what we know of Christ's character on the one hand, and the condition and character of Galilee on the other—discover such a wonderful harmony between the two as to convince us that this choice was nothing less than providential.

Galilee was not a country of great extent, since a district thirty by forty or thirty by fifty miles, at most, is all the territory that can be included within its limits. It was, however, by far the finest of the three provinces lying west of the Jordan. Judea was mountainous and rocky, scantily supplied with water, and in the large section lying near the Dead Sea it was wild, savage, and barren. Samaria was somewhat similar to Judea in character, though less rugged. Galilee, as compared with either of the other provinces, was like a garden, and the evidences of its superior fertility and beauty remain even to the present time.

Besides being exceedingly fertile, Galilee had a dense population. In the Gospels there is frequent reference to "towns," "cities, and villages," as if they were numerous. Wherever Christ went, he found them. From independent sources testimony has been gathered as to their number and importance, which cannot now be given in detail. A few only of the larger places can receive our attention. Tarichea, on the shore of the Lake of Tiberias, had forty thousand inhabitants. Scyth-opolis, the Bethshean of the Old Testament, had had as many more. Japha, a place not far from Nazareth, is mentioned as one of the largest "villages" in Galilee. Its size we do not know; but we know that twelve thousand Jews, "fighting men," perished there in the vain attempt to defend it against the Romans. Tiberias, on the lake of the same name, was built during the life of Christ. Its warm baths were a great resort for persons seeking health or pleasure, and doubtless this fact led Herod Antipas, the ruler of Galilee, to transform the place into a second royal city. Antipas built here many public buildings, and among them a fine synagogue. Later the place could boast of thirteen synagogues and a race-course. We do not know the number of its inhabitants; but its strength was such that, thirty-four years after the death of Christ, Vespasian led against it three legions, which, however, were not brought into action, since its chief men had decided to surrender the city. Sepphoris should be mentioned, which was only three miles from Nazareth, and in full view from it. It was beautifully situated in the midst of a rich and fertile region, and its inhabitants were noted for their wealth. It was the capital of Galilee during the grater part of Christ's life. The archives of the province were kept there, and it had also a royal arsenal, in which at one time there were collected arms for no less than seventy thousand men Ptolemais, the main seaport of Galilee, was a place of great activity; and there many ships of Egypt and Italy might any day be seen lying at anchor, or passing to and fro. If we could speak of places lying on the very border of the province, we should mention Gamala, Gadara, Hippos, and Cesarea Philippi,—all of them important in the annals of the country, the latter especially being noted for its beautiful situation, its royal palace, its wonderful fountain, and its splendid fortress that guarded both the town and the ancient highway that led from the far East to the sea-coast, past Damascus and under the southern slopes of Hermon.

It is a matter beyond dispute that, in Galilee, there were no unoccupied districts. There was, indeed, very little waste land. The cultivation of the soil had been carried to a high degree of perfection. Olive groves covered the hillsides, while wheat-fields and gardens crowded the landscape on every side. The Galileans were renowned for their skillful husbandry, which was rewarded by products that were famed far and near. Certain places were noted for their extensive store-houses of grain and oil. These products, equivalent to money, were sent in large quantities to the rich cities of Tyre and Sidon, to feed their own inhabitants, or to be shipped to other ports about the Mediterranean.

The abundance and variety of the fruits and other productions of the plain of Gennesaret, it would be difficult to praise too highly. Some of them were produced the year round, and the fame of their richness went throughout the East.

The chief employment of the Galileans was the production of these necessaries of life. This employment gave stability and independence to the population, and brought wealth to the province.

But there were other industries which can only be hinted at here. Among them should be mentioned the manufacture of special kinds of pottery that were highly prized; the fisheries of the sea of Galilee, fish from whose waters were celebrated throughout the world; and the manufacture, from native flax, of linen fabrics that had a wide reputation for unusual fineness and beauty. Shipbuilding also was extensively carried on, and it was from the shores of Galilee that the glass-shops of Tyre, Sidon, and Alexandria were furnished with sand, vessels taking it as cargo to these different ports.

Galilee is deserving of special notice, on account of its commerce and inland traffic. Besides the products sent out of the country, goods from Europe and Africa were landed at Ptolemais, and carried thence across Galilee to Damascus and to places farther east.

A peculiar feature of this province was its great public roads or routes of commerce, on which were seen every day long caravans, carrying merchandise between the East and the West. This carrying trade was largely in the hands of the Galileans. The sea of Galilee was likewise covered with boats engaged in pleasure and traffic with the thirteen cities and towns that surrounded it on or near its shores. All these facts contributed to the activity, enterprise, and business of the province, and affected in no small degree, while at the same time they serve to illustrate to us, the character of the Galileans.

It will hardly be doing justice to the wonderful natural scenery and climate of Galilee to dismiss them with a single sentence. Yet more can not be done. Both were charming beyond what we find in almost any other country. Sea, sky and landscape combined in the most marvellous manner to render Galilee one of the loveliest regions on earth. The view from the hill at Nazareth, or from the summit of Mount Tabor, six miles eastward, presented more features of interest and beauty than could possibly be found grouped at once before the eye at any other point on the globe.

All this wealth of natural scenery, and all this loveliness of climate, were familiar to Christ; for, amid this great beauty of his Father's world, he grew up to manhood.

Hints have already been given as to the character of the Galileans. They were an industrious and enterprising people, and because of these facts this province had attained, under an efficient ruler, to an unusual degree of prosperity.

Much may be said also of their intelligence and bravery, and likewise of their religious character. The number of famous leaders, which Galilee furnished in the time of the Jewish war with Rome, is evidence that, among the Galileans, men of marked ability were by no means the exception.

They did not enter blindly into that terrible struggle, but only after many heated discussions and many councils for deliberation had been held, did they decide to take up arms against the Roman power. They were not devoid of reason, and they must have foreseen that the engines and legions of their enemy would finally triumph. They knew that they could not achieve their independence; but they felt it to be better to die with honor than to submit disgracefully to a foreign yoke. Seldom has a people thrown itself more completely and unreservedly against an enemy than did the Galileans against the power that had come to crush out their national life. The readiness with which they sacrificed their lives and property was not dictated by prudence, but by desperation.

The Romans massed their troops at Ptolemais, —a force of sixty thousand men. Many of these had come in ships from Italy and Egypt, and from Nazareth the multitude of vessels that had brought them could be seen lying at anchor on the quiet sea. There also were the white tents of the enemy stretched along the beach. The Galileans, had they been veteran soldiers instead of intelligent yeomanry, might from their hills have looked down upon this scene with dismay. But they were ready to face it all. Heroes in any age could not have acted with more courage and determination. They were alone in this struggle, in that they had no help from Samaria or Judea. The war was confined strictly to Galilee during the first year of its progress. The energies of the Romans under Vespasian and Titus were taxed to their utmost, and at the close of the Galilean campaign, this great and proud army, although it had conquered, had to be allowed a period in which it might rest and recruit its strength because of the rough, bloody, and exhausting work through which it had passed.

But where were the men of Galilee, the countrymen of our Lord? Alas! one hundred and fifty thousand of her sons had been slaughtered upon her hitherto quiet hillsides. If their conduct extorted praise from the Romans, who had fought with every kind of enemy in every land, we may regard such words of praise as having more weight and significance than any commendation of ours.

Certain traits in the religious character of the Galileans deserve notice in forming our estimate of the people from among whom Christ came. In this respect there was a marked difference between them and the people of Jerusalem. Between an industrious and intelligent agricultural people on the one hand, and those who are brought up in the refinements, luxuries, and conceit of city life on the other, there would naturally be a wide difference in their manners, customs, and ideas of conduct and life. The Galileans had their synagogues, schools, and learned doctors of the law, the same as the people of Jerusalem; but the latter were devoted to tradition, placing it first in their religious teaching, while the Galileans adhered more strictly to the law of Moses. In Jerusalem there was a great deal of bigotry; in Galilee, there was much freedom of thought. In a word, there seems to have existed in Galilee a freer and healthier religious life than there was in Jerusalem under the shadow of the temple. In Galilee, a new teacher who brought health to the body, freedom to the mind, comfort and hope to the soul, was listened to with attention; in Jerusalem, a new teacher who taught contrary to the "tradition of the elders" was put to death.

Our space has been too limited to develop these interesting points at length. Galilee, we have seen, was the most fertile province of Palestine, full of towns and villages, and crowded with a dense population. Its climate and scenery were delightful. Its inhabitants were industrious, intelligent, and brave, engaged in agriculture, commerce, and many other peaceful employments, prosperous to an unusual degree, and characterized in their religious life by a certain degree of spiritual freedom, and a desire to receive and follow the Truth.

This province was unlike Judea in almost every respect. It was unlike any other province or country on the globe. There in the north was the great white dome of Hermon, —in the west the infinite blue of the Mediterranean, in the east the sea of Galilee and the charming hills about it, the river Jordan and its wonderful valley,—in the south the great Esdraelon plain; there were Carmel, Gilboa, Tabor, and the highlands of upper Galilee; there were the fields carpeted with flowers, and the hills clothed with verdure; there was a centre of activity, business, commerce, and news; there were found men from all parts of the world; and there, —if men of many races and in every department of life were to be reached,—was the most fitting place for the "messenger of glad tidings" to appear. So it would seem to us.

With all the facts we have mentioned, Christ was familiar. How he was affected by them, we do not know. We know that such was Galilee, and that in one of its most beautiful towns Jesus had his home.—S. S. Times.

FEET-WASHING.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

Number One.

IN writing an essay on feet-washing, which will be read by Brethren, or by adherents of the church who are familiar with the subject, it is not necessary to discuss in full the concrete side of the question. It is not particularly necessary to relate the facts in relation to the actual incident as it occurred on the occasion of the Last Supper, or to set in order the arguments by which we endeavor to prove that feet-washing was intended to be a church ordinance, or to analyze the language which our Savior used to enforce the obligation.

All these considerations have been rehearsed again and again in pulpit and press, and nothing that we can add would throw any new light on the subject. But it may not be unprofitable to study those expressions and hints, thrown out in the narrative, which give us a glimpse of the Savior's meaning, and to find out what lessons were embodied or symbolized in the ordinance, and what relation they bear to the plan of salvation on the one hand, or our spiritual life on the other. We are encouraged to believe that, like all other outward observances, founded on commandment, such as baptism and the Eucharist, this action of our Savior is rich in spiritual meaning which, if properly understood, would be of great benefit to the Christian. Indeed, without a proper understanding and appropriation of what is signified, how can any one render a real and acceptable obedience to this or any other ordinance?

What would we think, for instance, of a man who receives baptism without having any notion of its meaning, and without appropriating that meaning, by faith, for the remission of his sins and the regeneration of his nature? Or what would we think of one who ate and drank the emblems of the Eucharist as common bread and wine, without seeing in them, by faith, the broken body and shed blood of his Redeemer, and without appropriating that spiritual food for the sustenance of his spiritual life?

Our Savior himself said, on a former occasion, that "the flesh profiteth nothing, the Spirit giveth life. The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Surely we can not ignore or misunderstand the words of the Master, or set them aside for theories of our own. There was nothing that he said and nothing that he did, which is not full of spiritual meaning, and usually that meaning lies so plainly on the surface that he who runs may read.

When Christ, in washing the disciples' feet, came to Peter, and when the latter had overcome his temporary disobedience or unwillingness, Christ said to him, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."

"Thou shalt know." He did not expect Peter, and he does not expect us to render the blind obedience of a servant, but the intelligent compliance of a friend who knows what the object is which is had in view. Indeed, in the same connection he said to his disciples, "Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth, but I have called you friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you."

He had then already made known unto Peter and the rest, what he meant by washing their feet. The "hereafter" was not long coming, and we do not have to look far to find what manner of "spirit" has its divinely-appointed abode in this part of the "letter."

We may observe, however, that, like many other symbolical observances, the one we have under consideration has a dual or double meaning. Like both the Communion and baptism, it teaches more than one lesson. For the most part these lessons, meanings, or applications may be differentiated as the local interpretation, and the general interpretation. In the case of feet-washing, we have no difficulty to discover the first meaning. It becomes very clear by comparing those passages in Luke's Gospel which correspond with the thirteenth chapter of John. While they were at the table, the old strife arose as to "who should be accounted the greatest." Luke 22: 24. He had rebuked this spirit before, but his words had not been sufficient to check it. He would now give them a striking example of the kind of spirit which must animate his followers, a spirit, not of pride, or emulation, or jealousy, or self-exaltation over their brethren. On the contrary, "the chief among them should be servant of all," even as he, the Lord and Master, was among them "as one that serveth." The coincidences of time, place, circumstances and subject between Luke 22, verses 23 to 27, inclusive, and John 13: 4 to 16, inclusive, will not admit of controversy. This is also supported by the reflection that the several Gospels must not be detached from each other, but added together, to make a complete narrative.

For instance, John gives no account of the Communion in connection with feet-washing, but we take the Communion from the other Gospels, and fill the vacancy because we know it belongs there. So, while Luke in his narrative of the Last Supper omits feet-washing (while he mentions its purpose or design, and the circumstances which gave rise to it), we introduce the ordinance in our practice because we know that it belongs there. What all the evangelists recorded about the Last Supper, put together, and nothing less than that, is the full and complete account; excepting, of course, the repetitions.

Now we see clearly the local application, the immediate and tangible meaning which our Savior intended to convey. It was to check this worldly and dangerous spirit of competition, jealousy and ambition which had frequently broken out among the disciples. So far as the disciples were concerned, it did check it, for we see not the slightest trace of it in all their subsequent history.

To see their Lord and Master take the place and perform the menial office of a "servant," even washing their feet, was enough to completely paralyze the aspiring ambition, pride and jealousy which, until that moment, they had cherished. No mere words, even of the Master, could have produced so radical a cure. The nature of the disease was serious, its effects dangerous. The remedy must be effectual.

As human nature is essentially the same in all ages, the same evils of the heart exist at the present day, and the same remedies may be made effectual to correct those evils. But everything depends upon the proper application.

The Roman Catholic Church, for instance, while it has always practiced feet-washing as one of its church ceremonies or ordinances, furnishes the most striking example of just the kind of spirit which our Savior intended to rebuke and destroy,—spiritual pride, jealousy, competition, self-exaltation. Priests, Bishops, Cardinals and Popes aspire to be the greatest, and to exercise arbitrary lordship over the church. We see in this the utter futility of the "letter" of feet-washing without the "spirit."

The Apostle Paul tells us that there was such a thing as circumcision, which was made uncircumcision by failure to carry out its meaning in the life, and for the same reason there may be such a thing as feet-washing which is not feet-washing, and vice versa. If the natural disposition of jealousy toward those who are more godly, or more eminent, or more gifted than ourselves, is not crucified, we wash feet in vain. Or, if we go farther and encourage the disposition to elevate ourselves by pulling others down, we do violence to the whole intent, meaning and spirit of this observance, no matter how zealously or punctually we may engage in the outward performance.

Wayside Notes.

I LEFT home Dec. 11, and arrived at Warrensburgh, Mo., next day. On the 13th I was taken out to the Mineral Creek church, where I remained and held meetings until Jan. 12, excepting three meetings held with the members of the Warrensburgh church. The meetings were generally well attended with, seemingly, a growing interest. Although there were no immediate accessions, yet I felt encouraged to hear the members express themselves as being much built up, and I felt that our efforts were a success, and profitable to the cause. I have often thought that the number of immediate accessions to the church is not always an evidence of the greatest amount of good. Eternity only will tell of the results of our efforts.

Jan. 12 I was taken by Bro. Frank Eanos to Calhoun, where I took the train for Osceola, the County-seat of St. Clair County. I arrived at that place in the evening, was met at the depot and taken out to Bro. Jacob Yost's, a distance of about two miles, where I found the Brethren holding meetings in an empty dwelling-house, that they had fitted up for the purpose. At this place I preached for them that evening.

Next evening I commenced meetings in the Campbellite church in Osceola, which had been offered to the Brethren previous to my arrival. Wednesday evening being the regular time for their prayer-meeting, I went back again to the former place, where I had meetings both forenoon and evening. Thursday evening I resumed my work in town again, but soon learned that there was an agreement entered into by the ministers of the different denominations of the town, to hold union meetings, and that all the other churches should be closed during the time the meetings were being conducted. Accordingly, on Friday evening, we received a written notice from one of the trustees of the church, that their minister had entered into the above agreement, and that, therefore, they would have to refuse us the house. So we adjourned to the court-house, and the next day, before noon, I understood that the "combine" had called on the sheriff for the keys to the court-house, evidently aiming to keep us out of it, but Bro. Cripe had already procured the house and keys with a promise of the house until April, if we wanted it until then.

Inasmuch as the ordinances of the Gospel, as understood and practiced by the Brethren, never had been defined in Osceola, it was thought necessary to do so. Of course this kind of preaching is not generally liked now-a-days, and the consequence was that sometimes our congregations were not so large, but the last evening we had a good congregation and excellent attention. I told the brethren before we commenced that we ought to have at least three or four weeks' meetings there, and I felt reluctant to quit when I did, for it looked to me, under the circumstances, that we were only getting into position to do a good work, but circumstances, not necessary here to mention, indicated that we could not continue the meetings longer. We held twelve meetings in town, two north of the Osage River, and three in Bro. Yost's neighborhood.

Monday, Feb. 26, I stayed with Bro. Yost, as he was to take me to Hickory County, but as he was not in good health, we did not start until Tuesday. We stopped on our way with Bro. A. Killensworth, and held one meeting Tuesday evening at their school-house. Next day we went to Bro. Wm. Flemings, in Hickory County. Here we also found Bro. J. M. Bailey and wife. These four members are from North Carolina. Here I held meetings at two different school-houses; at the Union Hill, fourteen meetings, and the Boon, twelve meetings. The doctrine, as we understand and practice it, was new to most of our hearers, and as the "faith-alone" doctrine is so popular, and so well adapted to the wants of the general classes, we met with some opposition, but, upon the whole, we were encouraged to know that our few members were highly pleased, and that some, like the Bereans of old, searched the Scriptures to see whether these things were so.

From there Bro. Fleming conveyed me to Bro. John Forehand's, at Quincy, Hickory County, where I commenced meetings at the town hall, Feb. 23. I preached fourteen sermons at Quincy to very fair congregations, and with good attention. The Campbellites seem to be in the majority at this place. I feel quite sure that many good impressions were made during our meetings at Quincy.

Looking the whole trip over, I must say that I never worked so long, nor so hard, with as little apparent success. But then the seed must first be sown and the harvest will follow. One thought comforts me,—that in the great day of reckoning we can say, "We have done our duty in declaring to them the counsel of God, to the best of our ability under the existing circumstances." I arrived home March 9, and found my family all well, for which I thank the Giver of all good.

From the Maquoketa Church, Iowa.

We, the members of the above church, thank the Mission Board of our Middle District of Iowa for sending us Bro. Stephen Johnson, to preach for us and hold some meetings during the latter part of December.

Our church has fallen away from over a hundred members to about thirty, with only one minister and one deacon, so the help sent us was much appreciated.

Bro. Johnson came back the second time Feb. 14, and preached for us on the same evening in the Lost Nation church, and also the next day, Sunday,—at our regular appointment. As the church was occupied on Sunday evening, we moved our meeting to the Presbyterian church at Elwood.

On Monday Bro. Johnson and the writer went to a place called Calamus, where we had an appointment at a school-house. As the weather was very unfavorable and the roads very bad, the attendance was not so good on Monday evening, but on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings we had a fair attendance. On Thursday evening it was stormy and we had no meeting, but our meetings after that were well attended throughout. Bro. Johnson left on Monday morning for his home.

I sometimes wonder why it is that the Maquoketa church has fallen away so greatly. I know the time when we had from three to four preachers here, and when the church prospered. Since then our preachers have moved away, taking with them many members. They nearly broke up the church, and now there is but one minister to do all the work that four did before. Is it any wonder that the church does not gain in numbers? I am the only minister to travel over part of four Counties, and that, too, in my seventy-fifth year. Brethren, think of us when there are three or more ministers at one meeting, while some poor churches have only one, as is the case in the Maquoketa and Cedar County churches.

Bro. J. Zook and I have charge of all the territory from Dubuque to the south side of Muscatine County. Please look on the map of Iowa and you will begin to think that there is plenty of room for mission work near home. There are numbers of people in these Counties who know nothing of the Brethren's doctrine and are in need of preaching. I have gone from home, at times, to preach, but can not fill one-fourth of the calls. If our Mission Board could send us two or three ministers, it would be a great help. We have a good meeting-house, one-half mile from the town of Lost Nation, and no members near it.

We can not boast of cheap land like some do, but our land is good, and worth the price asked for it. One reason why our members left here, was because land became so high that they thought best to leave, thinking to do better elsewhere.

I have often wondered why so many of our Brethren go to preach in the large and strong churches, where there are plenty of home ministers, while the poor, isolated churches are greatly in need of help. Is that right? Is it Gospel-like to do so, when the Master has said, "The poor shall have the Gospel preached"? Brethren, think of us in your prayers! Joshua Shultz.

Read Again,

And emphasize mightily, even with the triple accentuation of Good Friday, and Easter, and Whitsuntide, so as to get the very meaning of God Incarnate, both doctrinally and personally. In No. 8, page 115, first column, ninth line from the bottom, for sacred read SAVED. The errata holds a glorious truth, but does not convey the idea of the word into which I desired to concentrate the meaning of the entire article. The Name which is above every name means SAVED as soon as by faith it is ours; and it is ours as soon as it enters the matrix of our spiritual being. Matt. 1: 20, 21. The embryo Christ, and the crucified and risen Christ, are one. A saved person is one whose baptism infolds the Lord's Supper, and whose life illustrates both. C. H. Balsbaugh.

Shall We Permanently Locate Annual Meeting?

Some time since, there appeared an article in the Messenger, in regard to permanent locations for holding our Annual Meeting, and we believe the sentiment is growing, in our Brotherhood, favorable to this plan. We can see that by having permanent places for our meetings, we could have a great deal better and more satisfactory arrangements for feeding and lodging the great concourse of people that yearly attend. Much better accommodations could also be had for our delegates, and various committees. In short, we could get such offers from parties and places, as would insure us far more satisfactory arrangements than we have had heretofore.

Under the present system of holding our Conference in a new place each year, it necessitates the selection of a new and inexperienced committee of arrangements. Expensive, temporary buildings, which are often inadequate and unsatisfactory, especially in rainy seasons, must be erected. Often great sacrifice must be made in disposing of the material on hand after the meeting is over. By having permanent locations, we could make our meetings more enjoyable, less expensive in our arrangements, and to those attending, and thus have a great saving of money, which could be put to a good use in the spreading of the Gospel. Having attended some of our meetings, and having been on the Committee of Arrangements, and knowing the offers we could get to permanently locate our Annual Conference, I believe the time has come when we should make a move in this direction.

Notes of Travel.

Aug. 27, 1890, after bidding many friends and relatives good-bye, I boarded the train at Limestone, Tenn., for a visit in Virginia. I spent six months in the State, and visited three Counties,—Augusta, Rockingham and Shenandoah.

While in Augusta County I had the pleasure of attending two love-feasts, and one also in the Mill Creek church, Rockingham County. At this meeting I had the pleasure of communing with about five hundred members. The churches in Virginia are surely doing a good work, yet they, as well as all other churches, have their "ups and downs" May God grant them every blessing, that they may work faithfully until the night cometh.

While my heart was filled with joy, on account of seeing so many workers, it was also made sad to see others, who were not willing to accept a place in the moral vineyard. I visited many relatives, and formed many acquaintances, both old and young.

There are many pleasant things connected with my visit that I would like to mention, but space forbids. May the Blessed Master remember us all as his children! J. A. Arnold.

From Garrison, Iowa.

Our quarterly council occurred March 14. This was also our preparatory council to District Meeting. A good deal of business came before the meeting. Elders S. Johnson and P. Forney were chosen as representatives to District Meeting. Four families,—nine members in all,—applied for certificates. They are moving West, but only two of them are leaving Iowa. This takes another minister, Bro. George Aschenbrenner. Amidst all the efforts that are being put forth, we are losing numerically. In 1880 we numbered 140, and in 1890 fifteen less.

About seventeen years ago our officials commenced going. Seven ministers and six deacons have left us. Three of them have gone to their reward. Our present corps of laborers consists of five ministers and seven deacons.

When looking at the above, we feel as though we had sustained a loss, yet we realize that we are sending forth laborers into the vineyard of the Lord. "Oh the good we all may do while the days are going by!" Lizzie Johnson.

To the Churches of North-Western Kansas and Colorado.

Please instruct your delegates to our District Meeting whether you would be favorable to continue the District line between North-western Kansas and Colorado and the Southern District of Kansas, on through the State of Colorado. This query will be discussed before our District Meeting. B. B. Whitmer.

Quinter, Kans., March 18.

From Kleinfeldersville, Pa.

This is a little town at the extreme south-western end of a small valley, called Millbach. Kleinfeldersville is the place where Albrecht, or Albright, lived and originated the Evangelical denomination, or Albright people. He lies buried about one-half mile from where we live. Millbach (the German word) or Mill Creek (the English word) is known in the Brethren's history as the place where Conrad Beissel, the founder of the Ephrata (Lancaster Co., Pa.) Seventh Day Baptists, was baptized by Bro. Peter Becker. Mention is made of this fact in a tract on feet-washing, issued by Eld. John Forney, of Kansas. But at that time, the time when Beissel and others were baptized in the Pequea,—Mill Creek embraced a larger tract of country than what it does at present.

But I did not intend to write a history of this country, but a synopsis of our series of meetings. Since October the Tulpehocken church has had six series of meetings at as many different meeting-houses. The last was here, at Millbach. Wet weather and bad roads were very much against us, but, notwithstanding, those present could not but realize that it was good to be there.

Quite a number of precious souls were added to the Tulpehocken church during the winter. I would ask all the pure in heart to remember us at the throne of mercy. The writer feels a special need of it. Geo. Bucher.

To Mary Bucher Beahm.

NUMBER FOUR.

Dear Daughter:—

It is hard to comprehend the magnitude and speed of retrogression when it once gets fairly started. So "watch and pray."

If we conglomerate all the bad we can find in the different members of the church, we get a terrible monster.

Here we find a member who lives almost without prayer, or, rather, he is dead without it. There is one who so entangles himself with the affairs of this world that the kingdom of God and his righteousness are nearly crowded out. Occasionally one is guilty of jesting, or foolish talking, or filthiness, or covetousness, etc. There are still a few contaminated with (—now what shall I do? Shall I name it? The guilty are tired of hearing it. But the Bible says, "Diminish not a word," Jer. 26: 2, "reprove, rebuke, exhort," in season, and out of season)—tobacco.

The command, "Be not conformed to this world," is more and more disrespected in a multitude of things, or so defined as to suit nearly every case in life. How differently our forefathers preached and lived it (and many do yet) to what some do in our time!

> "Will we be carried to the skies
> On flowery beds of ease,
> While others fought to win the prize
> And sailed through bloody seas?"

So we are obliged to put on sackcloth and sit in ashes on account of the changes for the worse which stealthily introduce themselves amongst us. "Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good." Rom. 12: 9. Many are too willing to defend their pet wrong! O, that there might be many more who faithfully obey the commandment of our Crucified Redeemer, who wore the crown of thorns, "that ye love one another as I have loved you." John 15: 12. And how did he love us? "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John 15: 13. This is what the Savior did. He loved us so much that he sacrificed himself for us. So we shall "love one another," make sacrifices, die for one another. Follow not the changes which are made for the worse, only those which are made for the better. "Look unto Jesus," and "let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matt. 5: 16. Geo. Bucher.

From Greene, Iowa.

March 1 Bro. Wm Hipes came to my home, six miles north-west of Greene, and preached in our school-house. As the people seemed much interested in the meeting, and also desirous to have some evening meetings, Bro. William concluded to stay and preach for us. He preached eight sermons in all, but we had to close the meetings on account of bad weather, and just when the people were getting very deeply interested. I have no doubt but there would have been some accessions, if we could have continued the meetings a little longer. One thing is sure,—Bro. William has sown the seed with a careful hand, and we trust it has fallen on well-cultivated ground. Although the place of meeting was only six miles from our church in Greene, a good many of the people in this neighborhood are very little acquainted with the doctrine and principles of the Brethren.

I moved into this neighborhood last spring, up to which time there had never been a sermon preached in this school-house. I requested the elder to hold meetings out here, and the Brethren have preached out here every four weeks since last spring. I am sure that Bro. Hipes' meetings have made many good impressions in this vicinity. Many were made to see in altogether a different way. I think if we had more ministers in our church who would go every-where, preaching the Word, it would be a good thing for our church. Bro. William has made many warm friends here during his meetings. May God bless his labors wherever he goes, is our prayer! A. S. Shook.

From Salem, Ill.

Bro. Solomon Bucklew, of Fulton County, Ill., came to our town Feb. 21, and held a series of meetings. He preached seventeen sermons for us, in which he held forth the doctrine of Christ in its purity and power. During these meetings seven precious souls were received into the church by baptism and one wanderer was reclaimed. The members were greatly encouraged and built up.

Three years ago there were but five members in Salem; now there are twenty-nine. We have a church rented in Salem and the Mission Board sends some one to preach for us once a month.

Our home ministers hold meetings here every Sunday. We have Sunday-school each Sunday and prayer-meeting once a week. Brethren, pray that we may continue to prosper!

Brethren traveling through here are invited to stop with us. We especially desire to have all the ministerial aid we can get. Some of the Brethren live within a few blocks of the depot and can easily be found by inquiry.

Brethren seeking new homes will do well to come and see our country. Southern Illinois is one of the finest fruit countries in the world.

Those desiring any information about this place may write to P. R. Wagoner, or the writer of this article. S. S. Fouts.

Wayside Notes.

I left Iowa Nov. 4 and arrived at Kansas City Nov. 5. Here my daughter is living, and I spent three days in the city very pleasantly.

Nov. 9 I went to Wellington, Sumner Co., Kans. Two of my sons are residents of that place, and during my stay in that vicinity I held several meetings at Conway Springs.

My next appointments were in Wichita, where I held a few weeks' meetings during December, which we interrupted but once by a three days' trip to Winfield, to see my daughter, Mrs. Phillipps.

My meetings at Wichita were succeeded by a similar effort at Wellington. After that I went to a place eight miles north of Wichita, where I labored for two weeks. This little outpost and the Wichita church are one congregation, under the eldership of Bro. Johnson, of Conway Springs. Upon seeing that Bro. John Wise was present, I greatly preferred to have him do the preaching, but he said, "Go ahead, Bro. Paul; you do not know what you may be able to accomplish." So I preached in the town as well as at the appointment north of Wichita. Altogether I labored about five weeks, and the Lord blessed the labors by an ingathering of souls.

Jan. 27 I went to Wellington again, to stay ten days. Then I was called to attend a council in the Wichita church, which passed off pleasantly. The next day being Sunday, I preached for them, and had the pleasure of seeing two dear ones,—husband and wife, turn to the Lord.

While at Wichita, I was requested to baptize a sick man at Wellington, but failed to reach the place in time to comply with his request, so, instead of a baptismal scene, we had a funeral service. I hereby return heart-felt thanks to all who so kindly entertained me while sojourning with them. The Lord bless them! Paul Wetzel.

From Oregon.

After spending over two weeks among the members in the Salem congregation, and preaching for them, I returned home last Monday, and found my family in their usual health, for which we thanked the Good Lord. The Salem church is our home congregation but at this time, and for over one year, we have been living at Sodaville, Linn County, mainly for our family's health.

Feb. 28 our quarterly council was held in the City of Salem. The attendance of members was not as large as usual, on account of the bad roads and rain in the morning, but the council passed off in love and union. The members decided to hold their yearly Communion and series of meetings at Macleay, eight miles east of Salem, commencing on Thursday, June 11, at 11 A. M. Communion on Friday evening, June 12. We hold our meetings in a beautiful grove, belonging to brother and sister J. S. Bashor. There is plenty of water near by, and we have a large tent in which to hold the meetings. The Brethren and friends,—all that choose to do so,—go there, some with small tents and some with wagons, and camp on the ground during the meetings. We hold meetings about one week. We give this early notice of our meetings, hoping that members and especially ministers from a distance, will pay us a visit during the coming summer, and will suit their visit to the time of our meeting. Macleay is about sixty miles south of Portland.

From Georgetown, Ohio.

According to arrangements made by the Brethren of the Salem church, Bro. Henry Frantz, of the Donnel's Creek church, Ohio, came to us, at our joint house in Georgetown, and commenced a series of meetings on the evening of Feb. 28, and remained until the evening of March 11, preaching, in all, nineteen sermons with great power. As an immediate result of his efforts, four dear young sisters took upon themselves the yoke of Jesus, and were baptized. May they ever prove to be branches of the True Vine, by bearing much good fruit! Others were almost persuaded to become Christians. Many prayers go up in their behalf that they may, ere long, become fully persuaded to join in with the people of God. The members were much encouraged. May God help us all to be more devoted!

The meetings closed with much interest and a crowded house. As is too often the case, the meetings closed too soon. According to previous arrangements, Bro. Frantz had to go to other fields of labor. May God's choicest blessing rest upon him, and all his servants who are laboring to promote the good cause! God bless, too, his faithful companion, who enjoyed the last few meetings with us.

Bro. Frantz went from here to Carroll County, Ind., to hold forth the Word. SARAH DITMER.

Potsdam, Ohio, March 14.

From the Solomon's Creek Congregation, Elkhart County, Indiana.

WE, the Brethren of said congregation, held our quarterly council meeting March 7, 1891. There was not very much business before the meeting, but all passed off satisfactorily. Bro. Davis Younce is our delegate to Annual Meeting, and brethren Hiram Forney and David M. Weybright to District Meeting. We appointed our Communion for June 20, and give a hearty invitation to ministers and lay members, as we have a large house and can accommodate a good many.

Bro. Lemuel Hillery, of Kansas, came to us during the latter part of January, and held a series of meetings. In the fifteen sermons which he preached, he did not shun to declare the Truth to both saint and sinner. His sermons were well received by both members and outsiders. We had large congregations most of the time, and the best of order and attention. Two were received by baptism at this meeting. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger commenced protracted meetings at Syracuse, March 12, and will continue for some time. I hope that he may be an instrument in the hand of God to do much good! JOHN ARNOLD.

Milford, Ind., March 16.

From North Manchester, Ind.

OUR quarterly council-meeting was held March 5, with a fair attendance. Considerable business came before the meeting, which was all adjusted in the most pleasant manner and with the best of feelings. One precious soul was received into the fold by baptism. We organized the church into a dozen districts and appointed solicitors in each, to raise funds for the needy in the West. The canvass has already been made, and over $200 in cash has been procured.

Two delegates were selected to represent this church at District Meeting in April. Brethren R. H. Miller and Albert Wright were selected.

Preparation is rapidly being made for the new church-house. The old frame house which has stood on this ground for thirty years is now torn down, to give room for the new one.

D. C. CRIPE.

From Mount Pleasant, Ind.

MARCH 7 occurred the quarterly council at this place. Considerable business was transacted and disposed of to the satisfaction of all. We felt that the spirit of the Lord was reigning in every heart. All the officers were elected for the Sunday-school, which is to begin the first Sunday in April.

A prayer or social meeting was also organized. We have long felt the need of this, and hope it may prove to be to the edification of us all! Let us take a greater interest in the Word of God, now that we have an opportunity of instructing each other more fully. Our prayer is that it may prove a success, that it may throw around the young a religious influence which can not otherwise be obtained.

On the evening of March 7, also on Sunday forenoon and evening, Bro. Daniel Wysong preached for us. He, with many others, is ever welcome to stop with us, to impart a knowledge of the Truth. Our love-feast will occur June 12.

From Moscow, Idaho.

I LEFT my home in Monroe County, Iowa, July 28, 1890, and arrived in Moscow, Aug. 1, where I met with a small band of kind brethren and sisters. They had no minister among them, and were like a flock of sheep without a shepherd. About the middle of December Eld. Sidney Hodgden and wife, from Neosho, Kans., came to this place. Bro. Hodgden had some meetings and did some good preaching.

Feb. 14, 1891, we met in council. Everything passed off in love and harmony. The brethren and sisters were much encouraged, and formed good resolutions to work more earnestly for the Master. Bro. Hodgden came here as a missionary and intends to stay two years. I believe he will build up a church in Moscow that will be an honor to the Brethren and a glory to God.

J. J. BEEBE.

A Short Account of my Travels in America and Europe.

I ARRIVED Jan. 1, 1890, at Mount Morris, from Herington, Kansas, to attend the school. I will tell you something of what I saw during the time I was in the school. I had my lodging and boarding-place right in the school-building. Six o'clock in the morning we were all ready for breakfast. I felt glad to see that the sisters came to the table with their heads covered. Before eating, a brother prayed to God, and also when we had closed. Afterwards we all went to the Chapel to read in the Bible, and pray to God, and then the school work began. Dinner was at twelve o'clock and supper at about five o'clock, and by ten o'clock we all were in our beds to rest from our work.

Every Thursday evening we had prayer-meeting in the Chapel. I enjoyed the meeting very much. The members that were there seemed to be interested in the meetings, and therefore took an active part. Every Sunday we had preaching twice. I was glad to be at these meetings.

Feb. 19 I bade farewell to the Brethren to go to my native country. I was sorry to leave them, but my prayer is, if we meet no more on earth, we may all hold out faithful, and be so unspeakably happy as to meet within the pearly gates and walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, and be permitted to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb.

From Mt Morris I had a young sister for company. She told me that she was going to Ohio to visit a sister in the flesh. We had a good conversation together. In Chicago I met Bro. D. L. Miller. I give my thanks and love to you, dear brother, for all you did for me when I was over there. He was the last brother to whom I spoke in the United States. When Bro. Miller and the young sister left, I was alone, and was sorry that I had no brother or sister in Christ to whom I could speak. I believed that God was with me, and would guide me safely over the great water. I arrived safely in New York on the evening of Feb. 21. Next morning, at nine o'clock, we left New York in the good ship, Werra, which carried us over the great ocean. We had storm nearly all the time, but the Lord led us safely to land again, after nine days' voyage across the Atlantic Sea.

March 5 I reached Copenhagen, and was glad to meet my dear brethren and sisters again. God be thanked for all his protecting care during all my travels since I was here last! I will also, by this means, send my heartiest thanks and love to all the dear brethren and sisters for all that they have done for me when we were together in America.

After having visited the Brethren in Copenhagen and Malmo for fourteen days, I left for my parents' home in Elmhult, whom I found well, and was glad to see after so long an absence. After awhile I met with a man, named Swensson, who was willing to open his house for preaching; then Bro. Olsson came to hold some meetings. It looks now as though some one would join the church in the future.

I left my parents' home Jan. 11, to do some work in a town named Christianstad, a place of 10,000 inhabitants. I am the only member in that town. Pray for me! But it is only ten miles from Wanneberga, where we already have organized a little church.

Feb. 14 Bro. Olsson came to Wanneberga to hold some meetings. He preached in all thirteen sermons to crowded houses. Feb. 19th a brother from Wanneberga, that sister's husband who was first baptized at that place,—and Bro. Swensson, from Golshult, were baptized. He is that brother whom I before told you I met in Elmhult. About fifty persons witnessed the baptism. Feb. 22 another brother came over to the Lord's side, and was baptized. The same day we held a very good love-feast, at which ten communed, — four for the first time. Many witnessed the services. The prospects seem to be very good in Wanneberga. Do not forget to pray for the young members there, that they may prove themselves faithful. Bro. Olsson asked me to go there, to lead a prayer-meeting next Sunday. They are very glad to hear that Bro. Olsson is soon moving there, and it is very necessary that he is coming there, because many new places are opened round about Wanneberga, so there is plenty to do for a preacher every day. The place is centrally located in the country, and railroads are running in all directions.

Feb. 24 he came to Christianstad, and we had a good meeting in a rented hall; for the time, not a few came to hear the Word preached.

Bro. Olsson has too much to do; he has need of some helpers in the field. At present he has taken cold, and is bad off, wherefore he has need of being included in your prayers. We are praying to God to send some more true laborers to us.

Myself, Bro. Olsson and all the members are sending much love to the whole Brotherhood in America. We wish to be remembered in your united prayers. ANDREW WESTERGREN.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and stands, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - March 31, 1891.

THE love-feast at Lanark, Ill., is May 16, instead of May 6, as noted elsewhere in this issue.

DON'T fail to read carefully the articles in our Missionary and Tract Department this week. They are good and instructive. Read and study them carefully.

BRO. M. M. ESHELMAN visited this place last week. He is located at Eswena, about fourteen miles from Lordsburgh, Cal. Bro. Eshelman is well pleased with his new home, and thinks that Southern California is a goodly land. He is at present engaged as traveling agent for the Santa Fe Route.

BRO. B. F. MILLER, of Alpena, Dakota, reports the following donations from the South Waterloo church: One hundred dollars in cash, and two large bales of clothing. There were many hearts made to rejoice, and all return their gratitude and thanks to the Brethren and friends at South Waterloo, for their liberal donations.

BRO. SHARP writes as follows: "Edward Frantz, one of the teachers in McPherson College, was elected to the ministry, and Wm. Flickinger to the deacon's office, who, with their wives, were duly installed on the 21st inst."

THE meetings at this place closed on the 25th inst. with twenty-nine applications for baptism. On Monday evening, the 23rd, an enjoyable love-feast was held in the College dining hall. One hundred and twenty-four members—nearly all of whom were young in years, and some of them but tender lambs of the flock were seated around the Lord's Table. It was a joyous feast of love, and those who were permitted to enjoy it, will not soon forget the blessed experience. The Lord has wonderfully blessed his people, and to his great name we give the honor and glory!

IN a recent number of the Microcosm Dr. Hall states that he has sold three hundred thousand health pamphlets. The price at which these were sold was $4.00 per copy. This would amount to the large sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars. Allowing one-half for commissions and other expenses, and the Doctor has the comfortable sum of six hundred thousand dollars for his share of the profits on the Hygienic treatment. Verily, it pays in these days to know how to sell a remedy when you have found it. And now the Doctor announces that he will, from this time on, sell the remedy to ministers, in job lots, at fifty cents per pamphlet.

IN the notice of funds, received for the Western sufferers, please read instead of "Price's Creek church," "Price's Creek church, other denominations and non-professing friends in the bounds of the church." We gladly make this correction by request of Bro. M. M. Petry, of Eldorado, Ohio. We believe in giving honor to whom honor is due. In many places the friends of the Brethren have liberally aided in raising the funds for the Western sufferers. "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

THE PRICE OF OUR HYMN BOOK AND HYMNAL.

WE have had in mind, for some time, a reduction in the prices of our Hymnals and Hymn Books. When we consolidated our church papers it was thought best to continue one office in the West and one in the East. But lately we have more closely consolidated our work in one office, and as a result we are now enabled to announce a reduction in the prices of our Hymnals and Hymn Books.

We were also somewhat reluctant to announce the reduction at this time, lest some might conclude that it was done in view of the request for a revision of the Hymnal and Hymn Book. But we want to assure our Brethren that we have not been influenced by this consideration. We had the present reduction in mind for several years, and spoke of it to others. It was our purpose, just as soon as we could more closely unite our offices, and thus get out our books cheaper, we would give our Brethren the advantage of lower prices. We have now done this, and the first edition of the books to be published under the new arrangement, will be sold at the reduced prices. If it is decided to revise the Hymn Book, or to get out a new book, it will be sometime before the work can be done, and it will doubtless be arranged, so that both the old and the new can be used in church service, so that those, who desire to avail themselves of the lower prices, can do so.

As to the request for a revision, or for a new book, we do not wish to discuss that question here. We are, of course, interested in the matter, owing to the fact that the copyrights on our books cost us a considerable sum of money, but we are more interested to have that done which will best subserve the good of the cause for which we are laboring. We have confidence in our Brotherhood, and believe that when the matter is fully discussed in Conference, and the question is fully understood, that the right thing will be done. When right prevails, then are the best interests of the church subserved, and the name of God glorified.

At these prices we prepay postage. We have made a special rate per dozen for churches, and also to our agents. Many of the churches are purchasing books for use in their regular meetings. They are distributed among the audience, and it has been found helpful in an increased interest in singing, and we have made a low rate to churches desiring to purchase books for this purpose.

In arranging our prices, we have had in view the work of our agents, who have the sale of the books. They must have something for their time and trouble. It often happens too, that our agents lose something by selling books on time, so that it is only right that they should have a per cent of profit on their sales. Our agents will please write us for special terms, and also report the number of books on hand unsold. The churches can order through our agents, and if there is no agent in the congregation, the books may be ordered direct from us.

OPPORTUNITIES.

So many people are constantly speaking of opportunities, and bewailing the fact that they are not surrounded by conditions in life that lead to success. To all such we commend the following item from the Christian Union. Read it over again and again, for it contains sound words of wisdom on this subject.

"The incident of the boat-load of shipwrecked men, dying of thirst, who accidentally dropped a bucket into what they supposed to be the sea, and found they were sailing in the fresh water of the Amazon, has been used until it is threadbare; but it is, nevertheless, a capital illustration of what is happening this very hour to a multitude of men and women. There are a host of people who suppose themselves to be eager to find their work in life, and who are longing for an opportunity, who are surrounded by work and opportunity which they fail to recognize. The real difference between men is not in their chances, but in their ability to recognize their chances. Opportunities are universal. They come in one form or another to every human being. It is safe to say that no man lives whose hand at some time has not been at the door of a genuine opportunity, if he had only raised his eyes and discovered that his hand was no longer resting on an unbroken wall. The trouble is that we do not see. We are so intent upon having things come to us after some manner which we have determined upon in our own minds, that when they come to us in some other guise we let them pass unnoticed. The common opportunity comes, as the divinest opportunity in the whole history of the world came, cradled in obscurity.

"Opportunities wear the humblest dress; they hide themselves behind the simplest disguises; there is nothing in them that arouses our interest or awakens our suspicions; for the most part we pass them by as the most commonplace things in our environment. This is the subtle and dangerous test which they apply to us. If they came with their value disclosed by the splendor of their attire, there would be no test of character in the manner in which we met them. Every man treats a king handsomely; it is only the gentleman who is courteous to the beggar.

"Opportunities come in such fashion that our reception of them determines our fitness to use them. The man or woman of true wisdom knows that there is nothing in all this world which has not noble possibilities in it, and that appearances count for nothing when quality is concerned. It is by no accident, therefore, that some men succeed and others fail; that some men seem to be passing steadily upward and others remain hopelessly stationary. The men who succeed are open-minded. They are alert to discover the true value of things. They do not estimate the importance of events or chances by their appearances. They take everything at its best and use it for its highest. So there lies at the bottom of every right use of opportunities a noble quality of character; that quality which takes life as a divine thing, full in every form of noble chances of growth and progress. No one will read these words, however obscure or remote from the great centers of human activity, about whom there are not doors ready to be opened into a wider usefulness and a nobler life. What we need is, not a new chance, but clearness of vision to discern the chance which at this very hour is ours if we recognize it."

OUR VISIT EAST.

PREVIOUS notice has been given of a series of services held with the Brethren at Waynesborough, Pa.; and now, at the solicitation of some of the friends there, we will make a few notes and observations in reference to the church and its work in that place.

In company with wife and little Ruth, we arrived at Waynesborough on Saturday evening, Feb. 14. On Sunday morning we preached in the Old Antietam church, a few miles from town, and on Sunday evening commenced a series of services in town, which were continued until Thursday, March 5. The weather, part of the time was inclement, yet the congregations were good, and the interest, shown in the services on the part of the membership and others, was encouraging.

The result of the meeting has been given, and what little was accomplished was the result of God working through his people. The success of a meeting depends on the membership. If the members of the church come in such an attitude to God as enables him to work through them, a good work will be done. Many of the members of the Waynesborough church were warm and earnest, and, as a result, we had a good meeting; the Lord was with us, and the church was made to rejoice in the conversion of souls.

During these meetings we visited many of the homes of our brethren; indeed, we feel well acquainted with the membership in Waynesborough, and we can truly say we have never met a more hospitable and warm-hearted people anywhere. We thank God for this feeling. It gives us a slight foretaste of what the better life will be. A gentleman who is a Baptist and a professor in a college, once said to us, "I admire your people because of their love for one another. There is no caste among you." Though we do not have the grace of Christian charity as fully developed among us as it ought to be, yet we have realized the truth of what our friend said. We have, in recent years, been brought in contact with other religious bodies, and we have noticed and experienced a wide difference in this respect between them and our own people. We now speak of our people as a body. There are many individuals who sadly lack in Christian charity, and it is this that, in some instances, weakens the power of the church. That charity which thinketh no ill, that hides the sins of our fellows, that envieth not, that suffereth long, is a force that makes the devil tremble. It was this love that made him tremble in Waynesborough. Love to God and our fellow-men caused our people there to labor for the salvation of others, and as a result, Satan lost some of his subjects. His force was weakened and the cause of Christ strengthened. What a noble work it is to labor for the salvation of souls!

This church has a live Sunday-school, under the superintendency of Bro. Silas Dubbel, assisted by Bro. Allen Good. It is kept up all the year and is increasing in numbers and interest. Over 150 are now regularly in attendance. It has a corps of live, energetic teachers, und among them is Eld. Oller, who manifests much interest in teaching and working up his class.

The fruits of the Sunday-school are seen in the large number of young men and women who are members of the church and such active workers. We were glad to see that the young members here are encouraged to work side by side with the older and more experienced. This is what makes a strong church. Get the membership to work and they develop into strong, vigorous Christians.

To those who have recently come to the church, we have this word of counsel: Cultivate the Christ-faith in your soul. This faith puts Christ in your soul as an ever-abiding presence and an almighty power. Remember, to stand the scoffs of the world, to resist the temptations of wealth, to keep in check an unruly temper, to subdue base passions, and to direct all your plans and purposes towards the right, requires a power above your own. David realized this when he said, "God is my refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." This help and strength, you may have by letting Jesus rule in your hearts. Let his spirit live in you, and rule over you, and you are bound to conquer.

While we were glad that some came to Christ, yet there were others in whom we felt so much interest, that would not heed the calls of God. We know that the Spirit knocked at their hearts, and the thought that these calls might go unheeded once too often, caused much sadness on the part of their nearest and best friends. How we wish that wonderful question, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation," could be kept before their minds day and night, until it is solved!

A most affecting scene occurred on the last day of our services. One who had been overcome by temptation and had fallen by the way, was, after a confession to the church, received into fellowship. It is noble when thrust down by the power of the evil one, to rise again and renew the conflict. May your experience, dear brother, be that of the Apostle Paul: "Through Christ who strengtheneth me, I can do all things."

After a short service on Thursday, we witnessed the baptism of two more penitents, and then, in company with a few Christian friends, went to the home of friend Fahnestock, a short distance from town, where we spent a few hours very pleasantly. Sister Fahnestock is an earnest member of the church, and nothing would give her more joy than to have her husband unite with her in Christian work. He, with several others at Waynesborough, are fair examples of the young man who came to Christ,—good, moral men, but lack one thing.

From here we went to sister Newcomer's, near Smithburg, Md., the home of sister Edith and Joe Newcomer. We enjoyed the hospitality of this very kind family until the next day when we started for the EASTERN SHORE OF MARYLAND.

From Baltimore we went by boat down the Chesapeake Bay to Denton. Here live two families from our old James Creek congregation, and several others from Morrison's Cove. We remained in this vicinity until the Friday following, and during this time, visited the homes of most of our people. We preached for them on Sunday morning and each evening except Thursday evening, when the weather was too inclement for people to turn out.

There is now quite a settlement of Brethren in Caroline County. A few years ago several families from Bedford County moved there and were followed by more from Huntingdon County. More recently a number of families moved there from Berks County, so that now there is a fair representation of Brethren in that community. They have two meeting-houses only about six or seven miles apart. Bro. J. T. King, from Berks County, is the minister, assisted by Bro. Levi Brumbaugh, who was called to the ministry last fall. As usual when Brethren come together from different localities, little differences occur, but these are all adjusted where there is true Christian charity. No trouble will occur in consequence of different customs and habits, unless there exists that extreme narrowness that aims to bring others to our own feelings and notions. This is a feeling of self-importance, foreign to the true Christian spirit, and, in some instances, creates discord and confusion. From what we could learn, such a state of affairs is not likely to occur among these Brethren. Bro. King is a kind, genial brother, and with him at the head to steer the little ship, we can expect clear sailing.

During our visit here, there was a heavy rainfall which made bad roads and showed up the country to a great disadvantage, yet we really think our people here have made choice of a goodly land. Some farmers here raise from 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of wheat annually. But, notwithstanding this is done, fruit is regarded as the principal means of profit. Peaches grow abundantly, and so do all kinds of berries. We have no doubt but that our thrifty Pennsylvania farmers will be quite successful in this country. There are yet some good farms for sale at reasonable rates. There is a very desirable farm for sale adjoining lands of Benjamin and Isaac Brumbaugh's; also George Brumbaugh's, and near the meeting-house.

Space forbids us saying anything further about our visit here. We enjoyed it much and express our gratitude to all the brethren and sisters for their kindness.

We left for Baltimore on Friday, soon after 1 o'clock. In the evening as we touched the bay, the wind was high and the waters rough. Sister Anna Brumbaugh had prepared us an excellent supper, but we did not have an appetite for it. Little Ruth was sick, and wife and I grew less and less inclined to partake of food. Later in the evening it grew calmer and the remainder of the voyage was pleasant. We arrived home on Saturday, after an absence of four weeks. J. B. B.

ENDOWMENT FUND AND ITS IMPORTANCE, ADVANTAGES, ETC.

BY S. W. HOOVER.

I BELIEVE no article, at length, from the pen of any one has recently been published in the MESSENGER on this important financial topic. Every other topic, probably, pertaining directly to missionary and tract enterprises, and their various lines of work, have received more attention through the press, and are doubtless better understood by a majority of our brethren and sisters than this one is. As a financial measure this fund is one of unequaled merit. It secures to both the endower and the institution endowed, many advantages over all other methods in support of missionary work, whether by books, tracts or otherwise, for the enlargement of Zion's borders.

I feel quite certain that the earlier we understandingly and practically become familiar with this matter and the great uses, and purposes, and workings of these several noble church institutions, the more appreciative of their real merits will we become.

Endowment, properly speaking, means, a property fund or revenue, permanently appropriated to any object or institution. Such appropriation gives an institution financial character and strength, and, practically, also becomes a source or basis, from which a constant income is derived. Especially is an endowment fund of great consequence, weight and influence to religious institutions, such as the tract and missionary enterprises, because these, of themselves, are, in character and purposes, permanently deriving all their spiritual energies and powers from God's Word, "the pillar and ground of the truth."

Money figures quite prominently in all business affairs in whatever purpose and description, from that of the millionaire capitalist and manufacturer, down to the poorest vender of peanuts. The same thing is equally true of educational, benevolent, religious and other institutions and enterprises throughout the world. It requires money to operate them for purposes necessary to reach the real object and end for which all have severally been originated and reared. For purposes, equally pertinent, religious institutions come under the same head. Money is needed to make them operative, not, however, as a converting agency, for this, by divine favor and direct appointment, is from God, but as a means toward the great end of all human hope, for which Christ died, the salvation of sinners and, ultimately, eternal life.

Paul in 2 Cor. 9: 2, took occasion to speak boastingly [in a highly commendable manner], of them to those of Macedonia, for their professed subjection unto the Gospel of Christ, and your [their] liberal contribution to the saints, and unto all men. This statement of the apostle shows not only an approving, but also an appreciative recognition of Christian liberality, both for saints and unto all men, to the effect that the Gospel may be sent and preached to all, in every nation and tongue.

I next present a few figures which, by way of calculation and comparison, still further show the superior advantages of this fund. For instance $100,000, at six per cent interest, will every year give to the institution so endowed, the sum of $6,000. The sum of $20 in cash or by note constitutes one life membership, and such sum is at once placed to the endowment fund. The interest on $20 in one year amounts to $1.20; in one hundred years to $120. And in one thousand years to $1,200, which is more than fifty times as great as the sum first contributed. It is altogether one of continual gain, and may very appropriately be termed an evergreen fund, because means thus given to the Lord's cause become a living, working force to that end. In this way great monuments of benevolence and charity may be reared to the glory of God, that will not crumble or perish by age, but last forever.

One life membership in the "Book and Tract Work" entitles the endower to draw annually, during life, one dollar's worth of books or tracts. The tracts can at once be sent upon their mission of love. An endowment note to same, given for twenty or more dollars, bearing interest at six per cent, payable annually, and becoming due and payable in any given number of years, or at death, also entitles the person to draw, annually, one dollar's worth of publications for each twenty dollars worth of such obligation.

Again, to show, by comparison, the great wisdom of placing sums of twenty dollars and upwards to the endowment fund, I name you an opposite case [of charity] which took place near here, where a brother donated by will "one thousand dollars" to the church, to be distributed to the poor. The money came into its hands about twenty years ago, and was spent, as directed, within a period of about seventeen years, when it passed from view. Now, had the liberal donor so placed this sum that only the interest, accruing thereon, should be expended, the poor, it will be seen, would, by the time named, have received in interest the same amount of money, and consequently benefit, as they did in the other way, and the original one thousand dollars remain untouched, which would still be yielding its annual fruit.

The prophet says, "Money loaned to the Lord is like bread cast upon the waters to be gathered many days hence." Money placed to the care of the General Missionary Work and the Book and Tract Work, by way of an endowment is as money loaned to the Lord,—the income to be employed to send laborers into the harvest. It will live, and work, and gather, day by day, as time moves on, down the ages, and not only many days, but for all days and time, even as long as grass grows and water runs. Both these works come forward as worthy institutions of the church, soliciting your substantial favors. Blank notes will be sent on application.

MISSIONARY OUTLOOK.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

ONE of the most important and far-reaching commands Christ ever uttered is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Is the church doing all she can in fulfilling this command, or as much as she feels like doing?

When will the end of the world come? "This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come. Matt. 24: 14. Notice in this passage "the end" is conditioned on something you, my brother, and I, have to do. Are we doing it?

Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? Rom. 10: 13-15. And what will God do with the church that neglects to send, or with the followers who refuse to go or to help send some one?

A brother in Kansas, in a letter in which he encloses $15.00 for the Mission Fund, says:—

"I think there is still great need of publishing articles in the MESSENGER to admonish brethren and show them the need of giving for the missionary cause. When we look at things as they are and then as they should be, we are made to wonder at our indifference to spiritual things. Look at the sum raised this winter for the temporal need of the Western sufferers and then behold the thousands upon thousands who are spiritually starving and no provision made for their wants."

The writer touches a burning point. He does not mean to find fault with the temporal help given, but only urges us to do better for man's spiritual wants. During the last four months the Brotherhood has raised over $12,000—to keep men from suffering physically, and during the past year only about one-half that amount for man's salvation. Yet we believe this $12,000 will not be lost if, when God blesses the West again with plenty, Christ's heralds follow the money and point the people to the cross. Because of these temporal blessings which God through his children has given them, many out of gratitude will be drawn to him. Let us labor, pray and hope to that end.

The Home Mission Board of the Southern District of Iowa has taken a step in the right direction, and we believe, one that will be productive of much good. They have arranged with one of their ministers to preach one or more missionary sermons at their next District Meeting. Other Districts are doing as well in having missionary meetings in connection with their District Meetings. From this stand-point the outlook for active mission work in the near future is favorable. We recommend that Districts not having such meetings arrange for them as soon as they can.

Secretaries of the Home Mission Boards, please take notice:—In making your reports to your respective District Meetings, we suggest that you include in that report, besides the money received and expended, the number of mission stations under your care, the sermons preached, and members added. Then the members of the District will have an opportunity of seeing the good done by them through their board, and be persuaded to do more.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

BY C. D. HYLTON.

In looking over the Brotherhood, we see some old fathers in Israel, the greater part of whose lives has been spent in the service of the Lord, but in declining life, under adverse circumstances, their influences have been somewhat impaired. They no more receive the encouragement that is necessary to make their last days pleasant, but are cast off as a garment that is worn.

When looking at these once useful men who have struggled so hard for the advancement of Christ's kingdom and the promulgation of Truth, we are made to wonder who is to blame for their present condition.

On first thought we are all ready to say, "No one is to blame but themselves. They have not been as cautious in their business transactions as they should have been and have thereby betrayed the confidence of the church." This may be very true in some cases, while, in other cases, these old fathers are not alone to blame.

Could we be placed in their condition for a while, we might think differently. No doubt men are sometimes driven by circumstances to do things that, under more favorable circumstances, they would not do. I have in my mind an elder who lives in a Western State. He was once in good financial shape. Being a mechanic, his business demanded his time, but owing to many calls for preaching and other church work, his business was neglected, he contracted debts, the church was poor and did not give him the necessary support, and yet his liabilities must be met. Then came the crisis,—a crash, and his influence was gone. Now who was to blame?

There was another elder who lived in the South. The only legacy he inherited was brains and muscles. Early in life he was called to the ministry. He settled in the forests, with the cares of a young family and the ministry on him. Oft-times he rode over the mountains and hills, attending to his Father's business, leaving his wife and little children at home, having only a bed quilt to hang over the door while the hungry wolves were howling in the forest. The Lord blessed him both spiritually and temporally. He was always ready to go when called on to preach, even at a time when it was dangerous to preach the peaceable doctrine of Christ in the South.

He traveled on his own expenses, rode several horses to death and forsook his financial affairs to such an extent that it proved fatal. Demands were made on him until all was consumed, and influence half dead. How many "looked on him and passed by on the other side," the Lord only knows.

We mention these two cases and, perhaps, thousands have traveled the same road. If I should live to be old and meet with adversities I would regret very much to have my brethren and sisters treat me with indifference. I believe the church should bear her share of the blame.

When our elders and ministers begin to wane, let us, Aaron and Hur like, step up and hold up their hands! We may save them and the church a dreadful defeat. We may hold up their hands with our prayers, with our sympathy, with our words of appreciation and with our money.

When a minister realizes the fact that the church is praying for him, he is much encouraged. And when loving words of sympathy are poured into his soul, he is made to feel that he is not the only one interested.

When a minister is made to realize the fact that his efforts in the ministry are appreciated, it is like water to the thirsty soul. Then, when we occasionally put a dollar into our preacher's hand, he is not so liable to go in debt and lose his influence. But if we fail to do these things, his hands may fall, and then we are to blame for not discharging our duty.

Brethren and sisters, let us remember there is work for us all to do.

Five of those being in Europe leaves a total of 1,957 in the United States. According to the Census of 1890 (published by the Kansas City Times) the entire population of the United States is 62,480,540. This, divided by 1,957, will give 31,926 persons (infants included) to each minister in the Brethren church. No marvel, then, that there are thousands of souls in our own land that have never heard the Brethren preach. Of these 62,480,540 about 1,800,000, annually, pass from time to eternity.

According to Kate Johnson's report in Gospel Messenger No. 5, current volume, there were 3,150 persons converted to the Gospel by the Brethren during the year 1890. This is less than two to each minister and about one out of each 19,000 persons of the entire population of the United States that were converted by the Brethren in the year 1890. Are not these facts startling? When we consider the worth of souls and see the many thousands that are traveling the broad road to destruction, when we hear the cry for spiritual bread, yea, the Macedonian cry that is ringing from shore to shore,—should there not be an alarm sounded? Should there not be a general awakening all along the line, and greater efforts put forth to spread the Gospel?

Is the church doing all she can, when less than two souls to each minister are converted in a whole year? Some of our brethren are converting scores of them, yes, sometimes a score or more of souls are converted at one series of meetings, and, perhaps, only one or two ministers to do the preaching.

Then, according to these figures, some of our brethren are doing little or nothing in that direction. Is this true? Then some are burying their talents. Hear what the Savior said about the one that hid his Lord's money: "Take him and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 25: 30.

But we hear some of our ministers say, "I have not the means to go with." True, many of our ministers have not the means to go with, and some have spent nearly all their living in order to preach the Gospel, while some have had to abandon traveling on account of these limited means. When such is the case, then where does the responsibility rest? We answer, "Upon the church." "But," says one, "We are using all the talent that we need in our congregation. We have five or six preachers, besides we give something to the mission cause every year and our preachers do all the preaching, necessary to be done within their reach. True, we have more talent in the church,—more men that can preach, but we have no need of them as preachers."

Such congregations never think that they should send some of their ministers out as missionaries, to preach to those that have never heard the Gospel.

"But," says one, "there is no use to send preachers out West, as people are starving in Kansas and Nebraska and had all better come back East." Well, let that be as it may, there are other places to which we may send them. The State of New York has a population of 5,981,000 souls and our ministerial list does not give the name of a single brother in the State. Kentucky has 1,855,000 souls and not a ministering brother in the State. North Carolina has 1,617,000 souls and only 15 ministers of the Brethren in the State. Texas has an area of 205,730 square miles and 2,232,000 souls, but only seven ministers of the Brethren. Colorado has an area of 103,925 square miles and 410,000 souls and only 12 ministers of the Brethren. Michigan has 2,089,000 souls with only 29 ministers of the Brethren. There are about a dozen other States and Territories in which the Brethren are not known.

"But," says one, "how will we manage to reach those isolated places?" I will suggest a plan. Let every State District have a Mission Board and every elder see to it that his church or churches have a soliciting agent who will solicit every member in the church. Let every member give not only a few cents, but give as the Lord has prospered him. Let the Mission Board send out missionaries, and locate them for one, two or three years. Let them give their whole time and talent to the work. The Mission Board should properly support them. In this way churches would be planted and the Gospel preached in its purity. We think that there are several local churches, each of which could and should support and maintain a missionary post in this way.

"But," says one, "where would we get the men to go and preach?" "Have we no Isaiah to say, "Here am I, Lord, send me?" "In the language of the poet we may sing,

> "Hark! the voice of Jesus crying—
> 'Who will go and work to-day?
> Fields are white, and harvest waiting;
> Who will bear the sheaves away?'
> Loud and strong the Master calleth,
> Rich reward he offers thee;
> Who will answer, gladly saying,
> 'Here am I; send me, send me!'"

Yes, I think we have those that, like Isaiah, are willing to go and preach the Gospel for the sake of Christ and the many starving souls that are on the downward road to ruin and destruction. In this way much good can be accomplished, churches built up and many precious souls snatched from the burning flames. Let us all wake up to a sense of our duty, open up our hearts, let our love be made known by our works, and we will soon see the fruits of our labors. Then we can give God the praise, and when our work is ended, we can enjoy the rewards of our labors in eternal bliss.

MISSIONARY COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS.

The regular meeting of the Missionary Committee occurred March 11. Among the questions considered were the following:

1. When regular appointments are held at any one mission point, is it best to send different men, or should one man visit said point regularly?

2. In case of an organized church being taken up as a mission point, their elder living in a different congregation, should not said elder visit them regularly, as often as once each month?

While the Committee did not pass a decision on the above questions, they were considered as being important and worthy of careful consideration.

A number of reasons were presented why one man could accomplish more at a given point than many, and why a church, having no minister, should be visited frequently by an elder.

Will not those of greater knowledge and experience enlighten us more fully on these points?

THE SISTERS AT WORK.

WE have just received the sum of $5.50,—the first quarterly installment from sister Augusta Elson, Treasurer of the Sisters' Mission Fund of the West Dayton church, Ohio. We think the plan of sister Elson is commendable to all the churches, i. e., that all the sisters, who can do so, give 25 cents each quarter. The fund, so raised, to be equally divided between Mission and Tract Work. Let the sisters go to work in each local church and see how much can be raised for this great work during the year 1891. S. BOCK, Sec. and Treas. Breth. Book and Tract Work.

INFORMATION WANTED. Isaac Cook, of Mason, Ingham Co., Mich., wants the address of James Edman Cook. When last heard from, he was in Oregon.

DELEGATES ELECTED.—At a council in the Hopewell church, Bedford Co., Pa., Bro. John Bowser was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting, and brethren D. L. Clapper and George Knisely to District Meeting.—Abraham Steele.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.—The Brethren of the Blue River church, Whitley Co., Ind., met in council March 7. All business passed off pleasantly. The Western Sufferers were remembered with a generous donation. Our love-feast will occur May 23, commencing at 3 P. M.—Levi Zumbrun, March 8.

CHURCH NEEDED. The great success of the South, financially, is a certainty, but we are sorry to say that church work is much neglected. We have plenty of members in Roanoke, Va., and vicinity, to do good work, but have no church-house as yet. We hope to report better things soon.—J. A. Hoover, March 21.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL. Last Saturday, March 14, the members of the Cottonwood church, Kans., met in regular quarterly council. The meeting was a pleasant one, and we fondly hope that a brighter day has dawned for the church at this place. The writer represents this church at District Meeting.—G. W. Weddle.

SAD ACCIDENT. Friend Miller's child, about eight months old, not appearing well, they thought they would give it a dose of oil, and not having any in the house, took an empty vial, and went to their neighbors to get some. Giving the child a dose, it soon fell asleep, and sleeping over time, they became alarmed, and in looking for the cause they found that the vial had had chloroform in it. Medical aid was summoned but, alas, it was too late! Funeral services by the writer in the Brethren church.—G. W. Fesler, Longmont, Colo.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. I hereby acknowledge the receipt of the following, collected by U. S. Blough, of the Waterloo, Iowa, church: $36.00 to be distributed among the needy of Brule Co., S. D.; two barrels second-hand clothing; one barrel provisions. Thanks to the kind givers; God bless them.—Wm. G. Cook, Bijou Hills, S. D., March 19.

TRACTS DISTRIBUTED. Several hundred tracts were sent me from the Brethren's Book and Tract Work for distribution. I am meeting with much opposition, but as I have the Truth on my side, I am not discouraged. There is no more efficient way to do missionary work than by means of tracts.—Wm. T. Eavey, Rushville, Va., March 20.

CHURCH COUNCIL.—March 14, the Wade Branch church, Kans., met in council. A collection to the amount of $2.90 was raised for the missionary work. Solicitors were appointed to look after the needs of the Old Folks' Home and Western sufferers. Our delegates to District Meeting are brethren George Meyers and D. A. Kinzie.—Jacob Brunk, March 21.

ONE RESTORED.—Bro. C. S. Holsinger came to the Vermillion church, Ill., Feb. 17, and preached the Word with power. The attendance was not very large, owing to the bad roads and cold weather. Saints were encouraged and sinners warned of their danger. One made application to be reinstated. Others are seriously considering their course.—Ella Dale, Cornell, Ill.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The brethren and friends of the Pleasant View church, Phillips Co., Kans., met March 15, and organized the first Brethren's school in this County. Bro. J. W. Jarboe was elected Superintendent. He is assisted by Bro. Sylvester Workman and an able corps of officers and teachers. We desire the prayers of all in behalf of our school.—J. W. Jarboe, March 15.

MINISTERS ELECTED.—On Saturday, March 7, the Oasis church, Madison Co., Ind., held her regular quarterly council. All business before the meeting was transacted in the spirit of union and love. An election of ministers resulted in the choice of brethren C. Wood and Levi Holder. For deacons brethren Eddie Surfer and J. M. Plow were elected. May the Lord bless and aid them in the proper discharge of their duties!—Hulda Plow.

ONE ACCESSION. Our elder, Bro. Geo. W. Stambaugh, came to the Blue River Valley church, Butler County, Nebr., Feb. 14, to hold a two weeks' series of meetings. As a result of his efforts, one young brother came out on the Lord's side. Others promised to come to the church in the near future. Feb. 21 we met in council, which passed off pleasantly. We elected brethren William Meek and Jerry Keller as our delegates to District Meeting. William Meek.

ONE BAPTIZED. Bro. Jacob Delp, of Yellow Creek, Ill., came to the Spring Creek church, Chickasaw County, Iowa, Feb. 6, and preached for us until Feb. 17. He wielded the Sword of the Spirit with energy, to the encouragement of the saints, and the warning of sinners. One made the good confession and was baptized later, making ten received by baptism this winter. Our meetings were well attended and the interest excellent. Some deep and lasting impressions were made and the members are much encouraged. We have weekly prayer-meetings, in which there is very good interest manifested, especially with our young members. The church organized our Sunday-school last Sunday. Bro. O. J. Beaver, our minister in the second degree, was chosen as Superintendent. He is assisted by a full corps of officers and teachers. God bless the work.—W. H. Fowler, March 18.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL RE-ORGANIZED.—The members of the Chapman Creek church, Dickinson Co., Kansas, met in council March 14, 1891. All the business was adjusted very pleasantly. We decided to open our Sunday-school again March 29. Eld. John Forney was elected to represent us as delegate at our District Meeting and Samuel Haugh as alternate. We decided to hold our love-feast May 16 and 17. J. S. Baumbaugh, Detroit, Kans.

FIVE BAPTIZED.—March 3, Bro. Lemuel Hillery came to the Brethren at South Bend, Ind., and valiantly wielded the Sword of the Spirit. As a result of his faithful efforts five young persons,—one brother and four sisters,—were baptized. Bro. Hillery did much good while among us by his uncompromising efforts in behalf of the Truth. Our church is in good working order. Remember us in your prayers.—Daniel Whitmer, South Bend, Ind., March 19.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The members of the Fairview church, Sherman Co., Kans., met in council on Saturday, March 14. Nearly all the members were present. Arrangements were made to ascertain how much will be needed here this spring in the way of seed and feed, so that our needs may be supplied from the funds for that purpose. Bro. Levi Whisler is our delegate to District Meeting. A Sunday-school was also organized, with the writer as Superintendent.—M. E. Wichael, March 17.

REFRESHING MEETINGS.—The Brethren at Burlington, Mineral County, W. Va., commenced a series of meetings at the Welton school-house on Paterson's Creek, six miles south-west of Burlington, on the evening of Feb. 14, and continued until the 22nd. The preaching was done by Bro. Isaac W. Abernathy who is a zealous worker for Christ. While there were no accessions to the church, we hope that the seed sown will bring forth a bountiful harvest. The above-named school-house is in the Beaver Run congregation.—Peter Arnold.

MINISTER ADVANCED.—The brethren and sisters of the Lower Deer Creek church, Ind., met in council March 12, with brethren J. S. Snowberger, A. S. Culp, Hiel Hamilton, D. Nicum, J. Cripe and I. Billheimer present. Bro. J. R. Kenedy was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. We also appointed two solicitors to collect funds for the Western sufferers. Bro. Culp stayed with us over Sunday. Bro. J. S. Snoeberger is holding forth the Word at the Nebo church this week. We can not tell how long he will continue, but he will hold meetings one week, at least. May the Lord bless their labors!—S. H. Bechtelheimer, March 16.

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, County and State. Be brief. ABOUT the middle of February we intended to have a series of meetings in this vicinity, but, owing to stormy nights, we had only five meetings.

Much interest was taken in the meetings, and all were made to feel that it was good to be there. Believers were built up and some, of another denomination, were made to acknowledge the uncertainty of their situation. The preaching was done by our home minister, -Wm. J. Colebank.

March 27 we held our quarterly council. Everything passed off pleasantly. We decided to have a series of meetings, to commence directly after the District Meeting, which occurs April 10. We earnestly desire that our Mission Board send us some earnest brother to aid in conducting the proposed meetings, for there are excellent prospects here for the Lord's work.

We organized a Sunday-school on the third Sunday of March. The writer was chosen as Superintendent, and Bro. Benjamin Lapp, Assistant. We decided in council to try, by the help of the Lord, to build a sod meeting-house this fall, in time to hold our Communion, Oct. 10 and 11. We have been severely tried in this western country, but, O, may it be for our eternal good, for "the Lord chasteneth whom he loveth."

On the Way.

MARCH 14, I met with the members of the Rock Run church, Elkhart Co., Ind., at their quarterly council. The annual visit was reported, and all business passed off pleasantly. One brother who had been overcome by mental pressure, and also afflicted by a sun-stroke some years ago, was not safe to be at liberty, hence found his home where the needed help could be given, to restore him, if possible, to his former health, so that he might be again a father and husband to his family, as in former years. A deranged mind is worse than death, when once pronounced incurable.

There are two extremes in the human mind,—one is an easy and quiet temper, the other, an irritable or angry temper. Most people that have become despondent and irrational are of the latter temperament.

The brain is a wonderful organ,—and must be fed. If there is too much quietness, and no other organ to be set in motion, to cause action, the mind will drift into a sleepy and melancholy state. Whenever the brain has no action, the mind becomes dormant sometimes to the extent of becoming insane.

Again, should the brain become too active,—exert too much emotional power, or yield to an outburst of temper, it may thereby be caused to lose its equilibrium. Some have thus been driven to insanity, and not a few, under such mental strain, have committed suicide. How necessary to be "temperate in all things!" "Let your moderation be known to all men!"

The Rock Run congregation has chosen brethren Levi Weaver and Benjamin Stutsman as delegates to District Meeting, and Bro. I. L. Berkey as delegate to Annual Meeting.

To-day, March 19, we buried Eld Daniel Riggle's wife. She was fifty years old and an exemplary Christian woman. Our sympathies are enlisted for Bro. Riggle. J. H. MILLER.

Goshen, Ind., March 19.

From Stillwater, Oklahoma.

SINCE coming here to this new country, we, the few isolated Brethren, have seen dark days. Yet we have reason to rejoice, and are hopeful for the future. We receive letters from Brethren that anticipate coming among us and this causes us to anticipate brighter days in the future.

Here there is room for a great work. Come and help us to elevate dying souls to a better life. While sinners must be warned, God's children need comfort.

On the evening of March 13, 1891, we were called to the bedside of our beloved elder, James Evans, of Ingalls, Oklahoma, there to administer unto him the solemn ordinance of anointing with oil. We found him very weak, yet cheerful. After the anointing, the evening was passed in quietness. Returning to our homes next evening, we left the brother much stronger.

While visiting our Bro. Evans, we found him financially destitute. While diligently laboring among us, devoting his time and great qualifications to the Master's work, he failed to store up earthly treasures, and in his last days has emigrated to the wilds of Oklahoma,—there to die forgotten? No, brethren; let us aid the dear old brother with a portion of the necessary comforts of this life! DAVID B. CRIPE.

In Memoriam.

BRO. ADAM SNYDER died near Ringwood, in the Middle Creek congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., Feb. 27, 1891, aged 85 years, 3 months and 23 days.

He was married to Catharine Nickelson, Aug. 30, 1830, who died Feb. 2, 1873. He was the father of nine children,—three sons and six daughters. Two daughters preceded him to the spirit world. Of the forty-one grand-children, fourteen have passed away. He leaves also twenty-four great-grandchildren. He was confined to his room for the last few years and suffered much pain in his limbs, occasioned by a fall. He bore it patiently, but seemed anxious to be relieved and go home to rest.

Bro. Snyder was elected to the ministry about fifty years ago. He held the office of an ordained elder for about twenty-eight years. His ministerial labors were principally confined to his own congregation. He was a very strong advocate of the doctrines and principles of the Gospel, as understood and practiced by the Brethren church, to which he was strongly attached. He once told a brother he would not leave the church even if all the rest of the congregation would leave. His oldest son and three daughters are members of the Brethren church. His son is a minister and lives near Ashland, Ohio. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by G. W. Lowry.

FEB. 19, I went to Linsdale, to hold a series of meetings. Upon arrival I met Bro. Jeremiah Thomas, who preached two sermons. I stayed until Feb. 27 and preached in all eight sermons. Four precious souls were baptized and several more are to be baptized in the near future. May God help them to keep their faces Zion-ward.

Feb. 28, I left my home for the White Oak Springs, and held a series of meetings until March 8. I preached in all eight sermons and baptized four precious souls. One more is to be baptized in the near future, and many more are counting the cost. May God help them to make the good choice! I feel much indebted to the brethren and friends for the kindness shown me. May God help us to be zealous, and labor in God's vineyard to the building up of Christ's kingdom.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

FIKE. At Eglon, W. Va., March 8, 1892, Bro Asa Fike, aged 29 years, 7 months and 24 days.

Deceased was a son of Bro. Levi and sister Rebecca Fike, deceased, and a grandson of Eld. Samuel A Fike. Bro. Asa leaves a dear wife father, step mother, four sisters, seven brothers and four step sisters to mourn the loss of a dear husband, son and brother, but they mourn not as those that have no hope.

Bro. Asa complied with the last command of the Savior in James 5,—he called for the elders, to be anointed in the name of the Lord

Bro. Asa had quick consumption and blood scrofula, but was thought to be getting better until a week before he died, when La Grippe caused his death

He was married to Eliza Henline, about four months ago. He was a young brother of promise, and, like Daniel, possessed of an excellent spirit, which endeared him to all with whom he was acquainted. His complete resignation to the will of the Lord enabled him to wait patiently till the end came, when he calmly and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. His funeral took place March 9, and was attended by a large concourse of people. The occasion was improved by Eld. Aaron Fike from Job 14: 1, 2, 3. RACHEL WRIMER.

HAND. At Hay Springs, Sheridan Co., Nebr., March 1, of inflammation of the bowels and pneumonia, Arthur Britton Hand, eldest son of Mr and Mrs. D. K. Hand, aged 13 years and nearly 7 months.

After days of suffering, Brittie knew that he could not live much longer, but the knowledge did not make him to fear. His heart was strong, full of the grace of Christ Jesus to be with him "through the valley and shadow of death." Frequently, during his last hours, he would say to the heart-broken watchers, "I am going to be with Jesus and grandpa,"—the dear old Christian grandpa had gone two years before.

Just before the last attack of illness, Brittie joined the church, consecrating his life thus early. He had always been a good boy—kind, loving, and obedient — and all felt that he found it "only a step to Jesus" when he stood up to confess his Savior's name. Father and mother, sister and brother will ever feel the aching void left in their hearts since he left them; but, as they know that he is "Safe in the arms of Jesus," they will have new ties drawing them to their own and Brittie's Heavenly Father.

PATTERSON.—At North Star, Ohio, Feb. 27, 1891, of heart disease, our dearly beloved mother, Salome Patterson, aged 59 years and 5 months.

Our mother was coming home from a neighbor's house in the evening, with her son, when she dropped on the road with heart disease, and died without speaking a word.

She leaves a husband and fourteen children to mourn the loss of a kind mother. All were present except one son, who is in the West. All the relatives that were present were husband, children and grandchildren.

Mother has been a member of the Brethren church for about twenty-three years. She has gone to be with Jesus, and may we all make the necessary preparation to meet her where parting is not known. Funeral services by brethren Henry Longanecker and Joseph Groff. EMMA GROFF.

FRANK FISHER.

DOMER. — In the Shipshewana church, La Grange Co, Ind, March 1, 1891, Bro. Samuel Domer, aged 76 years, 9 months and 10 days.

Bro. Samuel Domer was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, May 19, 1814. He was married to Susanna Rensberger in the year 1837 and united with the Brethren church in 1839. He emigrated to Noble County, Ind., in 184c, and died on the above-named day and month.

The brother above-named was a son of Eld. Jacob Domer, of the Sugar Creek church, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. Eld. Jacob Domer was the father of ten children, three of whom died in infancy, and one at the age of about eighteen years. All are now dead excepting Moses Domer.

Bro. Samuel Domer's funeral was largely attended. The occasion was improved by the writer and B. B. Bolinger from Rev. 14: 12, 13. BENJAMIN LEER.

J. A. WEAVER.

HINKLE. — In the bounds of the Maple Grove church, Ashland Co., Ohio, March 8, 1891, John Hinkle, aged 32 years.

He was the youngest son of Bro. John and sister —— Hinkle. His disease was consumption. All through his life, up to Feb. 23, he had lived careless as to his soul's salvation, but at that time he began to be greatly concerned about his present and future condition, and was anxious to have the Christian people around him. He desired to be baptized, and, on Thursday night, Feb. 26, Rev. Mathes, the Methodist minister, was called and the sick man was sprinkled. The next evening he received the Eucharist at the hand of the same minister. He then seemed to be satisfied and ready to depart. Funeral sermon by Rev. Mathes, in the M. E. church, Ashland City, from Ps. 142, latter clause of 4th verse. His body was laid beside that of his wife in the Ashland church (Brethren's) cemetery. DAVID SNYDER.

WHISLER.—Near Unionville, Ia., Maudie Whisler, daughter of Aaron and Mattie Whisler, aged 1 year, 4 months and 11 days.

Little Maudie suffered much from whooping cough and pneumonia until God, in his great wisdom, saw fit to call her home. Although her parents desired that they might keep her with them, yet we feel that the Lord, who doeth all things well, wanted Maudie with him for his glory, and that they might have an interest in the glory world. Funeral services by Eld. Daniel Zook, from 1 Peter 1: 24. H. A. WHISLER.

FORREN.—At her home, near Blue Sulphur Springs, Greenbrier Co., W. Va., March 2, 1891, sister Mary Forren, aged 75 years, 11 months and 18 days.

Sister Forren's maiden name was Massey, formerly of Monroe County, W. Va. In 1835 she was united in matrimony to John Forren, with whom she lived as a devoted companion until the time of her departure.

Deceased united with the church about twenty-three years ago, at which time she had her first opportunity of hearing preaching by the Brethren in this country.

Thus another mother in Israel has gone from labor to reward. She leaves her husband, our much loved and highly-esteemed father in Israel, nearly seventy-six years old, to mourn his loss, which, we have good reasons to believe, is her eternal gain. We deeply sympathize with our aged brother in his sad bereavement. Deceased leaves six children and a number of grandchildren to mourn their loss; also many friends. Bro. Andrew Fleshman, of Lindside, Monroe Co., W. Va., is to preach her funeral in the near future. A. M. FRANTZ.

MILLER.—In the bounds of the Woodbury church, near Baker's Summit, Bedford Co., Pa., Feb. 28, 1891, Bro. David H. Miller, aged 58 years, 9 months and 27 days.

The subject of this notice was stricken with palsy, and lived but a short time. The church had called him to the deaconship about one year ago, which place he filled with credit. In Bro. Miller's death the church loses a good brother, the community a good citizen, and the family a kind father. Funeral services by Bro. Michael Claar, from 1 Samuel 20: 18, to a large congregation of friends and relatives. D. S. REPLOGLE.

HOLSINGER. — In the bounds of the Woodbury church, near Baker's Summit, Bedford Co, Pa., Feb. 15, 1891, George B. Holsinger, aged 76 years, 9 months and 6 days. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Silas Hoover and others.

D. S. REPLOGLE.

REPLOGLE.— In the Woodbury church, near Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa, Feb. 27, 1891, sister Elizabeth Replogle, wife of Eld. John B. Replogle, aged 74 years, 1 month and 18 days.

The subject of this notice had been afflicted for a year or more, but bore it all with Christian fortitude, and had fully prepared to meet her God. The church truly lost a mother in Israel, and her family,—all members of the church, — can have a bright hope of meeting her in heaven. Funeral services conducted by brethren Geo. W. Brumbaugh and J. L. Holsinger from John 14.

D. S. REPLOGLE.

WRIGHT. — In Englewood, Ill., Feb. 20, 1891, of typhoid-meningitis, Mrs. Martha Wright, aged 22 years, 3 months and 7 days.

Funeral services in the Rossburg church-house, La Porte Co, Ind, by the undersigned, Feb. 22, from 2 Cor. 5: 1, in the presence of the largest gathering that had ever convened at the place. Interment in Patton's cemetery at La Porte City.

Deceased was a daughter of brother Lewis and sister Mary Brown, of the La Porte church, Ind., and was married to Mr. Dexter Wright on his twenty-first birthday, Feb. 25, 1890. Her body rested beneath her father's roof the last night it remained above ground. But one short year before she was a happy bride, starting out from that home with noble resolves and high aspirations, little thinking of the sad change so soon. She leaves a husband, a little daughter, five weeks old, father and mother, four brothers and four sisters, to mourn her early departure.

THURSTON MILLER.

BOYER.—In the Stony Creek church, Hamilton Co., Ind., March 4, 1891, sister Lucy M. Boyer, aged 70 years and 4 months.

Sister Boyer was the widow of Bro. Peter Boyer, who preceded her to the spirit land about eight years ago. Sister Boyer united with the church about twenty years ago, and was a consistent member until death. She peacefully fell asleep in Jesus at the home of her niece, Mrs. Allie Stern, and had all the attentions that loving hearts and kind hands could bestow. The warmth of her heart, the sunshine of her disposition and her wise counsel won the affection of all who knew her.

Deceased was sorely afflicted for some months, but seemed to be fully resigned to her fate. Some weeks before her death she called for the elders and was anointed. She will not only be missed in the family, but in the church, and was ever ready to give or take counsel, as the case might be. Her example is worthy of imitation.

She leaves one brother, one sister, two grandchildren and many friends to mourn their loss. May the many dear relatives be consoled to know that she is now enjoying the sweet, happy rest that none but Jesus can give.

Her funeral services were conducted by Eld. John H. Caylor, to a large congregation of sympathizing friends.

Doctor Koch's Discovery.

Dr. Koch's great remedy seems to prove efficacious in those cases where the patient has contracted consumption in low lying countries,—almost all the level European districts where the disease is traceable to purely climatic conditions, the moist atmosphere being a fine breeding region for the microbe. But in the high and dry altitude traversed by the Union Pacific, the Original Overland Route, consumption not only can not exist but is surely curable in its early stages. And this is testified to by thousands who have regained health and strength in the life giving air of the Mountains. 7t8

That Brilliant American.

Samuel Bowles, the famous editor of the Springfield Republican, said, in recording his impressions of the Puget Sound Country:

"Up here, above the latitude of Quebec and Montreal, we basked in the smile of roses that are even denied to us in New England. Here, within the circle of the softening sea, reigns a year that knows no zero cold, and rarely freezes water or snow; that winters the fuchsias and the most delicate roses, English ivies and other tender plants, and summers them with rioting luxuriance; that grows the apple and the pear and the small fruits to perfection."

The Puget Sound Country is a wonderful agricultural country awaiting developmen There is nothing open to the home seeker to compare with it and it is the future goal of the great army of home seekers. In healthfulness it is wonderful and in productiveness unsurpassed. Thousands last year journeyed to this charmed region over the Union Pacific, the original overland route, and thousands more will go this year. 7t8

"IF you want to be miserable, think about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and what others think about you."

EDMUND BROOK, of Blain, and J. R. Lane, of Shirleysburg, Pa., gave us short calls last week. They brought with them students for the "Normal." This is the right thing to do—not only send the children, but come always with them and see how things are. Our work should always be open to inspection, and suggestions are always in order. We are glad to say that the opening was the largest that we have yet had in the history of the school. The percentage of members' children is also larger than usual. Brethren, pray that all of our schools may be made powers for good, and workers for the promotion of one common cause.

A BROTHER who don't agree with our ideas of church government says that the only way to have peace in the church is to put the dissatisfied ones out in the big field. We know of fathers who administered family government in the same way. They had peace, but it was by being alone, and being without children. Some people don't have much peace in this world unless they can have their own sweet will gratified. If separation is the best means of promoting peace there is room for a large number of new denominations yet, but we don't believe that such is the Gospel way of getting it. The better way is for us all to labor to get more of the mind and spirit of Christ within us. The more we can be like him, the more we will be like each other, and this will give us the peace of God.

THE District Meeting for Middle Pennsylvania will be held in the Hopewell church, April 22. (See notice.) We hope that we may have a full attendance, and that our work may be such as will prove for the good of the church.

IN a note from Eld. J. W. Brumbaugh, of Clover Creek, Pa., he says: "I am slowly improving, and am able to be out of the house some; hope I may be restored to my usual health. I have a strong desire to attend our District and Annual Meeting this spring and hope that I may be able to do so. I wish to be remembered by the Brethren in their prayers." We are certainly pleased to learn that Bro. John is improving and we fondly hope that his fondest desires may be realized. Yes, it is right that we should pray for each other and we believe that the Lord is always pleased to hear such prayers.

THE SELF-EXAMINATION.

THERE is nothing that will make a man think so little of himself as a close and careful self-examination. We become harsh, radical and severe because of our habit of looking at, and pondering over, the faults of others. We don't intend to be unkind and selfish, and, indeed, we don't feel that we are. But such we are notwithstanding. If we were half as severe with ourselves as we are with others, we would expel ourselves from church communion and society as often as we have months in the year. In the first place we know very much more about ourselves than we can know about others or others can know about us. Of this we are glad, because it affords us opportunity of passing judgment on our actions and forgiving ourselves without anybody else knowing anything about it. And are we not surprisingly clever to ourselves? We forgive ourselves every day for things we do, that, if we would see others do, we would have them brought to trial and give our voice in favor of severe penalties.

Why is it that we are so liberal with ourselves and so severe with others? It would seem that it should be the other way because all these reproofs, etc., are intended for good, so we say. And who wants good more than ourselves? The fact that we are not as much interested in our own faults as we are in the faults of others shows that either we are in possession of a vindictive spirit, or that we are so exceedingly good that we overlook our own interests in looking after the good of others. The latter would surely be a happy condition to be in, and we could wish that we could have such a feeling. But while we would wish to accept this position, we have too much of the human to do it. The trouble with most of us is, our time and attention is so much taken up with the actions and doings of others that we don't have time to see ourselves as we really are. John Smith and Adam Brown are so continually in mischief that it requires all of our time to give them a respectable watching. As a result, our own doings are allowed to run loose.

Now a watch dog is a good thing, and it is all right for him to watch his Master's goods if he is thus put in charge, but it is a rare thing for a master to place his dog as a watch or guard over other dogs. This may be a homely illustration but it will bear some thought. What is our mission in life? The same as was that of the Master, —to do good. The self-righteous scribes and Pharisees had set themselves as watchers over the poor and sinned-against, prostitute woman, and they were gloating over their prey. They had caught her in the "act," thus bringing condemnation upon themselves by showing that, at the time, they themselves were in an uncomfortable closeness to the sin of their victim. The men who are sneaking around saloons and gambling houses and are familiar with those who go in and out are about as honorable and trustworthy as those who can stand up and witness against prostitutes.

The Master understood all this. And as they were standing before him, each with a stone in hand waiting for the word to stone her to death, his answer was, "He that is without sin, let him cast the first stone." Why were the stones not cast? They knew, for once, that there stood before them, one who could discover their hearts and who was familiar with their deeds. Before this searcher of hearts they could not dissemble. And being stung with a sense of their own condemnation, they gladly left their prey in more merciful hands.

She, no doubt, was a guilty woman, but condemnation and death was not what she needed. It was the ministry of love she needed and, fortunately, these wolves brought her to the right one, —whose mission it was to save sinners. How opportune the moments! "Go, sin no more" was the message. The words enforced by the gentleness of the tones, and the pity depicted on the face, were driven to this wretched woman's heart, and she left the spot born into a new life.

Brother, did you ever experience a home thrust, as these men got? If not, perhaps you have never yet seen yourself, and to-day you may be standing up, witnessing against some one whose heart and soul are better than your own.

We do not want to say anything that will militate against that Christian concern that we, as followers of Christ, should have and exercise, because, in a sense, we are our brother's keeper, but we should examine, first, ourselves, and then examine well the motive that seems to prompt us to act.

Actions, prompted by pure and unselfish love, are seldom misinterpreted and seldom fail in accomplishing good. And if men should do so, God will not. Let us be honest with ourselves, with our fellows and with our God. Then we can feel assured that our lives, as was that of the Master, will be a blessing to the world. And in the end it will be our happy privilege to realize the precious promises, made in all their fulness.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

CONSECRATION.

DEAR Lord, my heart would prompt my hands
To do large work for Thee;
From slaves of sin to strike the bands
And set the captives free;
Or some great cause espouse, wherein
For need of men doth lie
Some truth, or spoken word of Thine,
And lead to victory.

But these frail powers are oft too weak
In love's essays to win;
Yet, matchless grace! that which I seek
My loving heart within,
To do for Thee, Thou wilt accept,
And count as wholly Thine;
And what I would, not what I do,
Exalts this heart of mine.

SANCTIFICATION AGAIN.

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

Mrs. B., of Ladoga, Ind., has severely criticised my article on the above subject, and by the consent of the Editor I will review the objections urged. She says:

"Your article in GOSPEL MESSENGER on 'Sanctification' is here. To it I say: 'God's people must be holy, and the sooner you go to living it, the better. We have already too little holy living among us, without any one encouraging the opposite.'"

It seems to me that the writer of above did not read my article very closely, or else she is so biased, that she can not see the naked truth, when presented. I stated that sanctification was derived from the Latin, and means to "make holy," also to "purify and cleanse from sin," and that "holiness is a characteristic of the Christian." Truly God's people must be holy. "Be ye holy; for I am holy." 1 Peter 1: 16; Levit. 11: 44

Why is it, we have so little holiness in the professed Christian world? It is because of a departure from the simplicity of the Gospel. Holiness is the effect of a consecrated life to the obedience of the Gospel of the Son of God. Even those who profess to be wholly sanctified,—beyond the influence of sin, live in open rebellion against the holy oracles of God,—not obeying from the heart that "form of doctrine delivered unto you." Rom. 6: 16-17.

I saw one of them (a woman) get down on her knees and pray, then get up and preach a sermon bare-headed. Yet she claimed she could not sin. The Word of God says, "Every woman that prayeth, or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoreth (disgraces) her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven." 1 Cor. 11: 5. Whenever the Christian world consecrates herself to the service of God, conforms to the requirements of the Gospel, and ceases to find fault with God's plan of salvation, we will have righteousness and holiness of a godly sort.

Righteousness is doing right. See 1 John 2: 29; 3: 7-10. How can we do right, and disobey the Word of God?

"Christian perfection," what is it? Listen to God while he speaks in 1 Kings 8: 61; 2 Kings 20: 3; 1 Chron. 28: 9; Psalms 101: 2.

Mrs. B.'s first reference is Solomon speaking instead of God, "Let your heart therefore be perfect with the Lord our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments," etc.

Mrs. B.'s second reference is the language of Hezekiah, and her third and fourth the language of David.

Does she set up Solomon, David, Hezekiah, and others that she mentions, as representatives of Christian perfection? Let me give her a rule by which she may better understand the Scriptures:

1. Always consider what book or part of the Bible you are reading from.
2. Who it is that is speaking.
3. To whom he is speaking.
4. And what he is speaking about. Man is not perfect in the same sense that God is perfect.

Our desires, aims, and hope, is to be like God,—imbibe the nature of God as far as possible, while in the flesh. Perfection is an attribute of God, and a characteristic of the Christian.

Does Mrs. B. maintain that perfection is absolute in its application to the Christian? Then we must be equal with God in every respect. None of her quotations will admit of that interpretation. She further says, "Rom. 7 has always been the battle ground for the champions of a life of constant sinning, repenting, and confession, from conversion until death, and it is an ignorance God will not excuse. In this unhappy seventh chapter of Romans Paul is talking of the time when he was under the law, and not under grace; he was but a babe in Christ."

Paul does not license any one to commit sin in that chapter, but simply expresses the actual experience of the child of God. Paul was converted to Christ twenty-six years prior to his writing Rom. 7, consequently was quite an old "babe." Paul holds up the great conflict he had with the flesh. "Now, then, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth (not did dwell) in me. For in my flesh dwelleth (not "did dwell) no good thing. For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil I would not, that I do, (not did do)." Rom 7: 17, 18, 19. Paul tells us, "I die daily;" "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection," etc. 1 Cor. 9: 27.

Paul, in looking into the depths of this great conflict, and realizing his weakness, cries from the depth of his soul, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Then, viewing the promises of God, and his faithfulness, Rev. 2: 26; 21: 7, he says, "I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord; so then, with the mind, I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh, the law of sin." Rom. 7: 25.

The flesh, in its cravings and desires, is antagonistic to the law of the Spirit, hence the warfare and great conflict in suppressing "the lusts of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life." Paul had all these to contend with.

Mrs. B. says further, "We have not enough holiness; that we need find our ministers and writers fighting it. You are fighting God, not me. I am not where I want to be, and see it my privilege to be."

The way to get more holiness is to live more consecrated to God, and his truth; and not indulge quite so much in self, and evil imagination. I am very sorry that Mrs. B. has become offended at the Truth. Will she please show me wherein I am "fighting God?" She seems to take exceptions to God's teachings. God does not. What is the meaning of sanctification? What produces it? And what effect does it have on its possessors? I think by the time she has solved these problems in the light of God's Word, and not according to her feelings, she will begin to have a glimpse of the glorious truth as it is in Jesus. It is not Paul, but Mrs. B. that says, "As long as a man is married to the law with the mind, he serves it," etc.

By taking the Scriptures in an abstract sense, you can prove almost anything; but take them in their connected sense and they always proclaim the mind of God, as it pertains to the salvation of man. I hope Mrs. B. will soon get where she ought to be, and where it is her privilege to be,—wholly given up to the service of God in word and doctrine, and that her life may be so consecrated that the name of the Master may be honored and glorified, and sinners pointed to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world."

Again Mrs. B. says: "Before you write again on the subject of sanctification, mark and emphasize that word; also holiness, and Christian perfection."

I have given these words all the power, beauty, and sublimity that God gives them, and I can speak from an experimental knowledge of the sweet peace, the unbounded glory, the unfathomable happiness of their blessed possession, but we can never attain to that high position independent of the specific means by which God designed to bring it about. We have the blessed privilege of becoming sons of God, and brothers of Jesus Christ, sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise unto the eternal deliverance, into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is a transition of momentous importance, from darkness into light, from slavery into freedom, from the world into Christ, and, ultimately, into the eternal kingdom of glory.

We are sanctified (set apart to the service of God) by obedience to the truth or Word of God. John 17: 17-19. Any one that has not yet been regenerated, "born of water, and of the Spirit," should attend to this at once; then go on unto perfection.

No. 3.—Manner of the Resurrection.

IN ancient times a great diversity of opinion existed as to what form the spirit assumed after leaving the body. A common belief in some countries was, that at death the spirit would enter some animal, that had traits similar to itself. That is, the spirit of a filthy person would enter the swine; that of a cruel person, the lion; that of a noble person, the fowls of the air. This belief may have prompted the Corinthians to ask the question, "With what body do they come?" Do they come in the human body, or in some other body? Paul answers the question pointedly, by referring them to a law of resurrection in nature, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body." 1 Cor. 15: 36-38.

It is a law in nature that what we sow must die, before it can be quickened,—resurrected. The lesson to be learned is, that, unless we die, we can never resurrect to anything better than this life.

Another law in nature is, that the old body, or stalk, is not sown, for the reason that it has no life, but the bare grain is sown, because all the life of the old body is concentrated in the grain. The lesson to be learned is, that when the body dies, all its life concentrates in the spirit, which, figuratively, is the grain of the body. We must not understand, that the spirit must be sown in the grave to bring forth a body. We can no more bury a spirit, than we can bury the wind; but these terms are used to show the relation between our disembodied spirits, and the new body they shall inhabit. Inasmuch, then, as the body that grows from the grain sown, is not the part sown, so the apostle would have us understand that the old body, sown in the grave, is not the body that shall be, but that God will give the spirit a body as it pleases him. And as a new body comes forth in nature, so a new body will come forth in the resurrection, with this difference, in nature the new body is of the same quality as the old one, but in the resurrection of the body, the new one will differ widely in quality from the old one, being far better, incorruptible, immortal. "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power." 1 Cor. 15: 42 44.

We must not understand Paul to mean, however, that the old body must be sown in the grave, in order to bring forth a new one, for many of the best Christians never had a burial, they were burned, torn by wild beasts, mangled in many ways, and left without a burial at their death. The meaning evidently, is, that, instead of the old corruptible body, in the grave, we will have a new one--an incorruptible one, no matter what has become of the old one, whether it was buried or not, neither must we understand the apostle to mean, where he says, "This mortal must put on immortality," that, therefore, the outline of the old, corruptible body is needed to fashion the new one by. If that were a fact, then we would be raised as corruptible as we were sown, and the distinguishing characteristics between male and female would continue after the resurrection as before, which is contrary to the doctrine taught by the Lord.

Paul says, in 1 Cor. 15: 23, "But every man in his own order." By this he means that the same spirit that lived in the old body will inhabit a new one, as God may provide; thus carrying over into the glorified state the order of identity,—otherwise we could not know each other there. Every person will appear in his own order, in his own character, in his own righteousness, and not in that of another, no more than wheat will appear in the order of corn, or corn in the order of barley. As each kind of grain retains its own order by which it is known, so each of us will retain our spiritual image, by which recognition comes as perfectly, as does bodily recognition here. "And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. 15: 49.

That we will retain the human form, in the main, is evident. No other form seems so complete. Christ appeared in the same form after the resurrection as before, and ascended to heaven in that form. Angels always appear in human form. Those that were resurrected at the time of Christ's resurrection, appeared in human form, for they appeared unto many in the Holy City.

Some might say that, inasmuch as Christ appeared in the same body after the resurrection as he did before, therefore we, of necessity, will have our same body also, in the resurrection, only it will be glorified.

To this we would say that there was an absolute necessity for Christ taking up the body in which he died, aside from the resurrection itself, in order to confirm his disciples of resurrectional identity, while they were yet here in the flesh. Had Christ's body remained in the grave, and had the seal of his tomb been unbroken, his enemies could have disproved the resurrection by these evidences, and the Christ after the resurrection might have been regarded as an impostor, even by his disciples. But when his dead body could not be found, when the seal was broken, and the stone was rolled away, and when Christ showed the print of the nails in his hands and feet, and the wound in his side,—the evidence that he was indeed the very Christ crucified, was overwhelming, and the disciples received him with joy.

But another will say, Did not Christ refer to his flesh and bones after his resurrection, and did he not eat? Luke 24: 39–42.

Certainly. All this was necessary to confirm the doubting minds of his disciples. The least evidence wanting, as to his material identity at that time, would have been fatal to the doctrine of the resurrection. Christ did not refer to his flesh and bones, because he had material flesh and bones, neither did he eat because his body needed earthly sustenance, though he thus appeared to his disciples for reasons already assigned. But one will say, "How can these things thus appear, and not be so in reality?" The only answer that can be given is, "By the transforming powers of God." It was no harder for Christ to appear in the wounds of his crucifixion, and with flesh and bones, and to eat in his glorified, immortal body, than it was for him to vanish out of the sight of those to whom he had broken bread. Luke 24: 31.

A few words more about our heavenly image, and heavenly recognition. Artists can produce our earthly image precisely, and more beautiful than the original. We recognize our relatives, and friends, and acquaintances, as readily by the photograph, as we do by the original,—the person himself. We say, "This is our father, this is our mother, this our brother, or sister," etc., yet, after all, it is only their image. Then, if the artist can produce a perfect picture of our earthly image, separate, and detached from the body, is it not reasonable to conclude that our earthly image will cast itself perfectly upon the spiritual man within, to be beautifully fashioned by the greatest artist in heaven and earth? This makes spiritual recognition in heaven appear easy, and simple, and true, and beautiful. Every person is sitting for his or her photograph in the resurrection. If we look into the Perfect Law of Liberty, and continue to look, the image will be heavenly and beautiful. If we look out into the world after its pleasures, amusements, and honors, the image will mar in the artist's hand, and will be cast away. Our photographs in the resurrection will reveal the "looking." They will be true to life. Just as the natural photograph reveals every deformity of face, every wrinkle, so will the photograph in the resurrection reveal every moral, or spiritual deformity of our life.

A LIVING SACRIFICE.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service."—Heb. 12: 1.

THE great heart of Paul was deeply touched by the recital of the many woes of his brethren,—his kinsmen according to the flesh. News of the condition of the Jews at Rome had been brought him by Aquila and Priscilla who had been banished thence by the edict of Claudius.

The pride and bigotry of the Jews arrayed all the world against them, and their hardness and impenitence barred them from the mercies of God. Their condition was indeed deplorable. Paul, who fully realized their sufferings and the cause, was deeply pained,—how deeply we may learn from his own language. See Rom. 9: 1-3.

But while national prejudice ran high in the world, the Apostle would have the followers of Christ remain free from it. In the eleventh chapter of Romans he shows that though God had, for a while, rejected the Jews, it was for the benefit of the Gentiles. Some of the natural branches had been broken off from the tame olive tree, that branches from the wild olive tree might be grafted in their place. He would have the Gentile part of the church at Rome understand this mystery, that blindness in part had happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in, lest they should be wise in their own conceits.

He shows how God overrules all things, even the hardness of Israel, for the ultimate good of all his creatures, and breaks out in the joyful exclamation, "Oh, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out."

Then, in the language of our text, he says, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice." How kind and courteously he appeals to them! He does not say, "I command you," but "I beseech you," "I entreat you therefore." He would appeal to them by the mercies of God, which he had been holding up to them, and which it was their high privilege to imitate.

What powerful arguments he uses! God's dealings with his creatures, his loving-kindness, his forbearance is to be their standard. He entreats them to use the same forbearance to each other as is manifest in God's dealings with them.

And what does he entreat them to do? To present their bodies a living sacrifice! Ah, in the light of this appeal, there is little room to make provision for the flesh to fulfill the lust thereof. Activity, unceasing, untiring activity and self-denial is what God requires of us.

The idea contained in sacrifice is to destroy or surrender something that is valuable for the purpose of obtaining something more valuable; hence, after sin had alienated man from his Maker, he felt that he dare not approach his God empty-handed. There no longer existed that sweet and fearless communion between the creature and the Creator as formerly, but the anger of God must be appeased, his favor gained by presenting something to him which was valuable and highly esteemed by the donor. Accordingly we find sacrifices offered very early in the history of the world. Abel, Noah, Abraham, Job and many others offered them previous to the giving of the law. Some were expiatory, and some were eucharistical. But as the human race advanced, down the stream of time, they lapsed farther from God, their minds became more and more darkened, and, in their infatuation, they sometimes offered their own offspring for the purpose of averting the anger of that Being whom they only knew to fear. Poor, misguided mortals! They gave their first-born for their transgressions, the fruit of their body for the sin of their soul.

At length God instituted laws to govern sacrifices. Before that all was arbitrary, each one pursued his own humor, zeal, or devotion. Each one was the priest and minister of his own sacrifice, but the law prescribed the kind and number of victims to be offered, what parts to be offered, the place, and by whom offered.

But all these sacrifices of beasts could only purge from legal impurities, as the apostle says, "sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh." Heb. 9: 13. The soul of man could not be purged by such sacrifices, only the blood of the great oblation that should be offered in the fulness of time could atone for that. The whole system of animal sacrifices may be regarded as a divine concession to the weakness and ignorance of man. In the Old Testament we have several passages that are as rifts through the dark cloud of ignorance that then enveloped the earth, and reveal to us the mind of Jehovah. In Psalms 51: 16, 17, we have the following remarkable language: "For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it; thou delightest not in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." In Prov. 21: 3 occur these words, "To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice."

Again the Lord declares through the prophet Hosea, "For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of the Lord more than burnt offerings." Hosea 6: 6.

The shadow of good things to come having passed away, the great expiatory offering, that cleanseth from all sin, having been made, now those who have been cleansed and brought into covenant relation with God through this offering are enjoined to offer the only true sacrifice that man can offer, the sacrifice of thanksgiving,—the sacrifice of entire devotion. And is it not reasonable that God shall demand this at our hands? We are not our own, for we have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ. As Jesus gave himself for us, is it not reasonable that we give ourselves wholly to him? As we have yielded our members servants to sin, is it not reasonable that we now yield them servants to righteousness unto holiness?

It is not dead sacrifice that our Master demands at our hands, but a living sacrifice. We are to enter his service with every faculty of mind and body quickened, and our first inquiry as we enter his service should be, as it was of that greatest of servants, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" We should ever hold ourselves in readiness to be or do whatever he requires of us. Oh, did each one who claims fellowship with Jesus, have more of his self-sacrificing spirit, what a power for good would the church of Christ be in the world. How the precious truths that emanated from the Master would be disseminated through the world. But, oh, we who are members of his mystical body, are too cold, too formal, too worldly. We don't have enough zeal for the Master and his blessed cause. Oh, may a live coal from the altar be laid upon every mouth, that they may be purged. Isa. 6: 6. May more of the divine life be infused into every heart, so that there will be a laudable emulation as to who shall do most service for him, as to who shall lead the purest lives, and exercise the most patience and forbearance amid trials and difficulties. Oh, for more entire consecration, so that, whether we eat, or drink, or whatsoever we do, we do all to the glory of God.

One person can not set up a standard for another, but it behooves each one of us to ask ourselves in all candor, "Am I doing all I can for my divine Redeemer? Am I exerting the very best influence that I possibly can? Am I crucifying the flesh with the affections and lusts?"

"AS DYING, AND BEHOLD WE LIVE."—2 Cor. 6: 9.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Please explain through the MESSENGER Matt. 18: 8, 9, which reads as follows: "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire."

Now, if the Savior had reference to the natural hand and foot, we would soon all be disabled to fulfill Paul's command when he says, "But rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good that he may have to give to him that needeth." Eph. 4: 28. If spiritually, how are we to be made a cripple as the German has it, when the apostle, at another place, commands us to go on to perfection?

REMARKS.

My Well-Beloved Brother:—

GRACE and peace be multiplied. How fresh in my mind is your recent evangelistic visit to us, and how your simple, earnest expositions and appeals still ring in my ears and heart! To preach Christ and preach about Christ are intrinsically different. Abstract truth saves nobody; but "the Truth as it is in Jesus" is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The preacher may "lift up his voice like a trumpet," and "speak with the tongues of men and of angels," and stir the feelings of the multitude like a cyclone rolls the waves of the sea, and yet be no more than "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." True preaching is "the testimony of Jesus Christ" emphasized by the Holy Ghost in our consciousness and utterance.

To your question. It is not a hard one. Some people have a wonderful knack to convert the simplest things into the most perplexing enigmas. Some preachers seem to think that the more knots and twists they can put into the skein, the more theological credit they will get in unraveling them. The supreme charm of Christ's preaching is its simplicity and naturalness. He had but one object—to save souls; and to this end He laid every department of nature under contribution. When he made the world he did not forget what use He will ultimately make of natural objects and phenomena in filling His Testament with physical images of highest truth. In the interpretation of His parables and metaphors, we must always begin with the physical. This is what the parable is for, to reach the spiritual through the senses, and apprehend the unseen and eternal through the seen and temporal.

If the right hand and foot and eye are to be sacrificed, as a matter of course, the left also. The right is mentioned because regarded the most essential. What member is there in our organism that has not been made "the instrument of unrighteousness unto sin?" Not one. Rom. 6: 13, 19. One member in its character and history represents all the others. Suppose our right hand is given to stealing. If we chop it off literally, it is certain that the same hand will steal no more, even if the inclination to steal remains unchanged.

We are plainly told by Christ that a man may be an adulterer at heart without perpetrating the overt act. Matt. 5: 28. To cut off the right hand in accordance with the essential nature of Christ's teaching and kingdom, is to sever it at the very root whence the impulse to theft springs. Such a hand is as completely sundered, and further sin impossible, as if it had been literally amputated.

So it is with every other member. There is no exception. Our whole body is to be presented a living sacrifice, HOLY, ACCEPTABLE UNTO GOD, which is our reasonable service. Rom. 12: 1. Entering into the kingdom halt and maimed and blind has reference to our admission through the Straight Gate at the beginning of our divine life. In will, purpose, commitment, consecration, we are preponderately and clearly on the side of righteousness, when we are initiated into the church militant.

But we will discover many painful indications that the right hand has a germ of reproduction still far back out of sight. The literal hand is figuratively dead, cut off, rotting in Christ's grave. But there is hand within a hand, a foot and an eye hidden in the depth of our being which God's eye alone can perfectly scan. If this solemn, soul-searching parable were understood and heeded by all who "name the name of Christ," there never would be another hand lifted to supply pipe, or stimulant, or quid to the mouth that has tasted the sacred emblems of the awful tragedy of Golgotha. Christianity means no less than God Himself continually controlling body, soul, and spirit. Cut off, cut off, cast from thee. A living, piecemeal death is preferable to wholesale damnation. We can be saved, but only by losing life that we may find it.

"Jesus wept."—John 11: 35.

THIS is said to be the shortest verse in the Scriptures, and yet, how full of significance! The wealth of those tears we may never be able to estimate, until we arrive at the "home of the soul."

Jesus wept that we might be made to rejoice. What trophies those tears bring, what everlasting songs shall come of his grief! "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Ps. 126: 6.

Paul says, "By the space of three years I ceased not to warn every man night and day with tears." Acts 20: 31. We remember how Paul's brethren sorrowed because "they should see his face no more." "And they all wept sore and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him." Acts 20: 37.

These incidents have oft been repeated in the acts and labors of many of our brethren, who labor in the spread of the Gospel to-day. No doubt many tears were seen to flow when the many destitute in the West received, at the hands of the Brethren, the necessaries of life. Who is it that can read of distress and suffering, sickness and destitution without a sympathizing tear? As those accounts of suffering were read aloud in the families of our vast Brotherhood, many a sympathizing tear was seen to fall, and a prayer went up to the Giver of all Good, in behalf of the needy and the kind hands and hearts who opened their purses, closets, and granaries, to supply the wants of the needy.

Spurgeon calls tears "the diamonds of heaven," although we are told that over there "all tears shall be wiped away." We know not all the purposes of God, in the ordeal of sorrow, to which we are all heir. Sunshine and calm, cloud and storm, are alike necessary. We often look at the dark side of sorrow. There is a bright side, but it is often hidden from us. Laughter and gayety are not true pleasure.

Music would not sound so sweet were there no minor tones. There are deep springs in the heart the murmur of whose fountains is the more musical for sadness and solitude.

Prophets often shed tears. "O that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." Jer. 9: 1. The Psalmist says, "By the rivers of Babylon there we sat down, yea we wept when we remembered Zion." The Jews could not sing the songs of Zion when in captivity. So not one of God's creation can sing the songs of Zion, in spirit and understanding, so long as he is a subject of the "prince of the power of the air."

"Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Ps. 22: 5. "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy." Ps. 126: 5. The tears of a mother, who can forget? We remember them in after years. But none are so precious as those shed for us, in that last night of agony. "I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice, and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy." "And your joy no man taketh from you." John 16: 20, 22. When the righteous arrive at last at the haven of eternal rest, then God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

How great the contrast between the righteous and the ungodly! "The way of the ungodly shall perish." "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." Matt. 25: 46.

FEET-WASHING.

BY D. C. MOOMAW.

Number Two.

"He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet."—John 13: 10.

It is a settled principle of Bible interpretation that all ceremonial washings and baptisms which are, in any way, connected with the service of religion are symbolical of spiritual cleansing. This we know is true of the Old Testament baptisms. It is also true of the baptism of the New Testament which, we are told by St. Peter, is not for the cleansing of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God. We may, therefore, expect to find clear evidence that the same rule applies to feet-washing, there being no reason why it should prove a solitary exception. We have already seen the immediate or local occasion for this remarkable action of the Master, namely, the dangerous spirit of selfish pride and worldly ambition among the disciples, which, if left unchecked, would have quickly destroyed all harmony and unity.

They not only needed to be taught a decisive lesson of humility, but also a convincing demonstration of the true idea of the kingdom of God, namely, service as the basis of distinction. "He that is chief among you, let him be as him that doth serve."

We now come to discuss the general or theological interpretation of this observance, to which we have a clue in the passage of Scripture at the head of this article.

There seems to be in some minds an exceedingly mistaken notion that spiritual interpretation is inimical to practical obedience. Nothing could be farther from the facts. In many cases the very opposite is true. Take, for instance, that passage of Scripture in which our Lord says, "Except a man eat my flesh and drink my blood, he hath no life in him." The only possible way of obeying this Scripture is by finding out its spiritual application. We can not eat his literal flesh, or drink his literal blood. But we can, by faith, eat and drink the spiritual food which his flesh and blood represents. We can, by the exercise of a true faith,—that faith which takes the form of personal trust in a personal Christ,—receive and appropriate the benefits of his vicarious suffering and atonement for us,—the breaking of his real body and the shedding of his real blood. The same rule is illustrated in the primary design of feet-washing, as set forth in our former article. Supposing that the apostles, though outwardly observing the injunction of the Master to wash one another's feet, should have continued their strife as to who should be the greatest,—a kind of strife that always leads to jealousy, hatred, disruption and violence,—would any one say, for an instant, that they had truly washed one another's feet?

On the contrary they recognized its application to themselves, and rendered a true obedience in all their after-lives, in all true humility and brotherly love, "in honor preferring one another." This was the meaning of Christ.

So much by way of introduction. The language at the head of this article was the Savior's reply to Peter, when the latter said, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head."

"He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit." Let us ask the question, To what washing did our Savior refer in the first part of the last sentence,—"He that is washed." Was it the common bath, or was it baptism? In our opinion it was primarily the common bath, and symbolically baptism. If this view fits in with the cardinal principles of the plan of salvation, it must be true. In the bath the whole person is cleansed, but in coming from the bath, the feet become defiled by contact with the ground or floor, and need an after cleansing to make the entire body "clean every whit."

This exactly illustrates the relation between baptism and feet-washing as symbols of Gospel truth. Baptism purifies the whole man,—not by virtue of any efficacy in the water, or any power in the administration, but by virtue of the actual regeneration of which it is the true type. In every individual case in which the type and antitype truly meet in the newly baptized believer, there is in that instant a perfect purification of the soul. At the instant of pardon and regeneration, it is impossible that a single stain or taint of sin should remain. "The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin." All means ALL when God uses it.

"Arise and be baptized and wash away (a portion) of thy sins." Does that read right? Not exactly. The newly-baptized penitent believer is "clean every whit." His sins are indeed washed away once for all. "He needeth not" to repeat this washing. He that is born again needs not to be born the third time. But there is a kind of cleansing which he needs more than once. "The law of the members" is constantly bringing him into subjection. By this is meant the weakness of the flesh, its affinity with sin, its proneness to evil, the readiness and ease with which it is soiled by the world, wherever and whenever it comes in contact with it.

Though the soul may be entirely purified in baptism, still it remains in the flesh and in the world, and, in consequence, partakes of the unavoidable defilements, arising from these associations and environments. For this reason it needs a frequent application of the cleansing blood. This frequent and special cleansing is set forth in feet-washing. It is washing the spiritual dust from our feet, gathered in our spiritual pilgrimage through a polluted and polluting world. The symbolism is perfect.

In this way we see that feet-washing has a meaning which directly applies to the welfare of our souls,—a meaning which is in entire harmony with the plan of salvation, and, indeed, is a part of that plan. In this way its claim, to be a church ordinance, is greatly strengthened, for it is very clear that if it bears no relation to the plan of salvation, it can not be a church ordinance.

The truly converted soul, sincerely desirous of true communion with God, and painfully conscious of the imperfections and defilements of the flesh, conscious also that at the point of contact with the world, where it touches him in his pilgrimage, there is more or less pollution, more or less spiritual dust, will not fail to come again and again to the cleansing fountain, and wash this dust from his feet.

We see clearly that the inward cleansing is meant, without which all outward washings are vain, and that the true and only value of this, as well as all other external observances, lies in its application to the needs of the soul.

"THE SINGLE EYE."

BY J. E. YOUNG.

We have heard and still do hear much about what the Brethren are doing for suffering homesteaders this winter. It has called forth this question, "Has it all been done with 'the single eye?'"

In the language of another we have these words: "There are two kinds of works, one class symbolized in the Scripture under the head of wood, hay, stubble; the other, gold, silver, precious stones. Every work is on one side or the other. You will observe that wood, hay and stubble are the greatest in quantity, but it is not quantity that the fire regards."

"Many, in our day, have the greatest regard for quantity,—great works, much activity. How little the striving after the pure gold, the silver, and the precious stone! How mixed is the life-work of the best of men! A layer of wood, a grain of gold, then a large quantity of hay, then a little silver, plenty of stubble, how few precious stones; but the fire sifts all."

"Rich Christian, what of thy gold? Will it be accounted stubble? Or art thou exchanging it now into the currency of heaven?"

Many a disciple has not understood the Master's language when he said, "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness." But it is simply exchanging our money into the currency of heaven.

"But suppose a man of large fortune is converted, what is he to do with the mammon of unrighteousness? Is he to hoard it up and add to it, and die a rich man? Nay. Is he at once and heedlessly to throw it away? Nay. Let him exchange it into heavenly coin. He need not wait until he dies, but send it on before. How many cups of cold water can it buy? These count, if given with the single eye. How many Bibles and missionaries? Ten thousand channels are easily found when wanted."

Beatrice, Nebr.

"What a sad world this world would be to a thoughtful man, if there were nothing beyond this world! Not for himself, perhaps, but for others, there is need of another life to make this life tolerable to one who observes and reflects. On every side there are deserving ones who suffer far more than the undeserving. And there are saints whose lives are lives of toil and trial and seeming failure. Here, often, if not always, the fittest die, and the unfittest survive. If there were nothing to live for beyond the life that now is, the helps to true character-making would cost more than their apparent worth. But here it is that immortality sheds light on the mortal life; and here it is that this world at its worst and at its darkest is, to the believer, the very best conceivable preparation for the highest existence beyond all human conception. And in the light of this truth it is that the sufferings and the needs of the present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed to us-ward."

"Contentment consists in accepting God's ordering for us, both as to our sphere and as to our possessions. To say that we should be contented if we were in another place, or if we had one thing more than at present, is to indicate that we have a spirit of discontent which would make us unsatisfied wherever we were, or whatever was ours. Only he who is contented now, where he is, would be contented in the best sphere which it is possible for God to give to any one of his children; for our present sphere is the best for us—as God sees it, and as we ought to see it."

"Our Experience.—Nearly every Christian makes of himself a standard by which to measure the religious life of his day, and his expression as to its tone and atmosphere will be according to his own experience. If he is a barren professor, knowing but little in his heart of God and the Spirit, he will see in worldliness itself a condition to be thankful for; but if he be rich in his endowments of grace, nothing will satisfy him but holiness and devout service of the Lord."

FORGETTING THE THINGS BEHIND.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

THERE is a grace in forgetting as well as in remembering. There is a genius in knowing what to discard as well as what to keep, and both these are the invariable possessions of a successful and efficient life. No man of conscience can forget his sins; no man of judgment can forget his mistakes; but he does not carry them with him. What he does carry is the experience which has come to him through them, the strength, the wisdom, the grace of character, which has been developed by what they have brought or what they have taken away.

A man's real life is always before him, the past is only valuable for what he can learn from it. The days fade from all distinct recollections, because these artificial divisions of time are of no consequence, except as character has grown or degenerated in them.

A man's greatest achievement, once accomplished, begins immediately to recede, and becomes less and less in his eyes. No really great man has ever reposed on anything he has done; there has always been the consciousness that he was greater than any expression he had given of him, and that the real satisfaction and joy of his life lay, not in the work, but in the doing of it. One task succeeds another, one experience follows another in endless succession; and man's work is never finally done, because life is ever expanding, and the time will never come when this law of progression will cease to operate. There can be no heaven which is not a heaven of development.

It is a great waste of strength to make one's faults and blunders and sin impediments on the onward march. There is no virtue in continually bemoaning the misdoings of the past. Real repentance is not lamentation, but girding up the loins for the work of expiation. Let the time of the past bury its dead; leave behind the depressing memories of failure and defeat, while you carry their lessons in your heart. Your real life is not behind but before you; it is the time to come, and not the time gone by, which is your opportunity.

NUMBER FIVE.

Dear Daughter:—

THE word backslider is full of meaning. We do not say "backjumper." That would be a misnomer. No one jumps back. He slides. That means an easy and smooth motion. The backsliders say, "Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things." Is. 30: 10. Ever since there has been a God-service, there have been backsliders. "Ephraim is a cake not turned," Hos. 7: 8, which indicates a backsliding. "A cake not turned" will burn on one side, and remain dough on the other. So it is neither dough nor bread. It is quite easy to appear in such a way that the church is not proud of us, and the world does not want us either. There is no half way in religion. "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other." Matt. 6: 24. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." 2 Cor. 6: 17.

This is called non-conformity. "Do you willingly renounce Satan with all his pernicious ways," is a question asked at baptism. I call your attention to a few things to think and study over, and then think further.

There is another thing forbidden by God through the Holy Scriptures, the ever-changing fashions in dress. The human family has not changed in this respect. See Is. 3.

Still another thing, closely related to this, is the growing abhorrence to the prayer-covering. O how terribly the Scripture is being misconstrued to accommodate the carnal mind! Some claim it is the sense of Scripture to have the covering only at and during love-feasts. Be careful! My observation is that where this spirit prevails, a bare apology of a covering is used. The most common understanding is that the covering is to be worn when engaged in verbal prayer or prophesying. I have observed that where this is held, the covering has become quite obsolete. Many understand that, to practically carry out the letter of the Scripture, the covering should be worn continually. This is plausible from 1 Cor. 11: 6. Notice the language of the apostle: "For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered." The German says, "Will sie sich nicht bedecken, so schneide man ihr auch das Haar ab."

I have heard of husbands saying, "I do not want my wife to wear a covering, and if she does I will tear it from her head." I stated in a previous letter that children are inclined to do that which they shall not, and that which they shall do, they will not. So here. The apostle does not say if a woman praying or prophesying has a covering on her head, tear it from her, but, "if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn." Or, as the German, above quoted, has it, "Let man shear her." Instead of man being a hindrance to the woman in the wearing of the covering, he is to induce her so to do. Lewd women were uncovered. "And the priest shall set the woman before the Lord, and uncover the woman's head." Num. 5: 18.

Many self-denying followers of Jesus understand Paul as follows: "If she will not be covered, man is to cut off her hair, and as this gives her the appearance of a lewd woman, every honorable woman, to cover this 'appearance of evil,' will cover her head. This can only be done by a continual covering, and, further, by the time her hair is long again, she will be so used to the covering that she will no more do without."

Some are very loose in their non-conformed principles. They claim that "when we are among the Romans we must do as the Romans do." Such seem to be carnally minded, for the Savior says, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." Matt. 10: 16.

I have now written to you a few of the many things which belong to a godly life in Christ Jesus. I have done it in homeopathic style. I hope that you and a few others may be benefited by them.

Here and There.

WHAT a busy world this is, and what a poor one it would be were it not busy. All are busy,—but at what? Do we ever, in all this hurry, stop to think of the eternal destiny of all these things? Is there any knowing? By our actions we often, very logically, say, "No," but does that change the truth in the least?

When looking at the world, as it surges here and yon, how very little do we see that is done "as unto Christ!" Is the church of our God half so busy,—half so diligent? Verily, the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

Can the church cope with the world in allurements, in vanity, and the like? No, for if she does, she ceases, in every sense, to be herself, and she falls. Destruction awaits the church, if unfaithful, as sure as the world, with all of its wickedness, will be burned. The saddest, most heart-rending, scene is, to see a so-called Christian engaging in the follies of this world.

We have now been in this Southland about two years, and have visited hundreds of homes and sung with thousands of people, but not one of our Brethren have we seen. While we are sending missionaries to far-away countries, would it not be proper to inquire, whether the home work is not deserving of equal attention? Nearly all of my work is done in churches,—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, etc., and it is very natural for them to inquire into my church affiliation. When I say "Dunkard Brethren," they look with amazement, and when I leave they get down their encyclopedia to ascertain what part of America we inhabit.

The thing needed here is straight-out, doctrinal preaching, and a great deal of it. It will be no easy road to travel, but it can be traveled. Would to God that there were some of our Brethren who could leave their farms and come to this country and labor for the Master. There are many good people here, warm-hearted, hospitable, generous,—who, in time, could be won to a knowledge of the Truth.

Just the other day I read in one of the newspapers a very eloquent address, made by a prominent lawyer and statesman, which was delivered to a class in one of the theological seminaries of the North-east, in opposition(?) to any system of arbitration between nations. The speaker tried to demonstrate how utterly impossible it would be to thus satisfy a grieved people, and very urgently insisted that the young ministers before him, as they would become potent factors in shaping public opinion, use their highest energies to crush the sentiment in favor of arbitration. While reading the above I could not help wondering how the defeated party, in that case, would feel.

The following little story, which we found in the Gospel Advocate, though simple, certainly shows how peaceful non-resistance is stronger than war:

A certain regiment was once ordered to march into a small town in the Tyrol, to take it. It chanced that the place was settled by a colony who did not believe in war. A courier from a neighboring village informed the citizens that troops were advancing to take the town. They answered, "If they will take it they must."

Soldiers came riding in with colors flying and fifes piping their shrill defiance. They looked around for the enemy, and saw the farmer at his plow, the blacksmith at his anvil, and the women at their churns and spinning-wheels. Babies crowed to hear the music, and boys ran out to see the trainers with feathers and bright buttons. Of course, none of these were in condition to be shot at.

"Where are your soldiers?" they asked.

"We have none," was the brief reply.

"But we have come to take the town!"

"Well, friends, it lies before you."

"But is there nobody here to fight?"

"No."

Here was an emergency altogether unprovided for by the military schools. This was a sort of resistance no bullet could hit,—a fortress perfectly bomb-proof.

The commander was perplexed. "If there is nobody to fight with, of course we can not fight," said he. "It is impossible to take such a town as this." So they turned their horses' heads and departed.

So peace principles are the strongest fortress ever built by God or man.

WE had not heard any of our ministers preach for two years, until Feb. 14, when our dear brother, S. A. Honberger, arrived at this place. He preached in town on Saturday night and Sunday. Then we went to the Two Mile church, two and one-half miles west of town where we continued the meetings until March 4, when we met for the purpose of organizeing ourselves properly for future work. After agreeing to carry out the principles of the Gospel, as practiced by the Brethren, we agreed to organize under the name of "Two Mile Creek Church."

Bro. J. J. Troxel was chosen as elder, with Bro. S. A. Honberger as an assistant Bro. R. M. Evans was called to the ministry. Although we are few in number, we have the promise of more joining in with us in the near future. The doctrine is new here, but some are searching the Scriptures, to see whether these things are so. Our brother did not shun to declare the whole Gospel to his hearers. There were no additions by baptism, but one returned to the fold, who was with gladness received. Bro. Honberger did much good while he was here. He visited from house to house between meetings and also distributed many tracts.

Bro. J. T. Mason, of Cabool, Texas Co., Mo., has promised to come and hold some metings for us before long. Bro. Troxel, our elder, lives at the above place also, and we hope that he will pay us some visits. We will have preaching once a month at Two Mile. As soon as the time of our meetings is established, we will report to the MESSENGER and if any of our ministering brethren, passing on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis R. R, can stop with us, we will gladly receive them. Please notify us, previous to arrival, so that we may make arrangements for meetings.

MARY E. SWITZER.

Notes of Travel.

I AM just on my way home from a very enjoyable and, we trust, a profitable meeting with the saints of Nappanee, Ind. It pleased God to bless the labors of these loyal and devoted workers with twenty-three accessions and one applicant,—nineteen by baptism and four reclaimed. Meetings were in progress about three weeks, with but few day services, owing to many of the brethren being employed in shops. Considering the bad roads our Brethren living in the country stood nobly by the work until the close.

The attendance and interest were good throughout. The Turkey Creek congregation numbers about one hundred and seventy members, nearly one hundred of whom reside in town or near by. Nappanee is fifteen years old and contains 1,500 inhabitants. The church is under the care of our dear brother, J. C. Murray, assisted by Eld. George Shively,—who has but recently moved there, -and others in the ministry. Dark clouds have hung over this church in years past, but they are now walking in light and coming boldly to the front. Continuance in such devoted piety and strict adherence to Gospel Truth, accompanied with due respect for the discipline of the church, as we found among the dear ones of Nappanee, must bring a glorious victory for the cause. May God abundantly bless them for their noble work and cheering words, while we were among them, and lead them up to higher planes and sweeter joys of the Christian life. Strong and persistent opposition has led them to work with commendable zeal, until the enemy's camp is in an uproar. I was especially pleased to see the zeal manifested in distributing tracts, until they are having a telling effect for good. Making the doctrines of the church, as taught in the Holy Scriptures, a study, as the members of Nappanee are doing, will prepare them to stand the storm and to push the Lord's work triumphantly onward. May you, as dear lambs of the fold, ever heed the voice of the Good Shepherd and continue to feed on the green pastures of his love!

While I am waiting for a train homeward and penning these lines, a silent prayer is lifted in your behalf and in behalf of the precious ones almost persuaded to step over the line. Oh, dear friends, that is a safe and joyful step! Will you not take it soon?

My pleasant sojourn in the home of brother and sister Murray, as well as wherever duty led me among you, will always be called up with grateful remembrance. I. D. PARKER.

MARCH 21 the Killbuck church, Delaware Co., Ind., met in quarterly council. On account of rain our number was small. Much business came before the meeting, which was adjusted satisfactorily. We will represent at District Meeting with two delegates, — brethren I. E. Branson and A. Lane. We decided to represent at Annual Meeting by letter. We sent one paper to District Meeting, asking that body to appoint five solicitors to raise an endowment fund for the mission work of the Southern District of Indiana.

It is our intention to organize one or two Sunday-schools in the near future. May the Lord bless all efforts that may be put forth for the advancement of his cause and kingdom!

We feel that a Sunday-school, conducted properly, is a nursery to the church. We also decided to hold two love-feasts during this year,—one in the spring and one in the fall. Our spring love-feast will be May 20; our fall love-feast, Oct. 24. We extend the usual invitation to all.

We have four appointments in this church each month. Three active ministers, four deacons and a membership of about one hundred constitutes our working force. For the success of our work we ask an interest in the prayers of God's people!

The River Brethren.

IN response to a request for information, concerning the origin of the River Brethren, I transcribe from Winebremer's "History of all Denominations," the following:

"As they keep neither written nor printed records,—in the absence of these, oral history, or tradition alone, can be relied on as to the precise time of their church organization, and who were the first ministers among them. The concurrent testimony, however, among them is, that this denomination commenced during the Revolutionary war."

After speaking of the continued effects, and influence of the great religious awakenings, and the salutary effects produced thereby, under the labors of Whitefield and Edwards, and stating that the salutary effects of revivals of religion were afterward experienced among the Germans of Pennsylvania during the last half of the past century, the writer goes on to state: "Among the several German denominations, especially among the Mennonites, being the most numerous society in Lancaster County, awakenings were very common." "Between sixty and seventy years ago, awakened persons of Mennonites, Lutherans, German Reformed, and Brothren (or Täufer), 'whose hearts were closely joined together, had a common interest, not only in regard to the general cause of religion, but in each other's individual edification,' and they met in the capacity of a social, devout band, from house to house, to make prayer and supplication for the continued influence of God's spirit,—out of these social circles was organized the religious association, now commonly known as River Brethren"

"Several societies in Lancaster County were simultaneously organized. One near the Susquehanna River; another on Conestoga Creek." "By way of local distinction, the latter were called the 'Conestoga Brethren,' those on, or near, the Susquehanna, the 'River Brethren,' an appellation by which the society is now generally known, to distinguish its members from the German Baptists or Brethren, first organized in Europe."

"Their first ministers were Jacob Engel, Hans Engel, C. Rupp, and others." J. L. SWITZER.

Notes by the Way.

THUS far the Lord hath led us on! Up to this date we have had more bad weather than good, according to the way we generally express ourselves. But the days which we are accustomed to call bad days, are the very days in which a kind Providence is sending us rich blessings,—preparing the earth to give forth the harvest for the reaper, and those days are pretty good tests of how well we love the service of the Lord. All will work to the glory of God and to our good, if we can only learn to read aright.

After spending one week with the few members at Ramona, Kans., we next stopped at Herington, Kans. Here we met with the Father's children in the sanctuary each day for ten days. It is here that we met with several of our Danish brethren and sisters. Bro. C. Hope not being at home, we were not permitted to see him. We had our headquarters with Bro. N. C. Neilsen. Among those whom we visited was Mahlon Fry and family. These were our acquaintances when we lived in Missouri, and we were glad to spend a pleasant day with them. We are always glad to be where we find the "GOSPEL MESSENGER" among the first papers that we see, — and we found it here. We called next on our way to see the Cole family in the City of St. Joseph, Mo. They all seemed glad to have a call from us, though we were strangers hitherto. They live about two miles back from the Union Depot. We often regret that we have not churches planted in these cities.

After spending the night with this family, we again set out for our next stopping place, which was Seymour, Iowa. Here we met with Bro. J. H. Keller, who was awaiting the arrival of the train on which the writer had taken passage. With him was Bro. Andrew Strickler, and next was our aged elder, Bro. Wm. Strickler. We then went out to the place of meeting, about twelve miles distant, where we continued meetings till the mud became so deep, as to render all travel impossible, so that we had to cease going. Hence we had but five meetings. O! how much these members appreciate the meetings!

At present our place of meeting is in the Libertyville church. But here, also, the mud is so deep that but few can attend the meetings. Bro. Abraham Wolf has charge of the congregation at this place.

Our next stop will be Muscatine, Iowa. Then we aim to reach Chicago by April 3, at 9:50 A. M., on the Rock Island Road. A. HUTCHISON.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, the praying to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it maintains that of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined for all ages and times, and the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to grant our ground that all must concede to be infallible, is—

BRO. DANIEL LANDIS has changed his address to Shiremanstown, Cumberland Co., Pa.

BRO. WILLIAM JOHNSON has changed his address to No. 1533 Orange St., Wichita, Kans.

BRO. O. C. ELLIS reports a good meeting at River, Ind. Bro. D. B. Gibson is with them. Four have been added to the fold by baptism.

BRO. J. C. LEHMAN, who has been spending the winter in Florida, is now in North Carolina, where he will spend some weeks in preaching the Word of Truth. His wife goes to Pennsylvania to visit her relatives until Annual Meeting. Bro. Joseph expects to attend the Conference.

BRO. THOS. D. LYON thus expresses his feelings: "Good health, good prospects, good weather and a good paper, following in rapid succession, have conspired to keep us in good spirits. Surely ours is a goodly heritage. We trust that you have realized better and sweeter gifts."

BRO. J. J. HOOVER changes his address to Carleton, Thayer Co., Nebr., where his correspondents will please address him.

BRO. J. H. MOORE expects to start for the North in a few weeks. He will make Mt Morris his stopping place for a season. We shall be glad to have him with us again.

BRO. N. W. EISENBISE, of Dover, Oklahoma, Territory, says they have a good house in which to hold services, and they would like the Brethren to stop with them and hold meetings.

THE Spring Term of school opened at this place last week with a very large attendance,—much the largest in the history of the institution. Bro. Galen B. Royer has charge of the school during his father's absence, and he seems to take hold of the work as if he had been at it a long time.

BRO. J. G. ROYER has been suffering from a severe attack of La Grippe, but had so far recovered, that, with sister Royer, he was able to start East on the 31st ult. He will spend the time between this and Annual Meeting visiting among the churches in Pennsylvania and Maryland. He expects also to attend the District Meeting in Eastern Pennsylvania. We hope the Lord will bless our brother's labors to the good of the church.

BY an action taken by the Southern District of Kansas, two new State Districts have been formed, so that what was formerly known as the District of Southern Kansas, has been divided into three Districts. Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory form a District, and here is a territory larger than the Eastern States. Southern Kansas, No Man's Land, and Southern Colorado were formed into two State Districts. Now let each of these new Districts select a live, energetic missionary committee, and push the work in the new fields. The opportunities for doing missionary work in the South are excellent, and these new organizations will now have an opportunity to show what can be done by push and energy.

BRO. J. C. MURRAY, of Nappanee, Ind., asks us to rejoice with the church at that place, and surely his letter, given below, is sufficient cause for rejoicing among the people of God. Yes, Bro. Murray, we "rejoice with you." "We commenced our series of meetings here in Nappanee on the evening of March 1, with the home ministry at the helm. Bro. I. D. Parker, of Ashland, Ohio, arrived March 4 and took up the work, laboring faithfully in Word and doctrine, day and evening, until the 22nd. The spirit of the Lord was strongly manifested from the start, and continued until the close, resulting in twenty-three additions and one applicant; nineteen baptized and four reclaimed. May the rich blessings of our Heavenly Father rest upon our dear brother!"

IN our issue of Nov. 4, 1890, we published an item referring to the laying of the corner-stone of a public building not far from this place, in which it was stated that the Master of Ceremonies, who carried the Bible, was an avowed infidel. We made the statement upon what we supposed was reliable information. The gentleman to whom reference was made met us last week, and gave us his assurance that we were mistaken. He is a believer in the Old and New Testament, although not a professing Christian. We are very glad to be able to make the correction, and to ask pardon for the erroneous statement. We have no desire to wrong any one, and when an error has been made, we are always willing to correct it if possible, and we want the correction to go as far as the error went.

BRO. SILAS HOOVER, writing from Boynton, Pa. gives an account of good meetings held in the Woodbury church, Bedford Co., that State, He says: "The best of attention prevailed, and as an immediate result thirteen were added to the church by baptism. I hope that they may all prove faithful until death, and obtain the crown of everlasting life!"

JUST after our paper was put on the press last week, we received a card from Oklahoma, announcing the death of our beloved brother, Eld. James Evans. Bro. Evans passed away on the evening of March 22nd. Personally our acquaintance with the departed brother was somewhat limited, but he has been a constant correspondent to the MESSENGER, and our earlier church papers for many years. His writings were instructive and helpful, and many of our readers will miss his name from our list of correspondents. He was particularly interested in the prophetic writings of the Bible, and had given this subject a great deal of study and thought. He was largely self-taught, and had a remarkable memory. He studied German and French without the aid of a teacher, and became proficient in these languages. He translated from both of them into the English. He was also, to some extent, familiar with the Greek and Latin. He visited Mt. Morris about ten years ago, and that was the only time we ever had the pleasure of meeting him. We remember well the pleasant hours we spent together. But his earthly labors are ended and Bro. James has gone to his home on the other shore. To his bereaved family we extend our heartfelt sympathies. May the Lord comfort them in their affliction! We trust some one, who was well acquainted with Bro. Evans, will give our readers a brief sketch of his life.

MILLER AND SOMMER DEBATE.

A BROTHER sends us a clipping from the Octographic Review, the paper published by Daniel Sommer, with whom Bro. R. H. Miller debated in Ray County, Mo., two years ago. The writer, Daniel Sommer, has this to say about the Miller and Sommer Debate, published by the Brethren:

"In appearance it is a splendid volume. The contents consist of a thorough discussion of the differences between the Dunkards or German Baptists and the Church of Christ. Elder R. H. Miller represented the one side, while the REVIEW's publisher represented the other. The discussion lasted through eight days and was a splendid illustration of the weakness of human theology in opposition to the Bible. Elder Miller presented in behalf of the position he occupied thirty or more uninspired volumes, while the REVIEW's publisher presented only the Word of God in favor of the position he occupied. This called forth in the course of the debate from an impartial listener the following remark: 'The German Baptists have a good religion—a very good religion. There is but one fault to be found with it, and that is, it is not found in the Bible.'

"Setting up of the Kingdom of Christ, Trine Immersion, the Communion, Feet-washing and the Holy Kiss are the themes therein discussed As far as we have learned it is the most thorough debate which the Church of Christ ever had with the German Baptists. The only defect in the book, as printed, is that the reporter, though a master in his business, failed to get all of our speeches in full. We have since learned that no man living can report verbatim after a very rapid speaker."

The only comments necessary on the foregoing may be given in a few words. As a result of the debate the Brethren in Ray County, Mo., have received by baptism between forty and fifty members, and the church represented by Daniel Sommer has not prospered since that time. We have been informed that it has lost in membership. This is the verdict of those who heard the debate, and it speaks volumes, and shows that Bro. Miller established the Truth in the minds of his hearers.

The attempt to throw discredit on Mr. Abbott, our efficient reporter, is a very small loop hole for a man with the physical proportions, and the assumed mental superiority of Daniel Sommer to creep out. And this becomes more ridiculous still when we remember, that Mr. Abbott, in order to meet the above charge, made affidavit that the report was full and complete. We are sorry for the Octographic man, but can not help him, unless he is willing to accept the whole truth.

We are more than satisfied with the result of the debate; the church has been greatly strengthened by it. It has added to the small list of our literature. Two editions of the Miller and Sommer Debate have been printed and sold by the Brethren's Publishing Company, the Company assuming all risk. After paying all expenses of publishing, $250.00 were paid to the Brethren in Ray Co., Mo., to assist them in paying the reporter. Fifty copies of the work were given to Bro. R. H. Miller, and when the accounts are fully settled, the General Missionary Committee will receive something over $400.00 accruing from the sale of the book. About forty copies still remain unsold. As it is not likely that a third edition will be printed, those desiring to secure a copy should order at once. Yes! we are well satisfied with the Miller and Sommer Debate.

THE FUND FOR THE WESTERN SUFFERERS.

Our brethren and sisters have been giving a direct manifestation of the true spirit of the religion of Jesus Christ, in coming forward so promptly and willingly with their means to assist the needy and suffering ones in the far West. In this noble work they have been assisted by friends outside of the church, as well as by the members of other churches. The best of all giving is that which looks for nothing in return, and in this spirit we believe this fund has been raised. It has been a liberal giving, for the fund has gone above twelve thousand dollars, and the money, clothing and grain, sent to individuals in the drought-stricken district by our people, will carry the amount above fifteen thousand dollars.

The fund was started by a special District Meeting of Northern Illinois, and the plan was based on a careful and honest distribution of the money received, without reference to the religious convictions of the needy. Our charity, it was felt, should not be bounded by denominational lines, for the love of God is as broad as humanity itself, and the more of that kind of love we get, the better it will be for us and for others. It was determined, however, that as the money was largely donated by the brethren and sisters, and that given into their hands by others, was donated with the understanding that it should be carefully used, it would be right, as far as possible, to distribute it through them, and this has been, and is being done.

We received several letters during the winter, urging the Brethren to give for the Western sufferers, but as they were doing so nobly, we did not publish the letters. It would have been too much like the man whose boys were doing well at work, and yet he kept urging them all the time to do more. Never before, in the history of our Brotherhood, have we had such a sum of money raised for such a noble purpose, in so short a time. It speaks of growth and development in the right direction. It shows with a thousand times more force than words can tell, that the charge, so often made against us, of having all form and no spirit, is not correct, and we do thank the Lord that such an evidence of the true spirit of our holy Christianity has been given.

But we started out to say something about the distribution of the fund. That the money, clothing and provisions that have been so liberally donated, could be distributed, so that entire satisfaction would result among those who wanted help, was not expected. Some there were whose demands seemed to be entirely too exorbitant to the committees in charge, and they did not get all they asked for. Others, who, in the judgment of the distributors, were not in immediate need, did not receive money simply by asking for it. In some cases of this kind, doubtless, satisfaction was not rendered, but the very fact that such cases are to be found, shows that the local committees carefully guarded the money entrusted to them, and used their best judgment in making the distribution.

As far as practicable, families were visited and their wants looked after. Two members of the Committee, appointed by the church in Lincoln County, Nebr., traveled over the country by private conveyance, and relieved the wants of between thirty and forty families. This work was done gratuitously. The committee appointed by the Sappa Creek church, near Beaver City, Nebr., had $300 placed in their hands. We have received from the Committee personal receipts, signed by those who received help, and, in looking over them, we find that the money was distributed among fifty-six families, or about $5.35 to each family.

The first care of the Committees was to seek out those families who were actually in want, and supply them with the necessaries of life, and, as far as possible, this was done. In the second place, those who were unable to secure seed grain were looked after, and as far as can be done, these are now being furnished with seed and horse feed, so that they may sow their fields and look forward with hope to the harvest time. Bro. J. E. Young, of Beatrice, Nebr., is now out in the drought-stricken district, looking after this work. Bro. B. B. Whitmer, of Quinter, Kansas, writes that the Committee there are doing what they can in this direction.

Of course we may do the best we can, and still not be able to reach all. Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado have, through their Legislatures, donated large sums to help the farmers to secure seed grain. The United States Government has also appropriated $100,000 for the same purpose. With all this help there are some who will not get what they need.

In some localities, where our committees are at work, some who need help, write to friends in the East, asking for assistance, and these letters come to us. For example, there is before us now, a letter, written from Quinter, Kansas, asking for help. The committee at that place has received about $1,700.00, and still have money on hand. The letter was forwarded to the committee, and help will be afforded. A number of letters of this kind have been sent to the local committees.

Our local committees are instructed to take a receipt from each one who receives help, and we believe this is being done. In this way we shall be able to give an account as to the disposition of every dollar of the fund, and the donors will have the satisfaction of knowing that their money went into the hands of the needy and the sufferers.

We have received a number of personal calls for aid, and where those calling have been able to give us a reference, aid has been sent to them. In a very few cases we asked for references, and heard no more from the parties. They doubtless received help from other sources.

The demand for help will not be so great after seeding time and during the summer months, as it has been during the winter and spring, but many families will need aid until a crop is harvested. Those who have not yet done so, should give, knowing that the help will be needed, and then, too, they should desire to have a part in the blessings that God will surely pour upon those who help the poor.

RAILROAD RATES TO ANNUAL MEETING.

The Central and Trunk Line Associations have granted a rate for those desiring to attend our Conference, to be held at Hagerstown, Md., of one fare for the round trip. This makes the fare from Chicago to Hagerstown, and return, $17.25, which is as low as we could reasonably expect.

According to the circular issued by these Associations, tickets will be placed on sale May 20, and will be good to return until June 30, thus giving a limit of forty days to the tickets. This will give our Brethren and friends ample time to visit in the East both before and after the Conference.

The tickets will be those known as ironclad. They are not transferable, and must be signed and stamped at Hagerstown by the proper officer, before they can be used for the return trip. This form of ticket is used to prevent what is known as ticket scalping. The intent of the reduced rate is to afford those who desire to go East and attend the Meeting, and then return to their homes again, an opportunity to do so. It is not for the purpose of affording parties an opportunity to buy the round-trip ticket, go East, remain there and sell the return ticket to some one else. This has been done in some instances, hence the ironclad tickets.

Application has been made to the Western Passenger Association, but up to this writing they have not notified us of their action upon the request. We hope to secure the same terms west of Chicago, as are given east of that city. From the Trans-Missouri Association, we have heard nothing. Bro. John Wise has charge of the railroad business in that department, and, we presume, he is making arrangements.

Our Brethren in the different localities will notify the ticket agents at their local stations, as to the number of tickets wanted, and if the local agent does not secure the tickets, write to the General Passenger Agent, whose name and address may be secured from the local agents.

We receive many letters making suggestions as to limit of tickets and other arrangements. We can not find time to answer all of these, but we wish to say to our Brethren that we shall do all in our power to secure the best possible arrangements for them. We can not, of course, carry out the wishes and suggestions of all, from the fact that some would have the limit extended beyond the Meeting, and others before it. In all these matters the railroad companies have the final voice. It should not be forgotten that two years ago the roads, west of Chicago, refused to grant a special rate to our Conference at Harrisonburgh. We should not ask for too much, lest we get nothing.

As soon as further arrangements are made, notice will at once be given in these columns.

NON-CONFORMITY.

BY ENOCH EBY.

"Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."—Rom. 12: 2.

I DO not venture to treat this mooted, yet all-important, subject simply by request, but also from a sense of duty. No subject in theology is more deeply and deplorably prostituted to the sensual desires of the human heart than the subject of non-conformity to the world, yet in it is "Emmanuel," from the manger to the cross.

Transformation implies conformity to the image of his Son. Rom. 8: 29. It is the act or operation of changing the form or external appearance, a change of heart in man, by which his disposition and temper are conformed to the divine image. A change from enmity to holiness and love. -Webster.

The transforming power of the Gospel changes the outward appearance in harmony with the image of Christ formed within, by the renewing of the mind, and it certainly does not require a fruitful mind to determine whether a brother loves the world more than the church, when he follows the fashionable style of the world in wearing a mustache only. While some might, perhaps, consider it lawful to do so, none should considerit expedient. "He that loveth the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 1 John 2: 15. The one that children love the most, they will follow the best. We do the same.

It takes but little outside to tell what is inside. It is proverbially true that a feather will tell which way the wind blows; and its indications are equally true when found on a hat. A very small second hand shows the inward working of the clock. Life is made up of little things; so is character. The crime of cheating a man out of five dollars does not seem as great as if it was one hundred, but it demonstrates the principle of dishonesty just as forcibly.

Small indications in the way of superfluities show that we love the world; hence Conference has an eye on principle when she is called upon to decide on matters, considered of little importance by those who lose sight of principle.

Transformation is the result of a renewed mind, —a mind that loves the Brotherhood, instead of the world. Where the power of the Gospel (and not the preacher) has changed the mind, there the love of the world ceases,—the love of the Brotherhood will at least predominate, for we can not love and serve two opposing elements at the same time.

The church and the world are contrasted in the Bible by light and darkness. Who can walk in both at the same time? Impossible. It is just as impossible to love the things, and habits, and practices of this world, and the principles and practices of the Brotherhood at the same time. It is impossible to live in conformity to both at the same time, unless the world adopts the principles of the church, and we need not expect that before the Ethiopian changes his skin, and the leopard his spots. Jer. 13: 23.

Is it not a lamentable fact that the distinctive features of Christ's church are almost, if not entirely, obliterated, by the so-called religion of this age? Should not the true Israel of God shudder at the very thought of keeping pace with them? Is it not quite probable that we fail to put a proper estimate on our responsibility, first, from the stand-point of creation,—"made only a little lower than the angels," Ps. 8: 5; second, from the high dignity of our profession, as sons and daughters of God, and as a light in a dark place?

Did you ever stop to consider, my dear brethren, that our profession and pretensions, as a church or Brotherhood, stand between the highest order of intelligence, or religionists on earth, and Christ? What manner of persons, then, ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness!

I am happy in the privilege of saying to a reading and intelligent world, that the true church of Jesus Christ has never yet, and I sincerely hope she never will, lower her standard of Christian dignity by taking into her embrace or fellowship, any organization or institution, either political or religious, gotten up by man. The light in the church swallows them all up as the light of the sun does the moon and stars. She is set as a city on a hill, —as the great reflector through which Christ and his Gospel shines. She keeps herself unspotted from the world, individuals excepted; she gives no encouragement to worldly-inspired organizations, such as fairs, whether called World, State, County, or Church. She does not unite the work of State and church by using the political helm. She frowns with holy dignity upon all and every vain amusement, whether gotten up by the world or some church.

A question that was asked in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 7, page 101, will come in place at this juncture of our subject: "Why is it that our church is advancing so fast in fashion, and retrograding so swiftly in the principles of true religion?

In answer, I remark that the church has not deviated very much from Gospel principles. She has been pressed, by force of circumstances, to slacken the brakes a little, and to permit (not license) some things rather against her will, but it is evident, if all the local districts and individual members would live up to the Gospel requirements of the Brotherhood, given through her Conference, there would be no cause for the above question. The church, however, should not be censured because of what a few local churches or individuals do. Moreover, some will be held fearfully responsible for such grave departures from Gospel principles, and the Scriptural advice, given by our General Conference, and for the moving of the old landmarks that our fathers set up, so that, in many parts of our beloved Brotherhood, scarcely a trace is left.

Were I to undertake to locate the cause, I might fail and do injustice to some of my good brethren. If, however, the church lays the responsibility of an elder on a brother who does not have his children in subjection, I have the Word of Inspiration for it that he can not take care of the church of God. 1 Tim. 3: 5. In that case the church makes a mistake, and it is so far responsible. The same government that a brother has in his own family, he would naturally have in the church, but elders will be accountable for not trying, by the help of God, to attain to the required qualifications, and the laity will be accountable for causing grief to faithful elders by their departures, and aping after the fashions and customs of the world.

Again, the proselyter may be a fruitful source of bringing conformity to the world into the church. Being anxious for numbers, he may not always hold up the cross very strongly, and, while singing the closing hymn, a special, sympathetic effort is made. Sometimes even the minister gets out into the congregation, and persuades while the rest are singing. Is it not quite probable that some will yield before they count the cost? Their mind is not renewed, they have only been prevailed upon.

Some evangelists have even gone further and promised liberties to the applicant that the church could not grant. Jesus teaches that if a man would build, he should sit down and count the cost, —see whether he be able to finish. That takes sober thought, no excitement. We pen this for the serious reflection of all.

OUR CHILDREN.

BY DAVID WANTZ.

ARE we, as parents, responsible for the education and "bringing up" of our children? If so, when and where should we commence to bring this into effect? Should we let our children grow up without any attempt at instruction, and then, when they are men and women, endeavor to have them reformed, and brought into the right by the minister of the Gospel?

Some seem to do just this way. The modern idea of "save the rod and spare the child," has become quite popular with not a few of our people. A careful observer can readily see that parents of to-day are almost serving their children, instead of the children the parents. Some parents do most everything their children desire them to do.

God gave explicit directions to the Jews that they should teach their children. "Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy son's sons." Deut. 4: 9. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Prov. 22: 6. Some seem to think that there is a disposition in the child to discard his evil ways when he grows up; even though his moral training has been neglected.

This idea does not accord with what we find in Prov. 22: 15, "Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him." "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes." Prov. 13: 24. "The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame. Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul." Prov. 29: 15, 17.

There are various ideas concerning the virtues and morals of the child. Some people seem to think that these,—as our other faculties, develop as we come to manhood, and are inherent to our nature.

This does not seem to agree with the Scripture quoted above, or with the ancient philosopher,—Aristotle,—who says, "Intellectual virtue is produced and increased chiefly by instruction, and therefore requires experience and time. Moral virtue, like all other practical arts, can be acquired or preserved by practice only. As men become architects by building, and musicians by harping, so they become just and courageous by performing acts of justice and courage. The characters of nations result from their conduct. Virtues are like the arts,—acquired by a right and destroyed by a wrong practice. Architects and musicians thus become good or bad, and if this were not so, instruction would be superfluous. The same holds true in the virtues. In one word, such as our actions are, such will our habits become. Actions, therefore, ought to be most diligently attended to, and it is not a matter of small moment how we are trained from our youth; much depends on that, or rather, all."

There is a pressing demand for just such teaching at the present time. Those parents who assume that they can safely neglect the early training of their children, depending upon the church, and the Sunday-school, and the public school to supply the lack, through the agency of preaching and moral didactics, should reflect upon the incomparable value of moral activity and proper habits in our children. "As the twig is bent, the tree will incline."

THE WAY TO REMOVE EVIL.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

A STUDENT of Mount Morris College, writing me a description of that place and its morals, says, among other good things, about the pleasant little town, the following: "Mount Morris is mostly composed of Brethren, and there are no saloons here. I do not know that there is any law prohibiting liquor traffic here,* only: 'Will it pay to locate saloons among the Dunkards?' I think the way to prohibit the liquor trade is to make Christians. What say you?"

I said then, and now, after giving that thought serious meditation, I still say, "To make Christians is the safest and surest way to remove the evil from our land. No other way ever can be so effectual."

Were the law of prohibition in force throughout the world, we could compel men every-where to close their distilleries and rum shops, thus prohibiting the sale of intoxicants and preventing drunkenness, but would the traffickers and the supporters of the vile trade be any better for such compulsion? Is not the inner man still a transgressor while his desire is evil, though the outward man may be compelled, by law, to quit the evil work?

There is a class of men and women that will be outlaws notwithstanding laws, courts and prisons, with their bolts and bars. Imprison such for transgressing the edicts of the land, and as soon as freedom is regained, they are found in their old-time haunts of vice. Are they made better by repeated imprisonments? No. They serve out the penalty of crime only. Their hearts are not bettered. By compulsion the evil acts were stayed, but the evil desires were not subdued; the souls are still crimson in the flood of sin.

By authority of the law the licentious may be kept from the way that leads down to death, but no human rites can remove the blackness of wantonness. Sin still rankles in the heart. Vain is the attempt of reformation until the mind is turned into purer channels and the darkened soul is lighted by holier light.

The civil law enforced, compels the desecrator of the Lord's Day to rest from servile labor, and cease his riotous clamor on that day, set apart to the worship of God. The Lord's chosen lift up grateful hearts for the privilege of worshiping in the sanctuary in quietude. But where is the desecrator? He comes not to the house of God, or offers a song of praise, or repentant prayer. No holy impulse animates his sordid mind. Only the country's decrees have induced him to remain quiet during the day, so dear to Christian hearts. Is he better for thus being kept from wrong-doing? Ah, no! It takes something more than statutes and decrees of men to remove the inclination and desire to do wrong which is uppermost in the carnal mind. That mind must be purified by the refining Spirit of Christ and changed thus from a carnal mind, seeking carnal things, to a spiritual mind, seeking heavenly things. This change causes the evil-doer to cease from evil and to do right,—not from compulsion, but from the willing desire of a cleansed heart. The distiller and the liquor-dealer close their vile houses, and the tippler frequents those places no more. The licentious become pure and noble men and women in society; the desecrator of the Lord's Day is found in God's earthly temple, offering a song of praise and prayer. The thief steals no more, and the lips that were once polluted with lies are gemmed with the pearls of truth, when Jesus takes up his abode in the heart.

Thus it is with every class of sin and sinners. The evil must be removed by putting good in its stead and the change made desirable to the evil-doer, else the work is vain. There is an old saying which is applicable here:

> "Convince a man against his will,
> And he is of the same opinion still."

So it is with the wrong-doer. You may compel him to do right, but that does not make him right, neither does it change his desire to do wrong. At heart he is the same wrong-doer that he was before. But convert him by the Gospel and make him a Christian, and he then does right from choice. That is the only right-doing which is of any value to the soul. It is the free-will offering that delights the Lord and is crowned with his richest blessings.

Let our greatest endeavor be, then, to convert souls, if we would remove the evil from our borders and make this sin-cursed world of ours a beautiful paradise where Christ is law and Jesus rules supreme. Each soul may be a missionary to some other soul; and each Christian may convert one soul to Christianity, thus doubling the number. If this doubling process were repeated again and again, as it seems it could and should be, the Gospel would soon be known throughout the world, and there would be little need of missionaries.

There is much to be done—souls are perishing and the evil is spreading,—not just one evil but thousands,—and there is only one effectual remedy; that is the Word of God. May no soul say to us in eternity: "You could have given me that Loving Word, but you did not." O we need to work zealously, earnestly and prayerfully! May God help us to be earnest in our high calling!

La Porte, Ind.

"WHEN death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity. This we should always bear in mind and by keeping bitter words from our lips, drive them from our hearts. Love we can never regret, but hate may fill all our lives with bitterness."

*The citizens of Mt. Morris, under the local option law of Illinois, have for years voted against licensing the liquor traffic.—ED.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

TWO ADDITIONS.—Since our last report two young men were received into the Salem church, Montgomery County, Ohio, by baptism. We closed an interesting series of meetings March 11, at our house in Georgetown, conducted by Bro. Henry Frantz, of New Carlisle, Ohio. May the seed sown by him produce much fruit in due time! —Jesse K. Brumbaugh.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—This afternoon quite a number of members and others met to re-organize our Sunday-school. Bro. B. F. Filbrun was re-elected Superintendent, Jacob Sandy, Assistant. A full corps of other officers and teachers was also chosen. We think our school is gaining, both in interest and numbers. May the Lord bless the work every-where. Much good may be done in the Sunday-school, if properly conducted.—George H. Cox, March 22.

TWO ADDED TO THE CHURCH.—Love, peace and harmony are reigning among the members of the Woodland church. At a recent meeting one wanderer returned to the fold, and yesterday a dear brother was baptized, causing great joy among the Father's children here. March 19 we laid Bro. R. Aspinall into the silent grave. His age was sixty-two years, three months and twenty days. Funeral services by a brother to a large audience of sympathizing friends and neighbors. May the Lord ever bless and comfort the bereaved friends!—Isaiah Rairigh, March 23.

CHURCH COUNCIL.—The Brethren of the Ten Mile congregation, Washington County, Pa., held their council-meeting, March 7. Owing to the inclemency of the weather and bad roads, we had a small meeting. In this congregation the members are mostly advanced in years, and live some distance apart, but are faithful and true to their espoused faith. Bro. N. B. Christner is the minister in this church. We agreed to hold our love-feast at the brick church-house June 13. All are cordially invited. Western brethren are especially invited to stop with us on their return from Annual Meeting. John C. Johnson, Uniontown, Pa.

ONE BAPTIZED.—Bro. A. Hutchison came to us March 1, and stayed with us ten days. We had fifteen meetings, in which Bro. Hutchison held forth the Word with power. The members were much built up and strengthened in their faith. One young sister made application to be received into the church, and was baptized to-day. (Just a short time before, two young sisters were received into the church by baptism). Yesterday we had our quarterly council. It was a very pleasant one. We decided to hold a love-feast May 23. May the Lord bless us with a rich foretaste of the feast above!—N. C. Nielsen, Heringlon, Kans., March 22.

TWO ON THE LORD'S SIDE.—Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., held a series of meetings in Lancaster, Pa., which was closed last evening. The weather was unfavorable part of the time, yet there was a fair attendance during the meetings. Bro. Mohler preached nineteen sermons while with us. All of them were very instructive and soul-inspiring. We were very much encouraged and have a higher ideal of our Christian duties and responsibilities, and hope that much good may have been accomplished. As an immediate result of the good seed sown, two precious souls became willing to submit to the will of the Lord, and there are still others, seriously counting the cost. May God's blessing every-where attend our dear brother!—A. J. Evans, March 23.

CORRECTION.—In my article on the Lancaster Hymn Book in a late number of the MESSENGER, I said, "The last time 4,500 copies were printed." I should have said "2,500." Wm. Hertzler, March 28.

THREE SOULS FOR CHRIST. – March 22, the Chapman Creek church, Kans., was made to rejoice to see three dear souls unite with the church by baptism. May we continue to labor earnestly for the salvation of souls!—Benj. Forney, March 26.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—I have received of Bro. B. B. Whitmer $74.85 for the relief of the sufferers. The brethren and friends, who were benefited by the generous donation, return heart-felt thanks to the donors.—John F. Cline, Goodland, Sherman Co., Kans., March 23.

SIX ACCESSIONS.—March 13 Bro. G. W. Stambaugh commenced a series of meetings in the Loup Valley church, Nebr., which he closed March 19. Six precious souls were added to the church. We, as a little band, labor and pray that much may yet be accomplished here.—Adalbert Anderson, March 25.

PLEASANT COUNCIL. –The brethren and sisters of the Monitor church, Kans., had a very pleasant council March 19. The report of the annual visit showed all to be in peace and union. Official help was asked for and granted. This is to be attended to at our feast, which will be held May 23 and 24, beginning at 3 P. M.—S. E. Lantz, March 25.

TWO RECLAIMED.—Bro. Jacob Heistand came to the Swan Creek church, Ohio, March 10, and preached for us one week to fair congregations, considering the roads. Two were reclaimed. May the Lord help them to be faithful! While we can not report a number of accessions, yet one soul is worth more than the whole world, and we feel that these meetings were productive of much good. I often wonder why all the members do not take more interest in these meetings. If the whole church would combine its forces, what a power of good might be done!—Perry McKimmy.

FOUR ADDITIONS.—Since our last report four more have been received by the Price's Creek church, Preble Co., Ohio. On Thursday, March 12, we were called to the bedside of Bro. Samuel S. Baker. Upon our arrival, at 10 P. M., we found him prostrated with La Grippe. His desire was to be received into the church, and, on Monday following, he was baptized. On Thursday, March 19, he fell asleep, leaving a widow and two children to mourn their loss. His age was fifty-four years, three months and two days. Funeral services by Bro. A. G. Crosswhite and the writer.—Jos. Longanecker.

From Markleysburgh, Pa.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements I commenced a series of meetings at the Canaan schoolhouse, in our home congregation, Feb. 13, and continued to preach for the people each evening and Sunday, until Saturday evening, Feb. 21, having, in all, ten meetings. As an immediate result we baptized eight precious souls and reclaimed two that had wandered from the fold.

On Sunday morning, Feb. 22, we were called to preach the funeral-sermon of sister Sarah Ellen Fike, and the same evening were called to solemnize the marriage of Bro. Thurman F. Umbel and Sarah J. Stuck, -a Baptist sister.

On Tuesday, Feb. 24, we went to the Sandy Creek congregation and filled the appointment at Salem. Here, with the assistance of Bro. Jeremiah Thomas, the meetings were continued until March 8, when they closed with an ingathering of thirty-three precious souls by baptism and two reclaimed. During our stay with the Brethren at Salem we were called to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Jacob Thomas.

Returning to our home congregation (Markleysburgh), we commenced meetings at Sand Spring, in the Winebrennerian church. The above people had just closed series of meetiegs which had been in progress for several weeks, and resulted in bringing to their church about twenty members. We continued our meetings from March 13, until Sunday, March 22, when we had the pleasure of burying seventeen dear souls in the liquid grave. During the meetings we had good interest, good attendance and good order. Altogether we had thirty-three meetings (excepting funerals), with fifty-eight additions by baptism and four reclaimed. May the blessing of God ever rest on the lambs of his fold! Brethren and sisters, pray for us that we may so care for these little ones that they may become useful men and women in the cause of their Master. The season is here when farmers must till their ground and sow their seed, and as I am in that number, it is with sorrow that I leave the spiritual field and go to the temporal field There are many calls for preaching that I must refuse on account of providing for my household. Brethren, pray for your unworthy brother that he may prove faithful to the end! JASPER BARNTHOUSE.

In Memory of Christian Wine.

THE subject of this sketch was born in Shenandoah County, Va, Feb. 6, 1795, and died at his home, near Tree Hill, in Washington County, Tenn., March 20, 1891, having reached the ripe old age of ninety-six years, one month and fourteen days.

He was of German descent. His grandfather, George Wine, emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania, or Maryland, some time during the second quarter of the eighteenth century. His father, Michael Wine, married a Miss Miller and for some time lived in Maryland, but rather early in life he moved with his family to Shenandoah County, Va. Here he spent the remainder of his life, rearing a family of twelve children,—six sons and six daughters, -Christian being the youngest child with the exception of one sister. Of this family of twelve, Christian has, for a number of years, been the only survivor. His next older brother Michael, who lived at the old homestead in Virginia and who died several years ago, at the age of about eighty-six years, was the last, with the exception of our subject.

Aug. 22, 1820, Christian married Barbara Beam, in whom he found a faithful companion till her death, which occurred Dec. 9, 1879. At her death he was able to say that he had lived with her more than fifty-nine years, without having given her, or received from her, an angry word.

After marrying, he settled on a farm near his birth-place where he lived until 1837, when he moved to the farm in Washington County, Tenn., where he spent the remainder of his life.

Not long after his marriage he united with the church of the Brethren, of which he remained a faithful member for about sixty-eight years, until his death. For many years he filled the office of deacon.

He was the father of eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, all of whom survive him, and all of whom are also members of the same church as their father,—two, Joseph and Jacob, being in the ministry.

The funeral services were conducted at his home on Sunday, March 22, by elder C. H. Diehl and John Bashor, after which all that was mortal of him was carried to the family burying ground, and interred by the side of his faithful wife, on the spot selected by himself years ago.

He was a man who loved a quiet and retired life, having spent the best years of his life before the rush and bustle of the latter part of the nineteenth century had set in, and although he had, for some years, lost all interest in passing events, he will be greatly missed by his family, friends and neighbors. ELIJAH T. WINE.

From Pleasant View Church, Phillips Co., Kansas.

THE brethren, sisters and friends of this neighborhood being desirous of organizing a Sunday-school, met at the Salem school-house March 15, for that purpose. We organized our school by electing Bro. J. W. Jarboe as Superintendent, and Sylvester Workman, Assistant.

We decided to open the school March 22, at 10 A. M. It was also decided to use the Young Disciple in the school. In our studies we commence at the first chapter of John's Gospel, and expect to continue in regular order until the close of the school.

At present we are in the midst of the worst snow-storm that we have had this winter. It set in last evening and has continued ever since without any signs of abating. If it continues at the present rate, it will doubtless prove very destructive to the stock in this part of Kansas, for people had made no arrangements to withstand such a storm. Most of the stock had nothing to eat all winter excepting what could be picked up on the prairie. Now with this snow covering the ground, and cutting them off from their feed, there is nothing left for them but to starve.

For the information of ministering brethren passing up the Great Republican Valley over the B. & M. R. R., we would say, that we are situated five miles south and two miles east of Republican City, just on the State line, in Phillips County Kans. All those wishing to stop off and give us a few words of encouragement on our way Zionward, will be met at the station, at Republican City, by notifying brethren J. W. Jarboe, D. R. Ream or Sylvester Workman, Republican City, Nebr. SYLVESTER WORKMAN.

District Meeting of Southern Kansas.

This Meeting was held March 25, near Madison, Greenwood County, Kans. On account of the excessive rains, the attendance, besides the delegates, was not as large as usual. The ministerial meeting, March 24, was very interesting, and steps were taken to increase its efficiency still more next year, by adopting a programme and announcing subjects to be considered. Those District Meetings which have not already adopted the ministerial meetings, would do well to give them a trial.

The District Meeting was organized by electing Daniel Vaniman, Moderator, S. Z. Sharp, Reading Clerk, and A. W. Vaniman, Writing Clerk. One of the important subjects to be considered was the redistricting of Southern Kansas which had also taken into its territory the State of Texas and Indian Territory. A committee, consisting of brethren S. Z. Sharp, Daniel Vaniman and David Stouder, had been appointed to inquire into the matter and make a report.

The Brethren in Texas, living from two to three hundred miles away and having four ordained elders and a considerable number of churches, petitioned to be set apart as a separate District. Their petition was granted and the churches in Oklahoma and Southern Indian Territory were added to them. South-eastern Kansas and North-eastern Indian Territory was formed into a District, also South-western Kansas and Southern Colorado, the latter subject to the approval of the North-western District of Kansas.

The several Districts of Kansas having united to establish an Old Folks' Home, the joint committee selected Booth, Kansas, for its location. Considerable money has already been raised for its support.

The Church Erection and Missionary Board made a creditable report. A call came from Oklahoma Territory, near Clarkson, for a minister to come and baptize eight or ten persons and organize them into a church.

Bro. Daniel Vaniman was elected delegate to Annual Meeting and member of the Standing Committee, and Bro. John Wise alternate.

Several petitions were sent to Annual Meeting.

1. That there be no business meetings at Annual Meeting except such as are granted by Annual Meeting.

2. That Annual Meeting fix the number of years each member of the Advisory Committees to the Brethren's Schools should serve.

3. That there be a committee appointed at the coming Annual Meeting to report to the same Meeting on church name.

The spirit of the meeting was most excellent, though an unusual amount of business was transacted.

Notes from the Field.

Feb. 14 I went to the Meadow Branch church, Md., where I found that arrangements had been made to have preaching one week in the Meadow Branch meeting-house and one week at Westminster. The above-named congregation is in the Eastern District of Maryland and includes the City of Westminster, in which there are a number of members. The church is under the care of Eld. Uriah Bixler, who is assisted in the ministry by brethren Emmanuel Babylon and D. D Bonsack. The latter had, at the time, an affection of the throat, which prevented him from filling a number of calls for preaching during the winter. The meetings were well attended, though the roads were in a bad condition. The zeal, manifested by the brethren and sisters, gave us much encouragement in preaching the Word.

The Meadow Branch church may be considered one of the model churches in conforming to the order of the Brotherhood, and it is a fact worthy of notice, that the brethren appear before the world in the same way that they do in the church. Thus they are much more respected by the world, than if they were to attempt to appear like Brethren while among the members of the church and to throw off all restrictions while among people of the world.

During our stay we made our home in the family of Bro. Bonsack, whose kindness we shall ever remember. With Bro. Bonsack we visited about forty families. We were kindly received by all, and while it would make our communication too lengthy, to refer in detail to our visit, we only ask space to speak of several, where we found sad affliction. In one family we found an aged brother who had been confined to his bed for many years; at another place we met a comparatively young sister, also afflicted for a long while, but both manifest a true spirit of submission to the will of God. At the house of the latter we were taught a special lesson of resignation, when we beheld how cheerfully and with what forbearance she endured the rod of affliction. Truly did we enjoy the social converse and devotional exercises. May God sustain them and all others afflicted! God be praised for any good that may have been accomplished by our visit and labors! Many thanks to the brethren, sisters and friends for their kindness during our stay with them!

At a council-meeting, December last, the undersigned was appointed Messenger correspondent for this congregation.

As an item of news I will mention that the members of this congregation met in council on Saturday, March 7. All business passed off pleasantly and, we think, to the satisfaction of all. The Lord seemed to be present with us. The church sent one query to District Meeting. Eld. Jacob Gump and the writer were appointed as delegates to District Meeting which will be held in the Pleasant Hill church, Allen County, Ind. The latter is presided over by our esteemed elder, Jeremiah Gump, who has been very ill for the last six weeks.

At our council the Western sufferers were remembered by a contribution to the amount of $4.38, less the expense of sending same.

Wm. Finney.

From Keuka, Fla.

The time approaches for our departure northward, April 1. Though a little early to leave the sunshine and mild, dry climate of Florida, where we have been enjoying strawberries and garden vegetables for the past month, we have to start, in order to meet an appointment for preaching at Salem, North Carolina, April 5, and at other points, on northward, in some of the isolated churches by the way, as opportunity may offer.

My stay in Florida has been pleasant, and, I trust, not without some good effect, both to the church and to myself. (Much relief was afforded me from rheumatic difficulty.) Although Florida is not a panacea for all the ills flesh is heir to, in general my health has been good. La Grippe, in a mild form, was the most prominent difficulty.

The ministerial force will soon be so much curtailed that Bro. E. J. Neher, as the only resident minister, will have thrown upon him all the work. Since Bro. Bowser's death, at Hawthorne, Bro. Neher feels the weight of the responsibility. Though not very strong in body, yet he is sound in the faith, and of good report both by the church and the people. May he, by God's help, maintain the truth and may the church continue to prosper!

J. C. Lahman.

From Cartersville, Va.

God, in his wise providence, has not left us to be alone. His promises are sure and steadfast. His Word is sufficient if we are willing to trust him. Bro. Bowser and family arrived here March 12, and, on account of sickness, they are still with us. All are having La Grippe, and their youngest daughter, three years of age, is quite ill now. We trust that, through the mercies of God, she may be raised up again. Our brother and sister need the prayers of God's dear people. Let all remember them at a throne of grace! "The fervent, effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Our days of preaching will be on the second and fourth Sunday of each month. We could not have services last Sunday on account of rain. We are having pleasant weather at present. We had our prayer-meeting here last Wednesday night, and it will be here again to-night, the Lord willing.

Bro. Bowser's brother-in-law, Bro. W. C. Denlinger, formerly a student of Mt. Morris, came with Bro. Bowser. We hope that, by the united prayers of all, much good may be done! May God enable us to encourage Bro. Bowser in his labor, and may all work together in love and union, that the burden may not rest only on him! Let all help him to fight the battle!

We intend to open our Sunday-school next month. We also hope to get up a singing-school to be conducted by Bro. Denlinger. Good singing is a part of the worship of God, and greatly adds to the interest of our services. May others come and assist Bro. Bowser in his work sometimes; it will be a great help to him! The responsibilities rest heavily on him. Let us help him to share it as much as lieth in our power! Let us all be faithful and we shall receive a crown of life that fadeth not away.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

GARVER.—In the Black River church, Chatham, Medina Co., Ohio, Feb. 22, 1891, of pleurisy and pneumonia, sister Sarah Garver, wife of Eld. Samuel Garver, aged 67 years, 2 months and 22 days

Funeral services conducted by Bro. I. D. Parker, of Ashland, Ohio, from the consoling words found in Philpp 1: 21, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." She was sick only eleven days, and then quietly passed to her "heavenly home." She leaves a husband, eight children, and eight grandchildren to mourn her death, yet they mourn not without hope

Deceased was a consistent member of the Brethren's church for many years; she was a devoted wife, a loving mother, and a faithful member, and will be missed by the church as well as the family. We hope that those of the family who are not prepared for this great change, will take warning and live in such a way, that when their time comes to pass away they will be so happy as to meet their dear mother on the other shore.

CLARA WOODS.

WILSON.—In the Lower Twin congregation Preble Co., Ohio, Feb 13, 1891, sister Martha A. Wilson, aged 23 years, 5 months and 7 days

Deceased began failing about two years ago Jan. 3, 1891, she desired the Brethren to visit her. We found her in an advanced stage of consumption, quite weak and not able to walk across the room without help. She was received as an applicant for baptism, after which she said, "I want to be baptized to-morrow." So, next morning, she was taken to the water, about one-fourth of a mile from the house, and led down into the icy water and baptized. When she came up out of the water, she said, "Oh, I am happy now." Feb. 7 she called for the elders and was anointed after which she said: "I am ready now to go home." She lived yet a little over six weeks, all of which time she seemed very happy, and died in the full triumph of a living faith. Funeral discourse by Eld. J. J Bowman assisted by the writer, from John 14: 6. JONAS HORNING.

BAKER.—In the Lower Twin congregation, Preble Co., Ohio, Feb. 16, 1891, Bro. David D. Baker, father of the above named sister, aged 57 years, 3 months and 22 days.

Bro. Baker had been troubled with heart disease for some time. He had gone to town to transact some business, and while there died in sanity. Funeral discourse by W. Q. Calvert, assisted by the writer.

JONAS HORNING.

SMITH.—In the Vermillion church, Cornell, Ill., sister Francis A. Smith, aged 63 years and 7 months

Deceased was born in Orange County, Virginia, July, 1828, and moved to Illinois four years ago. She has been a member of the Brethren church for about seven years, and lived a very devoted, Christian life until her death. She had been a sufferer for a number of years, but bore her suffering with Christian patience and fortitude. Seven children are left to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate mother. May they never forget her example of love and patience! A large concourse of people assembled at her funeral, to pay the last tribute of respect to her honored remains. May she sleep sweetly until the trumpet sound shall awake the righteous, and gather them into the kingdom of God. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. James R. Gish, of Roanoke, Ill., from John 14: 1 3 N. S. DALE.

WOLFF.—In the Silver Creek church, Ohio, Feb 25, 1891, Rosanna Wolff (nee Heflefinger), aged 56 years, 9 months and 18 days.

Deceased was born in Cumberland County, Pa, May 7, 1834, and was married to Philip Wolff, March 6, 1855

Sister Wolff united with the church about fourteen years ago. Her call was sudden, but we hope that our loss is her gain. She died with dropsy of the heart, and suffered only a few minutes. Funeral discourse from Matt. 24: 44, by the writer. GEORGE MAHLER.

FEES.—In the Mt. Etna church, Iowa, Dec. 27, 1890, sister Adaline M. J. Fees, wife of Bro. Samuel Fees, aged 69 years, 1 month and 27 days. Funeral services by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

Deceased was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 28, 1821, and was married to Bro. Samuel Fees April 10, 1842. She moved to Iowa, sometime after, with her husband and family, and in February, 1866, united with the Mt. Etna church, where she lived with her husband until the time of her death. She leaves a husband, two daughters, two sons and many relatives to mourn her death. She was a kind and affectionate wife, a loving mother, and a good and kind neighbor.

ISAAC BARTO.

FEES. In the Mt Etna church, Iowa, March 16, 1891, Bro. Samuel Fees, aged 74 years, 7 months and 22 days. Funeral services by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

Deceased was born at Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 22, 1816, and was married to Adaline M. J. Bias, April 10, 1842. Five children,—three sons and two daughters,—blessed their union. One son preceded his parents to the spirit world. Two sons and two daughters, with many relatives, mourn his death.

Bro. Samuel was much afflicted for about fourteen years, and the greater part of this time confined to his room and bed. His sufferings were great at times, but he submitted to all with the greatest of Christian patience, praying often that the Lord would call him from this world to the better one above.

ISAAC BARTO.

KISTER.—At Wiota, Wis, March 10, 1891, Isaac Kister, aged 76 years, 5 months and 8 days.

Deceased leaves a sorrowing, aged companion, six children, besides grandchildren, neighbors and friends, to mourn his departure. Funeral services by the writer from Rom. 6: 23. ALLEN BOYER.

BIGLER.—At Tyner City, Ind., March 20, 1891, John Franklin Bigler, son of Bro. Henry and sister Mary Ann Bigler, aged 3 months and 8 days.

Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. Jonathan Wageman, from 2 Kings 4: 26. S. N. EVERSOLE.

WOLF.—At her home, near Mount Morris, Ill., March 16, 1891, of consumption, Charlotte C Wolf, wife of David Wolf, and daughter of Abram and Caroline Thomas, aged 38 years, 11 months and 3 days.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Ford, of the Lutheran church, of which church our dear departed one was a member for eleven years.

Certainly we will all miss her more than tongue can tell. During her illness she spent many of her lonely hours, when unable to work, at the home of the writer.

About two months before her death, having a strong desire to receive help, so as to remain with her family a little longer, she went to Chicago, and remained there five weeks. Just two weeks before her death she came home, much discouraged, and very weak, but expressed a willingness to go at the call. She leaves a husband, two sons, a dear father, two sisters, four brothers, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. May we all prepare for the solemn change that awaits us all, that we may be permitted to meet dear Christian friends, and ever to be with our Blessed Savior, who is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. LIZZIE THOMAS.

SANDY.—In the Wacanda congregation, Ray Co., Mo, March 20, 1891, Bro. Edward J. Sandy, aged 29 years, 5 months and 20 days.

Bro. Sandy was born Sept. 30, 1862, in the Shenandoah Valley, Va., where his parents and most of his relatives now live. He came to this country about ten years ago. He leaves three brothers and one sister here, in the same congregation, who, like himself, united with the church since they came to this country.

Bro Sandy has always been an earnest worker in the church. He was our foremost leader in church music, and lacked no energy in Sunday-school work.

On the Sunday when he was taken sick he was at church and proposed to organize Sunday-school on the next Sunday, but it was postponed on account of his sickness. We lose a faithful brother, but we hope that our loss is his gain. Funeral services from 1 Thess. 4: 14, by Bro. S. B. Shirkey and others.

J. H. SHIRKEY.

REAM.—In the bounds of the Quemahoning congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., Dec. 7, 1890, sister Elizabeth Ream, aged 67 years, 4 months and 2 days. Funeral services by the writer.

VALENTINE BLOUGH.

KAUFFMAN.—In the Shipshewana church, LaGrange Co., Ind., Feb. 21, 1891, sister Anna, wife of Bro. Harvey A. Kauffman, aged 24 years, 5 months and 12 days

Sister Kauffman was a rather exemplary member. That she was esteemed in the church and outside, was demonstrated on the day of her burial by the very large congregation of neighbors and friends, who were present to weep with those who wept. Sister Kauffman leaves a husband and three children to mourn her sudden departure.

Funeral occasion was improved by the writer from Heb. 11: 16, to a very large and sympathizing audience BENJAMIN LEER.

FRANTZ.—At Cerro Gordo, Ill., March 17, Walter, infant son of brother M. D. and sister Jennie Frantz, aged 7 months. Funeral services by Eld. M. J. McClure.

SARAH KUNS.

MARQUIS.—In the Quinter church, Kans., March 14, 1891, of pneumonia, Bro. Wm. K. Marquis, aged 58 years, 11 months and 9 days.

Funeral services from 2 Cor. 5: 1. Bro. Marquis was a minister in the second degree and, by his kind manner and chaste walk, had won many friends, as was witnessed by the large concourse of all classes of the community in attendance at the funeral. He had come among us from Randolph County, Ind., only a little over five months ago. As a physician he was skillful, and had a growing practice. He leaves a wife and seven children here, and some children in Indiana. He expressed a willingness to go, if such be the Lord's will. Peace to his ashes!

B. B. WHITMER.

VEACH.—At 618 East First St., Des Moines, Iowa, March 15, 1891, Bro. John D. Veach, aged 60 years.

Deceased was born at New Castle, Delaware, in 1831, resided for a number of years in Blair County, Pa, and also in Knox County Ohio. Later he removed to Iowa, finally settling in Des Moines. He had been an active minister of the Brethren church for about twenty-five years. While living at Dallas Center he was engaged in the commission business. About one week prior to his death he remarked, "Well, if ever I felt prepared to die, I do now." Deceased leaves a wife and seven children, among whom is the little, afflicted Ada, who can neither talk nor walk, and who has been for years the object of his most tender care and solicitude.

Funeral services by Samuel Coughanour, of the Brethren church, from 1 Cor. 15: 19, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." Interment in Woodland cemetery.

C. NYSEWANDER.

REISH.—In the Pleasant Hill church, Macoupin Co., Ill., at the residence of Jonathan Brubaker, March 8, 1891, of scarlet fever, Lola Belle, daughter of sister Ella Reish, aged 2 years, 9 months and 29 days.

Deceased was born near Quinter, Gove Co., Kansas. All that love could do was done. Lola was a bright, expanding flower, but the Lord saw proper to transplant her in his higher garden, where storms of trouble and sorrow can never affect her, but to the bereaved mother it is a double stroke, for seven months previous, the husband and father,—Joseph M. Reish,—died near Quinter, Kansas. Two little boys remain to cheer the life of their mother. We mourn not as those who have no hope, and resignedly say, "Father, not my will but thine be done. Funeral services improved by Bro. Michael Flory from Isa. 35: 10. JAMES WIRT.

CAMPBELL.—In Brownsville, Md., Feb. 28, 1891, of an internal disease, after suffering for nearly two months, sister Elizabeth Campbell, aged 58 years, 7 months and 17 days.

She leaves a husband, three daughters and one son to mourn their loss. She requested to be anointed, which was done on the evening of Feb. 21. Interment at Brownsville. Services by the Brethren from Heb. 13: 14. C. W. CASTLE.

CLEMENT.—In the Sandy church, Stark and Columbiana Counties, Ohio, March 15, 1891, Bro. Wm. L. Clement, aged 23 years and 7 days.

Willie, as he was familiarly called, never tasted the sweets of robust health. Willie would have been an orphan, indeed, had it not been his good fortune to receive the maternal care of a devoted, Christian stepmother, whose godly walk and chaste conversation helped to lead him, at the early age of fourteen years, to embrace the dear Savior. His father,—Eld. Jno. A. Clement,—preceded him a little over five years to the spirit world. Willie was a devoted student and a successful teacher. His presence and help were highly appreciated in Sunday-school, in general church services, and council. In all these varied and responsible relations the dear brother, agreeable to his funeral text, will be missed. The text was 2 Sam. 20: 18, latter part, "But to live in hearts we leave behind us, is not to die." A large and sympathetic congregation met on the occasion of his burial. Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Brethren.

EDWARD LOOMIS.

McCONNEL.—In the bounds of the Maple Grove church, Norton Co., Kansas, March 4, 1891, daughter of friend Riley and Rosa McConnel, aged 7 months.

Funeral services by the writer from Matt. 18: 3. Our prayer is that the parents may prepare to meet their little babe over there where parting is no more. J. R. GARBER.

FRANCE.—Within the bounds of the Clear Creek congregation, Huntington, Ind., March 3, 1891, friend William France, aged 24 years, 3 months and 22 days.

Deceased was accidentally killed at Lima, Ohio, while working on a freight train. Funeral services were held by the writer to a large concourse of neighbors from 1 Sam. 3, "There is but a step between me and death." He leaves a wife and one child.

Doctor Koch's Discovery.

Dr. Koch's great remedy seems to prove efficacious in those cases where the patient has contracted consumption in low lying countries,—almost all the level European districts where the disease is traceable to purely climatic conditions, the moist atmosphere being a fine breeding region for the microbe. But in the high and dry altitude traversed by the Union Pacific, the Original Overland Route, consumption not only can not exist but is surely curable in its early stages. And this is testified to by thousands who have regained health and strength in the life-giving air of the Mountains. 7tS

That Brilliant American.

Samuel Bowles, the famous editor of the Springfield Republican, said, in recording his impressions of the Puget Sound Country:

"Up here, above the latitude of Quebec and Montreal, we basked in the smile of roses that are even denied to us in New England. Here, within the circle of the softening sea, reigns a year that knows no zero cold, and rarely freezes water or snow; that winters the fuchsias and the most delicate roses, English ivies and other tender plants, and summers them with rioting luxuriance; that grows the apple and the pear and the small fruits to perfection."

The Puget Sound Country is a wonderful agricultural country awaiting developmen There is nothing open to the home seeker to compare with it and it is the future goal of the great army of home seekers. In healthfulness it is wonderful and in productiveness unsurpassed. Thousands last year journeyed to this charmed region over the Union Pacific, the original overland route, and thousands more will go this year. 7tS

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

THE season for opening the Sunday-school in the country churches is now here, and we hope that, as soon as practicable, every church where a Sunday-school can, at all, be organized, will open one and throw around it every influence that will be for good. Do not wait for others to make the move in this work, or, because you can not have a large school, unite with other churches and have a union school. It is a common experience, we believe, that in such schools our church generally comes out behind. There is a kind of union with which we, as a people, can not afford to unite. The basis is short of what true Christianity requires, and yet it has enough of a show of religion to make it attractive and deceptive.

For our schools to get this "union Sunday-school literature," is very little better than to have union Sunday-schools. It is really about the same thing, and we wish our people would give this matter due consideration. All Sunday-school papers and quarterlies, published as undenominational, are of the union stamp. They publish only that which is considered essential by all denominations, and omit the "non-essentials" which we hold as being among the essential doctrines of the Scriptures. If we expect and desire to maintain the whole truth, it must be taught in our Sunday-schools as well as in the public preaching. Because a thing is said to be cheap is no good reason for taking it. The paper and the printing may be cheap, but the teaching they do may prove exceedingly dear.

We know of a father who, a few years ago, had a son whom he wished to send to school, but refused to send him to a Brethren's school because, he said, it cost too much. There was a school of another denomination that offered his son a free "scholarship," which meant free tuition. Because of this cheapness he decided to send him there. After his son attended that school eighteen months, he came home a member of the church which the school represented. This opened his eyes to cheap schools, and he was greatly distressed and would have given half or more of all he was worth to undo that which he had foolishly done to save a little money, but it was too late. The same mistake is still being made by some of our parents in deciding where to send their children to school.

That which is sown will bring its harvest and must be reaped. The same may be said in the choosing of our Sunday-school literature. If money cheapness is the only consideration you can get it, as it is manufactured by the millions,—like the Yankee's razors, they are made for sale,—and if we feed our children on it they will grow like it. It becomes their thoughts, their language and their life. Hence the importance of carefully selecting the books, papers and quarterlies for our school.

Then, the officers and teachers form another subject for careful consideration. A badly officered and taught school may be worse than none at all.

The advantages of Sunday-schools are not in meeting together on Sunday, but they are the outgrowth of the teaching, no matter how it comes,—whether it be through the literature used or the teaching done by those who teach. The teacher, after all, is the great power for good or evil over the class taught.

Our Sunday-schools should be considered an important part of the church work—as it truly is—and our prayers should be, that the Lord may make them a power for good.

First impressions are most lasting, and as the twig is bent so is the tree inclined. Let us see that these first impressions be for Christ and the bending be towards the right. This is our work, our mission, and we ought to be faithful to the important charge entrusted to our care. The future of the world and the church depends on how well we do our work.

THE SWINGING DOOR.

EVER since we have been old enough to walk, we have been swinging doors. And the kind of doors we have been swinging has had much to do with what we are to-day. A door, in its ordinary sense, is that part of a building which separates the without from the within, and while the without may be s[illegible] the observance of he within represents all the different shades of the good and the bad, so that the doors which we swing may be a good index to our character and the life we live.

We were unusually impressed with this thought not long since, while standing, for a few minutes, across the street from a saloon. The door was on a continual swing, as there was a continual stream of people passing in and out,—young and old, rich and poor. Most of them were of the latter class because of the large number of times they had already swung doors of this kind.

Who were they? Some were boys that ought to have been within the doors of the home; some young men taking their first steps on the downward road; some, those bitten by the serpent of sin. Others were young men of promise, whose parents were waiting with aching hearts for their return to the fireside and the place of safety. Others were husbands who had taken upon them the sacred vow of love and affection as husband. We were made to think of the homes which these husbands represented. Only a few short months [illegible] years ago these trusting ones gave their hearts, their affections and their lives to these men who were so kind, so considerately attentive that they seemed happy only in the presence of these, the objects of their choice. But how great the change now! Instead of hurrying home from their work and their places of business that they might enjoy the society of those whom they pledged to love and protect until death, they seek the bar-room, the gambling house and the saloon. There, with the vulgar, the profane and the rabble they pass their evenings. Why all this? They have been swinging the wrong doors—have learned to do so while young. The habit was then formed, and those who learn to swing these doors while young, generally continue to swing them through life, if not cut short by being compelled to pass through the doors of the prison and the cell and, perhaps, end by swinging into death.

All over our land,—every-where, in towns and cities,—are doors swinging into the bar room, saloon, houses of ill fame and sin. And those who swing them are entering the broad way that ends in poverty, shame, death and eternal ruin.

We are glad to note that there are other doors that speak better for those that swing them, the door to the home, the Sunday-school, the church and the school. These are the doors that we should encourage and teach our children to swing. And if this is faithfully attended to while they are young, they gain entrance to that way which leads to prosperity and success in this life and to joys eternal in the world to come.

Yes, there is a way that seemeth safe, but the end thereof is death. Guard well against that way and be sure that your children do not form the habit of swinging the wrong doors.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

ENSHRINED.

WITHIN the secret chamber of my heart
I built a costly palace, wond'rous fair.
A golden throne loomed in its midst: thereon,
I bade the idol of my soul abide.
It was my god; and low before its shrine
I daily knelt in reverence and awe.
Through sunny morn and glowing noon it sat
Serene But, when the dark'ning tempests shook,
My *Ai*r baking powder. Higher as but clay.
Yet, — Latest & C. secret chamber of my heart
A fairer, grander Idol sits enshrined.
His name is Love; and on his stately brow
A diadem of royal splendor gleams.
His shrine is high above the mould'ring throne,
Where now my god of dust lies shattered low.
He rules my life; yet changeless evermore
His voice is gentle and his law is mild.
When weary with the toil and pain of earth,
He clasps me fondly to his breast, and bids
Me drink the flowing sweetness of his love
Until my yearning soul is satisfied.
When faint, he bathes my brow, and gives to me
With his kind hand the blessedness of rest.
When sad, he lifts from me the weight of grief,
And promises to cheer my heart alway.
O, thrilling rapture! Wondrous joy, to know
He will not perish, nor his shrine decay!
Forever and forevermore he will Abide with me—the great Eternal God!

WHAT REASON YE IN YOUR HEARTS?

BY LIZZIE H. DELP.

"If faith with reason never doth advise,
Nor yet tradition leads her, she is then
From heav'n inspired; and secretly grows wise
Above the schools, we know not how, nor when."

MEN brought one who was sick of the palsy, and let him down through the tiling, feeling sure that the power of Christ would heal him. Their faith was not in vain. Christ forgave his sins, and healed him. Then the Pharisees began to reason, because Jesus forgave this man's sins. They said this man is guilty of blasphemy. But Jesus gave them this reply, "What reason ye in your hearts? Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?" Surely the power that can raise the dead, and heal the sick, comes from God, and God can forgive sins also. But they reasoned in their hearts, as Naaman did before he was healed, and as Saul did when he disobeyed the command of God, as thousands do to-day who do not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. They reiterate the old cry of Nicodemus, "Master, how can these things be? We exercise faith in the common affairs of this world every day of our lives. Why not lay hold on God's promise, and rest secure? Why not trust the Lord implicitly and never recognize the mysteries of God's Word, but believe, and trust him fully without reasoning in our hearts?

Jesus asked the disciples, "Whom do men say, that I the Son of Man, am?" All the prophets had foretold his coming. He taught as never man spake, he wrought miracles. Surely the reply would be, "Thou art the Messiah." But the guilty conscience of Herod Antipas made him confess, "It is John the Baptist, risen from the dead." Some, who heard his terrible denunciations, and others, who listened to the precious words of love, thought he must be one of the prophets. Only the disciples said, "Thou hast the words of eternal life." The Pharisees demanded a sign that they might know he was come from God. This appeal was made out of curiosity, or hatred, or unbelief. Hearts that could witness Christ's daily ministry unsoftened and uninfluenced, would not be converted. A wonderful sign from heaven would have been one more theme for them to reason upon. Stubborn unbelief will never give way simply to portents and wonders.

Our faith in God and Christianity to-day is not a blind superstition. We see that the darkness has become light, we see hospitals and charitable institutions in the world to-day instead of the bloody amphitheatres of the past. We see atheists converted by the grace of God, and pagans and idolaters become saints. These are but a few of the mighty results of God's eternal plan, a few of the scenes in the great drama of Christianity, played through nineteen hundred years.

"The child like faith that asks not sight,
Waits not for wonder, or for sign,
Believes, because it lives aright,
Shall see things greater, things divine.

"Heaven to that gaze shall open wide,
And brightest angels to and fro
On messages of love shall glide
'Twixt God and Christ below."

When Jesus gazed upon the blackness of the stormy waves, and quelled the storm with "Peace be still," the disciples and awe-struck sailors whispered, to one another, "What manner of man is this?" Reason might strive to account for it, by the inevitable workings of natural forces. Faith would reply, "It can be only the Christ." He who believes, he who knows how God hears and shelters his children at all times, will feel and know that the word of Jesus stilled the waters of that inland lake.

We can rejoice in the Lord alway if we have perfect trust in him. "And in the last hour when all faculty in the broken spirit shall fade away, and sink into inanity, imagination, thought, effort, enjoyment,—then will the flower of belief, which blossoms even in the night, remain to refresh you with its fragrance in the last darkness."

THE RELATION OF "WORKS" TO THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

BY D. C. MOOMAW.

THOSE who have been attentively reading the "GOSPEL MESSENGER" recently, have not failed to observe an undercurrent (undertows are sometimes dangerous) of sentiment which promises to develop opposition attitudes on the subject of the "relation of works" to the plan of salvation. An analysis of the several positions assumed by the seemingly antagonistic champions, shows about the following diversity of opinion, to wit:

1. "Faith only is essential to salvation."
2. Works for disciplinary purposes, conjoined with faith, are essential to salvation.
3. Works per se are fundamental, conjoined with faith, in the plan of salvation.

Without the faintest inclination or purpose to "take sides" in this controversy, I will essay to show what amount of plausibility there exists in support of each of the above designated positions.

I will say, in the outset, that I approve, in a measure, of such brotherly controversies. The absence of them shows a mental stagnation not favorable to the acquisition of knowledge, a kind of mental "dry rot" that breeds the unlovely progeny of self-complacence and self-conceit. We must, however, cultivate the grace that will help us bear contradiction with equanimity of nerve and temper. He who can not do that, should spend more time on his knees and less at his desk.

Life is a school, and we are all teachers and learners. Knowledge is boundless and infinite, and agitation is the agency that propels the ship of knowledge onward. We are always learning and unlearning, and it is just as hard to unlearn an old error as to learn a new truth. They who fancy they have "found it all out" will be amazingly surprised when they get to heaven and the Great Teacher places them at the foot of the primary classes. Witness for example, the wondrous modesty and humility of the great apostle Paul, who was brought up at the feet of the greatest scholar of his time, and who spent three years in the profound schools of Arabia (as is supposed), and who graduated in the third Heaven, when giving advice on a great social problem,—that of marriage—says, "I think." Who could have more positively asserted the infallibility of human judgment, yet who more humbly disavows it? So let us always qualify our deliverances by a modest: "I think." Paul expressly says, "We know nothing as we ought to know it." But let us proceed to our subject.

I think that each contestant is right to a given extent. Faith only secures salvation where, for evident reasons, works are impossible. The case of the penitent thief illustrates the truth of this proposition. As the brethren have always preached, in such cases, "God takes the will for the deed."

Death-bed salvation is possible by faith only. This we think is the exception to a general rule, and no more implies that all men are judged thereby, than that any man could slay a thousand men with the jaw bone of a donkey because Samson did it, or that any man should aim a dagger at the heart of his child and expect God to restrain him, because of Abraham's example, as a poor fool did in Massachusetts some years ago, and who mourned a slain son in consequence. So, brethren, please do not give utterance to a doctrine that is not taught in the Bible, one which weakens men's faith in our dependence on the Word of God, already near unto death in their hearts, one which is leading thousands sleeping to their eternal ruin.

Some years ago I was disputing with a Methodist friend, on a point of difference between our denominations, and at a certain point in our discussion he triumphantly exclaimed, "I have a book which will convince you of your error," and to the "book" we appealed. It was the classic "Club-axe." I first looked at the preface and introduction, and found the startling proposition, "We are saved by faith only" as the title of one chapter. To the consternation of my confident friend I abruptly and contemptuously closed the book and returned it to him with the declaration that "I would not argue with a person, or accept as authority a book, that takes issue with God's Word."

As an abstract and general principle, a living or working faith is an essential element in any effort to serve God or to succeed in any other work. It is the primary, fundamental principle, first, among the agencies of salvation, for "without faith it is impossible to please Him." Second, "Works are for Disciplinary Purposes."

By "works" we allude to the every duty that we owe to everything in heaven and in earth, a doctrine that is sometimes called "the science of human duty, as definitive of the term "religion." I think it includes them all, ritual, moral, etc. It seems to me when it is announced that "in the judgment" every man is judged according to his works whether they be good or bad, it supports the proposition that moral as well as ritual works are the basis of the last great judgment. If our works are good, as set forth in Gal. 5: 22, 23, such as love, joy, peace, long-suffering, etc., we will be approved, or if they are bad, as described in Gal. 5: 19, 20, 21, we will be condemned. This seems to affirm the correctness of my proposition, and if it does, then those who advocate the second theory are correct, for every good act disciplines us to additional good acts and every bad deed trends the body and soul to further kindred deeds.

We live and grow by that on which we feed. The more good deeds we do, the more love we have for such work and the more desire to repeat them, until we get full possession of the image of him who "went about doing good." The more bad deeds we do, the more love and desire we have to repeat them, till we have all the lineaments of him who "is only evil continually." This is strictly and essentially "disciplinary."

But we ask and answer the question, ' Are they each and all essential to salvation?" They are essential to bring us into the perfect image and likeness of Christ, but the loss of some of them, through adverse environments, such as social, national, racial and organic and other influences, may not hinder our ultimate entrance into heaven, but they will hinder us reaching the glory of a star of the first magnitude. Among all the myriad heavens and mansions which are preparing for us, an appropriate place will be arranged for each grade of Christians, according to their achievements in the line of soul and body purification and development.

These remarks apply to that class of works, belonging to the ethical Scriptures. What of the ritual, such, for instance, as baptism, feet-washing, the kiss, etc?

I maintain that some are symbolical, such as baptism, which represents the cleansing, purifying effects of the Holy Spirit, some are commemorative, as the cup and loaf, some are disciplinary, as feet-washing, which, as the Brethren affirm, teaches humility, as well as illustrates it (but it does not illustrate the highest form of humility, that of preferring others before ourselves), as the apostolic kiss, which is a teacher and token of Christian love, as the love-feast, which teaches and betokens our equality, etc.

Humility and love being cardinal and vital characteristics of Christianity, it becomes a question of importance to us whether a failure to practice the works of feet-washing and the kiss, which are evidently intended to cultivate and illustrate those virtues, will effect or prevent our salvation. Without affirming or denying the proposition, I feel perfectly justified in saying that in the process of development or evolution from the condition of a babe in Christ, to one of perfect stature of men and women, they are essential. Before we reach them in the divine plan we are evidently "babes in Christ," but if we do not reach the "perfect stature,"—do not "grow in grace and knowledge (and practice) of the truth,"—the vital question is, "Are we ultimately lost?" In other phrase, "Can an immature Christian, old in years, but young in grace and knowledge,—a dwarf,—be admitted into the mansions above?"

I must conclude that they can, for the reason that, as there are grades in heaven, there are corresponding grades among those who will dwell therein. While some have great faith, some have little, yet that little will not bar them from the final rest.

The grades, referred to above, are evidently on the line of soul development. It could be on no other line. By the use and employment of the rituals, designed for our growth in grace, we attain to perfection; without them we fail to reach it, and the work of development must be taken up and prosecuted in the next state of existence. In the words of a venerable elder, "they will not (I say may not) have a place in the first resurrection." In the language of an apostle, "Their works shall be burned up, yet they shall be saved."

The third proposition, "Works per se are fundamental in the plan of salvation," will now claim our consideration. By the term "fundamental" we mean basic principles on which the structure of salvation rests. This view is evidently held by those who affirm that "there are no non-essentials in the Bible." This is correct if it relates to the work of growth or development, but not correct if it relates to salvation, in itself considered. All Scripture is necessary to our perfection, yet "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Faith and baptism are steps towards an end, yet, if we go no further, what poor, immature dwarfs we will be in the golden city by the side of the mighty giants and heroes who are now "keeping all the ordinances and commandments blameless!"

Catholicism from Rome says, "Works are per se vital and fundamental," and incontinently damns those who deny them.

Paul contradicts them by saying that "bodily exercise (works) profiteth little (let us have it, little or much) but a new creature," that is one whose heart is fashioned from Gal. 5: 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. Read these verses and see what kind of a "new creature" our Father wants his children to be.

We "live (grow) not by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Our interpolation is justified by the recognized fact that faith, repentance and baptism brings us into a state of Christian babyhood and "every word" brings us into a state of man and womanhood. We could no more develop our physical organism on bread alone, without meat, vegetables, fruits, spices, etc., than we can reach spiritual perfection on faith, repentance and baptism alone.

Now let us try and reach a proper understanding of the relation and office of the various factors in the plan of salvation to each other, and to their end and purpose. Let us not magnify one nor minify the other. Above all, let us possess our souls in patience while the controversy is on. We will be wondrously ashamed of our ignorance and self-conceit if, in the next state of being, we will find that none of us were right altogether, and none wrong altogether.

Again, we want to be very humble and we cultivate and illustrate it by washing one another's feet. Now is that state of humility essential to salvation, or will a lesser quantity be acceptable? We may have humility enough to wash a healthy Christian's feet; others may have only enough to prompt them to wash the feet of the sick or to "prefer others before themselves." At what point in the development or acquisition of this virtue do we reach a state of acceptance with God? That is the question.

We want to love our brethren, and the kiss avails to cultivate and illustrate that feeling. We can love without it,—to a certain degree, — but the question is, "Is that degree sufficiently near the mind and will of God to insure our salvation?" I maintain that perfection in love is only attainable by the use of this ordinance, but I do not aver that only the absolutely perfect will ultimately reach heaven. It is simply a question of growth and development from childhood to manhood. So with all the Scriptures that are designed for disciplinary uses.

Another office of "works," which illustrates their disciplinary character, is their cultivation and exhibition of faith. "Show me thy faith by thy works." "By works is faith made perfect." In this, the same law prevails as in the "work" of the cultivation of love and humility. The amount of faith is in exact proportion or correspondence to the amount or extent of works. It is simply a question of degree, of much or little faith, and I ask, "How much faith is necessary to save a soul?"—and answer, "As a grain of mustard seed." It comprehends the power and willingness of Christ to save us, and the exercise of repentance and the reception of baptism. These are the principles of the doctrine of Christ, as clearly enunciated by St. Paul in Heb. 6: 1, 2. "Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ let us go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance, faith and baptism."

The foundation being securely laid, as above stated, and as taught throughout this article, we set about to build the structure by a life of discipline in the employment of the Scriptures whereby we attain to perfection. Now let none ask the question, How much can we ignore and escape God's wrath? but, rather, How near his image can we attain by the observance of all? not, How far from perfection can we be admitted into God's presence? but, How high in the scale is it possible for the embodied soul to develop?

Henceforth the whole Christian life is disciplinary and the teachings and example of Christ are to that end. Let no man ignore or neglect them at his peril. Let us aspire to perfection and then we know our salvation is sure. They are for our good, else they never would have been placed on record, and while we contend earnestly for the shell or exterior, let us not forget that the vital principles are within. While thousands are idly dreaming of salvation by faith alone, other thousands are shouting themselves hoarse in advocacy of salvation by works, while they are strangers to the corresponding graces within. In the work of contemplated revision let the revising of our own lives in all things, as well as our doctrine, be prominent and God will be both pleased and glorified.

I do not think it is essential to our salvation that we must understand the relation that each factor in the economy of grace bears to the other, any more than it is essential to the salvation or sustenance of our body that we understand the chemical properties of the food that we eat, but it will be an infinite pleasure and we want all the pleasure we can get in this fleeting world.

I may have not made myself understood fully in the foregoing remarks, but, lest the faith of some be weakened I have studiously qualified important and vital statements. As of old we can not all bear all the truth. Feed the babes on milk,—don't choke them with meat. Some may think "our system needs revising." We have been steadily revising it, and by the grace of God the work of revision will keep going on, generation after generation, as it has been in the past generations, until we have grown from the young stalk in the hill to the perfect corn in the ear. So may it be!

PLAIN ATTIRE.

BY J. L. SWITZER.

The Princess of Wales dresses her daughters in the plainest possible way,—calicoes, ginghams, muslins, and flannels being the rigid rule.

No corsets, no tightness of any kind; and as for ornaments, such as rings, earrings, or bracelets, her Royal Highness would be astounded if such an idea were as much as mooted.

Just think of it, young ladies, here are three young princesses dressed "in the plainest possible way," whose adornment is that approved of God, the adornment of their minds and hearts. But no bangs or frizzes, not a single article of jewelry, no lace, no flounces; yet they are the healthiest and (we may add) among the wisest princesses in all the earth; their father has an income ten times as great as that of the President of the United States, and they themselves are favorites of the greatest queen living, on whose empire the sun never sets. Young ladies should remember that ribbons, feathers, and other ornaments on top of their hats, are considered a sure sign of a lack of brains under the hat.—Brethren's Evangelist, March 25.

How beautifully in sympathy with my view of godliness the above item runs,—all except the last clause. I would amend that to read "lack of brains of the proper quality," lack of the proper condition of heart, lack of fealty to the Bible, lack of proper training, lack of fine, good sense. Some massive heads are seen with "ribbons, feathers, and other ornaments on their hats." It can not therefore be a lack in the quantity of brain.

Quite frequently the exactly opposite position is taken, and our plain sisters are charged with lack of brain. But when the Princess of Wales sets the example of plainness, "and their father has an income ten times as great as that of the President of the United States, and they themselves favorites of the greatest queen living," then, why then, of course, it shows small brains not to follow suit.

Let me say in all sincerity to my dear, plain, ornamentless sisters in Christ, of whom my mother is one,—whose adorning does not outwardly appear; let me say, that as far as lineage is concerned, you and each of you, are the peer of any daughter of any princess living. You are the daughters of the greatest King living. You are the children of a King, who looks not upon the quantity of brain, but upon the quality of the heart, and as to possessions he says, "The silver and the gold are mine;" "the earth is mine, and the cattle on a thousand hills;" "whatsoever is under the whole heaven is mine;" "the heaven is his throne;" "the earth is but his footstool."

Consider, complacently, how does this compare with the possessions of the Queen of England?

There is something far more significant than quantity of brain in ornamentation. It is a condition of virtue. A proud heart can not be a virtuous one. There is almost invariably a measure of licentiousness accompanying great fashionable display, hence the stigma.

But the world is blind, when it concerns the rich. As they lead, the world will follow, no matter how far, and call it honorable. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." All honor be given to the Princess of Wales for setting such a good example.

"BLESSED ARE THE MEEK, FOR THEY SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH."—Matt. 5: 5.

BY J. H. PECK.

In a recent article in the Messenger it was intimated that the above Scripture does not mean what it says, but no effort was made to point out to the anxious inquirer, what it does mean. The language is found in Christ's famous "Sermon on the Mount," which is full of straight, practical, unequivocal truths, that everybody that believes in Christ, is willing to take just as it reads, with the exception of this little, mysterious fifth verse.

What is the matter with this fifth verse? It is this,—people who have the idea that they will go to heaven as soon as they die, can not reconcile this verse with their views. So they tell us it does not mean what it says, but they invariably fail to tell us what it does mean.

In the examination of this text, we do not deem it necessary to take up space to tell who the meek are. All can satisfy themselves on this point by consulting the dictionary. But shall we, if we come up to this qualification, inherit the earth? If so, when and how, are questions, vital and full of interest, to those who are concerned about the things which God has prepared for them that love him, for, while eye has not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man (in the natural or unconverted state), God hath revealed them to us by his spirit. 1 Cor. 2: 10.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." How? By actual possession; just as a son inherits his father's farm. In Psalms 24: 1 we read, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." "The promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Rom. 4: 13.

Now read the whole of Gal. 3 which winds up by saying, "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." What promise? I would not dare to take up the space in this article, that would be necessary to give the promises God made to Abraham and his seed, but I will give a few references which any one who is not familiar with this subject, would do well to look up and read for himself. Gen. 13: 14–17; Gen. 17: 8; Gen. 26: 1–5; Gen. 28: 13–15; Gen. 35: 11, 12.

Some one may say, "These Scriptures refer only to the land of Palestine and the time of its occupancy by the children of Israel,"—but wait. After pondering over the words forever, everlasting, possession, etc., follow me further. Read Ps. 115: 16, "The heavens are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men."

"Evil doers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." Ps. 37: 9. Read also verses 11, 22 and 29. "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever." Read also verse 34. Now turn to Prov. 2: 21, 22, "For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it."

But this brings us to our second point: "But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Ps. 37: 11. When? While the earth has been given to the children of men as a temporary possession. Ps. 115: 16. It was undoubtedly intended from the beginning to become the permanent inheritance of those who become Abraham's seed, through the righteousness of faith. Rom. 4: 13. For proof turn to Matt. 25: 34, "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Here we see that when the Lord laid the foundations of the earth, he had in view that it should be the inheritance of the people he intended to place thereon, and though it seemed as if his plans were frustrated by the transgressions of Adam and Eve, whereby sin and misery passed upon all, no sooner was this done than the Lord set to work to carry out his purpose on a new line, viz., righteousness by faith. We read that the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it, but the righteous shall remain in it. Prov. 2: 21, 22. But when? When the seventh angel sounds, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. Rev. 11: 15. When the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven (not up in heaven) shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Dan. 7: 27. When the Sun of Righteousness shall "arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 4: 2, 3. It will be when our daily prayer is answered, in which we pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," when the promise of the angel to the mother of Jesus is fulfilled, which was, "Thou shalt bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus; he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Now let us reflect a moment,—Did Christ ever reign on David's throne? No. Then that is yet to be. Was David's throne in heaven? No. Then we may expect Christ to reign in person upon the earth. Then it is when the meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

But shall this sin-cursed earth be the future abode of the saints? "Shocking," says one. Wait a moment! "By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished; but the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. . . . But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. . . . Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Pet. 3: 5–13.

Notice the following points: "The world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." Verse 6. But the terra firma remained; everything that was perishable by water, and was not miraculously preserved by the Lord, perished. So the tenth verse says, "The earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This does not mean that the earth shall perish by fire; but everything perishable by fire, shall be burnt up, excepting what the Lord preserves, while the earth itself shall be renewed and beautified for the saints to dwell in. "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying." Isa. 65: 17, 18, 19.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21: 1–4.

"For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain." Isa. 66: 22.

"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5: 9, 10.

At about this time will take place what is recorded in Acts 3: 20, 21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Matt. 13: 40–43 reads, "As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

Peter at one time seemed to consider over what the pay should be, for leaving all and following the Master. Jesus did not tell him as some preachers would, that he shall go straight to heaven when he dies, but he said, "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, . . and in the world to come (not in the heaven to come) eternal life." Mark 10: 29, 30.

Then shall also be fulfilled the promise of God to Moses, Num. 14: 21, "But as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord;" also the prophecy of Habakkuk, 2: 14, "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. . . . And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water. . . . And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; . . . but the redeemed shall walk there: and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35.

Now I will notice a few criticisms and close. In the same article that called my attention to this subject, the writer says, "The patriarchs confessed they were only strangers and pilgrims in the promised land. They looked for a city whose builder and maker is God." That is all right, but I have shown that when they come to this city, it will not be by going up to it, but by it coming down to them. Read again, Rev. 21: 2, 3.

The same writer also says, "Our Savior said, I go to prepare a place for you." Correct again, but in the next verse he says, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." John 14: 13. Now did it ever occur to our dear brother, that if the apostles and disciples of Christ would pass up to his immediate presence as they die, why he should have to come again to receive them unto himself? The thirty-third verse of the previous chapter explains it all, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye can not come; so now I say to you." John 13: 33. One more, "The meek do not desire to stay here." When the earth is restored to its Edenic beauty, as described by the Scriptures adduced, and Christ himself will be with them, and be their God, then the meek will be glad to inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

HERE A LITTLE AND THERE A LITTLE.

BY J. S. FLORY.

WELL, we are glad Bro. Crosswhite, of Tennessee, has sent out no uncertain sound in reference to the true meaning of the doctrine of anointing with oil, and prayer of faith for the restoration of the sick. We are puzzled to know why it is that, when persons are dangerously sick and want to get well, they, like Asa, apply to the physician instead of the Lord, and then, when they get dangerously sick and don't want to, or don't expect to get well, they apply to the Lord for help. Strange, is it not? Strange, too, when success attends the prayer of faith and the Lord does raise up the sick, no record of it is published; but when death follows it must be heralded forth on the wings of the press as something of interest. We never did think such mention was in anywise complimentary, and we hope for a turning over of a new leaf in this respect. How long until the Christian world will learn to put their trust more fully in the Lord as the Great Physician, and that anointing with oil is for the sick and not for the dying?

It is passing strange that brethren will go to Annual Meeting and use their best efforts to pass the decision they want passed, because they see a necessity for it, and then go home and pay no regard whatever to other decisions passed through the influence of a multitude of counselors,—take for instance the decision passed at last Annual Meeting in reference to ordaining elders.

Educate the people in the line of Gospel liberty and duty, and the result will be Gospel work. Such were our thoughts while reading the editorial remarks in last GOSPEL MESSENGER, in regard to women's work in the church. Persons, prone to old time prejudices, should paste the article in their scrap-book and read and pray over it intelligently for a week or two.

It is now in order to send on and secure a room if you expect to attend next Annual Meeting. How is it, dear reader, have you made arrangements for a room in heaven—over there, where the great reunion of loved ones takes place? May I not know that there is a mansion ready, waiting, "in the skies?" Yes, Jesus has sent a message,—"Where I am you may be also!"

When we see charitable donations noted and credited to "a brother" or "a sister," we always feel to "thank God and take courage," that the true spirit of Christ does so thoroughly prevail in the hearts of some of his people, at least, and that the command, "Sound not a trumpet," or "let not your left hand know what your right doeth," in the minds of some means just what it says.

If we think only the Lord's people are doing missionary work, we are mistaken. The devil is the most successful of all missionaries. He has a larger army under him than ever a Napoleon or a Grant had. For every Bible sent to heathen lands, Satan sends one hundred gallons of rum! O shame! where is there any power in our boasted civilization!

THE SEA OF DOUBT AND GROUND OF FAITH.

BY J. HANNA.

Number One.

THE condemnation of unbelievers is given in terms too plain to be misunderstood; but the question may arise with many, whether we are to be punished for that beyond our power to control. Without inconsistency we answer, "No," but whether we are to be punished for that contrary to our will or our endeavor to control, is a different question. "But it is not contrary to our will or our endeavor to believe," would doubtless be the confident claim of many unbelievers. However, before becoming sure upon that point, let us examine the method of procedure which has led to the opinions obtained.

Have you allowed him, upon whom you desire to believe, to be tried in a foreign and hostile court,—a court whose proceedings are unregulated by Divine Law,—where judge, jury and witnesses alike, are enemies, unrestrained by the love or fear of God? If so, you may well question the wisdom, if not the motive of your method; for there are those whose law admits of no evil, even for the promotion of good, Rom. 3: 8, who, as did their Exemplar to one of sinking faith, extend a helping hand; and reason can work to as good advantage, seeking to establish the truth of Revelation, as trying to prove it false; and failing of the same, there would yet be time to remove its restraint against sin, and loose to the four winds our nature, already so prone to err.

Ere trifling in such a serious matter, the question of benefit should be considered:

> While Truth remains,
> Behold its gains;
> Could Truth be blotted out,
> What have you then
> To promise men,—
> Scorners, that man has not?

Ah, infidelity has nothing to offer but relief, by rejection, from procuring a title clear to that offered from another source. Its only advantage would lie in Christians being mistaken, who, as we will see, have a sure foundation; hence its boasted freedom were more easily recognized, as license's relief for apprehension.

The value of time should also be considered by those who would make their calling and election sure. It would waste many precious moments to wade through infidel stories now extant, to say nothing of those in the process of invention,—if the wisdom of the serpent be not exhausted. Ah, if those who are on their last day's journey, were to catch a glimpse of the dark river before them, how many neglected duties would rush in to gain a place in a day, which, God grant, we may spend in reviewing completed work!

Another point to consider is the absence of a cause of mistrust. Our Savior offered himself a sacrifice for us, asking nothing in return but the requirements of faith, or acceptance of the sacrifice, and righteousness as necessary to our acceptance.

No one has a right to a wrong opinion—the idea is absurd; the ruins resulting from the trial of false theories disprove such right, as,—like any false claim,—it does not hold, while success is always the proof of the virtue of faith, in the practicable, or in the true.

SOME say that "wealth is power," and some that "knowledge is power;" above them all I would assert that "truth is power." Wealth can not purchase, talent can not refute, knowledge can not overreach, authority can not silence her; they all, like Felix, tremble at her presence. Fling her in the most tremendous billows of popular commotion; cast her into the sevenfold heated furnace of the tyrant's wrath; she mounts aloft in the ark upon the summit of the deluge; she walks with the Son of God untouched through the conflagration. She is the ministering spirit which sheds on man that bright and indestructible principle of life, light, and glory, which is given by his mighty Author to animate, to illumine and to inspire the human soul, and which, like himself, is "the same yesterday, to-day and forever." When wealth, and talent, and knowledge, and authority, when earth and heaven itself shall have passed away, truth shall rise like the angel of Manoah's sacrifice, upon the flame of nature's funeral pyre, and ascend to her source, her heaven and her home, the bosom of the holy and eternal God.—Sel.

YOUR CONVERSATION.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

"Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."—Philpp. 1: 27.

How intense was the desire of the apostle's heart for the stability and unity of the Christian church! "That ye stand fast in one spirit!" The Divine Spirit is doubtless referred to, which Christ promised to his disciples,—the spirit that leads into all truth, that comforts in the sorrows and woes of life, and by which believers are sealed till the day of redemption. This one Holy Spirit of God effects a unity of mind and oneness of purpose, in "striving together for the faith of the Gospel." Though there are diversities of gifts, they are regulated by the Divine Spirit in the most harmonious manner to subserve the righteous purposes of God. The faith of the Gospel comprises all the principles of the Gospel.

The apostle enumerates some of the characteristics of the Gospel in Col. 3: 12, 13, 14, "Put on therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering." Next we have the Christ-like, forgiving spirit. "And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness." All these golden traits pertain to the faith of the Gospel, but the leading element is charity. Paul culminates his catalogue of Gospel principles with that heaven-born and heaven-aspiring element,—love. Peter says, "Above all things have fervent charity among yourselves, for charity shall cover the multitude of sins." Charity believes and endures all things, revealed and enjoined in God's Word, and zealous continuance in all the external forms of religious service, without charity to animate the soul, and adorn the life and service, will ever be but a failure.

All the eloquent and logical discourses are vain and profitless, unless controlled by charity. This perfect and untarnished gift of God binds believers together, and effects a unity of mind in striving together for the faith of the Gospel, under the enlightening influence of the Spirit of Grace. It instills into the heart a love for the Brotherhood,—the general sentiment, order, usages and decisions of which are in harmony with the spirit and tenor of the Gospel.

Now let me humbly and lovingly say to the churches in my native country: Inasmuch as the Annual Conference is reaching out the hand of charity through the committee, appointed to visit you, not to domineer over you, but to entreat you lovingly to fall in line, "that we may stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel," consider their counsel, and weigh the solemn obligations of our short life! Oh, my heart breaks as I pen these lines, and I long for your security in grace, and ultimate salvation! "Oh, ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged. Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels. Now, for a recompense in the same (I speak as unto my children) be ye also enlarged."

There is no want of room in our hearts to receive you; we are actuated by love to reach out our fraternal arms to embrace you, but if there is a failure in our attempt at reconciliation, on the basis of the Gospel, it will be because your hearts are too narrow to receive us. We want you, we yearn for you, without the loss of one; but our striving together must be compatible with the requisitions of the Gospel. May God help the Annual Conference in her Christ-like endeavor to rescue the erring, and may her chosen committee be endued with the spirit of wisdom and love! May God help all the brethren to see the propriety of union and order in our beloved Fraternity, and being absent, may I hear of your affairs, "that you stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel." May God save the church!

THE MEEK.

BY WM. HERTZLER.

In No. 12, present volume, on page 181, I notice an article written by my dear brother, D. V. Long, from the Manor church, Md., which brings up a number of important thoughts before my mind. To some of them I will kindly give utterance for the benefit of all thinking minds, and to urge still deeper search into the literal and spiritual meaning of the sacred volume of the Bible.

Bro. Long refers to the pleasant exchange of views at their ministerial meeting on the subject, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." He tries to give both sides of the question more fully than I did, in my condensed note of the meeting. For this I give him credit, but, at the same time, wish to look a little deeper into the subject.

Those blessings of Christ on that memorable occasion,—nine in succession,—are treasures for the disciples to enjoy; and the question is still, when and where? "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of God." Does this refer only to a future state after this life, or should the poor in spirit enjoy also the kingdom of God now, right here? I say, Yes, to a great extent.

When the kingdom of God is mentioned, it has very seldom reference to the secular kingdom, for Christ says, "My kingdom is not of this world," hence he alludes in the above passage to the spiritual kingdom, which the new dispensation carries with itself. Christ ushered it into our and their immediate presence, as we learn from the several passages, "The time is fulfilled, the kingdom of God is at hand," etc. Again, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a grain of mustard seed;" "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven;" "The kingdom of God is within you."

Now, the above quotations do plainly show that there is also a spiritual kingdom right here on earth, to be enjoyed by the disciples of Christ, for Christ does, by the same figures, also explain the nature and principles found in the real kingdom of God, just now held up before our minds. What a renovating power and principle to impart consolation and the divine nature itself to all the poor in spirit! Not only is so much, in the lesson under consideration, for the poor, but the kingdom of God, if embraced, will bring forth a full disciple, having all the nine different characteristics announced by Christ, and consequently the kingdom of heaven is theirs. They are in possession of the kingdom within. It moulds, it fashions, it comforts, it reconciles, it makes rich, and if there is but one handful here, they trust in the Living God.

The widow, I presume, felt rich after all her living was in the treasury of God. Was not Elisha of old actuated by the same principle when Elijah, the man of God, came and threw his mantle on his shoulders, and when he offered his oxen as a burnt-offering to God, and his body as a servant? If the earth had possessed him, he would have said, "No, Bro. Elijah, you see I have here twelve yoke of oxen and so many acres of ground to plow yet and much business on hand, please excuse me for the present; at a more convenient time I will follow thee."

Look for a moment at Moses, raised up as the son of Pharaoh's daughter, taught in all the wisdom of Egypt, prince and heir to the crown, still he "esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." The strong confidence and the implicit faith in God, made him both rich and mighty in his day.

Let us come down to the present era. When God's kingdom approached the toll gatherer, was there not sufficient power to change his heart and mind, so that he could forsake the office and follow Christ? Yes, certainly. So did the sons of Zebedee forsake their father, the net and the ship for Christ's sake. Did they get poorer?

Without spiritual eyes, men are not able to see the riches and treasures contained in God's realm. My greatest friends are those who lend me the hand of correction; hence I will refer only to one expression in the article of my dear brother, where he says, "Many strong arguments were advanced contrary to our brother's views," etc.

Now this needs correction in this way: "All the points made in this article for the inheritance of the meek in the future, were granted by the writer as a secondary matter, to be enjoyed in the next world, but he held up the idea that many of the blessings of the kingdom are enjoyed prior to death, and that the participants in the blessedness of God in this life are on the record of God for the next life of enjoyment, when time is no more. Hence the disputants at the meeting did not differ on the latter thought, but somehow could not see so fully, eye to eye, on the first thought advanced. All discussion, however, passed off with the purest love entertained by all, especially by the Moderator of that meeting,—Elder David Long. As said in my former article,—meetings of the kind are a benefit to the church and the community at large.

THE RESURRECTION.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

No. 4. The Time.

The time of the resurrection is variously understood. The popular idea is, that the resurrection takes place immediately after death, that the saints enter upon their full reward at once, and that sinners will be immediately punished. If that were a fact, then the resurrection is going on continually, and is already largely in the past.

The Scriptures convey the idea clearly, that the resurrection takes place when Christ comes, at the close of this dispensation. Following, is some of the testimony, bearing upon the time of the resurrection.

"But should raise it up again at the last day." John 6: 39.

"And I will raise him up at the last day." Verse 40. Repeated in verse 54, same chapter.

"I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." John 11: 24.

"We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 16.

Not that they have risen, but they shall rise. All the above Scriptures point to the coming of Christ,—the last day, as being the time of the resurrection, clearly refuting the theory of immediate resurrection. The parable of the rich man and Lazarus is not a case in point of the resurrection, but was given to show how God would reward the innocent poor, and punish the wickedly rich in the world to come.

There are some who entertain the idea that when the body dies, everything pertaining to the body dies with it,—that body, soul and spirit go into the grave. If that were true, there could be no resurrection at all, for the reason that there would be nothing to resurrect from. Resurrection implies a state of partial death only. The vegetable world, during the winter months is dead, but only in part. That part above the ground may be dead, while that part beneath the soil, retains life, but sleeps during the months of winter. In the warm days of spring the life beneath the soil is quickened, and all is resurrected into new life. But if the root beneath the soil were likewise dead, then there could be no resurrection, but a new creation must take place before the vegetable world could grow again.

So in the death of the body. If every part of our being dies with the body, then there can be no resurrection, for the reason that there is no germ of life preserved from death, by which resurrection might take place. A new creation must take place, or the human race will become forever extinct, and then we could not tell in the new creation whether we ever lived here below or not, because nothing is carried over from death to the resurrection by which to prove identity.

This theory is unscriptural, unchristian and unreasonable. Christ prayed at his death, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." Luke 23: 46.

Here the spirit of Christ went up to the Father, while his body went down to the grave. Again, Stephen, at his martyrdom, prayed, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," Acts 7: 59, showing also the separation of parts at death, the one part going up, and the other going down.

The Scriptural testimony conveys the idea clearly, that the time of the resurrection will take place when Christ comes again, and that, at death, the spirit becomes the life-germ of all the life there was in the body, and retains that life asleep, from death, until it is awakened at the last sound of the trump.

The Scriptures mostly refer to the dead in Christ as having fallen asleep. If the spirits of saints did not fall asleep in Christ at death, then why is that term used? Why not say, "They have gone to heaven," or, "They are wholly dead in the grave?" Paul says, in 1 Cor. 15: 51, "We shall not all sleep." Again, in 1 Thess. 4: 14, "Them also that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him."

"But," one will say, "how can this be?" We answer, "It is as easy, and reasonable for the spirit to sleep out of the body, as it is for the spirit to remain inactive in the body, while the body is asleep."

When we sleep naturally we are unconscious, but we have life. So spiritually, at death, we fall sweetly asleep in Christ till the morning of the resurrection comes.

Another will say, "This presents such a gloomy view of the future. We must wait so long for our reward, before we can enjoy the fullness of the heavenly life." This objection, however, is not well founded. When we sleep we are not cognizant of time. When we are weary of the labors of the day, how sweet is the rest of evening! How pleasant the sleep! How short the night! How soon the morning has come! How we feel refreshed and invigorated, when we awake! Thus, when we are weary of the labors of our earthly day, when the sun of our life is sinking low, we long for the rest of evening, and fall sweetly asleep in Christ. Our sleep will be undisturbed, the night will seem very short. Though hundreds of years should pass, the beautiful morning will soon dawn. When we awake we will be invigorated with life through all eternity.

The question arises, "Where do the spirits go at the death of the body?" We can best answer this question by learning where the spirit of Christ went after his death. Jesus said to the penitent thief, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23: 43. From this we infer that the spirits of the sainted dead are received into Paradise,—a place of safety and rest,—to sleep on till Christ comes the second time without sin unto salvation. After the resurrection they enter upon their full reward. This is made clear by the following passage: "And behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 12. Here Christ brings every man's reward along, which could not be done, if every man received his reward immediately at death.

The Apostle Peter makes this point still more clear when he says, in 1 Pet. 1: 4, 5, "To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, . . . ready to be revealed in the last time." Here it is clearly stated that the inheritance-reward, the full enjoyment of heaven, will not be given until the last time—in the end, when Christ comes.

Paul, in 2 Cor. 12: 2, says of a man he knew, that he was "caught up to the third heaven." We give it as our opinion that the first heaven is the heavenly state here,—such as Paul speaks of when he says, "In heavenly places." Eph. 1: 3. The second heaven is Paradise, where the saints rest until the resurrection. The third heaven is the place where God dwells, and where all saints shall abide after they obtain their full reward.

From all these evidences, we are safe in saying that the resurrection takes place at the end of the Gospel dispensation, when the angel will stand with one foot upon the sea, and the other upon the land and swear by him that liveth forever and ever, that there shall be time no longer. Then the heavens will open, and Christ will appear with all the heavenly host, in power and great glory. Then the grave will yield her dead, and the sea shall roll its millions to shore. Then the saying will be fulfilled, "Oh death! where is thy sting? Oh grave! where is thy victory?"

Louisiana Items.

MARCH 12 we left Cabool, Mo., for the mission field in South-western Louisiana. We arrived at Evangeline on the night of March 14. Bro. S. A. Sutter was waiting to take us to his hospitable home. In a few days after our arrival we met Bro. Haughtelin at Welsh, the next station west of Evangeline.

March 20 we took the train for Jennings, five miles east of Evangeline, where there are six members living. We found Bro. William Funk prostrated by a relapse of La Grippe. He was much comforted in the thought that the Lord had opened the way that he might receive the anointing, which was attended to March 22. Brethren and friends, who have written him letters of inquiry about Louisiana, and have not received replies, will, by this time, know the reason.

We held our first service on the evening of March 22, in the public school building. We had a good audience and expect to continue each evening during the week. Our first service, at Evangeline, is announced for the 29th. There is already a request for preaching from Arcadia Parish. We praise the Lord for his care over us during our journey! S. A. HONDERGER.

Esterly, La., March 23.

Gleanings from the English River Congregation, Keokuk Co., Iowa.

THIS church held one of its most pleasant and, we hope, profitable councils, March 28. Two queries passed through the church to District Meeting. Bro. Joseph Sniteman was elected delegate to District Meeting from this church. The church also proceeded to appoint a correspondent for the GOSPEL MESSENGER.

The ministering brethren are making preparations to perform the yearly pastoral visit, as advised by Annual Meeting. We believe these visits can and may be made profitable, more especially where there are a good many young members, who have but lately enlisted in the good cause. It will certainly have a tendency to establish a close relationship between the ministry and the church.

The needy in the West, with other unfortunate ones, have been remembered, and help contributed, by the church and neighbors.

Our Sunday-school will be re-opened for the summer soon. May God abundantly bless it for good! PETER BROWER.

From Bijou Hills, S. D.

THE brethren and sisters of the above-named church held their quarterly council March 14, and as there was some unfinished business, which could not be completed on account of the unavoidable absence of some of the members, the church assembled again in council on the 28th. All matters, pertaining to the welfare of the church, were satisfactorily adjusted. We were compelled to disown one member who would not hear the church. God help him to see the error of his way! I think the church is in good working order, desiring to do the will of the Lord. To-day we were to meet to re-organize our Sunday-school, but the inclemency of the day prevented our meeting. The day began with rain and snow from the East. Now it is snowing quite fast. We hail this snow with much thankfulness, as we need much moisture to thoroughly saturate the sub-soil. We feel very hopeful for the coming season. February snows are quite all gone,—moistening the surface soil sufficiently to guarantee grain to germinate. To-day's additional blessing encourages us. Seeding is just beginning here.

The earnest little band here is determined to do all it can to build up and strengthen the cause. One thing we need is a place of worship. At present we occupy the old Grand Army Hall,—unfinished and unserviceable in cold weather. This we have but little assurance of holding long for church purposes. Had we not been cut short in our crops for a few seasons, we would have made an effort to build some refuge of our own. I believe that all,—if acquainted with our situation and the need we have of a house, -would give us some substantial encouragement, when solicited to do so.

While in Clay County, Iowa, on a committee of investigation, sister Sarah J. Brallier handed me one dollar for the needy. We return thanks for the same, and will do all the good we can with it. We were also glad to receive $36 from the Waterloo church, Iowa, which was distributed among the needy ones,—mostly of the church. A quantity of second-hand clothing and one barrel of provisions were also received.

The MESSENGER visits many of our homes, and if it fails to visit all the families of the Brethren, you may attribute it to the want of funds. Times in South Dakota, until our harvest can be made use of, will be a little hard to many. God will certainly remember the necessities of the needy in due time. May we only have patience to labor and wait. God bless the efforts being made by the church in relieving the helpless! We ask the prayers of the church for the work here.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, Baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - April 14, 1891.

ONLY seven weeks until Annual Meeting.

TWO were baptized at this place on last Lord's Day.

BRO. AMICK spent a few days last week at his old home in Indiana.

BRO. A. W. HAWBECKER changes his address to New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa.

BRO. J. W. METZGER, of Mulberry, Indiana, has moved to Cerro Gordo, Ill., where he should now be addressed.

BRO. URIAH LONG, of Merriam, Ind., wants the address of Jacob Long, formerly of Jackson, Clinton Co., Iowa. Who will favor him?

THE General Missionary Committee met here on the 7th inst., and transacted a considerable amount of business. Brethren Daniel Dierdorff and Simon Yundt met with the Committee and assisted with advice and counsel. We are glad to have our brethren assist us in this way.

BRO. J. E. FREDERICK, of Williamsport, Ind., asks an explanation on 1 Cor. 14: 35. He is referred to MESSENGER No. 11, where the subject is treated at some length in the editorial columns.

SISTER PRICE, wife of Bro. D. E. Price of this place, improves slowly. She is now able to walk about the house. Bro. David has remained at home nearly the entire winter. We missed him from our regular services.

BRO. B. F. MILLER, of Alpena, South Dakota, says he neglected to report a can of lard received with clothing from South Waterloo. The Willow Creek church of South Dakota received fifty dollars of the funds sent to Bro. Miller.

BROTHER AND SISTER ROYER expected to go to New Haven, Connecticut, to visit with their son-in-law, Bro. E. S. Young, who is taking a course in Hebrew and New Testament Greek in Yale University. Bro. Royer will also visit Harvard University before going to Pennsylvania.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER is quite ill. He came home from Iowa, March 26, suffering from a severe attack of La Grippe, and at this writing April 4, he is still confined to his bed. We hope, however, that he may speedily recover, and be able to take up the work he was compelled to give up on account of his sickness.

THE Brethren at Mound City, Mo., have appointed a committee to look after a minister to locate among them. They want a faithful servant of God,—one who is willing and able to labor to build up the cause of Christ,—one that will locate permanently with them. The church is willing to assist such a brother, if one can be found.

SOME nervous people anticipate war between Italy and the United States, on account of the deplorable tragedy which occurred in New Orleans sometime ago, in which eleven Italians were lynched, but we have no fears in that direction. The sentiments of peace are too strong, and the horrors of war too vivid among our people to hastily engage in a conflict with Italy.

THE following notice came too late for insertion at the regular place, so it is here given: "The Greenwood church, Texas Co., Mo., met in special council April 4, to make arrangements for the District Meeting, which will convene here April 23. The church also decided to hold a love-feast on the evening of April 24. We hope all the churches will represent by delegate, and remain with us during the feast and over Sunday."—J. J. Troxel.

NEXT week we hope to be able to give a summary of the Census of our church, as secured by the Government, for 1890. It will be interesting to study the report, and especially to draw a comparison between the Census of 1880 and 1890. There are over six hundred organized congregations in the Brotherhood, with about eight hundred houses of worship, valued at something over one million dollars. It will be found that, as compared with the Census of 1880, the church has made an increase in numbers.

BRO. A. L. SNOEBERGER, of Wichita, Kansas, says: "If no arrangements have been made with the Western Passenger Association for reduced rates to Annual Meeting, will you kindly urge the proper committee to do so for those of us who may wish to attend from this section of the country?" Applications have been filed with all the Passenger Associations for rates to Annual Meeting. The Central and Trunk lines have made a rate east of Chicago. We are urging the Western roads to do so at once, but they have not responded.

BRO. DANIEL DIERDORFF, of Franklin Grove, Ill., visited last week and preached for us. We were glad to have him with us, and hope he will come again.

BRO. DANIEL VANIMAN will start East in the course of a few weeks, and will spend the time until Annual Meeting, visiting the churches in the interest of the McPherson School.

BRO. D. B. GIBSON, writing from River, Ind., Apr. 6, says: "Closed meetings here last night on account of bad roads, with a splendid interest to the last. Six baptized. Praise the Lord!"

BRO. JOHN BRINDLE, of Martinsburg, W. Va., thinks it would be well to fix the date of holding our Annual Conference on the second Tuesday in June, and thus avoid the necessity of making a change when Whitsuntide comes early in May. It might be well to consider this question. The following table, compiled by Bro. Brindle, gives the dates on which Whitsuntide will come for the next nine years:

1892,.....June 5.	1896,.....May 24.
1893,.....May 21.	1897,.....June 6.
1894,.....May 13.	1898,.....May 29.
1895,.....June 2.	1899,.....May 21.

1900,.....June 3.

The Chicago Evening Journal has the following editorial item relative to the Western sufferers:

In the arid districts of Western Kansas, which nature never intended to be inhabited by civilized man, the crops have failed for several successive seasons, and the settlers, though they are well-nigh starving, have no means of escaping to a more bountiful country. The people of Wallace County lately held a mass-meeting and appointed a committee to repair to Kansas City in quest of relief. The 200 men present at the meeting were unable, it is said, to raise the sum of $2c needed to defray the expenses of the committee. Finally a man took his horse to a neighboring town and mortgaged it for the required amount. The committee has arrived at Kansas City, where some temporary relief may be secured, but the opinion is general that Western Kansas must be abandoned.

Unless irrigation can be successfully applied, we are of the opinion that the Journal is right, at least so far as the extreme North-western Counties are concerned. An occasional crop may be raised, but failures are so frequent that farming can not be made to pay expenses.

QUERISTS' DEPARTMENT.

Christ Our Intercessor, and the First-Fruits of them that Slept. Salutation. — Pensions. — The Unclean Spirits. – Spirits in Prison. — Did Paul Baptize the Twelve? Who is our Brother? – The Baptism of Suffering.

Will you please answer the following questions through the GOSPEL MESSENGER? Does Christ pray for Christians, and if so, in what sense doe he pray for them? How did Christ become the first-fruits of them that slept? F. N. MILLS.
Silverton, Oregon.

ANS.—1. When the Master was yet with his disciples, only a short time before his betrayal and death, he talked to them of the future and gave them many words of encouragement. He told them, that as yet, they had asked nothing in his name, but now "I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he shall give it you," and then he speaks these significant words: "At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you." John 16: 26. The expression "I say not unto you," is to be understood as meaning that there is no need of telling them again that he would pray for them. Only a short time before this he had said to them: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever." John 14: 16. The meaning is that they knew so well he would pray or intercede for them, that it was not necessary to mention it again. The New Testament abounds in the idea, that Jesus intercedes for his followers, and that, by his intercession or standing between us and God, we obtain the blessings of an everlasting salvation. Compare Hebrews 7: 25; Romans 8: 34.

As to how intercession is made, whether our High-Priest, having entered the Holy of holies, offers a prayer to the Father for his children, or whether the great sacrifice he made for us all on the cross is an everlasting intercession for us in his glorified person, as he sits on the right hand of God, we do not know, for the Scriptures do not clearly point out how it is done. But we do know, and we thank God for the blessed knowledge, "that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God," and that "we have an high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. 4: 15.

2. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. 15: 20. First-fruits refers to the beginning of anything, and Christ became the first-fruits of the resurrection from the dead. Not that he was the first that had been raised from the dead, for Lazarus, the widow's son, and a number of others were called to life by the Lord himself. They came forth with their natural bodies, but when Jesus Christ burst the bars of death, he came forth with an immortal body. His victory over death was permanent. Others who arose before him had to succumb to death again, but his glorified body could never taste death again. The victory was complete, and so he became the first-fruits of the glorious resurrection harvest.

3. D. L. MILLER,

Dear Brother:—Please explain through the MESSENGER Matt. 5: 5, who are the meek referred to, and what is meant by the clause, "For they shall inherit the earth." Does the Savior mean this earth on which we live? If so, when will that time be? D. N. ELLER.

The question asked by our brother has received some attention, recently, in the MESSENGER. In the present issue brethren Wm. Hertzler and John Peck give their views at some length on the subject. Instead of writing upon that topic at this time, we refer Bro. Eller to the articles abovementioned. We may at some time in the future, if time and space will admit, have something to say on the subject.

4. Editor Messenger:—Will you please answer the following questions in the MESSENGER?

(1) Is the salutation of the Holy Kiss considered a test of fellowship by the Brethren?

(2) Has the church a right to disown a member?

(3) What can be done with a member who is an injury to the cause, but does nothing for which a charge can be brought against him?

(4) Has a member a right to draw a pension from the Government? F. H. HEILMAN.

Allie, Iowa.

ANS. 1.—Yes, the church holds the salutation of the Holy Kiss as a Gospel requirement.

ANS. 2.—Yes. See Matt. 18: 17; Rom. 16: 17; 1 Cor. 5: 11; 2 Thess. 3: 6.

ANS. 3.—Bear with him as a weak member. Pray with and for him. Encourage him by kindly leading him nearer to Christ. Entreat him as a brother. If those, who are strong in the faith, will try the above remedy with the weak brother, there will be doubtless an improvement.

ANS. 4.—As we understand it, a member has a right to draw a pension from the Government. The fact that the pension is paid, is taken as evidence that the one who receives it is entitled to it. The Government looks very closely into every application made for a pension, and very many are rejected.

5. Dear Brother:—Will you please explain who the person is, spoken of in Mark 5: 3-4? The ninth verse says his name was Legion, but I do not fully understand it A. M. SHARP.

ANS.—The description given in the third and fourth verses, referred to in the query, is of a man who had an unclean spirit. Nothing is said about the man's name, hence we can not give it. In the ninth verse the unclean spirit speaks and says: "My name is Legion for we are many." The word Legion represents a large number, and because there were many of them the term was applied.

6. Bro. Jasper Blosser, of Enterprise, Ohio, asks for an explanation of 1 Peter 3: 19, 20, which refers to Christ preaching to the spirits in prison. We refer him to Bro. D. E. Price's article on this passage in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 11, page 70.

7. Dear Brother: 1. Will you please answer the following questions in regard to Acts 19: 5-7? Who baptized the twelve? Did Paul, or some of his helpers, and then Paul lay his hands on them?

2. Is it right to call every one that makes a profession of Christianity, brother and sister, when they are members of secret societies and attend places of amusement, that they are required to desist from and disfellowship before they can unite with the church of the Lord Jesus Christ?

LOTTIE AUSTIN.

ANS. 1.—It is altogether likely that some of Paul's associates in the work of preaching the Gospel, did the baptizing. We know from the apostle's language, 1 Cor. 1: 14-17, that he did not administer baptism very frequently, but left others attend to that work. His principal labor was to preach the Gospel, and this he did, while others administered baptism.

In one sense we are all brethren, having one common Father. Christ taught the fatherhood of God and the common brotherhood of humanity, and he manifested a love broad enough to take in the entire human race, so that Paul might well pray, that we, as the followers of Christ, "may be able to comprehend, with all saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth all knowledge, that ye might be filled with the fullness of God." We are to possess this same love, if we are ever to enjoy "the fulness of God." In this sense, with love in our hearts for all men, we may call them brethren. It was, doubtless, in this sense that Peter addressed his former religious associates on the day of Pentecost when he said: "Men and brethren." Stephen, when brought before the council, in opening his farewell address, just before his cruel martyrdom, speaking to those who were consenting unto his death, called them "men, brethren and fathers," and Paul uses the same words in making his defense before the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem. These words were doubtless used to express the fraternity of nationality, and the brotherhood of humanity.

But there are closer relations in this life than these expressed in the term brother, or brethren, as applied in the foregoing examples. We have the family relation, and the words brother, sister have a deeper significance here than where a general application is made of them. We can call a man by the name of brother when there are no ties of consanguinity between us, but in no sense can we apply the term as indicating the relationship of our own flesh and blood, except to the family circle. So, too, in the higher spiritual relation sustained by the sons and daughters of God, brethren and sisters, by adoption, of our Lord Jesus Christ, there is a bond of union and fellowship, only to be fully appreciated by those who enjoy the same communion. In this higher sense, only those of like precious faith, who have been born into the family, and enjoy the birthright to its full extent, are entitled to be called "brother" or "sister" in the full meaning of the word. We may apply the term to others, but as in the family relation, it can not be made to indicate the true relationship between members of the same church, only as applied to them.

8. Please explain through the MESSENGER Mark 10: 38, 39. Are we to understand that these two apostles had not been baptized, or that they were now to be rebaptized?

N. S. DALE.

ANS.—In the Scripture to which our querist refers, the Master is speaking of his suffering, and not of baptism in water. The question may be paraphrased in this language: Can you drink the cup of suffering that I shall drink of? and be baptized with the baptism of suffering with which I am baptized? In the garden the Master prayed that the cup might pass from him, and on the cross he was overwhelmed with suffering. Well might he refer to his sufferings borne for the sins of humanity as a baptism, and the figure grows stronger when we remember that baptism was a complete immersion in the water, being overwhelmed and buried in the water. His disciples would and did learn the full significance of these words very soon after his ascension. They drank of the cup and were baptized in suffering, as they went about preaching the Gospel. Many of them died the death of martyrs, and sealed their faith with their blood. The words of the Master: "Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with," were literally fulfilled.

CHIPS FROM THE WORK-HOUSE.

I AM at this date, April 8, permitted to sit in the MESSENGER office at Mt. Morris, Ill., and pen some "Chips." I came here to meet the General Missionary Committee April 7. The appearance of the shady campus, surrounding the college building, on the North-east corner of which stands the MESSENGER office, has been greatly improved by the erection of the commodious and well-arranged, new, substantial college building, now nearly completed.

I once more had the privilege of meeting the College students in the College chapel last night, and in chapel service this beautiful morning. The attendance is unusually large this Spring Term, and among them are many familiar faces. How encouraging it is to see the good work of educating and training our young brethren and sisters, and others, both in mind and heart, for the great battle of life! The far-reaching influences, going out from our colleges, and the molding power in the world, and the church, no man can properly estimate. It is also a very encouraging feature of our schools that the Bible is made so prominent, and its principles and teachings are constantly brought to bear in molding the character, and directing the lives of those who are brought under the influence and fostering care of those who have these institutions under their care. More of our brethren and sisters should visit our schools, and see for themselves what is being done through the efforts put forth in this direction by those whose hearts are in the work.

ALL NATIONS–ALL THINGS.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations . . . to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you "—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

DOES all mean all or does it mean something else? Popularly it does not mean all but only such a part as fallible, short-sighted men may, in their delusion, find expedient (2 Thess. 2: 10, 11).

Men, striving to please men, try to persuade God that "all things" means only popular things and "all nations" and "every creature" only such as are received popularly. If we would let Paul speak, he would say, "If I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ," Gal. 1: 10. James would say "If ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin," but of course Paul and James are not acquainted with the changes and races of these latter days.

Popularly all does not mean my jewelry, my rings, my outward adorning, if Peter and Paul did say, "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel." 1 Peter 3: 3, and 1 Tim. 2: 9. It is not expedient or popular to be so particular about your dressing, your amusements, and your "all nations," if James does say, "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." Drop into the popular line, if it does "spot" you with the world. That narrow way is getting broader, you can surely see it is not expedient to be standing almost alone, contending for "the faith once delivered unto the saints." Come, don't you see that the best-thinking men and women in this country will be driven from the church if you tell them that they must be separate from the world? It will never do to tell our cultured men that they must drop their secret societies, and our intelligent ladies that they must quit theaters and balls and be modest in dress. Coming generations must solve this question; it won't do to be contending for it now. I HAVE TRIED IT and I KNOW whereof I speak. It would be well for the Brotherhood to listen and not be pressing these things if Christ and the apostles did say so. You know that they have not been down here lately, and it is not expedient or popular to preach "all things" to "all nations."

Come, my brother, you must quit preaching that the sisters must wear a prayer covering; it is just driving some of the best-thinking people away from the church. I speak from experience; it don't matter if they are ashamed of the Gospel. All things only mean part when expediency is the measure. Why should we be preaching feet-washing, non-swearing and non-resistance,—these things are not popular, and many won't submit to them. People are ashamed of them, and we had better leave these things for coming generations and take the popular line, if "all things" mean only such as we deem expedient, and "all nations" only such as expediency DICTATES TO US. It don't matter if Jesus did say, "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of the Father with the holy angels." Popular sentiment and expediency will excuse us for slighting part of the Word anyhow.

Oh, my Brethren, may I plead with you in the name of my Master, who has said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven," to call a halt on this question of expediency where the Word of God speaks? Let God's Word be true though it make every man a liar and cast our names out as evil. It might have been expedient and popular for the apostles, had "flesh and blood" been consulted, to have left the Gentiles to themselves as a people, but you know "all nations" and "all things" meant more to those old brethren than it does now, here in the South. Teach "all nations" meant to go in the face of perils, imprisonment, stoning and death. Because fellowship was extended to the Greek and "all things" were urged whatsoever Christ has commanded, persecutions and afflictions and reproach frequently fell upon the apostles.

Christ says, "Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake." This don't look much like expediency, but Christ will take care of the expediency if we will only hear, and water and plant WHEREVER and WHATEVER is signified by his "all creatures" and his "all things."

Expediency and popularity are converting and cursing the professing Christian world. Christ's Word is no longer heeded, but expediency and "I believe this is right" has dropped most of the simplicity of the Gospel, organized "Charity Balls," "Church Festivals," "Necktie Parties," "Mourners' Benches," "Sprinkling," "Pouring," and many other open perversions.

Does the promise to Abraham, "In thee shall all nations be blessed," exclude any man because of color? Does Paul tell the truth when he says, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ"?

I wonder if refusing to do what Christ said would put us with the "foolish man" that hears and does not, or with the "wise man" that hears and does. Matt. 21: 24–29.

I wonder if refusing to fellowship a colored brother might not put us with those who "shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Luke 13: 24. "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these ye did it not to me," might ring in our ears when it is too late.

It is possible for us, like the foolish virgins, to carry lamps without oil. "I am the vine, ye are the branches." Is it possible for the vine to have branches so antagonistic that they can not be in the same vineyard? Can a branch be drawing nourishment from the vine when it takes root in the ground of expediency? "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." "And he is the head of the body, the church." I wonder what part of the body the colored brother is, whether he is a toe, a finger, or no part at all. Christ must have two bodies, one a colored and one a white body, or else our colored brother is a part of us. "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Are we too nice to fellowship a brother, yes, a brother of Christ?

I have talked to colored ministers of high standing in the South, and if their testimony is worth anything they would like to see a Gospel fellowship extended by the whites, but dare not express themselves freely until they know to whom they talk. If living the Gospel drives men from the church,—I wonder which is worth most to the church, the carnally-minded or Christ? Whenever we drop his "all things" to "all nations," don't we lose his "Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world." I have had some practical experience with both classes in the South, and I believe that the general sentiment of the white is, if possible, as strong against the negro as the Jew was against the Gentile. The Jew and Gentile question was settled by breaking down this middle wall, and if this question is ever solved Scripturally, its solution is the same. The ancient barrier was in the Jewish heart Self-righteous, bigoted, and aristocratic as they were, it was moral pollution to eat or company with a Gentile,—a fac-simile of the present status in the South. The Jew, in the main, lost Christ, the Gentile gained him, and as soon as we refuse to hear Christ, we lose him. The antagonism is mainly on the white side. The negro is not, if allowed to speak his sentiments, antagonistic to the whites.

May we not lose sight of our Lord and Master when we talk of our colored brother, or when we feel ourselves too good to fellowship him? "Every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him. By this we know the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments."

BIBLE THEOLOGY vs. POPULAR THEOLOGY.

BY S. CLICK.

Number Two.

IN No. 10, of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, current volume, we endeavored to contrast some of the leading doctrines advocated by popular theologians in getting members into their respective organizations. We now purpose to follow them a little farther, and the first and most important ordinance that meets us, after we make the good profession, is the holy Communion service.

Right here we are constrained to thank God that in this, as well as in his holy baptism, he has given us his personal example, as well as precept. When the time drew near that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, Jesus sent two of his disciples into the city, to prepare a supper. (See Matt. 26: 18, 19.)

At the proper time Christ comes and sits down with his disciples. "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." No part with Jesus! Oh, that every teacher and every scholar could comprehend the magnitude and importance of that declaration! "No part with Jesus,"—that means we shall be forever banished from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. Well may Peter exclaim, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head." Jesus said to him, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all."

There is one special beauty about the law of the spirit. It teaches by analogy as well as by a declaration of facts. The language of the Savior affords two testimonies that the washing of the disciples' feet was not to wash away the natural filth, because he said before he washed them, that they were clean, and after they were washed there was still one that was not clean. If the washing had been instituted for legal cleansing, Judas' feet would have been as clean as those of the rest of the disciples, hence we have to look for another meaning. It has a spiritual import and is intended to prepare the mind for the Communion service. Paul says, "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself."

How necessary, then, that there be a legal preparation for this sacred work, to represent to our mind the necessity of handling sacred things with clean hands, and a pure heart! Feet-washing is one of the greatest levelers imaginable. It brings the millionaire down to a level with the peasant,—just where we have all to come before we can become one in Christ.

In order to a Communion there must be a union, before honor comes humility. That Christ ate a full meal before he instituted the Communion, I suppose, none will deny. However, if any should be skeptical on this point, let them examine the following witnesses: Matt. 26: 21, 26; Mark 14: 18, 19; Luke 22: 15, 16; John 13: 26, 28; 1 Cor. 11: 20, 25, 33; Jude 12.

You will perceive that it was just at the close of the supper when Christ instituted the Communion. We will do well to notice that the bread and wine are nowhere called the Lord's Supper. Paul calls it the Communion. See 1 Cor. 10: 16.

Another fact worthy of our notice is this: The Supper was always taken in the evening or at night. See Matt. 26: 31; Mark 14: 27; John 13: 30; 1 Cor. 11: 23. According to Scriptural testimony it may be celebrated on any day of the week, provided it be held in the evening, for this is the proper time to eat a supper. John calls it a supper, Paul calls it a supper, and Luke calls it a supper, and why should it not be called the Lord's Supper, when the Lord ordered it placed upon the Lord's table? Why not call it the Lord's Supper when the Lord's people surrounded that table, and the Lord himself invoked a blessing upon the meal? If the Corinthian Brethren had followed Christ's example they could have eaten the Lord's Supper. It seems they had no table, but each family, with their friends, ate what they brought, and the poor that had brought nothing were ashamed. They had something like our modern basket dinners. Well might Paul say, "This is not to eat the Lord's supper. For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper." 1 Cor. 11: 20, 21, 33.

Now for the comparison. Popular theologians say the bread and wine is the Lord's Supper, and may be taken at any hour of the day. Some say that Sunday is the proper time. They say the supper that Paul, Luke and John are talking about is the Jewish passover. Some, however, are not so sure about that, but contend that the supper, at which Christ washed the disciples' feet, was down at Bethany, six days before the passover. The four evangelists all tell us the traitor was pointed out by Christ giving him the sop. They all tell us that the day of unleavened bread had come and that was the day when Christ was crucified, on the last evening of that day, or, rather, "between the evenings," as the German has it. On the first evening of the fourteenth day, he ate his supper with the disciples. This would make it at least twenty hours too soon to be the legal passover which was to be eaten on the fourteenth day at the going down of the sun. See Deut. 16: 5: "Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, . . but at the place which the Lord thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover." Christ paid no attention to any of these rites, neither did the Jews accuse him for breaking the law or not observing any rites pertaining to the passover, neither in going out before morning, but they would not go into the judgment hall, lest they might be defiled, but that they might eat the passover. John 18: 28.

The supper Christ ate with his disciples points forward to the marriage supper of the Lamb. See Luke 16: 17. The legal passover points back to their deliverance from bondage, when the angel of the Lord passed over Egypt, and destroyed the first-born wherever the blood of the slain lamb was not found on the doorpost and the lintel of the door. That blood points to the blood of Christ, shed upon Calvary.

Dear brother, dear sister, let us be sure we have an application of this blood as a seal, when the destroying angel shall visit our habitation! Let us all endeavor to secure the wedding garment before the Great Bridegroom comes!

"YE ARE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD AND THE SALT OF THE EARTH."

BY P. S. MYERS.

LIGHT is for others to walk by, a guide for others to do likewise.

It is not a good light to be over-anxious to break our church or social relations on flattering reports of other localities. The kingdom of heaven should come first. It may lead others to make undue sacrifices.

It is not a good light to report only the bright side of a country. Our secular interest may bias our judgment. Others may not see it with our eyes and we can not measure the future always by the past.

It is not a good light, when in a strange land, to look the country over, at the real estate agent's expense. It may lower us in his estimation.

It is not a good light, to have real estate men believe you are going to buy and when you have seen all you want, make them a low offer on something, to get rid of them; then laugh at their disappointment. Such light is very dark.

It is not a good light to even act in the capacity of a real estate agent. While it may be lawful, the temptations to over-persuade, through large commissions, are numerous, and may afterwards bring bitter reflections.

SALT.

It is not good salt to be pretending to buy property jointly, while getting our portion at the expense of the others. That is defrauding your brother and will in time sour the feelings.

It is not good salt to charge your brother ten to twelve per cent interest, then feel you have done him a great favor by grinding him under the iron heel of covetousness. It does not help him much in his ministerial labors, but has rather a putrefying tendency.

It is good salt to bear one another's burdens, that, while you are sharing the benefits of his ministry, let him share of the benefits of your labor, thereby increasing each one's usefulness and strengthening the ties of love.

It is not good salt to charge compound interest to a poor brother and have him pay it in labor, at less than the general wages, because he can not pay it in money. It does not increase the Christian flavor.

It is not good salt if we fail to exercise hospitality to our brethren and sisters. It divides our former relations.

It is not good salt, while traveling through a country, to live at the expense of the members, because we can save some money, especially when they have no income but their daily toil. It may wear on the welcome.

It is, however, good salt to seek the homes of our Brethren in country or cities to share their society, encourage them on their pilgrim journey, but before your departure at meal time you slip a reasonable compensation under the plate, so the left hand need not know what the right hand doeth. It will help to bear the burden of your hostess.

It is good salt to think charitably, "I come only once a year," yet, since you may be the twelfth or fifteenth visitor for that week, a small compensation, in return for the entertainment, will always be welcomed.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

THE GREAT NEED.

WHAT we want to-day is men who believe down deep in their soul what they are talking about. The world has got tired and sick of sham. I want to urge you to be out-and-out for God. My conviction is that the reason why Christianity is dragged down in the dust as it is to-day, is that so many people profess what they don't possess. Let your whole heart be given up to God's service. Aim high. What is your aim?

Look at Abraham. Oh, Abraham didn't begin to be as shrewd a man as Lot. If you had gone into Sodom, and asked about Lot, they would have told you he was the most prosperous man in all Sodom; he owned the best property in Sodom. His family moved in the very highest circles—at the very top. He wasn't too religious. He wasn't like his uncle Abraham. They thought Abraham a very narrow-minded man. But Lot was a noble man he was just the kind of a man the Sodomites liked. They liked that kind of Christianity. He was their style of a man. He believed in all modern improvements. He was getting along amazingly well.

Bear in mind, Lot is a typical character. He represents the professing Christians of to-day who don't want to be too religious. They just want to get into heaven. They keep their religion as a sort of fire escape. They don't want to be too religious — peculiar narrow-minded. Lot wasn't too religious. He didn't belong to that class. But God knew about him; and when he came to investigate him, he found a rotten state of things. Lot had been there twenty years and hadn't any family altar, been there twenty years and converted no one, been there twenty years and not one man had been made better in all Sodom. I have no doubt when Abraham was pleading with God he said: "Lot has been there twenty years. Certainly he has done some good." But there wasn't a convert, and all Sodom suffered one fate. Men say: "Let us make the best of both worlds." That is what you hear now. Well, Lot tried that, and he came to a miserable end.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—We organized our Sunday-school to-day by electing our young ministers,—brethren J. L. Hazlett and A. A. Neher as Superintendents. The attendance, to-day, was good, and, I hope, may be indicative of the future success of the school.—John E. Metzger, Edna Mills, Ind., March 29.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL RE-ORGANIZED.—March 28 the Belleville church, Kans., met in quarterly council. Among other business transacted was the re-organization of our Sunday-school. Bro. Albion Daggett was elected Superintendent. He will be assisted by sister Lizzie Hillery. Bro. Charles Hillery was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. Two have been received by letter since our last report.—Louise J. Williams, Belleville, Kans., March 30.

FOUR ACCESSIONS.—Bro. Menno Stauffer came to the Lamotte church, Crawford Co., Ill., Feb. 10, and preached eleven sermons. The members were much revived and sinners warned to flee the wrath to come. Four precious souls came out to walk with the people of God. This caused much rejoicing with the members as well as with the angels in heaven. Our quarterly council occurred March 28. All business passed off in love and union.—Jacob Swinger, March 31.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL RE-ORGANIZED.—Last Saturday was the quarterly council in the South Beatrice church, Nebr. Much business was brought before the meeting, but all was adjusted satisfactorily. One young sister decided to walk with us no more, but we hope and pray that she may see her error, and again return to the fold before it is too late. Our Sunday-school, which was discontinued during the winter, was again re-organized. We had Bible meeting every Sunday night through the winter, which seemed to be very interesting to all that attended.—Lydia Dell, March 22.

PLEASANT COUNCIL.—March 26 the Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, held her quarterly council with a fair attendance. The council passed off in love and union. We elected our church officers for the year 1891. Brethren Stephen Stutzman and A. W. Meyers are our delegates to Annual Meeting. Brethren A. W. Meyers and Bro. A. F. Yock are our delegates to the District Meeting. We appointed our Communion meeting for May 24. An invitation is extended to the members going to Annual Meeting on the P. R. R., to stop with us. Our house is large and we can accommodate a good many. It is located two and one half miles south-east of the P. R. R. depot.—Mary E. Harrison, Johnstown, Pa.

MESSENGERS FOR DISTRIBUTION.—For two years I have been saving my MESSENGERS for some one else who would like to read them. Now, since there are so many needy ones in the West, perhaps they would appreciate the abundance of good reading matter, contained in our beloved paper. Those desiring these MESSENGERS for distribution, will please address the writer.—Anna Close, Callom, Ill.,

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.—Our quarterly council in the Naperville church, Ill., was held March 21. Everything passed off pleasantly. The report of the annual visit showed all to be in peace and union. Our love-feast will be held May 16. We had no accessions by baptism since the last report but received four by letter. We expect Bro. Shirk to speak for us next Sunday at Batavia.—H. M. Barkdoll, Naperville, Ill.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.—The George's Creek church, Fayette Co., Pa., held her quarterly council March 21. All the business that came before the meeting was disposed of pleasantly. Two delegates were chosen to represent us at District Meeting. The above-named church will hold her love-feast May 22 and 23. An invitation is extended to the ministering Brethren on their way to Annual Meeting to stop with us. They will stop off at Uniontown, Pa., and inquire for Eld. J. C. Johnson, who will conduct them to place of meeting.—Lucetta H. DeBolt, Masontown, Pa., April 1.

CHURCH COUNCIL. The members of the Manor church, Pa., met in council on Saturday, March 21. Through the prayers of the members and the forbearance exercised, all business passed off pleasantly, for which the Good Lord be praised. A love-feast was appointed for June 19, at 4 P. M. A brother was elected as delegate to District Meeting; he will not have any business to offer to the Meeting. While we have no great success or advancement to report, and though death invaded our number several times during the year, on the whole, we believe, through the grace of God, we have held our own.—Joseph Holsopple.

HARMONIOUS COUNCIL.—March 21 the members of the Shannon church, Ill., held their church council. Much business of a local nature came before the meeting. We also endeavored to make the necessary arrangements for our coming District Meeting. We trust we shall be able to care for all the dear Brethren who may feel like attending the Meeting. We send no queries. There will not be any love-feast in connection with District Meeting as has been the custom in this District. We felt that the Lord was with us in our council, as all passed off harmoniously, and we hope that the Lord will be with us in the deliberations of the Meeting. We expect to have preaching on the evening before District Meeting, April 20.—D. Rowland.

A GOODLY LAND.—I would suggest that persons who are looking for cheap homes in a country where the rich and poor live comfortably and happy together, and where there is no danger of suffering from either cold or hunger, look toward East Tennessee. Write, enclosing stamps, to Bro. Isaac M. Tipton, of Rodelm, Knox Co., Tenn. He will cheerfully give you any information you desire. Bro. Tipton is no land agent, but he is interested in the welfare of the church in Knox Co., and will be glad to answer the questions of those who contemplate moving to that country. There is a small organization of members there, with a good little house of worship, but no resident minister at present. We remember with much pleasure the kindness with which we were treated while among them.—James M. Neff.

INTERESTING MEETINGS.—Bro. Abram Wolf came to us March 28, and remained over Sunday. He preached three sermons in all, and faithfully expounded the Word. The weather was inclement and the roads very bad, consequently the attendance was not as large as it would have been otherwise. We had a good meeting. The brethren and sisters were encouraged on their way and sinners were warned to shun the results of sin. May God bless and reward our dear brother and may the Lord crown his labors with success! We ask the prayers of God's people in our behalf! Rebecca E. Hamman, Elrick, Iowa, March 31.

A GENEROUS DONATION.—The members of the Colby church met in council March 21, at Bro. C. H. Brown's. All seemed to be in love and union. We decided to send Bro. Brown as a delegate to District Meeting; also to hold our love-feast June 6, at Bro. A. H. Partch's, five miles south of Colby. Brethren and sisters that can be with us will be welcomed and met at Colby by notifying Bro. A. H. Partch, Colby, Kansas. We wish to acknowledge the receipt of a large box and barrel of second-hand clothing, collected and sent by Bro. James Larkins, of Lanark, Ill., for which he has our many thanks. We appreciate his labor and kindness to us. May it be as bread cast upon the waters! Annie S. Partch, Colby, Kans., March 31.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches."

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, County and State. Be brief. Notes of Travel should be as short as possible. Land Advertisements are not solicited for this Department. We have an advertising page, and, if necessary, will issue supplements.

From Tyrconnell Mines, Taylor Co., W. Va.

BRO. Z. ANNON, of the Bethany congregation, preached four sermons in the large two-story school-house in Tyrconnell, Taylor Co., W. Va., commencing on Friday afternoon, Jan. 16, and closing on Sunday night Jan. 18. The room was crowded to its utmost capacity with attentive and anxious hearers. Bro. Annon preached the Word in its purity and with power. As there are only a few members in this locality, and we have no church-house of our own, we do not often hear the Brethren preach.

When we heard Bro. Annon on this occasion, we felt truly that we had a feast of good things. The people are mostly Methodists and Presbyterians at the above-named place, but they treated Bro. Annon with all possible kindness. We believe that many of them received the Word with gladness.

D. G. PURKEY.

Notes by the Way.

MARCH 20, we went to West Virginia to meet previous appointments. We wended our way to Bro. John N. Mathias', who lives near the church. The same evening we met for worship. Next day we met in council. Bro. S. A. Shaver met with us. The church wanted help, and in official council we unanimously agreed to have an election for two ministers and two deacons. We then proceeded with the work, and all were found willing to serve the church and duly installed. We had meeting also at night.

On Sunday morning Bro. Shaver and Eld. T. Caldwell started across the Mountain to another part of the church, to look after the choice for an Elder. This territory was divided two years ago. We think an Elder is needed.

We next met at Kim's Run church where we had several meetings, and next day assembled in council. We also had a meeting at night, after which Bro. Shaver went to Mountain View, while I remained a few days with the brethren.

I stopped at Mountain View on my way home. The heavy snow-fall during the next few days obliged us to lay over a few days. On Sunday we started for home. All went well till we came to the Mountain, when suddenly, we got into a drift and could not go either backward or forward. There was no other alternative but to clear the drift. This was slow work, and we spent two hours in going two miles. We had many thoughts in working up the mountain. We wondered if the Brethren, who were comfortable by their fires, ever think of the poor minister who has to go in all kind of weather, exposed to dangers seen and unseen. Do they pray that the Lord be with them and buoy them up so they may be faithful to the end? Many ministers are, as Bro. Hylton says, broken down and forgotten. This is wrong and somebody is responsible. SAMUEL H. MYERS.

From the Barron Church, Wis.

OUR quarterly council occurred March 28. Though Satan seemed to have been at work, yet all trouble was adjusted in a Christian spirit, and much to the satisfaction of the church. The missionary cause was remembered by a donation of $3.00. The church decided to be represented at District Meeting by letter. It is also our intention to hold a series of meetings and a love-feast some time this fall, if ministerial help may be had.

Our home minister, Bro. Bowman, has moved to a place some miles distant, and has done but very little preaching for us during the last year. He has promised now, if the Lord gives him strength, to do more preaching.

We ask the prayers of God's people that this little church may more fully improve her talent!

MALINDA WILLIAMS.

Barron, Wis., April 3.

From the George's Creek Congregation, Fayette Co., Pa.

WE held our council-meeting in the Fairview church-house, March 21. A fair attendance was present, considering the unpleasant weather. Our trusty and well-tried Gospel ship, on the voyage homeward bound, has encountered quite a number of large and very chilling icebergs, but it is to be hoped, that the last one has passed away. Sailing is much better and improving, the atmosphere more balmy and pleasant, and the Brethren feel cheerful and very much encouraged. Two were baptized at Uniontown, recently. The visiting brethren were instructed to make a visit to all the members, in harmony with the principles of the general Brotherhood. Bro. A. Debolt and the writer were elected to represent the church at District Meeting. We agreed to hold our love-feast at the Fairview church house, May 23. We extend a hearty and cordial welcome to the Brethren to stop with us on their way to Annual Meeting. Arrangements will be made to meet all at Uniontown, by addressing me at Lock Box 24, Uniontown, Fayette Co., Pa.

JOHN C. JOHNSON.

From the Union Church, Marshall Co., Ind.

MARCH 17 our quarterly council-meeting convened in the south part of our district at "Salem" church. A goodly number of members were present to help to carry on the Lord's work. The meeting seemed to be pleasant to all present. It was decided to represent our church at Annual Meeting by letter, and send one delegate to District Meeting. The lot fell upon Bro. J. F. Appleman. We granted letters of membership to a number who expect to leave us. Among the number were our Bro. and sister Henricks with whom we are loath to part. They were very useful in Sunday-school as well as church work.

On Easter Sunday we met and re-organized our Sunday-school for this summer. Bro. J. F. Appelman and J. Seider are our Superintendents. A good corps of teachers was selected and we will, as heretofore, use the New Testament in our school.

Our prayer-meeting is held every Sunday night at the church. We are all much encouraged in the good work, and give God the praise. May he lead us on in the light, that we may conduct all our work in a way that we may be acceptable in his sight. Our ministerial help in this part of the district is very weak and we need much aid and assistance and trust we may be remembered by all at a "Throne of Grace"! LAURA APPELMAN.

Plymouth, Ind.

From Sidney, Ind.

OUR quarterly church meeting occurred March 26. A good deal of business came before the meeting, but everything passed off in a Christian manner, and, I presume, to the general satisfaction of all. I am sorry to say, however, that we had to disfellowship a few members. I hope they may soon see their error, and ask to be re-instated. We also appointed a Communion for May 26, commencing at 10 A. M. I hope brethren going to Annual Meeting will make it suit to stop off and be with us over the Lord's Day. Come on Nickel Plate R. R. and stop off at Sidney or Kinsey Station, and notify the writer. We re-organized our Sunday-school last Sunday. E. MILLER.

April 3.

From the Chippewa Valley Church, Wis.

THE members of this church have been enjoying a season of soul-refreshing meetings. Our home minister, Bro. H. C. Baker, commenced a series of meetings in, what is known as the Stanton school-house and continued for one week with good interest. Then he was requested to hold some meetings at the Hart school-house where he preached eight sermons. The weather was pleasant and the sleighing good, consequently we had large crowds. Two were received by baptism and six more have made known their intention of uniting with the church soon. When baptism was administered to the two in question, it was estimated that there were two hundred people on the banks of the creek. We desire the prayers of God's people every-where, that the borders of Zion may be enlarged. E. E. JOYCE.

March 30.

From Adamsborough, Pa.

THE Brethren at the above place organized their Sunday-school yesterday, March 29. We elected Bro. Mitchel for Superintendent and Clary Kelly, Assistant. We had a short series of meetings in October, 1890, and continued over two Sundays. Bro. Daniel Snell did the preaching. He preached the Word with power, but the attendance was rather small on account of sickness. Nevertheless the meetings were interesting and, no doubt, some good impressions were made.

Bro. Noah Fisher came to us on Saturday, Feb. 21, and gave us three meetings, when three young sisters came out on the side of the Lord and requested baptism, which was attended to the next morning. May the Lord bless them and keep them in the narrow way.

One of our young sisters was baptized at Mexico during Bro. Rosenberger's meetings. Thus we have had four additions at our place,—all young,—and more are talking about coming soon. I hope they won't delay too long. We are glad to know that the Mexico church is prospering throughout. There have been added to the church, at her five different places of preaching, between forty-five and fifty, since Oct. 1, 1890. Our old brother, Samuel Murray, will preach for us the first Sunday in April. May the Lord bless the old veteran of the cross, and add many years to his usefulness! We sincerely desire the fervent prayers of the church! DAVID FLORY.

Literary Notes.

Proceedings of the National Temperance Congress, 1890. 12mo, 425 pp, cloth, $1.50. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

At this great Congress, held in New York City, at the Broadway Tabernacle, June 11th and 12th, 1890, representatives of every shade of anti-liquor views discussed the different phases of the Temperance question. Among the hundreds of well-known persons who participated in the Congress were the following: Gen. Neal Dow; Robt. Ray, Secy. Nat'l Temperance League of London, England; Howard Crosby, D. D.; Hon. Ed. C. Pierce; Robt. Graham, Sec. Church Temperance Society; H. K. Carroll, editor of The Independent; Ex-Pres. McCosh, and John Bascom; Joseph Cook; Gen. Green Clay Smith; H. H. Faxon; Samuel Gomphers; Judges Bonney, of Chicago, and Arnoux of New York; R. Fulton Cutting, Gen. Palmer, and a host of distinguished men and women directly interested in the discussions.

This volume furnishes 425 pages of highly interesting matter, and supplies "food for thought" from cover to cover. It is a thoroughly faithful and uncolored report. Nothing will do so much to show Prohibitionists why good men oppose Prohibition, what points need to be explained, and what must be defended as to read the far reaching discussions of this volume. It should find a place with all Temperance workers, and should be found in every public library in the country.

STOUDER.—In the Pine Creek church, Ind., Jan 14, 1891, of paralysis, Bro. Samuel Stouder, aged 40 years, 8 months and 15 days.

Deceased was born in Elkhart Co., Ind., and moved with his family near Tyner City, Ind., about ten years ago, soon after which he united with the church. Proving to be a faithful brother, the church called him to the office of deacon, in which capacity he served acceptably. PITTENGER.—In Portland, Oregon, March 21, 1891, Harry, son of Jacob and Emma Pittenger, aged 3 years and 11 months.

CLARA WOODS.

Funeral services held at the Tom's Run church. Text, Rev. 14: 5. May all endeavor to be presented before the throne of God as faultless as is little Pardon.

DANIEL M. GARVER.

BECK.—In the bounds of the Lower Twin Creek congregation, Ohio, March 20, 1891, Bro. Peter Beck, aged 88 years 4 months and 27 days.

Deceased was a consistent member of the church. Being afflicted for some time, he was unable to attend the regular services. While his hearing was greatly impaired, we trust he has heard the welcome call, "come up higher!" Although his eyes had almost failed him, we hope that his vision of the glory of God is clear. He passed away peacefully at the home of his son-in-law,—Bro Henry Dils. Four daughters mourn their loss. Services at the Twin Valley church by the Brethren. Text, Ps. 92: 12, 13.

DANIEL M. GARVER.

Deceased was a consistent member of the Brethren church for fifty-six years. He died in the triumphs of a living faith, leaving a bright evidence of his acceptance with God. He will be missed by the church and community, but our loss will be his great gain. Funeral services by the writer to an attentive audience from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

DAVID MARKLEY.

SHARP.—Near Frankton, Madison Co., Ind., March 15, 1891, Joseph Sharp, aged 43 years, 1 month and 2 days.

Deceased was born Feb. 13, 1848. He was married to Martha H. Miller, eldest daughter of Jacob P. Miller, Jan. 6, 1870. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss. One son departed this life at the age of twelve years. His body was laid to rest in the Brethren's cemetery, east of Middletown.

Deceased was one of those happily constituted persons in whom the elements are so blended, that they inspire confidence, command respect, and stir affections and friendship. He was a kind husband, father and neighbor, but was not a member of the church. While sick he desired to be baptized but it was too late. Let this serve as a solemn warning to us all to be always ready!

GEO. L. JENNINGS.

ALLEN.—In the Oasis church, Madison, Ind., March 8, 1891, of scarlet fever, Fletty, daughter of brother and sister Alonzo Allen.

Deceased was an unusually bright, intelligent looking girl. While God has now one more bright angel, we know that she has escaped all of life's terrors, and is now enjoying the sweet blessings of heaven. The parents of the deceased have the sympathy of the community. May the Lord ever be near them in their sad and lonely hours!

HULDAH PLOW.

HOOVER.—In the Nettle Creek church, Ind., March 21, 1891, sister Margaret Hoover, aged 65 years, 9 months and 14 days.

She was afflicted more or less for about forty-eight years, and, for about thirty years of the time was an almost constant sufferer. She embraced the religion of Jesus when about nineteen years old, and lived a faithful and exemplary member of the church to the time of her death. She bore her affliction patiently, and was resigned to the will of the Lord. She frequently expressed herself as only waiting the Lord's time to call her from her afflictions, and with this mind she calmly and quietly went to sleep in Jesus.

Funeral services were conducted by brethren Lewis W. Teeter, Daniel Bowman and Lewis Kinsey. LEVI S. DILLING.

ROHRER.—In the Nettle Creek church, Wayne Co., Ind., March 9, 1891, Bro. John Rohrer, aged 82 years and 8 months.

Deceased was born in Bedford County, Pa. He leaves a wife, one son, two daughters, three half-brothers, three half-sisters, seventeen grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren to mourn their loss.

He became a member of the church of the Brethren about fifty years ago, and lived a devoted Christian life till death. He bore his sufferings with Christian patience.

Funeral services by brethren Lewis W. Teeter and Lewis Kinsey.

LEVI S. DILLING.

BRANDT.—In the Lower Cumberland church, Cumberland Co., Pa., Bro. Martin Brandt, aged 76 years, 3 months and 12 days.

Bro. Martin had been nearly blind for several years, and quite feeble. He had an attack of paralysis and only lived a few days after, but was conscious all the time. A few moments before death he repeated the Lord's Prayer and died, uttering praises to God. Services by the home brethren.

DANIEL LANDIS.

PADDOCK.—In the bounds of the Nettle Creek church, Wayne Co., Ind., March 24, 1891, Thomas O. Paddock, aged 51 years, 8 months and 7 days.

Deceased was born in Union County, Ind., and died in Mount Auburn, Wayne Co., Ind. He was married to Sarah E. Kingery, July 19, 1863, in Monroe County, Iowa. To this union were born eleven children, one of whom preceded him to the better land. For about five years the deceased had been a sufferer from disease of the heart. As a husband he was kind and true, as a father he was loving and affectionate. With a large family to support and severe afflictions to contend with, he has been compelled to battle hard in life; but the conflict is over, his work is done, and he has entered his eternal home. He leaves a faithful, devoted Christian companion, ten children, three of whom are married, one grandchild, an aged mother, who is yet leaning upon the staff of the Great Shepherd, two brothers, and two sisters.

May this grief-stricken family—a part of whom have given their hearts to Jesus—be more closely drawn to his bleeding side and have their final resting place in the eternal home of glory! Funeral services by Jacob Hoover, assisted by the writer.

LEVI S. DILLING.

KNISLEY.—At the home of her son (Bro. David Knisley), in Mechanicsburg, Pa., Feb. 8, 1891, sister Elizabeth Knisley, aged 94 years, 3 months and 7 days.

Sister Knisley had been remarkably well until a short time before her death, when she took sick and sank quite rapidly. She was visited a few days before her departure by the writer, and expressed a strong desire to depart and be at rest. Services by Bro. Levi S. Mohler and the writer. DANIEL LANDIS.

HURSH.—In the Lower Cumberland church, Pa., Nancy Hursh, aged 77 years, 11 months and 28 days.

Deceased died at the home of her sister Hetty Greegor, in Mechanicsburg, and was buried at Pleasant View in York County. Services by Eld. David Neisley and the writer. DANIEL LANDIS RUPP.—Feb. 20, 1891, Bro. Martin G. Rupp, aged 77 years, 10 months and 17 days.

Bro. Martin was sexton at the Mohler meeting-house in the Lower Cumberland congregation, Pa., for a number of years. Feb. 10 he dug the grave for sister Knisley, and on the morning of Feb. 11, he had an attack of paralysis, and in a few minutes passed away. Services by Bro. Levi S. Mohler and the writer. DANIEL LANDIS.

MILLER.—Near Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, Pa., March 19, 1891, Solomon Miller, aged 40 years, 10 months and 1 days.

Deceased leaves a wife and two sons to mourn their sad loss. He was the young son of Eld. Moses Miller, who preceded him to the spirit world six years ago. His mother followed seven months ago. One brother and two sisters survive the departure of one whom they deeply mourn. The older sister, in Mechanicsburg, is still at the home made lonely by the death of her dear mother.

Deceased was a man of noted business tact, and was taken in the midst of a business life. He had a wart removed from his limb about three weeks before his death, the result of which operation was such, that all the medical skill available could not save his life. His condition for two weeks before his death was such that he could scarcely converse intelligibly with any, but those whose kind hands and loving hearts never forsook his bedside, say, that his regret was that he had not lived a better life, and if he would recover his health, he would lead a Christian life. We trust that with this desire he passed calmly away. His spirit has gone to God who gave it, and the lesson left us is, not to procrastinate or neglect the duties we owe to God and to our souls, until we can no more enjoy the services of God's house, which are intended as a means of grace to sanctify or save the soul. Services at his late home to a large concourse of relatives and friends, by Rev. Sigler (Bethel minister) and the writer. Interment at Chestnut Hill cemetery, Mechanicsburg. HARRY BEELMAN.

EVANS.—At Ingalls, Oklahoma, Co., Ind. Ter., March 21, 1891, Bro. James Evans, aged 65 years, 8 months and 20 days. Funeral services by the writer from Rev. 14: 13. JOHN CLINGENPEEL.

MYERS.—In the Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa, March 27, 1891, sister Sarah Myers, widow of Bro. Isaac Myers, aged 61 years, 4 months and 26 days.

Thus we see that another one of our number has passed over to the other shore, and thus we see, too, that we are all passing away, one by one. Let us all strive to be ready when the Master calls.

Doctor Koch's Discovery.

Dr. Koch's great remedy seems to prove efficacious in those cases where the patient has contracted consumption in low lying counties,—almost all the level European districts where the disease is traceable to purely climatic conditions, the moist atmosphere being a fine breeding region for the microbe. But in the high and dry altitude traversed by the Union Pacific, the Original Overland Route, consumption not only can not exist but is surely curable in its early stages. And this is testified to by thousands who have regained health and strength in the life giving air of the Mountains. 7t8

That Brilliant American.

Samuel Bowles, the famous editor of the Springfield Republican, said, in recording his impressions of the Puget Sound Country:

"Up here, above the latitude of Quebec and Montreal, we basked in the smile of roses that are even denied to us in New England. Here, within the circle of the softening sea, reigns a year that knows no zero cold, and rarely freezes water or snow; that winters the fuchsias and the most delicate roses, English ivies and other tender plants, and summers them with rioting luxuriance; that grows the apple and the pear and the small fruits to perfection."

The Puget Sound Country is a wonderful agricultural country awaiting developmen There is nothing open to the home seeker to compare with it and it is the future goal of the great army of home seekers. In healthfulness it is wonderful and in productiveness unsurpassed. Thousands last year journeyed to this charmed region over the Union Pacific, the original overland route, and thousands more will go this year. 7t8

The Fahrney Hammock Carts.

GUARANTEED ENTIRELY FREE FROM HORSE MOTION AND TO RIDE AS EASY AS A BUGGY.

INVENTED BY
C. FAHRNEY, POLO, ILL.
PATENTS APPLIED FOR.

Made With Tops On, or Without.
Canopy or Bow Top.

We wish to say that we will not advertise anything in regard to our Hammock Carts but what we know to be correct from actual test by ourselves and others that have used them.

In the first place we use good material and of sufficient size to make them durable and yet neat The frame of body is angle steel, and the frame of gear is all steel,—neat and strong. There is a steel axle, steel tire, Royer Rouse Band, Sarven Wheels, and the Cart is well painted and trimmed. The Cart is very easy to get in or out of, has a tight, roomy body in front, a large box under seat, 13x25x5 inches deep inside.

But now the most important of all are the riding qualities This we would rather each one could try for himself, as it looks like saying too much to say it rides as easy as a buggy, yet when all say so that try it, we feel safe in saying so too. We have had one in use for six months ourselves. There is no horse motion to it whatever. Why is it? Because the body hangs independent of shafts, and works straight up and down, like a buggy, on four coil springs. Rough roads do not affect the rider, only as a swing, as there are no solid bearings. The Cart floats along on swinging bearings with perfect ease.

Write for circular of different styles and full information. We expect to have samples of different styles in Hagerstown, Md, during Annual Meeting, as we will have an agent there to sell them this season.

If we have no agent in your town, write us, giving the name of some responsible party that would handle them, or, if you are so situated as to handle some of them, write for terms. We shall have only one agent in a town whom we protect, but if we can not get some one to handle them, we will ship to any person wanting one for his own use, nicely crated and delivered F. O. OUR Brethren, who may attend Annual Meeting, are cordially invited to give us a call as they pass by, either coming or on their return. All those who come over the Pennsylvania railroad will pass by our town.

WE are glad to learn that our Brethren in Nebraska, Kansas and the adjoining Western States have good prospects before them for a crop. A full crop would greatly restore confidence in the people of this beautiful country, and we hope that their brightest expectations may be realized.

At our last church meeting, held in this place, we received a number of members by letter, and elected two delegates to represent our District Meeting, to be held in the Hopewell church, April 22. Our membership is largely increased by student members from the different churches who are here attending school. All such are gladly welcomed.

THE subject for our last prayer-meeting was: "Put on the whole armor of God." We were impressed with some of the thoughts presented. It seems to be evident to us all that we need this armor to make us successful in the warfare against the powers of sin, but we seem to be so indifferent about putting it on and using it. The great secret of religion is to make it practical.

WE were made sorry to hear of the death of Christian Brumbaugh. He was the oldest, and a very active and efficient deacon of the Clover Creek church, and will be greatly missed. Of him it may truly be said: "Well done, good and faithful servant." Eld. John W. Brumbaugh, when last heard from, was still unwell. Our hope is, as the weather settles and the spring opens, his health may be restored.

THE late booms in South-land are causing some of our people to look in that direction, and may be the cause of organizing churches in the land of flowers. Money often has attractions beyond everything else,—even souls sink into insignificance aside of a regular, bona fide land boom. Well, these may be the means which God uses to introduce his saving grace, but, really, it don't look well on the part of those who do it through such motives.

THERE seems to be a growing demand for a change, or a satisfactory church name. We believe that this desire is so general, that it would be readily acceded to if we could unite on what we want. A want of unanimity has been the trouble heretofore, and it seems to us that we had better consider this matter and all agree on something that can be granted, and that will cause the least possible inconvenience. And to this end we propose the following: "The Brethren (German Baptist) Church." This will give us the old name that has always identified us as a people, and as used in all of our literature, and, at the same time, in no way conflict with titles, deeds, etc., heretofore made, containing the name "German Baptist." It will be only reversing one of the names that have been accepted by Annual Meeting, and we now have several of them,—"Fraternity of German Baptist Brethren," "German Baptists or Brethren," "German Baptist Brethren," etc. Our proposition will be a compromise of all, and give the church the name that is held sacred by a large majority of our membership. "The Brethren . . . Church," with German Baptist thrown in as explanatory or to identify the name with titles, deeds, etc., made, containing the words "German Baptist." It seems to us that on this name we could all unite, and that it would do away with all further discussion as to our name.

OUR STEWARDSHIP.

THE railroads are already actively engaged in presenting their claims for the patronage of our people who will attend the coming Annual Meeting, which is all right, as that is along the line of their business, and as their competition gives us cheap rates, we ought not to complain.

But there is a question lying underneath this that is much more important to us than the cheap rates that are offered. The question to those of us who have no business there except to see the country, visit our friends and enjoy the meeting, is, whether the money we spend in going there is spent to the best advantage, and how much God is glorified in our going and being there, and whether this is our object in going.

One of the hardest things we have to do is to fully realize our true relation to that which the Lord entrusts to our care as his stewards. Somehow we can not get away from the feeling that the money or possessions we have are our own, and that we have an inalienable right to do with it as we please, or use it in a way that will afford us the most enjoyment.

But no matter how much we are wedded to this feeling, it is a wrong one, and what we have, whether it be much or little, it is the Lord's, and we are to use it and spend it as will best promote his greatest of all works,—the salvation of the world.

Of course, it is pleasant for us to go to these meetings and enjoy each other's society and the religious services held there, but when we think of the hundreds and thousands who are starving for the Bread of Life, and the great good that could be done with our money thus spent, the question comes to us with some force,—Would it not be better for us to deny ourselves of such enjoyments, though they seem so good, and give the money that we thus spend to save souls who do not have the home advantages that we do.

We know that it often happens that those who are interested enough in the church and its works to attend these meetings, are the ones that do the most in giving for the promotion of its interests. If this could be the rule we should then take the other side of the question and advise everybody to go. And we are sometimes inclined to believe that we need earnestness of heart more than we do the means, as a strong purpose often brings that which coldness and indifference never reaches. This is the other way of looking at the attending of such meetings, and perhaps it is well enough to look at both sides.

If the money that we would save by remaining at home is to be used for our own physical enjoyment, then the saving will not be to advantage. The same may be said of all our other ways of spending money. What we especially need, is to feel that we are stewards indeed and in reality, and that we are responsible to God for the manner in which we spend that which is entrusted to our care. And the further we can get away from self, the easier we can entertain this feeling, and live it out.

We talk about laying up treasures in heaven, and it surely is a pleasant subject for contemplation, but after all, the most of us are more concerned about laying up treasures in banks and in this world, than we are about the heavenly treasures. All this shows how blind we are to our highest good. We ought to pray more over our spending and not so much about the getting.

In closing, let us impress upon your minds this one greatest of all thoughts,—pure and living from the Fountain of Truth, — "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do it all to the glory of God."

Michael Zug 1892

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth"

"PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING."

God never would send you the darkness,
If he felt you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to his guiding hand,
If the way were always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith,
Could you always walk by sight.

'Tis true he has many an anguish,
For your sorrowful heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn crown,
For your tired head to wear;
He knows how few would keep close to him,
If pain did not guide them there.

So he sends you the blinding darkness,
And the furnace of sevenfold heat,
'Tis the only way, believe me,
To keep you close to his feet.
For 'tis always so easy to wander
When our lives are glad and sweet.

Then nestle your hand in your Father's,
And sing, if you can, as you go,
Your song may cheer some one behind you,
Whose courage is sinking low;
And well, if your lips do quiver,
God will love you better so.

"A SECOND BENEFIT."—2 Cor. 1: 15.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To the Saints in Southern Colorado:—

Oh for the grace to dip my pen in the blood of Jesus, and write only as I am "moved by the Holy Ghost." I desire to be nothing but a lump of vitalized clay in the hands of the Great Potter. "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, WRITE." Not only the mandate but the message is clear. "Looking unto Jesus." Heb. 12: 2. "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee." Acts 18: 9, 10. "Who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?" 1 Pet. 3: 13. How wonderful are the words of Inspiration! How they shame our lukewarmness and cowardice and self-pleasing.

Hunt up the following epigrams and their contexts, and behold the photograph of a genuine Christian. "But rejoice;" "Happy are ye;" "Glorify God in this behalf." 1 Pet. 4: 13, 14, 16. "Rejoice, and be exceeding glad." Matt. 5: 12. "I am FILLED with COMFORT, I am EXCEEDING JOYFUL in ALL OUR TRIBULATION." 2 Cor. 7: 4. "I TAKE PLEASURE." 2 Cor. 12: 10. "TOOK JOYFULLY." Heb. 10: 34. Consider the amazing, God-invented paradoxes in 2 Cor. 4: 8-11 and 6: 8-10. Does this describe Colorado saints? Is it a picture of veritable Pennsylvania disciples? It is God's ideal in "the Man Christ Jesus," and it was realized by Paul, and is meant for "all that name the Name of Christ."

How pitiful, how illogical, and how clearly unjust to refer to Romans 7th as the delineation of established Christian character! Verily, "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." 2 Cor. 3: 17. "Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear." Rom. 8: 15. "Perfect love casteth out fear." 1 John 4: 18. We not only "come boldly to the throne of grace," but we even "have boldness in the day of judgment." Heb 4: 16; 1 John 4: 17. What the law can do is vividly portrayed in Rom. 7: 24. What grace can accomplish is luminously and gloriously proclaimed in Rom. 5: 1, and 8: 1, 2. Jesus is unique in many respects, but judicially he stands on the same basis with all believers.

The fundamental primary question is, Are we CHRISTIANS? Not, are we trying to do this, or that, however authoritative or valid in its place; but are we wholly out from under all legal liabilities, from all penalties of wrong-doing and apprehensions of wrath, as securely sheltered by the blood of the Lamb, as the ancient Israelites by the sprinkled blood of the Passover? God starts the soul on its ascent of grace by "reconciliation in the body of Christ's flesh through death," which can not be touched save by faith; and in this relation and position "we work out our salvation with fear and trembling" from our first spiritual pulse till we are safely housed inside the Gates of Pearl. Col. 1: 21, 22. Baptism must be the product of life, divine life, not its cause, if it is to be unto salvation.

The formal remission of sin represents a prior personal relationship between the soul and God. Man and wife do not comply with the legal form of wedlock to generate or establish their heart-relations with each other; that is the ground and impulse which puts reality into the symbol. Have we and Jesus Christ the same life; do we stand in the same relation to God and his law? This is the radical, solemn question which underlies all others relative to our present and eternal security. Here all boasting as to personal merit on the score of obedience is ruled out by the law of faith. Rom. 3: 27, 28.

The language of faith is positive, unwavering, calm, restful. "I know," "I am persuaded," "confident of this very thing," "no condemnation," "no separation," "more than conquerors," "access with confidence:"—such utterances are its vernacular. 2 Cor. 5: 1; 2 Tim. 1: 12; Philpp. 1; 6; Rom. 8: 1, 38, 39; Eph. 3: 12; 1 John 2: 20, 27, and 4: 13. "Christ in the heart of faith, rooted and grounded in love," "heart and mind kept by the peace of God through Christ Jesus," "rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory" in an unseen yet present Christ, possessing "the substance" of all "the exceeding great and precious promises"—this is the permanent state of those whose "life is hid with Christ in God." Eph. 3: 17; Philpp. 4: 7; 1 Pet. 1: 8; Heb. 11: 1; 2 Pet. 1: 4. Verily, the "elect of God" are "a peculiar people," "a royal priesthood," a "spiritual house built of living stones, offering up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 2: 5, 9.

It is no impertinent question, What are you doing in Colorado for Jesus? What are we doing in Pennsylvania? Are we faithfully "testifying the Gospel of the grace of God," "showing forth the praises of him who hath called out of darkness into his marvelous light," "building each other up in our most holy faith," "commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God," presenting the unmistakable testimony, "that we henceforth live not unto ourselves, but unto him who died for us, and rose again?" Acts 20: 24; 1 Pet. 2: 9; Jude 20; 2 Cor. 4: 2, and 5: 15.

Those who are born of God will live like God. 1 John 2: 6. The same spirit that fashioned the Christ also generates and directs and perfects the Christian. There is but one Holy Ghost, and he is the life of the everlasting Father and all the children. What a prerogative, what a hope, what a responsibility is ours! The world is to see in us the Beauty of Holiness and the Glory of God. We are "not to walk as other Gentiles walk," but as those who are "redeemed from all iniquity, purified unto God, zealous of good works." Titus 2: 14. Paul wept over some Philippian professors "whose God was their belly, who gloried in their shame, who minded earthly things, and were the enemies of the Cross of Christ, whose end was destruction." Philpp. 3: 18, 19.

Even now there are not a few who seem to think that all that is necessary is to attend to church ordinances and conventional rules, eat big dinners and suppers, and enjoy their pipe and quid. "From such turn away." Symbols and rules we must have, but they are of account only as they are utilized by the indwelling Christ. Some so misread my articles that they have become fixed in the opinion that I disparage ordinances. God forbid. On the contrary I am profoundly convinced that there is not one among us that fully comprehends the tremendous significance of baptism, feet-washing, and the Eucharist. We make too much of them as legal shifts, and far too little as symbols of eternal realities. O, the overpowering meaning of being "baptized in the likeness of his death, and being in the likeness of his resurrection!" Rom. 6: 3-11. This is salvation indeed! Finally: 2 Tim. 2: 7.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

THE Apocalypse is not to be regarded as a mystery, but an outline in symbols of the events contemporaneous with the history of the church, and which God designed that his people should know, to guard them from the delusions which should overspread the earth, and to encourage them to attain the crown of life.

The introduction to the Book confers a blessing upon the one that not only reads, but also hears and keeps the things written therein. Reading is not enough; hearing is not enough: we must keep,—observe. Reading may engage the eye and the mind. Hearing may engage the ear and the understanding. But God wants the heart and soul engaged in keeping his Word.

The Book of Revelation resolves itself into three divisions:

1. "Write the things which thou hast seen."
2. "And the things which are."
3. "And the things which shall be hereafter." Rev. 1: 19.

1. "The things which thou hast seen" includes all that is contained in the first chapter of the Book, and may likewise embrace the entire Gospel of the Son of God, as John was also a writer of one of the Gospels, of which fact he says, "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon and our hands have handled, of the Word of life." 1 John 1.

"The things which thou hast seen," as recorded in the first chapter, were the seven golden candlesticks, and in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of Man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. . . . And he had in his right hand seven stars."

Here was a view of the Heavenly Sanctuary; but it was different from the earthly sanctuary "wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shewbread." Here the difference between the Jewish and the Christian dispensations very distinctly appears. Then the glorious form of our Great High-priest who has entered into the heavens now to appear in the presence of God for us, is standing in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, with eyes as a flame of fire, watching the candlesticks which represent his church; and holding in his right hand "seven stars" which represent the messengers of his church. The seven churches of Asia are thus represented as a unit, with Christ as a center. The solemn fact is stated that the Lord's eyes are over those who profess to be his; and the messengers, or ministers, of the churches are also represented as a unit held in the right hand of the Son of God, directed and controlled by him.

2. "And the things which are," embrace what is recorded in the third and fourth chapters of the Book, and contains a graphic inside view of the seven churches in Asia, and through them a prophetic outline of nominal Christianity, or churches, that succeed each other to the end of time, from the church at Ephesus that had left her first love, to the church at Laodicea which fell into a lukewarm state. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

3. "And the things which shall be hereafter," begins with the fourth chapter, and here begins the prophetic part of the Book. "Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter." John is favored with a vision of heaven, the throne of God, the four and twenty elders, the Lamb as it had been slain, and an innumerable company of angels. He beholds the successive events that affect the church and the world as they are contemplated from heaven. Sin is seen to be exceedingly sinful, and the "wine of God's wrath is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation," in judgment upon a guilty world. We see the opening of the seven seals, hear the sound of the seven trumpets, and mark the pouring out of the seven vials followed by the seven last plagues. As seen from the pure light of heaven, the earth seems a vast ocean of sin, darkness, and disaster. The Beast with seven heads and ten horns, and the Dragon make sad havoc in the world. The blood of the martyrs of Jesus flows, and a woman, seated on a scarlet-colored beast, with a golden cup in her hand, symbolizes all that is cruel, corrupt and blood-thirsty, as Satan's embodiment of false Christianity.

This is Babylon, the mother of harlots, and she has many daughters. Her name suggests her true character, which is confusion. The church of God is also symbolized by a woman. But she is not carried by a beast, a temporal power. She is "clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." Here is the symbol of unity, light, purity, power and glory. This woman, as the symbol of the church, as a great wonder, appeared in heaven. The hundred forty and four thousand stood on Mount Zion. The great multitude which no man could number, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb. When John sees God's people whether as a church or as individuals, they stand out very prominent and beautiful,—far above this world. They are arrayed in garments of light and near fountains of Living Waters.

But the Lord shall come and destroy the wicked, and set up his kingdom. Babylon the great shall fall, Satan shall be bound—the last Judgment shall set, and the wicked shall be banished from the presence of God. A flood of glory now bursts upon our enraptured vision. A new heaven, —a new earth. No night there. No need of the sun. A more effulgent light appears. The glory of God and the Lamb is the light thereof—the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, shall descend out of heaven from God having the glory of God, her light as a gem, clear as crystal. Just so sure as there was an old Jerusalem, so sure will there be a New Jerusalem. The first had no permanent foundation, this will have twelve. The first was built of perishable material; this of imperishable, substantial, real. If there be a visible place in the future state, if there be a place where God manifests his glory, and the saints enjoy his presence, that place will be the New Jerusalem. This glorious city will come down from God out of heaven, but God and heaven will come with it and in it, for God's throne will be in it, and where God's throne is, there is heaven.

For sublimity and grandeur, the Book of Revelation stands unrivaled. It bears the stamp of Divinity from beginning to end. It is as far above human conception as the heavens are above the earth.

As a prophetic work, the Book of Revelation is complete. God fixed his seal upon it. There is nothing more to be revealed. There is no room for visions and latter day prophets. Stand back, ye day-dreamers and seekers after new revelations, and read with awe and reverence the solemn words: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

THE RESURRECTION.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

No. 5.—Glory of the Resurrection.

THE resurrection from the dead will be the most glorious event in the history of our life. Our life then will be as far superior to our life now, as the heavens are higher than the earth.

Our bodies will shine with a brilliancy that our mortal eyes could not look upon. Every member of our body will be perfect. There will be no cripples there, no blind, nor deaf, nor dumb, nor deformed in the least. Our bodies will not be cumbrous as now, but ethereal as the light, and susceptible of moving with the velocity of the lightning, and may, in the heavenly state, pass to and fro to distant worlds on missions of love and mercy from the Great and Loving Father of us all.

How great the glory will be when all the saints get home from the great battle-field of earth, having fought valiantly against the enemy and having held the field until the last, fallen with their armor on, only to rise again, crowned with victory over death and the grave! Upon them disease can have no power, and age make no impression. Their enjoyments and happiness are unbroken, and such that no mortal tongue can describe. No partings will be there. The home-circle of heaven, around the Father's throne, will never be broken by the ruthless hand of Death. Nothing, in all the range of heaven, among the many millions there, will occur to disturb the sweet repose and pure delight of that happy place.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE JUST AND THE UNJUST.

Why this difference? Simply on the ground of obedience and disobedience to God. All persons will not obey the Gospel. The masses love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. Persons who hear the Gospel, but refuse to open their hearts to the truth, and continue in rebellion to God till they die, will rise in the resurrection of the unjust. It can not be otherwise, "For whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8. All those that sow unto the flesh will rise from the seed sown, unjust before God. It would be just as unreasonable to expect to harvest wheat from sowing thistles, as to expect to reap life everlasting, by sowing unto the flesh—unto wickedness. Since we are all sowers, and since there is a bountiful supply of good seed, and since the harvest from the good seed sown will be very abundant, and excellent, may God help us all to sow bountifully, that we may reap an abundant harvest, by sharing in the resurrection of the just.

Coming forth in the resurrection of the unjust, means failure of life, of joy, of peace, of happiness, of heavenly associations, and, instead, a long, dark, gloomy night, with no star of hope to shine into the dark caverns of the wicked, when they are banished from the presence of God and the glory of his power.

MUSINGS BY THE WAY.

BY FANNY MORROW.

THE Psalms of David, while they are supposed to relate principally his own personal experience, are a fair exponent of the moral struggles of any Christian pilgrim, traveling from earth to heaven since his time. They also come nearer the spirit of the New Testament than any other Old Testament writings. While King David was a man of strong character, and his righteousness did shine in many respects, yet he was a man of many errors, of many faults, a man who committed many sins; but he manifested a noble characteristic in always repenting and confessing his sins. While his nobler nature yearned for communion with his Maker, he knew full well that, "two can not walk together unless they be agreed." He knew that sin never could agree with God,—so, in the valley of humiliation, he cried out and plead, day and night, for salvation from his sins and restoration to the favor of God. Hear him say, "As the hart panteth after the water-brook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Imagine you see the swift-footed, over-heated hart, just escaped from the hunter's shot! Over the arid ground he goes. Leaping and panting he reaches the water-brook. With evident delight he slakes his thirst,—the greatest want of his nature is satisfied. So the hungering, thirsting soul of man can only be satisfied by drinking the Water of Life from the well of salvation,—even Christ.

Hear the sublime strains of Isaiah as he cries out: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." "With joy ye shall draw water from the well of salvation." No doubt his exalted soul beheld in prophetic vision, the scene at Jacob's well, of Jesus, when wearied with his journey, he sat resting, as he spoke with the Samaritan woman about the natural water of Jacob's well, and made to her the important disclosure that he was "Christ, the Messiah,"—the living, spiritual well, of which, if a man drink he shall never thirst, for he would be in him a well of water, springing up unto eternal life.

Christ, the Living Water, satisfies and makes happy the human soul more than tongue or pen can ever express. But first, a soul must be thirsty,—must come to the water and DRINK. We believe a measure of thirst is found in every human soul on earth, a longing desire exists for something higher, purer than earth can yield, yet, alas! many come not to the fountain of life, but try to quench their thirst with empty, earthly baubles of folly or vice, until sin is formed within them a fountain of eternal death.

We read sometimes of travelers over the heated plains of Africa, suffering intensely for the want of water. Straining their eyes over the dreary sand-waste, the deceitful mirage mocks them with a sight of babbling brooks and refreshing fountains of water. Closing their parched and weary eyes, they dream of water, they see springs of water, pails and pitchers and bowls of water; only to awaken and find it all a delusion, and they, unrefreshed, must take up the burden and press on another day. So they proceed for many days, until, nearly perishing, they finally come in sight of an oasis. Trees and green grass appear within range of their vision,—so they know that water is there and they can have it freely, if they will only partake. How incomparably strange we would think their conduct, should they pass by, saying, "I will try the barren sands a little longer!"

But, in reality, would it be any more strange than to see such numbers of people in this Christian land of ours feeding upon husks of fashion, or trying, in any way, to satisfy their immortal natures with any earthly pleasure, that will flee before them like a shadow, instead of coming to the fountain that was opened in the house of David?

Hope is a very little word, but great in its far-reaching significance. A poet once wrote, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." We think we can see a verification of the truth of that sentiment in the conduct of the people of Western Kansas,—especially of farmers, who, in spite of former disappointments, are making active preparations for a determined effort to succeed in financial affairs this season. Hope is the secret spring of action which may prove to be their salvation in temporal affairs. The Apostle Paul says in one place, "For we are saved by hope," meaning probably spiritually saved. When a Christian starts out on his pilgrimage, he has a hope of reaching heaven,—a hope born of desire and expectation. If not very watchful he sometimes leaves the narrow way and is led into a by-path, and then, as John Bunyan relates it, he is captured and led into doubting castle, where he remains quite a while in a miserable condition. Finally hope suggests to him the key of promise, which readily unlocks for him the castle door, and he escapes the hand of Giant Despair. So he is saved by hope.

At a certain time the disciples came to Christ and told him of the success they had in the mission on which he had sent them, even the devils were subject to them. He cautioned them against self-exaltation, by saying, "Rejoice not that the spirits are subject to you, but rather rejoice that your names are written in heaven." These words of the dear Savior are brought to my mind every time I read a report of a series of meetings where a certain brother is said to have preached a number of sermons, and as an immediate result so many souls were baptized and brought into the fold. Paul may plant and Apollos water. God alone can give the increase.

DID CHRIST EAT THE LEGAL PASSOVER?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

THIS question is frequently asked, and refers to the last meal that he ate with his disciples before his death. We answer, that he did not. Let us notice a few proofs:

1. The preparation of the passover. Matt. 26: 19; Mark 14: 16; and Luke 22: 13. All agree, in regard to the preparation.

2. The eating of the passover. Upon this the three evangelists, above cited, all agree, as to time, manner, etc.

3. The question as to one of the disciples betraying him. Upon this, the same three evangelists again agree, all testifying that this question arose while they were eating that meal which they all call "passover." Then we have perfect harmony thus far!

4. The taking of the bread and cup in immediate connection with the passover meal. Matt. 26: 26, 27; Mark 14: 22, 23; Luke 22: 19, 20. Here, again, we find perfect harmony.

Now we have these four points fully established. Next we will notice the harmony between the supper, and feet-washing and the question as to who should betray him. Some think that Luke 22: 15-20, refers to two meals, one called "passover" and the other "supper." But he records the same thing as connected with "supper" as the others notice in connection with the passover. I mean the question as to the traitor. The three witnesses which we have examined all agree that Jesus sat down to the passover meal. John does not say anything about sitting down till after he had washed the disciples' feet. But he speaks of his rising from supper. Then, after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, he sat down again. So he must have sat down before he rose up to wash the disciples' feet. Then, after he had set down again, he entered into a conversation with them, which continued up to the eighteenth verse. John 13. There he informs them that one of them should betray him. "When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me. Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake. Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved. Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake. He then lying on Jesus' breast saith unto him, Lord, who is it?" John 13: 21-25.

Now you will notice that the three witnesses all testify that this question, as to who should betray him originated while they were eating what they call passover. Luke and John say it occurred at a meal which Luke calls both "passover" and "supper." And John calls it by no other name than "supper." John 21: 20 says, "Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?"

This now is the meal that they ate just after he had washed their feet. Then we have the testimony full and complete, that the supper that John speaks of is the identical meal that the other three evangelists call passover,—for the very same thing occurred at that supper, that occurred at the passover. This meal is rightly named "supper," for it was an evening meal, and it is also properly named when it is called "passover,"—for it pointed forward to the coming of Christ to reign,—same as the Jewish passover pointed forward to the coming Christ to die. That was their passover, but this is the Christian's passover, which, Jesus declared, would be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God. Luke 12: 37 says, "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them."

Here is where this passover will be fulfilled. Christ being the fulfillment of the legal passover, as prefigured by the lamb which was slain under the law, he must needs die at the time of killing the passover lamb, otherwise he could not have fulfilled the law, but dying at the time of killing the passover lamb, he fills the law to the letter. We know that, according to the account which we have of the passover, which he ate with his disciples, it was eaten the night before, and, therefore, could not have been the legal passover. He was instituting something for his followers to use as a medium through which they could ever have fresh in their memory, the great promise which he gave them of his coming again, to reign with them, and they with him. This passover, which he ate with his disciples, points forward to his coming again,—the same as the bread and cup of Communion point back to his suffering and death. These several things being associated together as they are, we feel that it is not safe to separate them and observe one of them to the exclusion of either of the others. Viewing the case from this stand-point we celebrate them in their proper relation one to another:

1. Feet-washing.
2. The passover or supper.
3. The Communion.

Jesus gave a precious promise to his followers, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13: 17.

WHY IS IT?

BY MARY M. COX.

WHY is it that so many of the professed followers of our Savior are content with observing only a part of his commandments? If we were subjects of an earthly king, we would have to obey the laws of that sovereign, yet we seem, by our actions, to think that we may trample under our feet the precepts of the Creator of heaven and earth, and still belong to his kingdom and receive the blessings of loyal subjects.

Jesus has said that he will not judge us at the last day, but that we shall be judged by the words spoken by him while here. He also says that when he comes in his Father's glory with the holy angels, he will be ashamed of those who are now ashamed of him and his words.

I was told this winter by a prominent member of one of our popular churches that they were allowed to practice feet-washing in private. He said he asked one of their ministers what they should do about the command of feet-washing and the minister replied that they could do nothing with it but wash feet. It seems that the minister looks on feet-washing as a command, yet he does not teach it, and if his members practice it, they must do so in private. This looks very much like being ashamed to obey what Jesus taught, both by precept and example. This is only one of many of the commandments of our Savior, that are not considered essential to our salvation, yet we are to be judged by his words.

If we love him we will be willing to obey him, no matter how we have to humble ourselves. We will esteem it greater honor to be subjects of Christ's kingdom than to be earthly rulers ourselves, for this world must pass away, but Christ's kingdom endureth forever!

If we endure unto the end, we will be repaid a thousandfold for every little act of self-denial. If we humble ourselves now, we shall then be exalted. Then, in every time of temptation, let us resist the devil and he will flee from us. Let us draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to us, and will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but will, with the temptation, make a way of escape.

Let us not be content with obeying only a part of Christ's commands, for he who has said that we must give an account of every idle word we speak, surely spake no idle words himself. When he said, "Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," he undoubtedly meant it. When he said, "Swear not at all, but let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil," he surely meant it. When he said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you and pray for those that despitefully use you, and persecute you," he meant it. When he said, "If I your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet," he meant what he said.

We believe that Jesus is the Son of God, and that he spake as God commanded him to speak.

Then, why is it that we are so careless about our soul's salvation? We know that obedience to his commands means eternal life, and disobedience, eternal death. If we know these things, happy are we if we do them.

NOTES AND COMMENTS ON "GOSPEL MESSENGER" NO. 13.

BY J. L. SWITZER.

"SHALL we permanently locate Annual Meeting?" This is the heading of Bro. John W. Brooks' article in GOSPEL MESSENGER for March 31. Certainly. Why? Because there are a great many disadvantages in moving it about, and not a single advantage.

If a man is sick, it is sometimes necessary to have his meals carried to him; otherwise it is more economical for him to go to his meals. It is certainly better to go to bed than to have the bed brought to us.

If Annual Meeting is in the East, it is further off from the Western Brethren; if in the West, it is further off from the Eastern Brethren. If in the center, it is equally distant from both. Select a favorable, permanent, central location, and save twenty-five or forty thousand dollars a year for missionary purposes.

Would not this be wise? Will some good, kind, loving, well-posted brother give us one advantage, pecuniary, social, religious, doctrinal, evangelical, educational, ethical, sanitary, somnolent, or epicurean, in the present method? In casting about for it, I have not yet been able to find it.

Then, if we can save money, and gain in every other way, I think, too, with Bro. Brooks, "that the time has come when we should make a move in this direction."

If it is to be located with regard to its missionary influences, I would recommend Bro. Joshua Shultz' district, which reaches from Dubuque to the south line of Muscatine County, Iowa, and he, in his seventy-fifth year, is the sole preacher in a large part of four Counties. When will we rise up and occupy the land?

A. S. Shook, of Greene, Iowa, says, "I think if we had more ministers in our church who would go every-where, preaching the Word, it would be a good thing for the church." So I think. Bro. Andrew Westergren, of Christianstad, Sweden, says, "We are praying to God to send some more true laborers to us. Bro. Olsson has too much to do; he has need of some helpers in the field."

Let us stop spending so much at Annual Meeting, and put more missionaries to work.

Bro. Brumbaugh gives us a ringing editorial against the rum power. It will bear reading twice.

The types changed Bro. Balsbaugh's "saved" into "sacred." The mistake is suggestive and significant. He whose name "is above every name," said something once himself about being "saved." If I can remember to quote it right, he did not say, "He that believeth and is baptized IS saved." "Sacred" comes nearer being correct.

A saved person is not one "whose baptism infolds the Lord's Supper, and whose life illustrates both," because it is possible to run well for a season. It is possible to receive seed among thorns, or on stony ground. It is possible to put our hands to the plow and, after awhile, look back, but "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. 24: 13 and Mark 13: 13. "Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee a crown of life." This is the "saved," that Christ means, when he says "saved."

Bro. M. T. Baer speaks of a Bro. J. M. Bailey, in Hickory County, Mo. I wonder if this is our old Jewell County, Kans., Bro. J. M. Bailey that was associated with me in soliciting aid for the grasshopper sufferers in 1874? Who can tell? If it is, I want to say to you, Bro. James, that the recent contributions for Western sufferers makes our work at that time look very insignificant, in comparison. It is astonishing, even to an old settler, what floods of treasure are being poured out in charity for the destitute in the West. Certainly, the Brethren are not less charitable, or less disposed to loving compassion, than they formerly were. The long lists of contributions, published weekly, are astonishing.

According to Bro. S. P. Weaver, each minister among the Brethren, has 31,926 souls in the United States under his care. Let us locate Annual Meeting permanently at some central place, and put more missionaries in the field. Last year there was only one converted to the Brethren out of about 19,000 in the United States, or about two persons to each minister in the church. Bro. Weaver says, "Are not these facts startling?" Yes, Bro. Weaver, they are startling! Let us do as much for the souls of the people as we do for the Western sufferers, and another year will tell a different story. "Not a missionary in the State of New York!" "None in Kentucky!"* "A dozen other States, the same!" Bro. Weaver suggests a missionary plan, in conclusion, that I heartily commend. He says, "Let every State District have a Mission Board. Let every church select a soliciting agent, who will solicit from every member of the church. Let every member give!"† That plan carried out will do the work.

Upon reconsidering the matter, I believe I would suggest New York or Kentucky, as favorable places to locate Annual Meeting.

At any rate, let us move it less, and our missonary cause more.

McCune, Kans.

*We have a Mission in each State. New York is supplied by Eastern Pennsylvania, and Kentucky by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger.

†This plan was adopted by Annual Meeting, at Dayton, Ohio, in 1884, and if all the Districts and churches would do their duty, we would have a wonderful increase in our missionary fund.—ED.

PROVE WHAT IS THAT GOOD AND PERFECT WILL OF GOD.

BY MARY M. BIDINGER.

IT is a Christian duty, obligatory upon each and every one of us to "prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." We must see whether our actions, daily life and conversation harmonize with the divine teachings. It is highly necessary to the growth of spiritual life that every thought, word or deed be brought into subjection to the will of God. Paul says, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

It is evident that our minds must be renewed before we are fully prepared to prove what is God's holy will, "because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Rom. 8: 7.

We should ever learn of Christ. He says, "Learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart." "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace unto the humble." We should not mind high things, but condescend to men of low estate." "Whatsoever is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the site of God."

We, who are young, will probably meet with many trials and temptations along life's pilgrimage here below. How necessary, then, that we prove all things and hold fast that which is good! In all our undertakings the question should always arise, "Is this pleasing to the Lord, and can I do thus or so to the honor and glory of God?" The subject of proving what is God's perfect will should concern us all. Without it we can not succeed in spiritual life. We, who profess to be followers of the Meek and Lowly Lamb of God, should exercise meekness. The apostle Peter tells us "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, is in the sight of God of great price." We should be partakers of the divine nature. The inspired writers spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

May we ever keep in view God's holy will. If we hunger and thirst after righteousness, we will be blessed and, no doubt, be able to prove what is God's perfect will in order to observe it.

Dear young sisters, let us try to adorn the doctrine of Christ as becometh Christians! We profess to follow in the footsteps of our Blessed Savior but the world watches us closely. May we ever be on our guard, looking unto Jesus for his divine aid and assistance that the enemy may not overcome us.

When we have finished our earthly course, may we be so unspeakably happy as to hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord!"

SUPPORTED MINISTRY.

BY S. S. MOHLER.

ALTHOUGH scarcely able to be seated on a chair for a brief time, amidst severe suffering, yet my spirit is moved to counteract a seemingly growing tendency in the direction, indicated by our heading, both by publication and by sermons preached. To me it does not seem possible to discover any difference in principle between a supported and a salaried ministry.

True, the faces look different, but the inherent principle is the same, and it will be but a short time, comparatively, until the salaried ministry occupies the field, with indescribable confusion among nearly, if not all, the churches, with the bold-daring spirits in the lead, "who love to preach for hire, and divine for money."

To give abundantly to ministers who are in fair circumstances is not just, but to give to the faithful poor minister should every-where be encouraged. Ministers, who have a comfortable patrimony, to become the advocates of a supported ministry and they themselves to become the beneficiaries of that system, gives an emphatic motive why they desire to preach. If such could be met on the threshold of their proposition, and be given time to consider the results of their ideas, outside of themselves, I believe the spirit of God would be sufficient to help them look all around and about the subject.

Warrensburg, Mo.

"WERE this world our only sphere of action we might be depressed at the thought of our unfinished plans, and of going before half of our work was done. But the very power which grasps at so much more than we can accomplish is prophetic of a higher life. We have been conscious of a spiritual activity which physical debility has prevented our bringing out. Is this to perish? Is the thirst for higher truth an illusion?"

A REMEDY FOR TROUBLE.

BY FLORIDA J. ETTER.

"WORK is your true remedy. If misfortune hits you hard, you hit somebody else hard, pitch into something with a will. There's nothing like good, solid, exhausting work to cure trouble. If you have met with losses (which we all have experienced in some shape or form), you don't want to lie awake and think about them. You want sound sleep, and eat your dinner with appetite. But you can not unless you work. If you say you do not feel like work and go loafing all day to tell Tom, Dick and Harry the story of your woes, you'll lie awake and keep your wife awake by your tossing, spoil your temper and your breakfast next morning, and begin to-morrow feeling ten times worse than you do to-day. (This will probably suit either sex).

"There are some great troubles that only time can heal, and perhaps some that can never be healed at all, except in heaven where the weary are at rest, but all can be helped by the great panacea, work. Try it if you are afflicted. It is not a patent medicine. It has proved its efficacy since the time when Adam and Eve left behind them, with weeping, their beautiful Eden. It has proved to be an efficient remedy. All good physicians prescribe it in cases of mental and moral diseases. It operates kindly, leaving no disagreeable effects and we assure you we have taken large quantities of it with most beneficial results. It will cure more complaints than any nostrum in the materia medica, and comes nearer to being a 'cure-all' than any drug or compound of drugs in the market. It will not sicken, even if you do not take it sugar-coated."

The above has been selected from another paper, and the remarks are worthy of observation. God will not give us more trials than we are able to bear, but they are sent as blessings in disguise. I often think we find too much fault with the wonderful works of God. Discontented with what we receive, we become dissatisfied because we can not have everything as we think it ought to be.

Let us remember that God's ways are not ours, or ours, his. He gives us far more than we deserve. If we have food and raiment, let us be content therewith. If we would trust God more and murmur less, we would be much happier. Let us trust his word, work and trust, watch and pray, that our minds be not carried away by the things of this sinful world. We will receive richer blessings, and in the end live with Christ and his holy ones in heaven!

On the Way.

MARCH 20 I met with the Brethren of the Berrien congregation, Mich., at their meeting. I was made happy to meet Bro. H. W. Kreighbaum, of South Bend, Ind. Bro. Kreighbaum did the preaching at the three meetings he was present and, if I could read the countenances of the congregation, it was much appreciated. Why do not some of our good brethren drop in and encourage this part of the Brotherhood?

I held two services at Hill's Corners, in the Disciple church. If those brethren, who have so much of missionary spirit, would come to Berrien County, Mich., they would find plenty to do for years. We baptized one brother and have the promise of one more wanderer to return to the Father's house. Oh, how anxious the church is to welcome those, who have left us for trivial causes, back to the fold again!

The council-meeting, held at Berrien, was a pleasant one. Much improvement was noticeable in church government. Order is one of God's first laws. I am happy to see members labor for unity of sentiment, both in heart and appearance.

While at Buchanan, we anointed sister Johnson. She is old and feeble,—not likely to recover. We are having much sickness and many deaths. There is much trouble here with La Grippe. Many suffer from relapses, which prove to be especially severe on the lungs.

April 2, we met in District Council of Northern Indiana. Said meeting was held in Allen County, in Bro. Jeremiah Gump's congregation. Bro. Hillery was present. The meeting was a pleasant one indeed. Bro. W. R. Deeter was appointed Moderator; A. H. Puterbaugh, Writing Clerk, and J. C. Murray, Reading Clerk. No papers were sent to Annual Meeting.

Our time for holding District Meeting was changed from the first Thursday in April to the first Thursday of October. The meeting requested a ministerial meeting to be held the day before, which was granted, and a sermon on church government will be preached the same evening. A program will be given of the meeting, and sent to those brethren who are to make the leading speeches. We hope that the District Meeting will take an active part in these services.

A committee of three brethren was appointed to confer with a similar committee of Middle Indiana, to more fully locate and establish a State District line from Ohio through Indiana to Illinois, so that our Home Missionary Boards can be better prepared to know where to send their evangelists.

Bro. Jeremiah Gump has been prostrated by a low grade of fever, also several of his children. For that reason he was not able to be at the meeting.

Our Work in Ohio.

THIS winter has marked a new era in the annals of our church history. The cheering news comes from every portion of our beloved Brotherhood, that sinners are flocking home to God. Praise to Immanuel! The waters of Bethesda have again and again been troubled, and hundreds are stepping in. Thousands of sympathetic hearts have been touched at the recital of the "Story of the Cross," who have refused to enter its shadow and walk with Jesus, but have readily assisted in relieving the sufferers in the West.

Portions of Ohio have been especially blest. The spiritual blessings which have come to us, have more than equalled those temporal things which have been sacrificed to make our Western friends happy; yea, can there be any comparison? Having passed through Baca's vale and tasted of Marah's bitter stream, we rested for a time. Then our "Bethel" was reached and we could see the angels ascending and descending upon the ladder that reached into heaven. Whole congregations have been moved to tears of joy, as another and still another name was recorded in the Book of Life. Heaven's vaults have, likewise, been ringing with angel song and praise, and the rainbow of promise is anchored to the earth. The fire upon the altars of the pilgrims has been dimmed by the shadow of the cross and the light of the victor's crown. Fathers and mothers are not yet done thanking God for the salvation of their sons and daughters, and children are wondering why home is so cheerful now, and what has brought such a sweet change in the lives of their parents.

Some poor hearts, however, are bleeding and eyes fill with tears, as they sadly tell you they were ready to come to the church but—poor souls! they can not tell it for their grief. How we pity them! O how happy we would be to have a personal interview with each one who has lately enlisted for Christ! Don't you now delight to read 1 John 3, and to drink deep at the fountain of God's love as you read the last chapter of Revelation and sing hymn 488? But while the chapter first named is good, while heaven is so near, just turn back occasionally and read the second chapter, and then farther back and read Eph. 6, and then you will get an appetite for more of the precious bread and water of life that ye may grow thereby.

It is very important that we start out right, and then our battles are more easily fought and victories gained. The church will be far more willing to pardon your blunders than you are to retrace your steps when you are shown to be wrong. You must grow into the usages of the church, as you are commanded to grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. You will find a thousand temptations to every helping hand along the journey of life, but one victory gained will show a hundred vanquished foes. May the Lord help you and us to be shining lights in the church, and finally bring us to our Father's house on high!

A. G. CROSSWHITE.

Gratis, Ohio, March 31.

To the Bereaved Wife and Daughters of Eld. D. K. Berkebile.

THERE is no more divine truth than that,

"There is a happy land, Far, far away,"

and that our ransomed loved ones wait for us on that blessed, eternal shore.

We can not see why it is that those who have been a blessing and help to all around them are taken from us, but God, in his infinite wisdom and mercy, knows best and will bless in the end. We may never fathom the purposes of God in taking our loved ones from us, yet there is not a more conscious fact in all our life and soul, than that the things which have been counted calamities and which have cost us pain and tears, have been the hinges upon which the stubborn doors of mind and heart have opened to nobler influences, loftier motives and diviner attainments.

To the dear wife, and daughter Ella, we would say, "Be faithful and you will realize that the crowning diadem of all wonder and reality in earth and sky is the blessed fact of there being a God and angels and heaven, and immortal men and women, who have been redeemed from the sorrow and sin of this life and are dwelling in eternal life and peace in mansions above. If we are found in the path of faith and duty, the greatest changes will only carry us upward and Godward."

Dear Ada, when you obey the divine commands of your Maker, as your dear father so earnestly taught, you can, like him, face the world and all its temptations with a courageous heart, and pass through death's shadowy valley fearlessly.

Only when the dark cloud, which now seems to shadow your lives, is viewed through the eye of faith, can you see the lining of gold and precious jewels, for by death, though we seem to lose, both the departed and the stricken ones, they gain infinitely.

Your loved one has gained peace and happiness, and is enjoying the rest that "remaineth for the children of God." You have gained an angelic face added to those gone before, to smile a welcome to you as you near the golden gate.

Life and death are our portion. Let us live, following the example of Christ Jesus, and death will be but a serene sleep before the resurrection.

Look out for Impostors!

WE have been annoyed for some time by elders writing for information concerning a man and woman,—John Hiles and Mary, his wife,—who were baptized in the Hopewell church. They came to Hopewell township some time last summer, and both worked out; they never kept house. Then they left and went to the Woodbury church, and stayed there about two weeks previous to their love-feast. There they made application for baptism, but it being too late in the evening to be attended to at that time, they put it off for two or three days, and came down to our love-feast and were baptized. On those grounds the majority of our officials refused them a certificate,—especially as several of the Woodbury members were present and brought them to us.

Now these parties are running from place to place and telling untruths, saying, among other things, that in the Cove they threatened to shoot them, and that in Hopewell township they were burnt out. They named two different locations where they lived in said township and were burnt out. This is all false.

By order of the Hopewell church,

ABRAHAM STEELE, Clerk.

A Glorious Feast.

WE have enjoyed refreshing showers from the presence of the Lord, during a series of meetings in the Upper Stillwater church, Ohio, beginning March 15, and closing April 5. Bro. Isaac Frantz preached thirty-six soul-stirring sermons, and held one children's meeting. Much interest was manifested both in and out of the church, the members were revived to more love and zeal for the cause of our Master, and those outside were brought to serious reflections. Forty-one souls were baptized, one reclaimed, and we have three applicants for next Sunday. Others are almost persuaded, but are still waiting. May God help them to pay their vows, that they may secure salvation while yet they have the opportunity! May God help us all to be ensamples to those lambs, and teach them more fully the way of salvation, that we may grow up as one common family, to praise God in his church here, and at last meet in heaven to enjoy peace with God!

We organized our Sunday-school yesterday, with Jeremiah Hollinger as Superintendent and Bro. L. E. Conway, Assistant. May God bless the work!

OUR quarterly council occurred April 4. Love and union seemed to prevail among the members. Bro. John Cripe and Bro. G. W. Harter were elected as delegates to represent us at our coming District Meeting. We also adopted the following plan to raise money to meet our church expenses: We elected four brethren as a committee to determine the amount needed to meet all expense. Said committee is to assess each member owning property at its cash value, placing thereon a certain per cent of tax,—enough to raise the desired amount. By this means each one pays according to his actual worth. All are brought on an equality, and all know their proportion.

We also effected a partial organization of our Sunday-school by electing our Superintendent and Assistant. We decided to use the Brethren's supplies.

On Sunday, April 5, one more precious soul was made willing to forsake sin and follow in her Savior's footsteps. We are hopeful that the ranks of Satan are being broken, and that others will follow the good example of the dear young sister. May we ever be found faithfully encouraging the young to fight the battles of the Lord in their youth!

WE are now living in the Round Mountain church, Washington Co., Ark. Mother-in-law (Ann M. Cosner) came two weeks before the rest of the family did, and when we got here we found her very poorly with La Grippe. She is now nearly well again.

We arrived here a little after the middle of February and in nine days one of our little boys (Walter), took sick. We knew not what was the matter until the third or fourth day when he broke out with the measles, and on the fifteenth day, after our arrival here, wife also took the measles. She was very sick and at times it seemed that she would not get well any more, but the good Lord spared her. Then the other children,—five more,—took the disease from the others, about the same time and through it we lost our youngest son,—Dennis,—nearly three years old. He was always peculiarly loving, good and kind and it was hard for the whole family to part with one so dear. But the Lord gave and he has taken, so we say, "Let his will be done." The rest of the family are all about well again. Owing to sickness I could not answer my correspondents.

The writer intends to labor for the interest of the church to the best of his ability. We love to see the church prosper. The welfare of the church should be first with all, and other matters secondary.

We now have social meeting every Thursday night and will have preaching nearly every Sunday. The attendance at meeting is generally good and, according to present outlook, things look favorable.

* * *

All are well pleased with our new home. The weather is pleasant. People are planting corn, and the prospects are good for a large fruit crop.

My Visit to the Palestine Congregation, Ohio.

ON Sunday evening, Feb. 8, I met with the Brethren of the Palestine church at their Beech Grove house and preached for them until the 22nd. Part of the time the weather was unpleasant, which hindered many in coming to the meetings, yet, with all the hinderances that seemed to militate against the interest of the meetings, the Lord blessed the church with seven additions, and the meetings closed with a good interest.

The ministers here are George Stump, Moses Hollinger, and David Hollinger. Eld. Jesse Stutsman has charge of the church. Judging by my association with the church, I am constrained to believe that, with a united effort, the Palestine church can soon be one of the strong churches of the Miami Valley. May the Lord abundantly bless them to this end!

I returned home March 22. The church at home and home interests will claim the rest of my time this spring and summer. May the Lord abundantly bless the churches in which we labored during the past few months. As our associations have been pleasant, but may never again be enjoyed in this life, I would exhort all ever to be faithful!

Special Council.

WE, the members of the Union City church met in council, April 4, for the special purpose of dividing our church district. Eld. Tobias Krider, Eld. J. Katherman and Bro. G. C. Stump were present and assisted in the work. The subject was well considered, then disposed of, we hope, to the satisfaction of all. The elders of adjoining Districts will meet with the brethren and sisters at the Pleasant Valley meeting-house April 22, to more fully organize. May God's choicest blessing ever rest upon them that they may be able to press forward in the noble work that is now resting upon them.

We send Bro. Henry Cook and Bro. Samuel Blocher as delegates to District Meeting, and Bro. Blocher to Annual Meeting. Bro. Amos Cook was chosen as Superintendent of our Sunday-school and Bro. Henry Kunkle as Assistant. Our love-feast will occur Oct. 15, at the Brick church, beginning at 10 A. M. All business that came before the meeting was disposed of satisfactorily.

ESTA SIMMONS.

Union City, Ind., April 7.

From the Solomon Creek Church, Ind.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER came to the Brethren at Syracuse, March 11, and gave us a series of doctrinal sermons each day and evening until the evening of April 2. We were all made to feel sad when Bro. Rosenberger was called home by a telegram.

Bro. Rosenberger's doctrinal sermons were plain and pointed, his appeals fervent, and his warnings and instructions brimful of Gospel Truth. Members of other denominations were made to reflect. As an immediate result eighteen precious souls were added to the church by baptism, eight of whom were between twelve and fifteen years of age. Our prayer is, that those young members may walk aright, that, by their good works, others may be constrained to follow.

Bro. Lemuel Hillery, we understand, is holding meetings at the Whitehead house in the Union Center congregation. One was baptized at that place on last Sunday. Bro. Hillery is locating one mile west of the Big church in the Solomon Creek congregation.

SOME time ago I gave notice through the GOSPEL MESSENGER that we were in the midst of a grand revival, at which meeting twenty-nine came out on the Lord's side. Bro. Peter Stuckman did the preaching. He preached the Word in power and demonstration, until sinners were made to tremble and saints to rejoice. We had to close our meetings too soon. Our meetings were held in a union church, and we had to give up the house for another denomination.

Bro. Peter came back the first Sunday of March, and stayed five days. At that time nine more made the good choice. The church is in love and union and marching on to victory. May there be a waking up all along the line! God wants consecrated hearts and lives.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

BRO. W. H. BOWSER changes his address to Bush Park, Va.

"LIFE is a sacred trust to you, my brother, my sister. What are you doing to be a faithful steward of that wherewith the Lord has blessed you?"

BRO. L. SUTPHIN asks us to correct the report of funds for Western sufferers by having it read Henrietta Potter, member of Weeping Water church, instead of J. J. and Viola Miller.

AT Port Huron, Michigan, a new religious organization has been formed, bearing the name of the "New House of Israel." The object of the society it is stated, "is to gather into one fold the twelve tribes of Israel, scattered abroad, the time being now come for their restoration and redemption." This may be one of the signs of the times that indicate that the second coming of Christ is near at hand.

BRO. JOHN BOWMAN, of Warrensburgh, Mo., met with a painful accident, by which his shoulder was dislocated. He is also suffering from rheumatism. We express the hope that our brother may soon recover.

BRO. WILLIAM HAMER, of Pittsburgh, Crawford Co., Kans., says he will give a lot on which to build a house of worship. He would be glad to have the Brethren come and preach at that place. Will the Kansas Brethren please look after this call?

OUR old brother, Eld. Samuel Murray, of River, Ind., who passed his eighty-fifth birthday April 1st, writes us that he and wife have been visiting among the members and friends, and attending meetings. They were at the District Meeting of Middle Indiana. Bro. Murray is enjoying fairly good health, and closes by saying: "We praise God and thank him for his care over us. Brethren and sisters pray for us!"

IN distributing the funds raised for the Western sufferers, Bro. J. E. Young has rendered most valuable assistance. Indeed, he has given his entire time for several months to the work. Through his agency nearly eight hundred families have received assistance, and these are scattered over six Counties of Western Nebraska. Those who have given the subject but little thought, have no idea of the amount of labor connected with the distribution of the funds. In Kansas, Colorado and Dakota, probably not less than twelve hundred families have received aid, and in the majority of cases the money was paid out under the personal supervision of some competent person. In a very few cases money has been sent by mail to those in need, when proper recommendations have been furnished, but the rule has been to personally investigate, and thus be sure that the money was going into the hands of the needy. This has all involved a large amount of work, and Bro. Young has borne a large share of the burden. He is not blessed with a competency, but depends upon his day's labor at the carpenter's bench for his support, preaching on the Lord's Day. We ought to help him to bear the burden.

WE acknowledge the receipt of the Minutes of the District Meeting of Southern Indiana, held March 25th and 26th, 1891, for which we are indebted to Bro. Lewis W. Teeter, the Clerk of the Meeting. Only one petition goes to Annual Meeting, and that is a renewal of the request made in 1890, that the Conference for 1892 be held in the Southern District of Indiana. A ministerial meeting was provided for, and the missionary work of the District occupied a good deal of attention, but not more than its importance requires. The Church Erection and Missionary Committee adopted a constitution in line with the work of the General Committee. We are especially pleased with the disposition manifested to push the missionary work. If our State Districts, thirty-three in number, will each adopt a missionary plan, and select a committee of live, wide-awake, energetic, faithful brethren to push the work, a wonderful work might be accomplished in the next ten years. We have the truth, let us make a stronger effort to give it to the world. The Southern District of Indiana is to be mapped for the benefit of the Committee, so that they may know where every church is located, and the extent of their mission fields. This is an excellent idea. It was adopted by the General Committee sometime ago, but they have not yet succeeded in securing maps of all the States. Bro. Teeter will please accept our thanks for the Minutes. We invite other Clerks of the Districts to favor us in the same way.

BRO. SAMUEL DUNCAN, of Jericho, Cedar Co., Mo., asks us to say that he would be willing to take a boy into his family to raise. Further information may be obtained by addressing him as above.

BRO. C. D. HYLTON, of Virginia, writing under date of the 7th inst., says: "The snow is about twelve inches deep here this morning. No doubt many Brethren will be deprived of attending our District Meeting on account of the snow."

A LETTER written with lead-pencil from Bro. C. C. Arnold, is so badly marred, that it is almost impossible to decipher it. Brethren please, PLEASE use pen and ink when writing for the paper, otherwise your letters may not find a place in the MESSENGER.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

SINCE our last notice some changes have been made in the railroad arrangements. The sale of tickets had been limited from June 20 to 28. This would have compelled all, who wished to attend the meeting, to start on or before May 28th. We at once applied to the Central Traffic Association to have the latter date changed to June 1, and this request has been granted. We now announce the following rates and limit of tickets.

THE CENTRAL TRAFFIC ASSOCIATION, comprising the territory east of Chicago and St. Louis and west of the Ohio River, will sell tickets at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale from May 20 to June 1 inclusive, good to return until June 30th, with stop-over privilege east of the Ohio River.

THE TRUNK LINE ASSOCIATION, which takes in the territory east of the Ohio River, including the Valley of Virginia and the New England and Eastern States, will sell tickets at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale from May 25th to June 5th inclusive, good to return until June 15th, good for one stop-over privilege in each direction.

THE WESTERN PASSENGER ASSOCIATION, which includes all the territory west of Chicago and east of the Missouri River, and we understand controls part of the territory west of the Missouri, has made the following arrangements for those desiring to attend Annual Meeting: The rate to be one fare and a third for the round trip. Tickets will be placed on sale May 20th, and will be good to return until June 30th. The rate of one and one-third fare is not satisfactory, but up to this time it is the best we can report from the Western roads. We have written a number of letters in regard to it, and may be able to secure a one-fare rate. The Western roads feel the pressure of hard times, and are not willing to make concessions heretofore granted. They have made rates to a number of meetings and conventions, and the rate of a fare and a third has been the best given. If a better rate can be secured, it will be announced in due time.

The fare from any point west of Chicago may be ascertained by adding one fare and a third to the Chicago rate, $17.25. For example, suppose the fare from your place to Chicago is $3.00, you add one-third, making it $4.00, and add this to the one fare rate from Chicago, $17.25, and you have the rate of $21.25 from your place to Hagerstown, Maryland, and return.

As stated in the previous notice, the tickets are not transferable, and are to be signed by the purchaser, and will only be accepted for passage on return trip, when countersigned by the proper agent at Hagerstown, Maryland.

Please notice Bro. W. S. Reichard's letter in this issue of the MESSENGER, also the communication from the Lodging Committee.

THANKFULNESS.

THE following resolution passed by some of those who have received assistance in the West, has been received at this office:

"Resolved, That we, citizens of Hayes, Linco'n and Frontier Counties, Nebr., in recognition of the kindness of the members of the Brethren or Dunkard church, who so liberally responded to the call for aid, and the wise and impartial way in which Mr. J. E. Young, of Beatrice, has provided for its distribution through his agents, Messrs. Pelton and Twiss at Maywood, Nebr, therefore be it

"Resolved, That we hereby express our sincere thanks to the Brethren or Dunkard denomination, Mr. Young, and Messrs. Pelton and Twiss for what they have done toward providing the necessaries of life during our time of need.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. J. E. Young with the privilege of publishing them, and that a copy be furnished the Maywood Standard for publication.

"[Signed, Chris. Jenson, R. Thompson, P. R. White, E. M. Nussbaum, M. S. Sweet, Edwin Geraghty, G. W. Piper, Reuben Stewart, J. W. Porter, Jacob Burton, L. H. Roberts, Lon Blake, E. L. Bucker, Chas. We have received a number of letters, expressing the deepest gratitude for the help received. We know the people are grateful and thankful for the help they have received. If space would permit, we could fill the paper with letters. Here is an extract from one that puts the case thus strongly: "The Brethren and their friends are doing more for the Western sufferers and the needy, than all the other societies, religious and secret combined, and in the only practical way, viz., by personally looking up the needy ones, and abundantly supplying them."

In a few cases some have not received all that they wanted, and, forgetting to be thankful for even small favors, have complained, but this class of people is to be found in every community. We must bear with them, and go on doing them good as opportunity offers. We are glad to know, however, that these are only isolated cases, and that the great mass of those who have been helped are grateful.

THE CHURCH CENSUS FOR 1890.

THE Census of 1890, taken by the Government, is perhaps one of the most comprehensive in the history of our country. An immense amount of time and labor has been given to the work of securing correct statistics of the United States, and it is believed, that, when completed, the Census will be accurate and trustworthy. The work of securing the Census of the different denominations was placed in the hands of Dr. H. K. Carroll, editor of the New York Independent, as special agent of the Eleventh Census. By request of Dr. Carroll we rendered such assistance as we could to secure a correct Census of our own church, and this has been so far completed, that we can now give the results. In doing this let no one conclude that it is done with a view of boasting, for surely we have nothing to boast of. The numbers are given because they may be helpful to us. So little has been done, and so much remains to be done, that we may, with this knowledge before us, go to work with more energy than ever before, to spread the Truth and enlarge the borders of Zion.

As to the reliability of the figures given, we believe they are approximately correct. They fall rather below the actual membership of the church. It is always a difficult matter to secure a correct count of our members. Church records are not the rule among us, and some, fearing that giving our numbers may bring about a spirit of boasting, are loath to give the desired information. These causes operated to some extent in the present Census, and hence we are of the opinion that the total is rather below the number of our membership. It will, however, form the basis of comparison for the future.

A good deal of time and labor was spent in securing the statistics. In some cases we sent out four schedules before receiving the desired information. Many schedules received were returned for correction and verification. We have a number of isolated members, but it is believed that the last item in the following tabulated statement is large enough to cover all of this class.

We are glad to be able to give to our readers the following statement, taken from the schedules as received:

By a comparison of the foregoing table with the Census of 1880, as furnished by Bro. Howard Miller in his "Record of the Faithful," we find that the church, during the last ten years, has had a constant and healthy growth. Bro. Miller's Census, after deducting the Old Order Brethren, showed a total of 54,799. This included the Progressive Brethren who have, since then, withdrawn from the church, to the number of between four and five thousand. For comparison it will be safe to say, counting out the Progressive Brethren, that we had, in round numbers, not more than fifty thousand souls, and, placing our present number at sixty-one thousand, we have added to our number in the last decade, eleven thousand. This places the ratio of increase at twenty-two per cent which is, when all things are taken into consideration, quite encouraging.

In the ten years covered by the report, the church has passed through a severe trial. Two branches have withdrawn from her communion, carrying with them not less than eight thousand members. The bitterness of feeling and loss of love, and, consequently, spiritual power, brought about by these divisions, paralyzed the local churches in many places, and they have not, as yet, fully recovered from the great loss, but notwithstanding this, the Lord has continued to bless the church and give her increased strength.

The Census report of 1890 shows that the Progressive Brethren number eight thousand and twenty, and the Old Order Brethren have probably between two and three thousand; both together they number, say eleven thousand. If we could have walked and worked together in peace and harmony, with a full measure of the love of God in our hearts, how much more good might have been accomplished! Eternity alone will reveal the evils of division.

It will be noticed that there are 621 organized churches in the Brotherhood. This includes organizations whose membership reaches 500, as well as those whose numbers are indicated by less than a score. The average membership to each congregation falls but a fraction below 100. In the Eastern States the average is much the largest. In Maryland the average is 184; Virginia, 183; Pennsylvania, 172; Indiana, 112; Illinois, 72; Kansas, 58, and Nebraska, 36. We might continue these comparisons, but these will suggest something to those who think, and doubtless the thought will occur: "How can we best build up the weak churches?"

Another fact to which attention is called, is the estimated value of our houses of worship. The total valuation is one million one hundred and twenty-four thousand four hundred and thirteen dollars for the eight hundred and fifty-eight meeting-houses owned by the Brethren. The average cost of the houses is only $1,311. Surely no one will charge us with being extravagant in the matter of putting large sums of money into our houses of worship.

We might draw other lessons from the Census, but we let this suffice. The future lies before us. Shall we not go to work with renewed zeal, to win souls to Christ? Let us not trust in numbers, or boast of our own strength, but, trusting in the Living God, with full confidence in his Word and in the principles of our church, based as they are upon the everlasting Gospel of Peace, with "charity for all and malice toward none," let us work with renewed zeal for the advancement of the cause so dear to the heart of every faithful child of God.

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 2.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."—2 Cor. 8: 12.

THANK GOD FOR THE BIBLE.

THANK God for the Bible, whose clear shining ray
Has lighted our path and turned night into day;
Its wonderful treasures have never been told,
More precious than rubies set round with pure gold.

Thank God for the Bible; in sickness or health,
It brings richer comforts than honor or wealth;
Its blessings are boundless—an infinite store;
We may drink of its fountain and thirst never more.

Thank God for the Bible sent down from above,
Revealing to mortals God's measureless love;
A fathomless sea with its bright, shining shore,
Where the glorified dwell and are safe evermore.

Thank God for the Bible—grand trophies untold
Are laid up in store in its city of gold,
That beautiful home of the saved and the blest,
Where no sorrow can come, where the weary find rest.

Thank God for the Bible! How dark is the night
Where no ray from its pages sheds forth its pure light!
No Jesus, no Bible, no heaven of rest
Oh, how could we live were our lives so unblest!

There are millions who wander in darkness to-day,
No Jesus, no Bible, no knowledge to pray;
God help us TO FEEL and TO ACT in His sight,
To render our thanks, now, by GIVING THEM LIGHT.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE.

1. STUDY it.

2. Study it as you would any other book. Read it naturally.

3. Study it as you would no other book. Recognize its supernatural side.

4. Study it as if it were one book, the record of a continuous revelation. In this way we see the progressiveness of that revelation, as men "were able to bear it."

5. Study it as if it were a library of sixty-six books, each book requiring intense and separate study.

6. Study it under the guidance of no one but the Holy Ghost and an enlightened understanding. Abhor the indiscriminate use of "helps."

7. Study it under the guidance of some accredited teacher. The instinctive cry, "How can I understand except some one guide me?" is happily answered, when some Philip comes along.

8. Study it on the knees; i. e., have a regular devotional hour with which nothing interferes. The Revised Bible is better for devotional, as it is for critical, use.

9. Study it when the mind is freshest, if possible. Let the devotional hour, or half hour, be in the morning, if possible.

10. Study it with pencil in hand, and a map in hand when necessary. Paraphrase, annotate. Use note-books freely. Write out analysis of books. Tabulate Christ's teachings. Tabulate the reign of Judah's and Israel's kings, with dates of contemporaneous prophets. Make a diagram of the tabernacle, etc.

11. Study it topically. Hunt out a single word, or thought, through the Scriptures, first without, then with, a concordance.

12. Study it chronologically. Although the books of the Bible are not in their chronological order, they are enough so to pay to learn their names in the order in which they come. Divide the Bible into periods historically, remembering to make a break at the twelfth chapter of First Kings, where the divided monarchy begins. Such a division as this would be sufficiently accurate to embrace all the books in the Bible: the Antediluvian, the Patriarchal, the Theocratic, the Monarchical, the Monarchico-prophetical (which might be taken to include the duration of the Northern and Southern kingdoms), the Rabbinical, the Christian.

13. Study it philosophically. Read "between the lines." There is a philosophy of history. Israel's future for hundreds of years, her preservation, education and augmentation, were in the pit with Joseph and the passing caravan of Egyptian merchants. Egypt and Assyria were her "schools," where she matriculated at enormous cost to herself, but when she graduated, the lessons she learned were worth the price of tuition. In the Bible we see kings ascending thrones, synagogues established, languages spoken, highways constructed, at just such times as to best further God's plans.

14. Study it realistically. Paint it to the mind by reading it over and over again, and by reading everything which will illustrate its scenes, stories, and truths; travels, histories of the Jews and of ancient monarchies; lives of Christ and of other Biblical characters; monographs on special Scriptural subjects, etc.

15. Study the biographies of the Bible in their Biblical form and as a whole. Pick it up here and there, and read a life at one sitting. Above all, trace out the Life of that one, the idea of which appears with the dawnings of human history, is vague in the Pentateuch, legible in the later historical and prophetical books, resplendent in the Gospel.

17. Study New Testament truths shadowed on the Old Testament page.

18. Study the Bible with memoriter work, on single passages, Psalms, or verses, and on the order of the thought in the separate books. Memorize the thought of Scripture. Be able to think a book through. A good exercise is for one to read a verse, and then some one tell where it is found, in what book and what chapter.

19. Study portions where you are weak, the minor prophets for example. If any part is like a rock, smite it in earnest, and the waters will gush out. The reward is in proportion to the labor.

20. Study the Bible with a view to communicating it. We qualify ourselves to impart, by painstaking preparation.—Selected.

"THE great design, both in judgments and mercies, is to convince us that there is none like the Lord our God, none so wise, so mighty, so good; no enemy so formidable, no friend so desirable, so valuable."

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIBSON.

Dear Children:—

DUTY seems to press me to write for our mission, and willingness prompts me to resume my pen in behalf of our work. When God has given us a work we should not become careless or dilatory concerning it, but always remember that he will hold us responsible for the things of this life, whether done, or undone. If done, a good reward will be gained; if left undone, a sad and just punishment will be ours.

Do we not even realize torture here now, by being careless, disobedient children? Are we not smitten with a guilty conscience that needs no accuser? When we lie down at night, our rest is not sweet, and our sleep is not refreshing. True, sometimes we are made to suffer when innocent and true, but, how consoling when we can pray as Jesus did in the Garden of Gethsemane, and in the agony upon the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Those of like precious faith have a work to do for the redemption of the souls of the children of men. We should daily be about our Father's business, regardless of sorrow or affliction, for Christ, our King, was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. When trials come upon us, let us pray, "Father, grant us thy wisdom from above, that we might do all things well pleasing in thy sight!"

God is daily conferring rich blessings upon us, and oh, how thankful we should be for his goodness! Look within, around and about us,—what are we, what have we! What is ours, and what might we be, to his name's honor and glory? Oh, we fall too short! Man is the image and glory of God, and should be wholly consecrated to his will, both to will and to do at his own good pleasure.

Dear children, we are glad to inform you that our work is advancing slowly. Our amount almost reaches that of our last June report, for which I am very thankful indeed. Scarcely a week passes but we receive something that magnifies our list. Indeed, God is ever mindful of his own. The nearer the time comes to send in our report, the greater and faster is the increase. We would be glad, indeed, for all to send in their donations by the middle of May, that we might be well represented at our Annual Meeting June 2, as that is the time the general missionary amount will be reported by Bro. G. B. Royer. Ours is classed, reported and used with the other missionary funds, and we are glad that thus a proper use is made of the money.

We have been made to wonder how many Sunday-schools will be represented. We are glad to tell you that ours has never yet failed to be represented since our little mission has been established. So it might be with many others; if there were some live, active member or Superintendent that would take hold of the work willingly and submissively, God might be glorified thereby. But few Sunday-schools are represented that might be, out of the vast number of organized schools we have in our Brotherhood.

The Mission Work is in need of means for the starving souls that are perishing for the Bread of Life. We have given of our means liberally to those who were perishing for want of food and raiment, to sustain this temporal life, but of how much more importance is it, to feed the soul that goes into eternal bliss and never dies! The Lord has given us many things, and we should lend unto the Lord a due portion. If it be talent, let us give it back; if means, let us give what is due him. We may be ever so poor in this world's goods, but, if blessed with good talents, God will hold us responsible for the use we make of the gifts wherewith he has blessed us.

We may be rich and have abundance in this world's goods, and not be blessed with a bright talent of intellect, but good can come out of it just the same, if we act as his wise and good stewards over that which God has given us. We are all to covet earnestly the best gifts, that we may reap a rich reward in the eternal world. So let us all be up and doing, that saints may rejoice, sinners be made to believe, and that God, our Father, might be glorified.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

OFFICERS ELECTED.—On Sunday, April 5, the following brethren were elected to conduct the Sunday-school at the Holsinger church, Pa., for this summer: Superintendent, Bro. James D. Brumbaugh; Assistant, D. S. Replogle. First meeting for organization and work will be on Sunday morning, April 19.—D. S. Replogle, Maria, Pa.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—April 5 the brethren, sisters and friends of the Brownsville Sunday-school met for re-organization. Bro. George W. Fouch was elected Superintendent; Bro. J. E. M. Castle, First Assistant; and Bro. George B. Jennings, Second Assistant. The prospect for a full and interesting school this season, is bright.—Annie M. Jennings, Brownsville, Md., April 6.

MINISTER NEEDED.—The members of the Falls City church met in council March 28. All business was harmoniously transacted, and the meeting was a very pleasant one. Bro. Peter Whitmer was chosen as elder. We miss Eld. R. K. Berkebile very much and need a good minister to locate among us, as Bro. Whitmer has too much to do. He now preaches every Sunday, yet he can give us only one meeting a month and the same at Salem. We must depend on the neighboring churches to fill our other appointments. Remember us in your prayers.—Maggie A. Peck, Falls City, Nebr.

ENJOYABLE MEETING.—The District Meeting of North-western Ohio was held in the Black Swamp church, March 27, 1891. A missionary meeting was held on the 26th. There was a full attendance at both meetings, and a large amount of earnestness and zeal manifested. While there was a difference of opinion on many questions, yet there was a spirit of full submission. We can class it among the best of our District Meetings. Bro. J. C. Whitmore, of Longley, Ohio, is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Two papers are sent to Annual Meeting.—S. A. Walker, Bloomville, Ohio, April 6, PLEASANT COUNCIL.—The Tear Coat church, W. Va., met March 7, in spring council. We had a very pleasant meeting. The Lord willing our love-feast will occur May 23 and 24. A series of meetings will be held in connection with same.—Maggie E. Flory.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The members of the Kingsley church, Iowa, met in council March 28. All business was disposed of in a Christian spirit. We elected officers for our Sunday-school which is to commence the first Sunday in April, and decided to hold a love-feast May 22 and 24.—Samuel Homer.

FOUR ACCESSIONS.—The Poplar Ridge church, Ohio, met in regular council March 14, 1891, and disposed of all business in love and union. Bro. Simon Long was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. We organized our Sunday-school March 29, with Bro. Joshua Domer as Superintendent. He is assisted by Bro. Roe Carpenter. The Gospel ship is still moving onward. Four souls stepped on board, recently, on their voyage to that Holy City on the other shore.—Simon Long, Jewell, Ohio.

ONE RESTORED.—The council in the Middle Creek congregation Somerset Co., Pa., was announced for April 4, but, on account of bad roads and inclement weather, our meeting was not so large as usual. Our love-feast will occur May 23. One paper goes to District Meeting to which brethren A. D. Christner and Robert T. Hull are our delegates. Bro. J. C. Johnson and the writer are our delegates to Annual Meeting. A sister returned to the fold. May she, as well as all of us, remain faithful!—G. W. Lowry, Scullton, Pa.

THE WORK AT KANSAS CITY.—I have just returned from the first baptism to the Brethren's church at Kansas City. The applicant came to the city six years ago. We had a good congregation at our meeting. The subject of baptism, as practiced by us, and also the examination of the applicant, was new to them. This we explained at length. A large number accompanied us to the lake at Chelsea Park, where the ordinance was performed. The future prospects of the work at Kansas City are encouraging.—I. H. Crist, Gardner, Kans.

FUNDS COLLECTED. — Our quarterly council-meeting occurred March 28. Considerable business came before the meeting, which was all disposed of in an agreeable and orderly manner. One letter was received and one granted. Bro. James Harris was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. Money collected for Home Mission, $8; for General Mission, $3.15; for the Western sufferers, $6.50, which we cheerfully sent to them, with our best wishes for their future prosperity,—both spiritually and temporally. We ask an interest in the prayers of the faithful brethren in our behalf, that our feeble efforts may yet bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God! —Matilda Holderread, Ergo, Mo., March 5.

ON THE WAY EAST.—To-day we leave Indiana, for Williamsburg, Pa. Any of the brethren in the West, desiring to write to us, will address us at Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pa., until further notice. We will visit and preach among the Brethren in Blair, Huntingdon and Bedford Counties until Annual Meeting. Then we expect to return to our home and field of labor in Colorado, Kansas, and Nebraska. So far our health has been remarkably good, and our labor and visiting among the different congregations very pleasant. We hope some good has been accomplished for souls. Our regret is that we could not remain long enough at one place. We feel thankful to all for kindness shown.—John S. and Susan Snowberger, Logansport, Ind., April 6.

DELEGATE ELECTED.—The quarterly council in the South Waterloo church, Iowa, convened March 31, one week earlier than our regular time. All business passed off pleasantly. We decided to hold our love-feast on June 20. Bro. J. G. Royer is expected to be with us at that time. Bro. W. A. Blough was elected as delegate to our next Annual Meeting. Our Sunday-school is doing good work and keeps up a good attendance.—J. H. Fike, Waterloo, Iowa.

DELEGATES ELECTED.—The Washington Creek church, Douglas Co., Kans., held her quarterly council March 7. Not much business came before the church and all passed off with the best of feeling. Five members applied for letters. Brethren James Hilkey and J. C. Metsker were elected as delegates to District Meeting. Owing to the great distance we send no delegate to Annual Meeting this year. We also organized our Sunday-school March 22. The Brethren's Quarterly and the Young Disciple will be used in our school the coming year. —S. M. Miller.

TWO BAPTIZED.—I attended a council in Talbot County, Md., March 26, and one in Caroline County, Md., March 28. Everything passed off very pleasantly. At the former a petition was gotten up for a church-house in the near future, asking help from the Mission Board. At the latter two were baptized,—a young man and his wife. The sister being a native of that County, had never seen baptism performed by immersion. March 30, I attended council at Ephratah, Lancaster Co., Pa. The resident elder, Bro. S. Harley, had a stroke of paralysis, but was so much better that he could be at the council.—S. R. Zug, Mastersonville, Pa., April 7.

The Railroad Arrangements East of St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago, for our Annual Meeting.

HAVING completed our arrangements east of St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago, and the brethren appointed by the Annual Meeting concurring in the arrangements, we herewith make a public statement of the same, hoping our people will adhere strictly to them. Further arrangements are being made, west of these cities.

The "Trank Line Association " which comprises the territory east of the Ohio River, the Valley of Virginia and all New England points, have passed the following resolution, authorizing the following: "One first-class limited fare per capita for the round trip, by the route traveled; tickets to be on sale and good going May 25 to June 5, to be good for return until June 15; to be valid for one stop-over in each direction in Trunk Line territory east of the Ohio River; to be iron-clad, not valid unless signed by purchaser; and to be valid for return passage only when countersigned and stamped by Agent at Hagerstown, Maryland.

The "Central Traffic Association," which comprises the territory between the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, have concurred in the above arrangements, with the tickets going on sale in their territory May 20 to June 1, inclusive, good to return until June 30.

The Southern Passenger Association have not as yet issued a circular adopting these arrangements, but we have no doubt that they will, in the localities in which our Brethren are located, give the same rates as the Central Traffic Association.

The arrangements in the Western Passenger Association are not, as yet, fully consummated, but we feel sure that they will be satisfactory. We will publish them when fully accomplished.

We desire our brethren, and any of our friends who contemplate coming East this spring to take advantage of these very low rates and use, if possible, the following lines:

Those coming via St. Louis will take the Ohio and Mississippi R. R., or the Pennsylvania R. R. Arriving in Cincinnati you have choice of the three natural lines east, namely, the Chesapeake and Ohio R. R., the Baltimore and Ohio R. R., and the Pennsylvania R. R. Those coming via Chicago will take the Baltimore and Ohio or Pennsylvania R. R. These lines from the West have promised our Executive Committee of Arrangements the very best of accommodations with stop-overs going and coming.

Those coming from the South will use the Norfolk and Western and the Valley Branch Road of the Baltimore and Ohio. We hope our members and friends will use these lines wherever available, as they make our committee very liberal concessions, which will largely swell our missionary fund, if the brethren will induce all to travel by these lines.

We shall publish all further arrangements when they are completed. W. S. REICHARD, Sec'y.

The District Meeting in North-eastern Kansas.

THE Ministerial and District Meeting for the above-named District was held in the North Morrill church, Brown Co., March 31 and April 1. The meetings were both organized by electing J. D. Trostle, Moderator; P. R. Wrightsman, Reading Clerk, and J. H. Crist, Writing Clerk. Both meetings were pleasant, and we think, profitable. The churches were well represented by delegates. There was more business at the District Meeting than ordinarily, but all was completed in two sessions,—the last one from 7 P. M. to 10: 30. The Committee on the Aged, Infirm and Orphan's Home made their report, which was accepted by the District Meeting.

The Mission Work received a good part of the time. The report of those laboring on the mission field was fairly encouraging. A considerable amount of funds was reported as being in the treasury.

Several papers go to the Annual Meeting, one asking that a committee be appointed to select and report to the Annual Meeting, a name for our church on which we can unite, thus doing away with a number of names that are confusing and misleading.

Another asks Annual Meeting to urge the Committee on Hymn Book, to complete a book as soon as possible.

J. S. Mohler was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, and Geo. Myers, alternate.

MARCH 12, Bro. Enoch Eby, our elder, came to us. He held three meetings in our school-house. March 14 we held our council-meeting. All business passed off pleasantly. On Sunday, March 15, Bro. Eby preached the funeral sermon of Bro. Joseph Stover, who passed away Oct. 1, 1890. We deeply feel the loss of so worthy a minister as was Bro. Stover.

Our little church is still trying to hold the fort in Scott County. We now number seventeen. We have lately learned of at least two in Garden City, who have not as yet presented their certificates, but have expressed a desire to do so.

We are having an unusual spring for this part of the country. We had a snow-storm, beginning March 23, which lasted three days, during which time about twelve inches of snow fell. April 1 we had another snow-storm. Although the spring is unusually late, all feel that this moisture means a more prosperous crop for the coming season.

From the Blue Ridge Church, Ill.

SATURDAY, April 4, we, the members of the Blue Ridge church, Ill., held our regular quarterly council, at which a fair representation of members was present. Considerable business came before the meeting, but all was transacted in a Christian-like spirit. It was decided to hold our love-feast June 13, at 3 o'clock P. M. Bro. Adam Greenwalt is our delegate to Annual Meeting, and Eld. John Barnhart, alternate. We re-organized our Sunday-school the first Sunday in April. Bro. S. P. Knupp was re-elected as our Superintendent, and Bro. Adam Greenwalt, Assistant.

BRO. SILAS HOOVER has been holding a series of meetings at the Bethel meeting-house in the Hopewell congregation. He preached a number of excellent sermons to large audiences. Bro. Hoover is an able defender of the Truth. Our heart's desire and prayer is, that he may constantly increase in the knowledge of God. During his meetings twenty hearts were brought to a knowledge of the Truth. We hope that they may ever prove faithful until their life's end. May they so live, as to be accepted with the chosen ones at God's right hand. J. H. CLAPPER.

Notice.

PERSONS contemplating attending the Annual Meeting at Hagerstown, Maryland, will please not fail to notify the "Committee on Lodging" at the earliest possible date.

In writing state whether lodgings are wanted in college building or in town, and when you expect to be on the grounds. When room is asked for a company, state whether brethren or sisters; if both, state the number of each. In every case be particular that the sex be indicated. The Committee have a number of applicants now whom they can not at present assign, because the sex is not known.

The regular price of lodging will be twenty-five cents. Two persons desiring the exclusive use of a room in the college building will pay fifty cents each. A number of rooms for two persons can be had in the town at the same rate.

If special accommodations are wanted, be particular to state that fact.

The Committee desires to secure comfortable lodging for all as near the grounds as possible. This they think they can do, as the people seem generally willing to open their houses and make some preparation, provided they have timely assurance that the places will be taken. Address,

D. ELMER WOLF, Sec. of Lodging Com.

Hagerstown, Md.

From the Olathe Church, Johnson Co., Kans.

BRO. J. H. NEHER and wife came to us March 12. Bro. John preached eleven discourses. The weather was very disagreeable part of the time, and the roads were almost impassable. The congregations were small, but Bro. John sowed good seed and some were almost persuaded, but said, by their actions, "Not now."

Bro. Neher held a children's meeting March 22, and his illustrations were so well applied, that we will give an outline of them.

He had a small magnet, representing the power of God, and a very small nail, to represent the child in its infancy. The magnet would hold the nail fast that it could not be shaken off. Then he took a larger nail, representing a child at the years of accountability, and so on, until he came to the hard sinner whom he represented with a rusty nail, on which the magnet (power of God) had no effect. "God shall send them strong delusion," etc. 2 Thess. 2: 11.

We are glad to report that the Kansas City work is prospering. April 5 Bro. J. H. Crist baptized one, and more have promised to unite with the church in the near future. It is plainly seen that there are souls here, starving for the Bread of Life, in the cities as well as in the country, and we fear that, when eternity dawns upon us, the fact will be revealed, that we have not done as much work in the cities as we ought to have done.

Our Sunday-school at the church is moving along again, and the brethren and sisters at Olathe expect to re-organize next Sunday, April 12.

A. M. SHARP.

From the Rock Creek Church, Colo.

THE brethren of the above-named church met in quarterly council, April 4, preparatory to District Meeting. The business of the meeting was disposed of in a Christian spirit, and all felt that it was good to be there.

This little church was organized a little over two years ago, by Eld. G. W. Fesler, of Longmont, Colo., and others, the church choosing Bro. Fesler as their elder.

At the time of organization, there were eighteen members, but since that time some have moved away until we now only number ten, and we think our prospects are bright for an ingathering of souls in the near future.

I have just located in this valley, and can say that I am highly pleased with the country. If any of the brethren are contemplating a change of location, they might do well to come and see our valley, and help build up the cause of our Master.

We need several good ministers to proclaim the Word of Life to the people of this fertile valley. We ask the united prayers of our beloved Brotherhood in our behalf, that we may be able to discharge our duty by preaching the Word in all its simplicity and power. A. C. SNOWBERGER.

TAYLOR.— In the Nettle Creek church, Ind., March 10, 1891, friend James Taylor, in his 75th year.

His death was caused by a severe cold, which, together with La Grippe, resulted in paralysis. For about two days he was unable to speak, although he was conscious the first day. Deceased emigrated in 1833, with his parents, to Hendricks County, Indiana. In 1834 they came to Wayne County, Ind. In 1836 he was married to Elizabeth Shaffer. In 1838 they moved to Henry County, Ind., where they have continued to reside up to the time of his death. There were born to their union four sons and four daughters, of whom six are yet living. Little Mary was a victim of croup. Early in the morning, after only a few hours of intense suffering, her pure spirit took its flight, to join the sweet angel songs in the spirit world. Not only is our brother's family circle broken, but her seat is vacant. She leaves her fond parents and a little brother to mourn her departure. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Albert Wright, assisted by Bro. R. H. Miller. EMMA MILLER.

BEERY.—At Mount Morris, Ill., March 20, 1891, Nina Lenore Beery, infant daughter of Bro. P. H. and Kate Beery, aged 6 months and 13 days.

Nina was a flower too fair for earth's rude tempests, so the Father above transplanted her to the bowers of Paradise, there to bloom forever! May the parents remember the words of the text, John 11: 28, which Eld. J. G. Royer impressed so forcibly upon all in attendance at the funeral, and may they realize, when the call comes to them, that it is the gateway to eternal bliss and reunion with the loved ones gone before.

L. A. P.

CARRY.—In the bonds of the Lick Creek church, Williams Co., Ohio, March 16, 1891, Bro. Peter G. Carry, aged 29 years, 10 months and 26 days.

Bro. Peter united with the church June 3, 1887. He was a faithful brother and always seemed to have a warm feeling for the church. For the last few months he had his home with Bro. Jacob Long, where he had all the care that kind hands could bestow.

Bro. Peter, rather than to forsake Christ and his church, left home. His relatives are nearly all Catholics, and for that reason he could not remain at home while holding his membership in the church. He suffered very much the last few weeks before he died, but bore it patiently and with a Christian spirit. Six weeks before he died he felt as though he wanted to obey Christ by being anointed, and his desire was complied with. Just before he passed away he said he was going to the home that awaits all the faithful children of God. Peace to his soul!

Funeral services from Rev. 22: 14, by Bro. Geo. W. Sellers, assisted by Bro. Jesse Long.

NOAH LONG.

MARQUIS.—In the Union Center church, Ind., March 29, 1891, sister Polly Marquis, aged 96 years, 5 months and 10 days.

Wm. K. Marquis, her husband, preceded her to the spirit world thirty-four years. Nine children blessed their union, of whom seven are still living. A large number of descendants, down to the fourth generation, were in attendance at the funeral. Sister Marquis was a member for fifty-eight years, and indeed a mother in Israel. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by brethren S. Blocher and Henry Cook.

SILAS GILBERT.

HAY.—In Union City, Ind., March 9, 1891, friend Joseph Hay, aged 75 years, 7 months and 26 days. Funeral services by the writer. SILAS GILBERT.

GARVER.—At Portland, Oregon, March 3, Perry Garver, son of Eld. George Garver, aged 22 years, 4 months and 26 days.

He was buried in the Lower Twin Creek church, Preble Co., Ohio, March 15, 1891. Deceased arrived at Portland, Oregon, Dec. 24, 1890, and engaged in business for himself. Feb. 14 he was prostrated with typhoid fever, which caused his death. Funeral services by the writer and the home ministers. JOHN SMITH.

LEATHERMAN. — In the Turkey Creek congregation, March 22, 1891, sister Mary Leatherman, aged 69 years, 7 months and 24 days.

This dear old sister was seriously afflicted for seventeen years, and the most of this time had to be cared for like a child. Her oldest son assumed this charge and stayed with her day and night during this long affliction, scarcely being absent for a day or night. A number of children, with other relatives, are left to mourn their loss, which is surely her gain. Funeral occasion improved by Bro. D. Wysong and others.

J. C. MURRAY.

SAYLOR. — In the Iowa River church, Marshall Co., Iowa, March 29, 1891, William L. Saylor, son of Bro. Levi and sister Elizabeth Saylor, aged 24 years, 8 months and 8 days.

Deceased was sick only a week. Little did we think last summer, when we for the last time conversed with him, that he would have to leave us so soon. Surely, "in the midst of life we are in death." His kind disposition and his regard for the principles of right have won for him the honor and respect of all. May the good Lord comfort and sustain the father, mother, brothers, and sisters in their sad bereavement.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by elders Stephen Johnson and A. M. Dickey from John 11: 11.

T. T. MYERS.

SHOTTS. — Near Martinsburg, W. Va., March 9, 1891, Mrs. Sarah Shotts (widow of the late Daniel Shotts, who died nearly forty years ago at Providence, Warren Co., Va.), aged 90 years, 10 months and 6 days.

Deceased was a member of the Disciple church for many years. Funeral services by the writer. JOHN BRINDLE.

STEBBENS.—In the Poplar Ridge church, Ohio, March 8, 1891, Susan, wife of Levi Stebbens aged 82 years, 8 months, and 1 day.

She was confined to her room for some years, but bore it with Christian patience. Then she fell asleep, we trust, in Jesus. Bro. Henry France, and others, held a Communion service with her, in accordance with her wishes. Services conducted by the undersigned, assisted by Bro. Henry Flory.

SIMON LONG.

LONG.—In the Pine Creek district, Marshall Co., Ind., March 29, 1891, sister Susannah Long, wife of Bro. Frank Long, and daughter of Moses and Rebecca Peters, aged 30 years, 4 months and 13 days.

Deceased was a faithful member of the Brethren church. She leaves a husband with the care of four little children to mourn the loss of a companion and mother. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. John Knisley. JACOB HILDEBRAND.

MILLER.—In the Union Center church, Ind., March 27, 1891, Minnie Catharine Miller, daughter of Bro. Martin and sister Catharine Miller, aged 17 years and 11 months. Funeral services by Eld. Lemuel Hillery from 1 Sam. 20: 3.

HENRY NEFF.

HOWE.—In the Waddam's Grove congregation, Stephenson Co., Ill., March 28, 1891, of apoplexy, Bro. Joseph Howe, aged 39 years, 11 months and 2 days.

The deceased was a son of Eld. Wm. Howe, of Mifflin Co., Pa. He united with the Brethren church early in life. Several years before his death he was called to the position of a deacon, in which capacity he magnified his office. He emigrated to Illinois in the beginning of his manhood days where he has lived ever since, save a short time in Texas. Nov. 29, 1877, he was united in matrimony to sister Lizzie Kemper, of the above congregation, who survives him and deeply mourns her loss. Thus another, without a moment's warning, and seemingly in the midst of health and usefulness, is called away, we trust to reap the rewards of a well-spent life. The friends of our departed brother have the sympathy of the entire community.

Funeral occasion improved from 1 Thess. 4: 13, by Bro. W. K. Moore to a large concourse of people. P. R. KELTNER.

SOWERS.—In the Mansfield congregation, Douglas Co., Mo., Feb. 24, of consumption, Lizzie Ann, daughter of Bro. Lewis and sister Sowers, aged 17 years.

She had made no public profession, but a few hours before death, she told her parents she did not fear to die, and that she was going home. NANNIE A. HARMAN.

HYLTON. In the Mansfield congregation, Douglas Co., Mo., March 4, sister Emma, wife of Bro. Henry Hylton, aged 30 years.

Deceased was a member of the Brethren church for several years, a good worker in the church and Sunday-school of which she was a teacher. She leaves a husband and seven children, two only a few hours old. We believe their loss is her gain. She was a daughter of sister Mary Smith (deceased) of Floyd County, Va. NANNIE A. HARMAN.

MYERS.—In the Ligonier Valley church, Westmoreland Co., Pa., Feb. 10, 1891, Henry Myers, aged about 81 years.

Father was stricken with paralysis Sept. 23, 1889, and was confined to his room until called to his home above. His mind was clear and strong throughout his sickness, and his chief concern was for the welfare of the church, which he so dearly loved. He was anointed and also partook of the Lord's Supper and Communion during his illness. He leaves a widow (a sister) and five children, three of them belonging to the church of his choice. Bro. Hanawalt being away, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Miller, of the Evangelical church. H. S. MYERS.

Mary Beahm was a daughter of Geo. Bucher of Klaeyfeltersville, Lebanon Co. Pa

WE, not long since, heard a minister say that the getting to heaven was not so much a question with him as what he would be when, or after, he would get there. As we can not learn fully, what our special calling will be in the heaven where no sin is, perhaps it will be well for us to do the very best we can now and wait for the new development. If sin and what it has done were, at once, taken away from this world of ours, a great many men would be thrown out of employment, and just what else they would be fit for, is hard to tell. Nothing short of a full and complete conversion would adapt them to the society of good people.

THE reason why the scribes and Pharisees could not be taught the truth was because they knew too much, or, in other words, they had all the knowledge they desired. They had that feeling of sufficiency which will not admit of any more. This same feeling has always prevailed, and it stands as a great barrier to the reception of knowledge. President Webb of Mississippi College was interviewed by a young man who wanted to go to school. "Well," said the President, "what do you know?" "Nothing" was the response. "Well, you are just four years ahead of some of the other pupils. It takes them four years to learn what you have to start with; your prospects are fine, sir." There are a large number of our ought-to-be Bible students that should feel as this young man did. Comparatively, many of us know really nothing about the Bible, and with our present estimate of our wisdom it will take about four years' study to learn just this much. We do not exaggerate when we say that the Bible is a life-time study. And even then we will have explored only among the shallow waves that wash the shore.

THERE has been much said, in both prose and poetry, about April sunshine and showers, but so far the bulk of it has been showers. And so frequent and profuse have they been that the weather has become the common topic of conversation, and the patience of many seems to be sorely tried. Well, we do seem to have an over-supply of wet and rain, and did not our Heavenly Father know better than we there might be some room for complaint. As it is, the best thing we can do is to let patience have her perfect work, and in the end we will, no doubt, learn that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord.

IN MESSENGER No. 15, we have an unusual amount of "Heavenology." Whether orthodox or otherwise, must be decided by the readers. Be that as it may, the views of Moomaw, Peck and Hertzler can not fail to interest those who are interested in these things. Moomaw's degrees in heaven, Hertzler's possessions on earth for the meek now, and Peck's for the hereafter are all interestingly different in the abstract and yet there is an underlying harmony running through them all. It goes to show that we, as a church, seem to have a kind of an independent system of Hermaneutics which allows every one to follow largely the bent of his own mind, and yet we are glad to know that our divergencies are so small in the summations.

"OF NO REPUTATION."

THE above was the subject used at our last prayer-meeting, and on it some good things were said, and we would be glad to repeat them, could we do so. The gist of the subject hinges on the emphasizing of the words "He made." Paul, in writing to his Philippian brethren held up before them the excellency of the character of Christ. In this excellency he wanted them to find the consolation which religion was to give. That they be the more familiar with this character he went to some trouble to properly set it before them.

There are two prominent characteristics in man, and these two are set before us in Paul's portrait of the Philippians and that of Christ. First we have every man looking to his own things,—doing only such things as tend to his own personal profit and good. This disposition was not common to the Philippians only, but Christians in all ages have been beset with it. And the best way to get rid of it is to have set before us something that is better. That better thing is the life of Christ. He ever looked away from his own things, that he might do good to others.

Knowing this, Paul says: "Let this mind be in you, which is in Christ Jesus." He is the one that made himself of no reputation, and took on him the form of a servant.

It should be noticed that Paul did not say that he had no reputation, but that he did not make it. He did have this before him as an object, he did not labor to this end. What we do is the cause of whatever reputation we may have, the reputation itself must come from those to whom we do. A self-reputation don't reach outside of self and must necessarily die with self, because this is the limit of the relation. When a man does nothing in life that affects anything outside of himself the cause and the effect must die together.

There have been many self-made reputations in the world, but they have all passed away with their authors. Then, again, we have had reputations which have not passed away. The difference between these reputations is worthy of our attention. Christ made not his reputation. That which he did, was the cause of it being made, but it was the subjects of his ministry that made him a reputation that has been living for eighteen hundred years and will continue to live as long as people will continue to be blessed with that ministry. The one dies with its author. The other lives in the hearts of its beneficiaries.

The life that is lived for the good of others, lives as long as those live who have been the recipients of the benefits thus given, and these may be, and are, perpetuated indefinitely through lives thus moulded. As Christ lives to-day in the lives moulded by him, so the lives of the good are perpetuated in the lives of those who have been moulded by them.

If, therefore, we would have a reputation that will live, let us not labor to make this reputation for ourselves, but let us so labor for the good of others that they will make it for us. A true reputation is made and lives only in the minds of others. The subject of the reputation is unconscious of it because he is not laboring for it. It is a thing altogether foreign to his thoughts and purposes. So it should be with us. Let our efforts be made to comfort and be a blessing to others, and as a reward we will have the blessings of the perishing falling upon us, and will be the recipients of that peace which always attends the good.

One of our besetting temptations is to have a reputation in the world, and if others are not willing to give it to us, we are often sorely tempted to work for it ourselves. Somehow we feel that we are worthy of a reputation, but are fearful that people will not find it out. How anxious we are to have it known!

Never mind, dear working ones, jewels never lose their value or brilliancy. No matter where they are, they remain jewels still. David, while out in the fields, feeding his father's sheep, was not concerned about reputation. His concern was to fill well the charge given to him, and because he did the work given him so well, he was needed on the throne. After all, it seems passing strange how the real good in men is found and utilized. The world is seeking after men. It is the good that are wanted. Be this and you will get all the reputation you deserve.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

NOWHERE.

NOWHERE upon the earth, hath mortal found
A place of unalloyed repose;
With toil the hours of rest are woven through,
And fleeting as June's first, sweet rose.
Each life its seasons knows of bloom and blight,
And purple shades are intertwined with light.

We roam earth's vast expanse in solitude,
Seeking responsive hearts in vain;
Our powers wasten in affection's flow,
To find love, at its best, is pain;
Insatiate love pleads still in tender tone,
For love that answers back with love alone.

Before the altar stand a noble twain.
Whose sacred vow love overflows;
"Till death us part," pierces their hearts as thorns
Do pierce the hand that plucks the rose.
E'en wedded joys are marred by sorrow's blast,
And pleasures prized and sweetest soon are past.

Nowhere is rapture pure, serene, entire.
Ecstatic joy, a sweet babe lends
To parent hearts, and with a smile enwreathes
The face that o'er its cradle bends;
But, thought of sullied graces after while,
With tears beclouds the radiance of that smile.

Nowhere upon "the smiling, weeping earth,"
Is there a dear, unbroken home,
Or social hearth from which no light dies out,
Or cherished loved ones never roam,
The full-blown flowers and tender blossoms fade,
Leaving where sunlight glimmered, deepest shade.

The sufferer, wasted, languid, on his cot,
Is praying zealously for health;
The rich sigh for the poor man's humble lot,
The poor are striving after wealth.
Nowhere void of all want is blest content;
To every joy a shade of grief is lent.

Hopeful we mount ambition's rugged heights,
In search of fame our deeds to crown;
But, when at last we gain the hard-earned prize,
We strive again to lay it down,
The foiled and tired heart cries out in pain;
Love, wealth, wisdom and honor all are vain.

Nowhere is peace born of the blissful calm,
For which our storm-tossed spirits long.
Existence here is hard and ceaseless strife,
That right may triumph over wrong.
Around us countless duties waiting loom,
And life is passing swiftly to the tomb.

Through a shadowy vista dimly dawns
A perfect state we hope to win;
But, nowhere on this transitory sphere,
Is there a place exempt from sin;
Sin reigneth, and his dreaded offspring—Death
Breathes on each living thing his fatal breath.

BOASTING.

BY NOAH LONGANECKER.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come."—2 Tim. 3: 1.

"MEN shall be boasters" is assigned as one of the reasons in verse 2. Why? The times shall be perilous. Paul, in giving one of the negative traits of charity, or love, says, "Charity vaunteth not itself." Christ himself says, "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Can we fail to see the resemblance and force of these passages? To boast is "to brag; to speak of with a view of self-commendation, to vaunt." To vaunt is to "make a vain display of one's own worth, attainments; or of what one is, or has, or has done."

We do not understand Christ and Paul to teach that boasting is the cause of perilous times, but they do teach that it is one of the causes. We make this remark, so that the reader will not misapprehend our remarks. David once said, "Is there not a cause?" Some of the causes why we pen these lines, will be manifest as we proceed.

About one year ago an urgent request was made at a local council, in a neighboring church, to ask Annual Council to take some steps to enforce Art. 24, of 1875, and Art. 5, of 1877. The local council decided that the Annual Council had taken a step in that direction, as shown by Art. 18, of 1885. For the benefit of those readers that have not access to Art. 24, of 1875, and Art. 5, of 1877, we will copy in full:

Art. 24, of 1875:—"As Christ never published himself, would it not be better for the brethren travelling and preaching, not to publish themselves, in stating how many sermons they preached, and how many persons they baptized, as much as to say: See what I have done?"

Ans.—"Not advisable to do so."

Art. 5, of 1877:—"Is it right, according to the Gospel, for our editorial brethren to applaud and eulogize, through their papers, brethren who travel from one congregation to another, upon their success as preachers?"

Ans.—"Not right."

The request from the local church, as above mentioned, also referred to the useless obituary notices so common in the MESSENGER. With reference to all these, the conclusion of the Council was, "There is too much boasting." Not to be too personal, permit but one illustration: "A brother held a series of meetings; the week following a sister laudably referred to the meetings,—how many sermons were preached, 'with power,'" etc. The week following another sister gave us a similar notice. The third week the minister himself came with a similar notice, with the additional news, how the members treated him, and how he labored under disadvantage, having been sick, as much as to say, "If I had been well, I could have done a great deal better." Some time afterward, the elder in charge put our minds in remembrance of the probably forgotten meeting. Probably some one may say, "That was an extreme case." We hope such extreme cases may die childless.

But is it not common for some ministers to give us at least two notices of the meetings that they hold; an extolling one from the church, and a vaunting one from the minister? If no additions, then the meetings closed too soon; or the failure in a good-attendance was due to bad weather and roads. If a good work is accomplished, then "I did it," so far as it was a success, and where it was a failure, some one else was to blame.

This boasting among us, as ministers, is even carried into the sacred stand. We sometimes arise before the congregation and tell the hearers that we are not prepared in that we did not intend to preach, and then do our best with our manuscript of notes before us, from which we have frequently spoken before. Whether we intend it or not, it savors of the following: "He preached a good sermon for not being prepared. What could he have done, had he been prepared!" It means boasting.

Sometimes we tell our heareas that we are not well, and labor under a great disadvantage, and then put forth our best endeavors. The conclusion will be,—if the hearers believe us,—"Pretty well done for a sick man. What might he have done, had he been well!" Boasting!

Sometimes we inform our hearers that we intend to be brief, and then preach over an hour, as much as to say, "If I would have told you all I know on the subject, I might have preached several hours." Boasting!

Finally, when we leave off boasting, by the way of making apologies, we now and then throw in an oasis of braggadocia of what "I did here and there." Says a brother minister, "You are just a little too severe on us ministers." True; but does not the Savior say, "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye?"

Feeling assured that the above few references to the "beam" of boasting,—so common among us ministers,—do by no means include all, we will not now meddle with the "mote" of boasting found among the laity. We are glad, however, that there are many old and young brethren in the ministry who are setting us a noble example in obeying the precepts of Jesus. Permit a few of those precepts:

1. "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

2. "Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray," etc.

3. "Do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men."

The great amount of ostentation, the loud sounding of the trumpet, the ever-increasing boasting, are but a forerunner of peril.

The subject above is not a pleasant one to treat, being unpopular. Should any one wish to know why the writer uses the plural pronoun "we," where he otherwise might have used the singular "I," we answer, for the same reason that "we" is used by James in the following: "In many things we offend all." The careful and thoughtful reader will see the force of this passage. We hope, however, that the laity will not give all the above away to us,—the ministry.

DIE.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Correspondents in the Crucible of Gal. 5: 15:—

"In any trouble." 2 Cor. 1: 4. The words of the apostle have a wide sweep, and no doubt include your case, no matter how peculiar it may be. "In the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort," there is surely provision for every soul and every dilemma. But God has his own way of comforting. Paul was "filled with comfort, he was exceeding joyful in all his tribulation." 2 Cor. 7: 4. Christ bids us "rejoice and be exceeding glad," when we are reviled and evil entreated. Matt. 5: 10, 11, 12. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?" Luke 24: 26.

"I AM the way; no man cometh unto the Father, but by ME." John 14: 6. If we are disciples of this divine-human exemplar, why should we "think it strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try us, as though some strange thing happened unto us? We are to rejoice inasmuch as we are partakers of Christ's suffering, that when "His glory shall be revealed, we may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4: 12, 13. Is not your oversight of this sublime truth the root of all your perplexity and agony? Have you not failed to catch the impulse of Thomas, "Let us also go, that we may DIE WITH HIM?" John 11: 16.

You appeal to me for counsel and comfort in the mighty surge of affliction which is whelming you in darkness and despair. What can I say but repeat Paul's exhortation to Timothy: "Endure hardness as a good soldier of JESUS CHRIST." 2 Tim. 2: 3. "If ye endure chastening"—what then? See Heb. 12: 7–11.

I have but one object in writing this letter—not to help you gain a victory over those you count your antagonists, but to encourage you in the far grander task of self-conquest, and lead you to perfect rest in Jesus. If you are willing to drink the cup of Golgotha meekly and quietly, and not only pray for your opponents, but die for them, I am sure you will experience a deeper swell of divine peace, and have less friction with your fellow-beings, than by harrowing your soul day and night, how to gain your end in the line of self-assertion.

I love and pity you, but I neither admire nor commend the course you pursue. It grieves me much that you evince neither inclination nor effort to bless them that curse you, and do good to them that hate you, and return defamation and personal abuse with self-sacrificing kindness. So did Jesus, and so must His followers. When one cheek is bruised, have the other ready. Ponder well the words, "from your heart," in Matt. 18: 35. In the yea and nay of these three words are bound up all the ecstasies of heaven and all the horrors of hell. "If any man have not the SPIRIT OF CHRIST, he is none of His." Rom. 8: 9.

It is a glorious triumph of the cross to give only sweet words and loving deeds to those that malign and trample us. I would sooner be nailed to the cross, and share the humiliation and agony of Jesus, and have all manner of evil spoken against me falsely, than lift up my finger, or move my tongue against traducers and persecutors. You have, in this respect, wholly missed the aim of the divine incarnation, and the glory of fellowship with the suffering Christ.

Those who are persecuted for righteousness are pronounced "Blessed." Why do you not accept your trials and afflictions as a gracious discipline to perfect you in the likeness and peace of Him who is "the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person?" James 1: 2, 3, 4, 12; Heb. 1: 3. "Shall I praise you in this? I praise you not." 1 Cor. 11: 22.

Peter was a noble apostle, but had some pitiable infirmities in his moral constituents, which led him to grievous mistakes. Paul "withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed." Gal. 2: 11. In the matter of retaliation you are verily culpable. The Lamb of God was dumb, and reviled not again. Acts 8: 32; 1 Pet. 2: 23. Try His method. Give your face to spitting and buffeting, your back to the scourge, your head to the thorn-crown, your hands and feet to the nails, and your soul to the travail of Gethsemane, and never utter one word of reproach, but let your whole heart go out in blessing of word and act and look, and you will know something of the mystery of godliness hidden in Philpp. 4: 7, 13, 19.

This "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit is, in the sight of God, of great price." 1 Pet. 3: 4. This will be infinitely more acceptable to God, and beneficial to men, than to utter all the thunders of Sinai, and all the anathemas of Rome, and exhaust the world's vocabulary of invectives against those that maltreat us. Fill your heart and mouth day and night with the prayer of Paul in Philpp. 3: 10.

If you present yourself to the Brotherhood and the world with your life radiant with the beauty of holiness, expressing only the love and patience and humility of Jesus, it will accomplish more for the advancement of the kingdom of God than all the eloquence of accusation, or justification of all the walking dictionaries on the face of the earth.

Can you not nail the past to the cross, and leave it there, henceforth forgetting yourself, occupied only with the glory of our Redeemer, in utter self-sacrifice for the good of others? There is no way of winning souls like loving them even to the death of the cross. Can you not summon all the powers of your being into the determination not to refer to yourself hereafter, except in terms of self-abasement and self-loathing, and speak only of what will exalt the Crucified, and make Him attractive to all who hear and see you?

It would create joy among the angels in heaven, if you would accept and exemplify that "love which suffereth long, is kind, not easily provoked, beareth all things." 1 Cor. 13: 4, 5, 7. A life of love and faith and prayer and self-crucifixion is "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." 2 Cor. 10: 4. Let us all ponder, word for word, over and over, what Jesus might have done, but for LOVE'S SAKE did not. Matt. 26: 53, 54. This very love is the fact and badge of our discipleship. 1 John 4: 16; John 13: 35. The as in John 15: 12, is the effectual solvent of all the barriers between soul and soul.

THE DEVIL AND HIS ANGELS.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

WE read in the Book of Divine Truth that in the beginning of our time-world God created the heaven and the earth, and divided the darkness from the light, and made the firmament and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament, and on the sixth day he created MAN. Gen. 1: 1, 27. But nowhere do we find it recorded that God created the devil, although he seems to have had an existence co-equal with God himself. In Gen. 3: 1, we have him represented as appearing to Eve in the Garden of Eden, in the form of serpents, the most subtle of all created things.

When we think of the characteristics of serpents we naturally understand that they are a very lowly creature, crawling on the ground, licking the dust of the earth (figuratively humble in appearance), but this attitude of humility is very deceptive. When he approached Eve he intimated that he was wiser than God, and he portrayed to her mental vision the possibility of Adam and Eve becoming as gods. He said, "God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened." Ye shall not surely die, openly contradicting God's own words.

Captivated by the fascinating arguments, she partook of the forbidden fruit. We find that ever since the day that he assumed the form of a serpent in Eden, the devil has been going about through the earth in various forms, presenting himself to the sons and daughters of Adam's race. "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan, the devil, came also among them. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it." Job 1: 6, 7. He was not a serpent this time, for he was "walking up and down through the world." Sometimes he is represented as "going about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour."

When God sent his own Son into the world to do and teach his Father's will to men, the devil puts in an appearance and "Jesus was taken by the devil up into the holy city." He was set on a pinnacle of the temple, and the devil tells him: "If thou be the son of God, cast thyself down, for it is written, he shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone." "Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; and saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Matt. 4: 8-10.

Here he not only lied, but endeavored to deceive "the very elect." Whilst Jesus was here, promulgating his everlasting Gospel, he chose twelve men from among the men of Galilee and Judea, to be his witnesses and to assist him in whatsoever way he should instruct them.

Here, again, we find the devil among the professed disciples of the Lord Jesus, for we find this Scripture, "Jesus answered them and said, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?" John 6: 70.

During Christ's sojourn upon earth, he "went about" among the Jews, preaching the kingdom of God. The Jews were a people who set great store by their ancestry. They disputed with him and reproached him for what, they thought, was vain boasting, when he asserted that God was his father. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Immediately they spoke up, saying, "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be free?" John 8: 31, 32, 33. They thought their pedigree was good and their title clear to the promises made to Abraham.

We read further on in the Divine Record, and we learn what Christ thought of their pedigree. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it." John 8: 44.

Again we find the devil among the disciples of the Lord Jesus. When the time had arrived that he should depart out of this world and go unto his Father, he sent two of his disciples to prepare a supper of which he and his followers were to partake. On this occasion he instituted the Communion of his body and blood, to be commemorated by all Christians until the end of the world. "And supper being ended, (made ready) the devil having now put it into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son to betray him." John 13: 2.

When Jesus had talked to them awhile, he was troubled in spirit, and said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me. Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake, and immediately Satan entered into Judas." John 13: 21, 22, 27. He went unto the high-priests and offered to deliver him into their hands for "thirty pieces of silver." Matt. 27: 3.

We discover that the devil many times took possession of persons who themselves thought they were "doing God service" in persecuting the true followers of Jesus, and as those who were living in the time of our Savior's personal presence among them were subject to the wiles of the devil, even so now, in this age of the world, "his angels" are still to be found among the "sons of God," sometimes appearing as "angels of light," in men occupying positions of influence, in ecclesiastical circles, and who will condescend to betray the innocent for much less than thirty pieces of silver."

One of his most hellish angels is the slanderer who befouls the character and reputation of others by insinuations he dare not put in words. Another of the devil's most efficient emissaries is the railer and liar who will get down as low as the serpent in the garden, and by his hypocritical conduct alienate friends, and destroy confidence, which can never be fully restored, bringing reproach upon the church, and upon himself the denunciation of the King, as recorded in Matt. 25: 41, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

Landess, Ind.

"KIND words cost nothing. They make us rich if we use them. They bless the world if we employ them. We can bless those around us if we scatter sunshine as we go. The dog will love you if you treat him kindly. Human hearts will open to you, if you only come in love to them."

A SIGNIFICANT COMPARISON.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

"As it was in the days of Noe," "As it was in the days of Lot," "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man shall be revealed." May we not take thought on this remarkable passage of Scripture, and set in order many points of comparison, which convey significant lessons to the mind?

FIRST COMPARISON.—Numerous ungodly,—few righteous. There were doubtless millions of men and women in the world in Noah's time. In those primeval ages, while the physical powers of the race had, as it were, declined but little from the perennial vigor of an original immortality, death had scarcely strength to fling his darts. Time was too young to do much mowing with his scythe, so the world must have been very populous, but among all its multitudes only Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. So it was also in the days of Lot. In all that populous plain, full of cities, and among all the thousands of Sodom, only Lot could be counted as not having entirely gone after the uttermost wickedness.

So shall it be when the Son of man is revealed. Though the church is far more flourishing and prosperous than it ever was before, and is spreading the borders of her tabernacle over many lands, yet the wicked far outnumber the righteous. Out of fourteen hundred millions there are only three or four hundred millions nominally Christian. But of this last number there are no more than one hundred millions members of all the various sects. Out of this last there are not more than twenty millions members of Protestant denominations. Of this twenty millions how many are real Christians, God alone can tell.

SECOND COMPARISON.—The reception given to God's message. That message was one of warning,—"Repent, for the wrath is coming." "Up, get you out of this place, for the Lord will destroy this city." But they seemed to their hearers "as one that mocked."

Is not this true of the multitudes to-day who hear the Gospel? They do not believe it. The preacher seems to them as one that mocks,—an insincere declaimer,—a man in the line of his trade, having an entirely selfish reason for the interest he takes in it. He proclaims "the wrath to come," he points to repentance and reformation of life as the only way of escape. He points to a Savior who is ready, willing and able to save. Do they believe it? No, else they would act upon it. Faith is always followed by works, just as spring brings the green grass and pretty flowers.

A man will not stay in a house which he believes to be on fire, or in a ship which he believes to be sinking. "Give us eloquent sermons, ye preachers, but do not expect us to take them seriously. Surely, we can not be so unfashionable as to practice what you preach."

Is it not amazing how lightly the Word seems to fall on men's hearts, and how soon the congregation can forget everything they have heard, and every impression made upon them by the most powerful sermon, or the most solemn service?

THIRD COMPARISON.—Escape of the righteous. Noah must have been a rich man, else he could not have built that immense boat. We are told that Lot had "great substance." Both of them left everything behind them, and both were saved by direct interposition of Providence. So shall those be saved who leave the world behind them, and who have nothing in the world,—its possessions or pleasures,—which they are not willing to lose, if need be, for Christ's sake and for the Gospel's. Is it not worth turning the back on the world, that the face may be Godward?

Should not a MAN walk grandly toward eternity? We are meanly running too much after the things of the world, and vastly overestimating their value. "Increased in goods and diminished in faith," this is the description of Christ's church to-day. The only right a Christian has to the things of the world is the good use he can make of them.

Let us have some faithful sermons on covetousness. God should not have to light candles to look for an honest steward. But a prosperous man needs to light all the seven golden candlesticks of heaven to search his own heart for the real motive. A rich man can serve God effectively, but he needs to look well to his own feet. He can not serve with naught. It takes a miracle to save a man of wealth. God has to send an angel to pull him out of the fire, or build a great ship to carry him over the flood. But the same principle applies to little as well as to much. The Savior recounts that they were eating and drinking, reaping and sowing, building and marrying. All of these were in themselves ordinary and lawful actions. The best people in the world do these things every day. To the worldly and ungodly, these ordinary employments make up the sum total of life. To the Christian they are only incidental. His main object is beyond and above.

Herein is the clear distinction which contains a vital difference. There is no difference between worshiping a little idol and a big one. The quality of the worship makes all the difference,—not the size of the god, or the style of the workmanship, or the nature of the material.

FOURTH COMPARISON.—Destruction of the wicked. Why does God roll his chariot so heavily across the sky that even the mountains tremble? Or can you tell how it is that he flings the fiery bolt of the lightning, like an avenging Nemesis against a wicked world? Listen to the awful groan of the earthquake, or the howling of the tempest, or the raging of angry floods, the white foam glistering like the grinning teeth of death when he is sure of his prey, and hungry for the dreadful holocaust! Are not these the symbols of wrath? Hath not God set these warnings all around us, above us, and beneath us? Are we not encompassed with monition? Do not these voices corroborate the unmistakable voice of Revelation, that there is a wrath to come? Oh this prevalent, spiritual blindness which prevents men from seeing danger as they can see a wild beast or a precipice before them. Or is it their hardness of heart which forbids their believing the warning when it thunders in their ears, or flames up before their eyes? Or is it that incomprehensible pride of the human soul, which prevents it from coming to Jesus that it may be saved,—that amazing pride which will not receive eternal life because it is a "free gift?"

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

WHAT a significant name for our church paper! Analyze the phrase and you have, "THE BEARER OF GOOD NEWS;" read it and you have a digest of the system of Christian doctrine. I have been a constant reader of our church periodicals since 1868, and can not yet afford to give it up. The different doctrinal points discussed by our brethren are full of interest and spiritual food for me, or any one else who does not claim to "know it all," as Ruskin quaintly says. The poems are good, and some of them of the highest order. It will pay to read again and again the selection, "How Some People Read the Bible," and others are equally rich in thought. The Correspondence Department embraces a range of observation from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, and even across the deep blue sea come glad tidings from Europe.

Cross this line at right angles, and the same kind of news is given from Canada to the Gulf. Good meetings every-where! New churches organized! A glorious season of refreshing all along the line!

The postal card items and briefs are much appreciated, and the style of get up is a decided improvement. We can now see at a glance about what these briefs contain. The editorials are spicy and rich, whether written at the "easy chair" or out among the Lord's children at work. The space devoted to marriages and deaths we all read with interest, and the announcements of meetings we must have. As to the advertisements,—well, I am not so pure (?) as to be contaminated by their baneful influence. If they bring a few shekels into the coffers of our editors, and thereby enable them to send out the MESSENGER to each subscriber for a shilling less, we appreciate it and read all we like and then skip over and say, "That is not for the pure in heart."

The large, new type, now used by the Brethren's Publishing Co., is good enough for any eyes that should read print at all and the last, but not least consideration I name, is the regularity with which it is issued from the office and received at the different post-offices.

Now, allow me to extend my criticisms to the objectionable features of our paper.

1. With regard to the business management of our publishing business, I, with many others, believe that the best interests of the Fraternity would be promoted by a consolidation of the "Book and Tract Work" with the MESSENGER,—the whole to be owned and controlled by the church, providing it could be made self-sustaining.

2. It is argued that the price of the MESSENGER, books, etc., is too high. This objection has in part been met by the recent reduction in prices of Hymn Books, Hymnals, etc.

3. It is claimed that too much stress is put on missionary work, too many demands for money, too much egotism in reporting meetings, etc.

4. That articles condemning pride, along with a general departure from the established usages of the church, are withheld from publication, and correspondence solicited that genders the opposite spirit.

Now, if I understand aright, the columns of our paper have always been open to those who have the good of Zion in view, and who will help to make our paper a harbinger of good news and assist the pilgrim onward and upward.

TRINE IMMERSION.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

Review of an Article in "Gospel Trumpet" of March 15, 1891, on Immersion.

EUNOMIUS was the founder of single immersion, and he did not found it until the fourth century.

Theodoret, a Greek born in 387 A. D., says: "He (Eunomius) subverted the law of holy baptism, which had been handed down from the beginning from the Lord and the apostles, and made a contrary law, asserting that it is not necessary to immerse the candidate for baptism thrice, nor to mention the names of the Trinity, but to immerse once only," etc.—Bingham's Antiquities, Vol. 1, B. 13, chap. 5; sec. 7. Crystal p. 78.

Gregory of Nyssa, also a Greek, born 332 A. D., says: "He (Eunomius) perverted the law of Christ, the law of tradition of divine institution, and taught that baptism was not to be given in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, as Christ commanded his disciples." — Bingham's Antiquities, Vol. 1, B. 11, chap. 3, Sec. 10.

The editor of the Gospel Trumpet, nor any other man, can show one single record where baptism was performed by one immersion until the fourth century.

We cite you to two early Greek Fathers living in the fourth century,—living right where the apostles preached and spoke in their own language. They say that single immersion was born then, and that Eunomius was its originator. They call it a perversion of the baptism that Christ gave in the commission. Matt. 28: 19.

Chrysostom, another early Greek, born in 247 at Antioch, says, "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism in three immersions of the body, when he said to them, 'Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.'"—Antiq. of the Chr. Ch., 1, p. 540.

Monulus, born about A. D. 256, says: "The doctrine of our holy mother, the Catholic Church, has always, my brethren, been with us, and doth still abide with us, and especially the article of baptism, and the trine immersion wherewith it is celebrated, our Lord having said, 'Go ye, and baptize the Gentiles in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.'"—Work of Cyprian, I, p. 240.

Many more references of the early Greek Fathers might be given to confirm the truth of the three-fold action in baptism, but these are enough, especially when we have testimony that can not be questioned, saying that single immersion took its origin in the fourth century.

Chrysostom says: "Christ delivered to his disciples ONE BAPTISM IN THREE IMMERSIONS of the body." Christ says: "Baptize them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

This language is equivalent to "baptize them in the Father's name, and in the Son's name, and in the Holy Spirit's name," which clearly requires three actions. (See possessive sign in any grammar.)

If the commission read, "Baptize them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost," leaving out four words and all that is indicated by ellipses, then the example, given in the Trumpet, "to sell goods in the name of Kelley, Smith and Clark," would have some weight, but as it is, the writer shows his entire ignorance of language, or a willful disposition to mislead his readers. To make his example parallel with the commission, it should read, "Selling goods in the name of Kelley, and of Smith, and of Clark," or "in Kelley's name, and in Smith's name, and in Clark's name." The Father is not the Son, nor is the Son the Holy Ghost. They are one just as all true Christians are one. John 17: 20–22 says: "I pray that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us. . . . That they may be one, even as we are one."

While all Christians are one, even as the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are one, we know that there are many Christians,—a plurality as well as a unity. The Father, Son and Holy Ghost are one in the sense that all Christians are one, but they are three in the sense that Christians are many. When the Son died for us, the Father did not die. When Jesus ascended to the Father, he sent the Holy Ghost into the world, hence we see trinity in unity, and unity in trinity.

One Bible,—one book,—means the books of Matthew, Mark, Luke, etc. "Preach the Word" means faith, repentance, conversion, etc. One Jehovah means a Father, a Son and a Holy Spirit. One man signifies soul, body and spirit, and so one baptism signifies an action for each member of the Godhead.

A burial is a symbolical representation of baptism, not of its action or its mode of action. Different nations buried in different postures,—sitting, kneeling, standing, lying down, and even by burning and burying the ashes. All covered or hid away their dead, and this is the lesson taught by the symbol, nothing more.

When Paul says, "Planted together in the likeness of Christ's death," Rom. 6: 5, he plainly pictures a bowing posture, for Christ BOWED his head and died. John 19: 30.

There can be no sophistry nor twisting in the matter if we will just take Jesus at his word and do as we are directed.

Hoping that "the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost," may be with all and lead them into the pure light of the Gospel, we close.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

BY Q. LECKRONE.

"Man on the dubious waves of error tossed,
His ship half-foundered and his compass lost,
Sees, far as the human optics can command,
A sleeping fog, and fancies it dry land;
Spreads all his canvas, every sinew flies,
Pants for it, aims at it, enters it and dies!
Then farewell all self-satisfying schemes,
His well-built systems, philosophic dreams,
Deceitful views of future bliss farewell!
He reads his sentence at the flames of hell."

—Cowper.

THE theories of evolution, advanced by Darwin, Huxley and Agassiz, while they have endless shades of differences, seem to agree in ignoring God, and sanctioning the doctrine that creation created itself. It follows from these theories that the story of Eden is a myth, that there was no Adam or Eve,—no devil or hell.

Fancied bubbles have often glittered on the stream of human intelligence, often danced in the hope of disovery, swelled to vast proportions and finally burst. God's ways are so mysterious to the finite mind, that, to speculate upon them, without a proper conception of the teachings of nature, and implicit confidence in the truthfulness of the written Word, may lead to erroneous conclusions.

If I ask the question, "Whence came I?"—I might, in answer, trace my ancestry to remote antiquity, but there is a point where science seems to say, "So far shalt thou go, but no farther." The veil is not yet parted, that would reveal that portion of eternity, and my knowledge beyond that is only speculative. The first chapter of Genesis does not contradict my theory, if I accept the "Nebular" hypothesis as my ideal for the manner of creation, and instead of weakening my faith in the power of the Omnipotent, or awakening any doubt as to the authenticity of the Written Word, it establishes it the more firm. Paul to the Hebrews (11: 3) says, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." He says through faith we understand.

While there are things in creation that we do not understand, yet it seems plausible that, when God spoke the word, all creative agencies should bring about the result intended. Science, when studied by the light of Revelation, presents no conflict with religion, but a decided aid in exemplifying the handiwork of the Creator.

Faith is reason glorified, and science rightly studied, unlocks the gates to the golden domain of God's great wisdom, and pours such a flood of light upon the sacred page, that, as Paul says, "Through faith we understand."

There is no greater scientific work extant than the Bible. Job 28 is a marvel in the richness of its revelation, and science has lately demonstrated it to be true in all its points. A wider range of comprehensive knowledge on philosophy is nowhere to be found so nicely condensed, yet so forcibly told.

When the magnificent intellects of Demosthenes, Socrates and Cicero had paid their religious homage to the Greek or Roman deities, had sacrificed to devils and finished their course, their miseries showed the meanness of their religion. Thus Satan is ever ready to poison the brightest intellect, when just beginning to understand the realities of God from the wonders of his works!

An Open Letter to Brother and Sister White, of Farnhamville, Iowa.

GRACE and peace be multiplied! As you, in your isolated condition, are deprived of sanctuary privileges in your high and holy calling, I felt, this Lord's Day morning to pen you a few words of encouragement, feeling that you need all the encouragement you can get, as you are, as yet, but babes in Christ. Yet the church has laid upon you grave and momentous responsibilities. Yours is a holy vocation. As deacon and deaconess, your labors are onerous, yet I am glad for the burning zeal and love you manifest for the Brotherhood. This will purchase to you a great degree of boldness in the faith once delivered to the saints. I can say like Paul, "I am jealous over you with a godly jealousy," for you are espoused as a chaste virgin to Christ.

Let me encourage you with the thought that you have the confidence of your dear brethren and sisters around you. I do not say this to eulogize you, but for your encouragement to continue faithful. Your duties are plainly set forth in the Gospel of eternal truth, in the third chapter of Paul's first letter to Timothy. There you will find your mission delineated. He gives there some very positive commands to you, "Likewise must the deacons be grave." Please look up the definition of that word; it means much. "Likewise must their wives be grave; not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things." Then comes in the blessed promise, "They that use the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree of boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." My dear brother and sister, if you have not all those good qualifications therein laid down, do not be discouraged, for that is a part of your labor, to attain unto them. Little by little we grow in the knowledge of God's divine truth.

You are now in the school of Christ, and he says, "Learn of me." Humble yourselves before God, and in due time he will exalt you. The great trouble with us all is, that sometimes we undertake to exalt ourselves, then God must humble or abase us. You know that no chastisement, for the present is joyous, but grievous; but afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby.

May the Good Shepherd continue to feed and lead you and all the dear ones by the still waters and on the green pastures of life, until the crowning day will come. Then I pray you may possess a crown of eternal life in an eternal day, and roam the green pastures of the Paradise of God throughout eternity, world without end.

From Bijou Hills, Brule Co., S. Dak.

THE Bijou Hills church met and organized their Sunday-school by electing Bro. W. E. Root, Supt.; Bro. M. E. Stair, Assistant. We appointed Easter Sunday to complete our organization—but, as it was a stormy day, we deferred until last Sunday, April 5. Everything looks encouraging for another successful year's Sunday-school work here. The whole church here is much in sympathy with Sunday-school work. Some, who are quite well advanced in years, attend very regularly from a distance of four or six miles, and delight in helping to carry on the good work.

I think the church here is fully determined to do all it can to advance the cause of our dear Master. We have many hindering causes here, which prevent a rapid growth in numbers. One cause I referred to quite recently; another is the want of influence of adjoining churches, as well as the thinly-settled condition of new countries. People must go a greater distance to attend services, hence are more irregular in attendance, which requires a more continued effort to bring them under the influence of the Word and in sympathy with the church, knowing, as we do, the many easy ways that are offered. The time has come when men and women will not endure sound doctrine. They think more of the amusing character and power of their teacher, than of his ability and zeal to preach the Word of God. We often wonder at the patient endurance of Noah in doing as he was commanded of the Lord, while so few only yielded to the earnest entreaty to come into the ark and be saved. So to-day men and women will not hearken unto the Word of the Lord, but a day is coming in which God will judge the world by his Word, according to our works of obedience. Stand fast then, my dear brethren and sisters. Follow Jesus according to his Word, and God will provide.

I expect to engage in the work of the ministry most of my time, during the year, in our own bounds or territory; hence can not enjoy the privilege of a regular attendance at our Sunday-school, a place of much pleasure to me.

Seeding has just begun here. The spring has been late and the appearance indicates more moisture, hence better crops. All seem more encouraged and are hopeful. "Seed time and harvest" is the promise.

The spiritual welfare of the brethren and sisters here seems to be good. May God help us to remember that we are here to represent the body of Christ, hence we should prove ourselves daily to be lights. May we have a burning zeal for the Lord's cause, and may the eyes of the Lord be upon us as well as the world. May none of us bring any reproach upon the cause by unbecoming actions or conduct before the world, is my sincere prayer. The spirit of deception is abroad in every community. May we discern between the good and evil—and thereby not be found wanting! May divine blessings attend the dear brethren and sisters and may much good be done in the missionary work of the church! May the spirit of the Lord attend all the deliberations of the dear ones in Annual Council!

We request an interest in the prayers of all the dear brethren and sisters in our work here! God bless all!

In Memoriam.

SAD duty makes it necessary to chronicle the death of another dear one who has been taken from us. It is the estimable wife of our dear brother, Dr. A. S. Rosenberger, of Covington, Ohio. Sister Sabrina E. Workman Rosenberger was born July 7, 1849, died April 4, 1891, aged 41 years, 8 months and 28 days. She joined the Brethren church in 1873, and remained a consistent and active member until death. One son, Clarence by name, preceded her six years to the better land. She leaves a husband, one son and one daughter to mourn her loss. Sister Rosenberger was widely and favorably known, having endeared herself to almost every one who came within the range of her acquaintance. So amiable and kind was she to all, that to know her was but to love her. So sincere and earnest was she in the performance of her Christian duties that her life was an inspiration.

She was for several years a great sufferer; and the patient endurance with which she bore her affliction was indeed a matter of astonishment, and often a subject of remark. Amid all her suffering she rarely complained, and was cheerful, having a smile and a good word for every one.

For some time before her death she had been greatly prostrated; but just before the end came she was blessed with unusual strength; and fully in possession of her mental powers, and, conscious of the near approach of her departure, she bade the friends an affectionate farewell, rejoiced at the approaching release from her pain, related in much confidence her assurance of future happiness, and urged her husband and children to prepare, by a life of faithfulness to one another and their God, to meet her in heaven.

In the untimely taking-off of this much loved and respected sister not only the family, but the whole community is bereaved. The high esteem in which she was held was shown by the large crowd that attended her funeral. Services were held in the Brethren's church, Covington, Ohio, conducted by the home ministers. The remains were beautifully, appropriately and affectionately interred in the Covington cemetery.

SINCE our last, we spent one week with the people of Muscatine, Iowa, visiting in the time, a few of the members in the country. While at the above-named place, we held two meetings in the City, and we had a favorable opportunity to see how misleading our adopted church name is. When people were informed that it was a "German Baptist" who was to do the preaching, they refused to attend. But when informed that it was not what they knew as "German Baptists," but a "Dunkard," they said, "O well, if it is a 'Dunkard,' we will attend." There is a church of the German Baptists here, and, as far as we know, a very nice people, but they differ widely from our church in doctrine.

When the matter of a change of church name was before Annual Meeting I was not very favorable to it. The last two years my experience and observation have been such as to call up a different view of the case. One of the reasons why we were not so favorable to a change then, was because the Brotherhood was not all united as to what the name should be. At present I do not know of any name that will give the public at large as correct a knowledge of who is referred to, and what we teach and practice, as "Dunkards." Call ourselves what we may, we will be called "Dunkards."

If the name is changed to "Dunkard Brethren," it will be about as near as we can get to a name that is not misleading. We are all well aware that this will not be entirely satisfactory to every one, but if they were placed where some of us have been, and were they to try to explain who we are, etc., they would more fully realize what we mean. Sometimes, when we try to get people to understand us, we tell them what we do, and how we understand the Word of the Lord. When they learn how we baptize, and that we practice feet-washing as a church ordinance, etc., they say, "Why, you must be what we call 'Dunkards.'" When people hear of trine immersion and feet-washing, the name follows as a natural consequence.

The last week was spent with the disciples in the City of Chicago, and I have this to say about the condition of things there, If our brethren and sisters, throughout the Brotherhood, could be there, and see under what disadvantages the members have to labor, and see how they strive against wind and tide to hold the fort, I believe the means would be forth-coming at once to build a meeting-house. When our people realize that there is a necessity, they come to the rescue promptly. The "Western Sufferers" serve as an example. More anon. At this date the place of work is at Wakarusa, Ind. A. HUTCHISON.

Acknowledgments.

BY request I acknowledge through the MESSENGER the receipt of two boxes and one barrel of clothing, sent for distribution among the needy in this part of Dakota,—one box by V. J. Drayer, of Ironton, Ohio, through L. R. Peifer, of Waterloo, Iowa; the other box and barrel by L. R. Peifer. The goods are being distributed to the best of our knowledge, where they are needed. Many thanks have been expressed by those who have received clothing. We tender our best wishes and heartfelt thanks to those kind hearts and willing hands who have administered to the wants of the needy in this time of failure and adversity. We shall always remember them.

In looking over the MESSENGER, we see that thousands of dollars have been raised for the Western people. While many have, no doubt, given of their abundance, others may have sacrificed some. Let all remember that the Savior said, "It shall be measured to you again, pressed down and running over."

I also recived for distribution in the Williams Creek church, $50.00 in cash from B. F. Miller, out of the $100 received by him from Bro. Blough, of the South Waterloo church, Iowa.

Notes of our Western Trip.

JAN. 12, 1891, in company with Bro. Jos. Metzger, of North Manchester, Ind., we started for California via El Paso, Texas, and Mexico. After a short stay at Los Angeles, Cal., we went to Lordsburg, where my aged father lives at present. Here we remained one month. We saw many interesting things. Southern California is a healthy country and perhaps the best in the world for all kinds of fruits. The climate is pleasant all the year.

After leaving Lordsburg Feb. 27, we went to San Francisco and Sacramento,—both thriving cities. Then we went to Salt Lake City where the Mormon Temple is the only building of much interest. Denver, Colo., next claimed our attention. This is a large mining city, and much business is done here. After visiting these places I started for home via Kansas City. Feb. 27, I reached home and found all well. After being at home about one month, we moved to Cerro Gordo, Ill., where we shall make our home for the present. We think of returning to California in July and making that our home for awhile.

Stirring Meetings.

Bro. Lemuel Hillery has been laboring among some of the churches in Northern Indiana during the winter, and has awakened quite an interest among us. His labors, to a great extent, were addressed to the church,—ministers not excepted. This is a work which, we long since felt, was too much neglected.

In these days of cheap, formal religion it is necessary that the Gospel plan of salvation be more forcibly and implicitly held up before the people. It is evident that, through the influence and teaching of so many blind leaders, a large portion of church members get the idea that a mere name or connection with the church means, "peace, calling and election sure," and they would become seriously offended if you should intimate any doubts concerning their faithfulness to God, and that, according to sound judgment, they will certainly be found wanting.

Bro. Hillery's labors were well received here. There were several received into the church at the places where he preached: and we hope they will be faithful. It is expected that Bro. Hillery will locate here, which we would appreciate.

The District Meeting of the State of Nebraska.

The District Meeting of the State of Nebraska was held in the Bethel church, Thayer Co., Nebr., April 10, 1891. On the evening of the 9th the Brethren met for a Missionary Meeting. The evangelists, who had been laboring in the field, made reports of their work, and the best plans for forwarding the work, and founding churches, were discussed.

The regular District Council met April 10, with a fair attendance. The meeting was organized by electing Eld. B. F. Flory, Moderator; Elds. G. W. Stambaugh and P. E. Whitmer, Reading Clerks, and J. L. Snavely, Writing Clerk. There was quite an amount of business before the meeting, and a good spirit manifested generally. It may not be amiss, inasmuch as a peaceable and quiet spirit is so commendable, to remind all, to cultivate and manifest this amiable disposition in our deliberative bodies. Among the number of queries presented was one, petitioning District Meeting to adopt a rule, similar to that of Annual Meeting, requiring that all delegates, sent by the different local churches to District Meeting, be free from the use of tobacco, and in the order of the General Brotherhood. This rule was adopted by District Meeting.

Another query is in regard to the church name, asking whether it would not be better to drop the present church name of German Baptist Brethren, which is misleading in its nature, and adopt the name of "Brethren (or Tunker) Church." This query was sent to Annual Meeting, petitioning that body to settle on a name for our denomination that will give us definiteness, and not mislead.

The District of Nebraska will be represented this year by letter. J. L. Snavely.

From the Hickory Grove Church, Miami Co., Ohio.

We met in quarterly council April 11. The report of the annual visit showed our congregation to be in peace, and laboring in harmony for the building up of the Master's cause.

Considerable business came up and was disposed of with the best of feeling. The church unanimously decided to hold a choice for two deacons, the lot falling on brethren S. F. Studebaker and George Zimmerman. We also decided to hold a love-feast May 23, at 10 A. M.

Sunday, April 12, our esteemed elder, Bro. John Smith, gave us a missionary sermon, which was much appreciated. Bro. Jacob Frantz is still laboring under the hand of affliction, with no material change. May he have the prayers of God's children! Jacob Coppock.

Tippecanoe, Ohio.

From Circleville, Ill.

One more soul was buried with Christ by baptism at this place on the afternoon of April 5. Bro. B. F. Masterson, of Auburn, Ill., has been dealing out the Bread of Life to us in rich abundance. He has been giving us three sermons each month, commencing on Saturday before the fourth Sunday, for which we praise the Lord.

Our brother is doing a good work here. Four have been added to the flock since he came to us,—two in September, one in November, one in April. One more promises to come soon, so we anticipate brighter days ere long. The neighborhood is considerably stirred, and many are convinced of the truth of our doctrine.

We have no Sunday-school at present for there are not enough brethren here to carry on the work. If any of our members think of changing their location, we would like to have them settle with us, and help in the great work. Any of our ministering brethren passing along the O. and M. R. R., are requested to stop off and preach for us. They will be met at Ashland, Cass Co., if notified in time.

Father Wright is prostrated at this writing with La Grippe and thinks the time for his departure is near. He desires an interest in the prayers of all in his behalf, that he may have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of God.

R. C. Wright.

From the Pleasant View Church, Phillips Co., Kans.

The members of the Pleasant View church met, according to previous arrangements, at the house of Bro. Z. T. Shuck in church council, for the purpose of electing delegates to the District Meeting.

We have in this church sixteen members in all. Fourteen members were present, and all were found to be in peace and love. Everything passed off pleasantly. Bro. J. W. Jarboe will represent us at District Meeting.

Our dear old sister, Catharine, wife of Bro. Samuel Shuck, is at this writing very low, and is not expected to live. We desire the prayers of all the brethren and sisters in her behalf, that she might be restored to health.

The Brethren and friends of this community are very thankful for the contribution that we have received, both public and private, from our Brethren and friends in the East. The good Lord will reward all, for it is more blessed to give than to receive. At our council-meeting the undersigned was appointed Messenger correspondent for this congregation.

Sylvester Workman.

April 13.

"Spare time for reading, or for study, or for the doing of a special work, does not ordinarily come to one in a full half-day or an entire evening, but it is to be found in odd moments here and there, caught from the rush or pressure of daily duties. Hence it is that it is the busiest man who can do one thing more, and that it is the man who has but little to do who is overcrowded with a sense of his absorbing labors. Napoleon, speaking of the Austrians, after he had repeatedly beaten them in battle, with the advantage of numbers and position all on their side, said: 'The Austrians are brave soldiers, but they have never learned the value of minutes.' And in that saying, Napoleon indicated a source of his own exceptional power. It was by the wise use of minutes that he did his greatest work in the world. The Napoleonic man in every sphere of research or of effort, is the man who has learned the value of minutes, and who uses his minutes accordingly."

"There is time enough for everything in the course of the year," says Lord Chestefield, "if you do but one thing at once; but there is not time enough in the year if you will do two things at a time."

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and labors for a return to the apostolic or primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration, the Laying on of hands, Baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of their Lord and Master Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5:14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, the tithing to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - April 28, 1891.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We take much pleasure in announcing to our readers that Bro. J. H. Moore has become a member of the editorial staff of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, and that next week he will take charge of the office work. He, with his family, arrived here on the 16th inst, and they will make Mt. Morris their home for the present, at least.

Owing to the press of other work, pertaining to the church, and to the fact that we have had to carefully guard against overmuch reading and writing on account of impaired eyesight, we have felt that we ought to have additional assistance in the work. These considerations, coupled with the fact, that if the Lord so will, we expect to spend some time in traveling during the coming year, led us to look for an assistant. After counseling with the brethren it seemed good to ask Bro. Moore to take the place to which he was called by the unanimous consent of those directly interested, and by the advice and counsel of those whom we consulted. This he did with some degree of reluctance, being loath to leave the Sunny South with its mild climate for the more rigorous weather of the North. But he consented, and will again enter actively upon editorial work.

Bro. Moore is so well known to our Brethren as a writer, that he needs no introductions from us. After a vacation of seven years he comes back to the MESSENGER to take up the pen in defense of the Gospel of Truth, and we believe that his selection for this important work will give very general satisfaction to our readers. He is an able writer, and will be able to devote all his time to the work.

We expect to continue our editorial work, and there will be no change made in the policy or the purpose of the paper, except it be in the direction of making it better, and more worthy of the high name it bears. We want the MESSENGER to be a true exponent of the principles of the Gospel espoused by our church, a Christian journal noted for its adherence to the truth and the purity of its columns. We believe the church has a mission to perform in the world, and as the MESSENGER is the only recognized organ of the church, its mission and purpose should be to hold up the principles and doctrines of the church. When it has other aims, and advocates other principles, it is no longer the organ of the church, but becomes the mouthpiece of individual preferences. Against this tendency we expect to labor in the future as we have in the past,—a united body of Christian believers, one in Christ Jesus, maintaining the principles of primitive Christianity, as against modern individualism and departures from the teachings of Jesus Christ.

During the last three years Bro. Lewis A. Plate, our efficient foreman, has rendered us most important help in our office work. He has read and prepared the manuscript copy for the compositors, and has also written the postal note items, which have been of much interest to our readers. Without his help we could not have gone on with our work, and we acknowledge our indebtedness to him. He has been in the MESSENGER office many years, and we express the hope that he may be spared many more years of usefulness in his chosen line of work.

We expect, if the Lord will, to spend a short time in Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, before the Annual Meeting.

Bro. J. G. ROYER is spending his time among the churches in the East. Last Lord's Day he was at the Green Tree church. He also expected to attend the District Meeting in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Bro. T. T. MYERS started for Pennsylvania on the 23rd inst. He will spend some time in Philadelphia, and visit in the East until Annual Meeting. He expects to return to Mt. Morris to complete his course in the College.

JUST before going to press we receive the following from sister M. E. Snavely, written at Fairplay, Md., April 17: "My dear father passed over the river at 1 P. M. on Friday, April 17. The funeral took place on Monday at 2 P. M. He died suddenly of heart failure. We are sad, and yet glad he is at rest, and his long prayer for a sudden death answered." We have only space to express our deep sympathy for the bereaved family.

Bro. J. D. TROSTLE, of Hope, Kansas, expresses his feelings in the following words: "Winter is past, spring has come with its beauties, and all nature shows forth the goodness of God. Vegetation is putting forth rapidly. Peach and cherry trees will soon be full of bloom. Wheat and rye are very promising, and all things conspire together to encourage the Kansas husbandman to put forth renewed efforts, with the hope that, by the Lord's blessing, his labors will be rewarded with a bountiful harvest."

Our California Brethren held their District Meeting on the 10th inst., in the Conejo church, Ventura County. The churches were all represented by delegates, and the meeting was pleasant and harmonious. The missionary work of the District was duly considered, and an efficient committee, composed of five brethren, was appointed to take charge of and push the work. Two queries were sent to Annual Meeting, the character of which we have not learned. So far as we have learned, Bro. T. J. Nair will be the only representative from California at the Annual Meeting. He will represent the Lordsburg church. Any one wishing to go to California from the Annual Meeting should see him there. He and his wife expect to spend the two weeks prior to the Annual Meeting in Virginia.

Bro. SUTER, writing from Esterly, Louisiana, says: "As many are looking forward to see what the mission work will amount to in this part of the South, we will say that our dear brother, S. A. Honberger, came to us March 16. We were glad once more to have the privilege of listening to the preached Word. He at once went to work holding meetings, and as a result of his labors, four precious souls made the good choice, and were received by baptism. We feel others, too, are counting the cost. Brethren, pray that the work may be a grand success in Louisiana. There are precious souls here, as well as all over the South, that need the Gospel preached. We now number seventeen members, and as the good work goes forward, we will let the readers of the MESSENGER hear from us."

Our District Meeting for 1891 was held on the 21st inst., at Shannon, Ill., and was in every respect a very pleasant meeting. The attendance was not large, owing to the almost impassable condition of the roads, yet the churches were well represented. The forenoon was taken up in the consideration of the missionary work of the District, which was found to be in a satisfactory condition. Six hundred dollars was appropriated for the District mission work for the coming year. Only a very few queries came before the meeting, and two of these were sent to Annual Meeting,—one looking toward the correcting of our church name, and the other asking that sisters be allowed the same privilege, in breaking bread and passing the cup at the Communion, enjoyed by the brethren. The question of establishing an Old Folks' Home was discussed, and it was decided to empower the Board of Trustees, appointed last year, to locate and establish a Home. This important work received the unanimous support of the entire meeting, and we believe that we shall have such a home in the near future. A resolution was also passed to equalize the burden of keeping the poor in the District. A common fund will be raised, all the churches contributing according to their wealth, and from this general fund the needy ones will be supplied. Bro. David Eby was chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee with D. L. Miller as alternate. The meeting closed at 4 P. M., and will long be remembered as a good District Meeting.

Our dear brother Hansen, writing from Hordum, Denmark, April 4, tells us of a pleasant District Meeting held at Limhamn, March 22. At this meeting Bro. Olin from Keplinge, Sweden, was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and Bro. C. Hansen, of Hordum, Denmark, Bro. H. Olsson, of Malmo, Sweden, and Bro. A. Anderson, of Limhamn, were ordained to the full ministry. Prior to the meeting a love-feast was held, of which Bro. Hansen says: "I went again to Malmo, where we had two great meetings, March 21st, in a large hall at Casino; the first meeting at 10 A. M., and again in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. We (six ministers) were there, preaching from three to six o'clock. Then we had a very good love-feast in the evening. Twenty-seven members surtounded the Lord's Table. Two dear souls came out on the Lord's side, and were added to the church by baptism." We rejoice to hear that the good work is going forward in Sweden and Denmark.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

Under the above caption our dear brother, A. G. Crosswhite, of Ohio, has something to say about our church paper, which will be found in another column. He very kindly refers to the wide influence exerted by the Messenger, its interesting correspondence, its poetry, essays and editorials, all of which he is pleased to commend. Kind words are always appreciated, and that in proportion as they are deserved, and it is said they never die. Well they deserve to live, and if the doctrine of the survival of the fittest be true, then, who can doubt the immortality of kind words? It is not, however, our purpose to write about our brother's kind, encouraging words, but about the suggestion offered, and the objections he has heard urged by some with whom he comes in contact. He has briefly met the objections, but we refer to them more at length.

The first suggestion made is, that the Book and Tract Work be consolidated with the Messenger, "and the whole be owned and controlled by the church." We give our hearty assent to the proposition with the amendment that the General Church Erection and Missionary work be included, and the entire management be placed in the hands of a Committee of competent business men, to be selected by the church. For a consolidation of this kind the way is rapidly opening, so far as the financial part of the enterprise is concerned. The cash Endowment Funds could not be invested to better advantage than to purchase and place under the control of the church the entire publishing interests. We have labored in this direction for some years, believing that it would be for the best interests of the church, and this opinion is held by many of our most careful and prudent brethren. They have carefully studied the question, and are convinced that it would be well for the church to own its publishing interests. We still entertain the same opinion, and are hopeful that the day is not far distant when the change can be made with satisfaction to all. The tendency of opinion in our Brotherhood is in that direction, and although at our last Annual Meeting the way was not clear, yet many who then felt it was not for the best, have, after carefully considering the matter, given their assent to it.

In regard to the objection urged, "that the price of the Messenger, books, etc., is too high," we have this to say: So far as the paper is concerned we showed most conclusively in an editorial in No. 8, by giving the price of other religious papers, that the Messenger, so far as price is concerned, is one among the cheapest papers of its class published, being much lower in price than the great majority of such papers. No one, who will take the trouble to look the matter up will assert, that the Messenger is too high in price, and those who make the assertion without apprising themselves of the facts in the case, are blameworthy.

As to the price of books, published at this office, we are prepared to show by actual figures, that our prices are lower than those of other publishers for copyrighted works. One of the difficulties is, that those who make the objection, do not make the proper comparison. They take a cheap reprint of a book upon which the copyright has expired, or a popular book of which hundreds of thousands of copies are sold, and compare prices. This is manifestly unfair. The copyright of a book usually costs the publishers a good deal of money. The copyright of our Hymnal and Hymn Book cost us some thousands of dollars, and this investment must not be lost sight of in fixing the selling price.

But let us take the prices asked for some of our published works, and see how they compare with other books. Here is that most excellent work, "The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended," by Bro. R. H. Miller. The price is $1.50, and if Bro. Miller is to have anything for his labor in preparing the work, - and who will deny him this right?—the book is sold low enough. We have before us books of the same size and class, published in New York, for which the publisher gets $2.00. Another illustration may be found in "Europe and Bible Lands," sold at $1.50, and to ministers at $1.00. The author spent much time and money in preparing the work, and the price at which it is sold is very much lower than many other books containing even less matter. We have in our private library nearly one hundred volumes treating on the lands of the Bible, and some of them, of the same size and style of binding, cost from $3.00 to $5.00 each. We might multiply illustrations but these will suffice, and we think they plainly show that the objection of high prices is not sustained.

The author and the publisher of a book are justly entitled to compensation for their time and labor, and to deny this is to do wrong. The publisher invests his money, and takes the risk of selling an edition of the book issued, and he can not do this without a margin for profit. To ask him to do otherwise would not be just. You might as well go to the farmer and say to him that it cost thirty cents to raise a bushel of corn, and demand of him that he let you have it at that price, when it brings fifty cents in the market. He would tell you at once that he must have something for the risk and investment, and a margin for profit, and this right is conceded by everybody.

Again, anyone can see that a large edition of a book can be sold correspondingly cheaper than a small one. Millions of copies of the cheap edition of Gospel Hymns are sold at a low price, because of the great demand for them. But our Hymnals and Hymn Books are issued in small editions, and yet they are sold cheaper than the hymnals of other denominations. Last week while in Chicago, we asked a wholesale dealer the price of the Methodist Hymnal, morocco binding. It is not quite as large a book as ours. The answer was $2.00; ours sells at $1.25.

Third, the objection urged against missionary work, and appeals for money is an objection against the authorized work of the church, and should never be made. Our Annual Conference has urged the Missionary and Tract Work upon our Brotherhood, and the Messenger is fully in this line when it makes the work prominent, and urges that the Brethren give as the Lord has prospered them. Not only is it in line with our Annual Meeting, but it is in line with the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and we propose, by God's help, to follow that line to the end.

As to the matter of Gopel plainness, we feel that, to the best of our ability, we have defended the position of our church on that question. Believing that it is a Gospel principle, we have labored for its maintenance in the church with all good conscience and integrity of purpose, and we still have no disposition to give up the conflict. During the last few years the Messenger has published some among the best articles on this subject that have been published in our periodicals. It is true that some articles written on the subject have not been published, and this is true of almost every subject discussed in the Messenger. We can not publish all that comes to us, hence we aim to select the best. Some articles have not appeared, because, instead of adding strength they weakened our position. This is true of any argument that is weak in itself. What we need, and what this age demands, is sound logical arguments, and not merely words and assertions.

Another tendency that we have to meet is, that when some one writes a good, stirring article, others feel called upon to write on the same subject. We have, at times, received a large number of articles in the line of bearing testimony,—not a single new thought or argument is brought out. We have sometimes published one or two articles of this kind, but any one who will give the matter a moment's thought, will see that to publish a dozen such articles in successive issues of the paper would not be edifying, and would only tend to weaken the cause we are trying to build up.

Then, too, we do not want to give undue prominence to any one principle or doctrine. To fill the paper with essays on dress or on baptism, or on any other topic week after week, would be very unwise. We want to give due prominence to all the principles of the doctrine of Christ, and, above all things, we want to be absolutely sure, that, while we have the form of godliness, we possess the spirit, for without the spirit the form is simply a dead, empty husk, and will profit us nothing in the end.

Doubtless some, whose articles, for the reasons given above, have not appeared in the Messenger, may have felt to urge the objection named by our brother. We want to assure our brethren, that our aim is, so far as God gives us ability, to labor for the best interests of our Brotherhood. The church has done more for each of us than we can ever do for her, and why should any of us hesitate to sacrifice for the good of Zion?

We are glad that Bro. Crosswhite called our attention to the objections. We have tried to answer them in a spirit of love and frankness, and we ask our brethren to exercise toward us that charity which should characterize God's people. That we make mistakes we are ready to admit, but after all we have the consciousness that we have done our best, and are willing to let the issue rest in the hands of the Lord.

GO WORK FOR THE MASTER.

Go work for the Master the harvest is great,
Go gather the sheaves before 'tis too late,
Jesus tells us the fields are all ready and white,
Take your place 'mong the reapers and work with your might.

Go out on the highway and gather them in,
The lame and the blind and souls sick with sin,
Go tell them that Jesus your Savior and mine,
Invites them to come to a banquet divine.

Go preach to all nations of Jesus our Friend,
Who is willing and able to save to the end,
Go tell how he suffered that sinners might live,
Go tell them how willing he is to forgive.

Oh cease not while able to preach the blest Word,
But work for the Master,—great'll be your reward.
When he calls you from earth and you hear the well done,
Enter into my joys and sit down on my throne.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BY GERTRUDE E. FLORY.

DURING the past five or six years there has been a great deal said concerning woman's work. There were intimations that the church has not accorded woman her lawful privileges and that she should have equal rights with men in public ministry; and some have broadly hinted that she is more capable of filling the ministerial office than man.

Having to grant the liberty of different opinions, and failing to find a single instance in the Gospel where women were set apart to the ministerial work as men were, I became quite bewildered and unsettled about the subject, till after reading the editorial, "May Women Speak in the Church?" in MESSENGER No. 11. To me it is the most comprehensive and satisfactory exposition of the subject we have had. There is a sublime thought in the last paragraph,—not the quotation,—a thought which can not be fully grasped by the mere reading, "Wifehood, motherhood, the home, the family, here is her legitimate sphere." God grant that the day is not far distant when that grand idea may become a living reality, woven and interwoven through our lives and the lives of generations yet unborn.

Wives and mothers, let us learn that sweet lesson, that we may be better wives and mothers, then we shall have better husbands, and fathers, and children, happier homes and purer families. Then there will be less need of public teaching, for all will, like Timothy, "know the Scriptures from a child," having been taught at home.

O! that parents might realize that they hold the destiny of their children in their hands, and learn to properly wield the mighty weapons they grasp! The world would soon be taken for Christ, and sin would be the exception rather than the rule.

I sometimes think that if these mothers who are so busily engaged in the various "women's work," (so-called) would stay at home and properly care for the children God has given them, there would be more real good done. Those to whom God has given no children to be trained and schooled for the Master's service, must do "whatsoever their hand findeth to do," but surely the mother's place is with her children.

"The Woman's Field" in MESSENGER No. 7, is a fit companion piece for "May Women Speak in the Church?" It would be well for us all to reread it, as it contains food for much wholesome thought, which, if materialized and put into action, will ripen into glorious fruits. It shows too, so clearly the distinction between man's and woman's work, and that God, the Father, evidently has a special place for each child in the household of faith. May we not trust him to see that each is duly installed in his appointed place in due season? And if we each did our duties as they come to us, would we not find less time to parley about "the proper place," or the place we think rightly belongs to us?

It is well for each one to know to what he is best adapted, but men or women that spend a lifetime, trying to find their special adaptation, leave the world little, if any, better than when they came into it. Perhaps, if the time spent in determining where the "sisters" belong, were spent in the much-needed work in Zion, the church would be farther advanced.

There seems to have been no trouble in finding the Brethren's proper sphere in the church. Why is it so difficult to learn where the sisters belong? The world is before us, and surely there is ample room and labor for every worker. Those who are ever ready to move forward to duty, see only the "plenteous harvest," wasting for want of gatherers. It matters not how nor by whom the garners are filled, so it is done and God is glorified.

It seems that woman could ask no higher honor nor wider, grander sphere than that of rearing and training the minister for pious, devoted consecration to his work and Christ. Mary was noted for being the mother of Jesus, yet it was said to her, "Blessed art thou among women. Will it not one day be said to the mother of the noble, valiant embassador of Jesus, "Blessed art thou?" And may not the mother who does a mother's work nobly and well, hope to receive a crown of rejoicing in that blest "inheritance that fadeth not away?" And who dare say aught against it, should it please the King of Glory to place upon the toiling, pious mother's head heaven's brightest, richest diadem? God bless our noble mothers and our noble fathers as well, for all such are general ministers of good to humanity!

Inasmuch as we do not receive into church-fellowship divorced persons under certain conditions, is it consistent and in harmony with the tenor of the Gospel for God's children to associate with such,—interchanging visits with them, as we do with our brethren and friends? Christ's example plainly teaches the Christian to be kind, helpful and courteous to all mankind; to seek the sinning wherever and whenever there is a possibility of winning them to righteousness. But, when, in the face of better knowledge persons presistently live in open rebellion against the teaching of the Bible, should Christians retain them as associates and friends? Apparently this is a question worthy our gravest consideration, and I kindly request, from our brethren and sisters, an expression upon it through the MESSENGER. Our daily conduct is what tells in the Christian career, and in order that our influence may be what it should, our every deed and action must be weighed by love "that thinketh no evil," "is not puffed up," "seeketh not her own."

This question brings to mind the grave queries which shall come before our near approaching Annual Meeting for their final decision. If each member of the church would make the work of that meeting a theme for earnest, faithful prayer, that the work may be done to God's glory and the upbuilding of Zion, surely our gracious Father will hear and cause such decisions to be made that will be an honor to the cause. Let us pray. See John 14: 13; Matt. 18: 19.

While I do not regard giving to the poor a divine command to be obeyed as a means of salvation, I believe it is a God-given privilege, which, if used, will enhance our glory in the sweet life above. It is said, "He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord," and "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Who, then, would shun the privilege and lose the blessing? But, looking around us for one on whom to bestow our gifts, we are confronted by the perplexing questions, "Who are the poor?" "Where is there one, really deserving assistance, one who in God's sight is really poor?" An illustration may more definitely explain: A homeless woman with a child depending upon her for its sustenance, has no support but her own weak hands, which do not afford sufficient means for their living; and without the benevolent help of friends she and her child would suffer destitution, but with the means provided her for bread, she buys a fashionable dress-bonnet and twice the amount of material needed for a dress, so that the dress may be fashionable, too. Her child, like herself, is dressed in the styles and customs of the world. She is a member of a popular church and a professor of Christianity. No doubt there are many cases similar to this. Are such persons poor? Is it right and consistent with our teaching and practice to aid such? Shall we, who are striving zealously, year by year, to subdue the world and purge our blessed church of worldliness, give our hard-earned means to assist those who follow after the world?

While writing, another illustration presented itself. A portly and rugged man in appearance, came to my door, begging something to eat. He to whom we must all give an account of our stewardship, knows whether the beggar went away as he came. But the question is this, "Is it kindness to feed such? May we not do them more harm than good, by encouraging them in a life of uselessness—perhaps crime?

Such cases as these and kindred ones, gave rise to the question, Who are the poor? And now it stands before me continually, demanding a Gospel decision, and I can not give it. Who will help me and receive my gratitude? It seems to me that a few articles in the MESSENGER on the subject would be a mutual benefit. It may be a small matter in itself, but it is the little things of life that make up the sum total of our existence. The little duties, done in the right way, and at the right time, as they come to us, will be rewarded by a robe and crown.

What a far-reaching subject is love! Its theme, how vast! Its depth, how fathomless! Its magude, how measureless! Love reaches up to ven and down to hell, grasps the universe in its le expanse; embraces salvation and redemption d gives happiness or misery to each soul in this rld and in the world to come, as love is proper- or improperly directed.

From time immemorial love has been the theme the grandest sermons delivered from the sacred nd, the topic of absorbing volumns, the beauty literature, the inspiration of the sublimest ems, the composer of the sweetest melodies at- ed to song, the bliss of home, the tie that as heart to heart, the chord that unites heaven d earth, yet it is new, and still perpetuated in ng, woven in poetry and prose, and drops in oquence from the orator's lips, entrancing every tener, enrapturing every soul in its hallowed esence, bearing it upward on pinions of ecstasy, en to the very presence of him, who abides ernally in love, unchangeable, omnipotent and erlasting. God is love!

LOST OPPORTUNITIES.

BY LEWIS E. KELTNER.

In considering this subject, we thought of the d maxim, "Take care of the minutes, and the ours will take care of themselves." How rarely we think of this true saying! When we do, casionally, think of it, how little do we heed the junction! While we, in our youthful days, ould be preparing ourselves for the future, how any golden opportunities are presenting them- lves to us from time to time, that we are letting ietly go by, without an effort to grasp them!

We are each day forming our characters which ill determine the course of our future lives! We e building the foundation, as it were, on which place that noble structure,—character, and when think, dear readers, of, the many idle words, n, even all our idle thoughts, when we remem- r all the missteps we are making in life, without ring to rectify them, how sad when it will have be said of us, "Depart," simply because we did ot improve these many golden opportunities, that ve passed by unheeded.

The many opportunities that are continually oming are the stones which are to form a portion a grand structure. If we place them in their oper places, they will both beautify and strength- the structure. If, on the other hand, we let em remain unnoticed, their places in the struct- e will be left vacant, for each stone has its place, d no other one will fit it.

How chagrined we would all feel, to see the de- iencies of the foundation that we are laying, d on which we expect, some time, to erect a ilding for eternity! If we only could see the numerable gaps, small and great, which this ructure shows, we should fear to proceed, lest, fter all our toiling, our structure should topple er because of the lack of the stones which we ever put in place. We may then wish that we d the privilege of living over our past lives, and prove those chances that we treated so slight- gly.

Vain is such a wish. We have but one life to ve, and then comes eternity, where all the slight- d opportunities of this life shall be revealed to s, and where we will be called to render an ac- unt of all the deeds done, good or bad, and all e opportunities afforded us by him who rules ver all.

To sit idly, regretting lost opportunities, avails othing; our only hope is to improve them as they ome; yes, grasp them firmly, for "trifles make erfection," and perfection is no trifle. How any men could trace their failure in life to some opportunity which was neglected. So it may be with us, if we are not on the alert. Let us ever be classed with those who aim high and work to the mark, —whose motto is, "Let no opportunity pass unimproved."

Let us each day try to do a little more good! Let us improve our thoughts, and cultivate each opportunity that comes within our reach, making sure of the present, and resting assured that the future will take care of itself. At last, when we are called to leave this world, when we shall have to leave time for eternity, may we all be so unspeakably happy as to join the heavenly hosts, and to meet those dear loved ones that have gone before, where we will be permitted to sing the songs of "Moses and the Lamb," and to reign in peace forever!

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

BY S. C. BURKET.

"Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." —Jude 14.

THE coming of our Lord is a very important event in the plan of salvation. It is, we think, as little understood and treated with as much indifference as any subject found in the Bible. In speaking of his coming, we do not mean his second coming simply, but his coming as revealed in the Bible as one great event. The terms, first and second advent, are not Scriptural and, therefore, when used, often convey an unscriptural impression because not properly understood. In the Old Testament the coming of our Lord is revealed as one great event, and the terms "first" and "second" are not recognized, and yet we believe that the process of his coming includes several manifestations as parts of the whole. This very fact was made a stone of stumbling to the Jews, and seems to be as much so to many Christians. The object of the coming of Christ into the world, in all its phases, is to reveal the Father in his plan for the salvation of his people (and not to save souls from hell, as taught by many), and is progressive in its character, every step or phase being duly revealed and properly understood by the Christian in the due time. There are three steps or phases in the great manifestation of the Lord's coming. First his coming to the Jews, second to the church, and third to the world. The coming in the flesh at the time of his presence with the Jews and of his physical sufferings, was the first step in the great event, and is clearly understood by every Bible reader. The church, as the body of Christ and its development to complete the seed are clearly revealed and is said to be a mystery which, in other ages, was not made known to the sons of men, but is revealed to his holy apostles by the Spirit. Eph. 3: 3, 6.

The Gospel dispensation is the dispensation of the Spirit for the taking out of a people for his name and is called the bride, the Lamb's wife.

The second phase of the great manifestation will be the gathering of the saints. Paul says, "We beseech you by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and by our gathering together unto him!" 1 Thess. 2: 1. Again he says, "We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed. But every man in his own order; Christ the first-fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 23.

The third phase or step in that great event will be the coming of Christ and the saints to judge the nations. "For when he shall appear to the world we also shall appear with him in glory." Col. 3: 4. "For behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints (Jude 14), and the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with him." Zech. 14: 5. All will admit that the last quotations refer to the last time or phase of our Lord's coming, and, therefore, must admit that there was an intervening time of coming, as the Lord could not come with all his holy saints, unless he had first gathered them unto himself. Let the three phases of our Lord's coming, as one great manifestation, be clearly seen, and many Scriptures, that now seem obscure, will become more clear, and hope for all of God's creatures will be fully realized by every inquirer after truth.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

MINISTERIAL AID DESIRED. Ministering brethren that may pass this way to or from Annual Meeting, are cordially invited to stop and preach for us. By giving due notice I will meet them at the depot.—A. Haws, Charleston, W. Va.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—On Sunday, March 22, the members of the Donald's Creek church, Ohio, met at 3 P. M., to re-organize our Sunday-school. Brethren Benj. Filbrum and Jacob Sandy were elected Superintendents. The outlook is favorable for successful work during the coming year.—A. F. Ziegler.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The Buck Creek church, Ind., organized their Sunday-school with a full corps of officers. Our Superintendent is sister Dora Rhodes; Assistant, Bro. I. B. Wike. We believe that a Sunday-school, rightly conducted, is a great step in winning souls to Christ. —Isaac B. Wike, Mooreland, Ind.

FUNDS RECEIVED.—I received from the Waterloo church, Black Hawk Co., Iowa, through U. S. Blough, $10 for the needy ones here. Many thanks to the dear brethren and sisters for this token of love and kind remembrance! At present we can only commend them to the care and keeping of our Heavenly Father, who will amply reward them in due time.—Wm. G. Cook, Bijou Hills, Brule Co., S. Dak., April 8.

TEN ADDITIONS.—Bro. Isaac Billheimer commenced a series of meetings here April 3, and continued until the 11th. As an immediate result, ten precious souls were baptized. Some are seriously considering, and, we think, will soon follow. We had crowded houses and the best of attention during our meetings. We hope that, by the united prayers of all, much good will be done here. When Death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity. This we should always bear in mind and, by keeping bitter words from our lips, drive them from our hearts. Love we can never regret, but hate may fill our lives with bitterness! —Adah B. Sutton, Williamsport, Ind.

A WARNING VOICE. —Quite recently I was told by an intelligent young brother that he did not like to hear a certain brother preach, because that brother passed him in the road and did not notice him. Brethren, let us profit by the above mistake! Inspiration reminds us that we are read of all men. The life that we live advertises our righteousness. O, how cautious we ought to be in all we say or do. I remember a brother who was deeply hurt, because, in social intercourse, the official brethren did not notice him as they did the rich and more refined. Brethren, we draw the line too sharply. "Well," says a brother, "I am not guilty." Be sure you are clean; I confess I have room to improve. Let us make those brethren and sisters subjects of special care, who are not so favorably circumstanced in life as others. Let us help to bear each other's burdens! —Samuel Petry, Good's Mills, Va., Feb. 29.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The Bunker Hill church, Ohio, organized her Sunday-school April 12, 1891. We chose Bro. Isaac Miller as Superintendent, and H. A. Hochstetler, Assistant. We decided to use the "Gospel Chime" in our school. I hope the Lord will be with us! Sarah Middaugh.

INTERESTING MEETINGS.—Bro. Thurston Miller, on his return from District Meeting stopped with us and preached an able sermon that was highly appreciated. On the following evening Bro. E. B. Bollinger, from Lagrange, came to us. He remained over Sunday and gave us three sermons. Such visits are always welcome. -John H. Crume, Wawaka, Ind.

SIX ADDITIONS.—Yesterday, at our regular services, the members of the Oakland church were made to rejoice to see six dear souls come out on the Lord's side by stepping into the liquid stream to be buried with Christ by baptism. Our Sunday-school is now fully organized for the summer, with good prospects for success. John H. Christian, April 13.

HOME AGAIN.—This will inform the many readers of your worthy paper that wife and I left Lordsburg, Cal., April 7, at 2 P. M., for Cerro Gordo, Ill., where we arrived April 11. We left the brethren and sisters in California well, and in good working order for the Master's cause. Quite a number of members are coming to California from different States. From present appearances we think the time is not far distant when strong churches will be organized in California. Prospects are good for harvest, and fruit of all kinds. John Metzger.

COUNCIL-MEETING.—The Brethren of the Elk Lick congregation, Somerset County, Pa., held their quarterly council-meeting, April 4. We had a fair attendance, and the spirit of the meeting was very good. The business interest of the church was looked after, and all matters were adjusted in a very pleasant and agreeable way. We felt the Spirit of the Lord was with us for good. Brethren A. P. Beachy and Silas Hoover were elected to represent the church in Annual Meeting. Brethren Milton Beachy and M. F. Smith were elected delegates to District Meeting.—John C. Johnson.

PLEASANT COUNCIL.—The members at Moscow, Idaho, held their council-meeting here to-day. The business was quickly disposed of in a spirit of love. We decided to hold our Communion meeting June 6. We would like to have as many as can, that live in reach of Moscow, to be with us at that time, and if there are any brethren traveling through this country at that time, we would like them to make it a point to be with us. Any that come by rail should write me when they will arrive, and which road they will come on, and some one will meet them at the depot. You can reach here via the Northern or Union Pacific R. R.—J. U. G. Stiverson, April 4.

ONE BAPTIZED.—Bro. W. W. Folger is the delegate from Irish Grove church to the District Meeting of Southern Iowa. Bro. J. D. Haughtelin represents the Coon River church at District Meeting of Middle Iowa, with J. W. Diehl as alternate. The Irish Grove church in Southern Iowa is taking the initial steps toward building a meeting-house in the near future. They are small in number and not strong financially, but they are worthy and deserve encouragement and aid. These brethren have obeyed the injunction of Jude, "Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints." After patient waiting they are seeing a brighter day dawning upon them. One more was baptized on the 5th inst., and others "almost persuaded."—J. D. Haughtelin.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—Recently our dear brother, J. Tenison and his oldest daughter,—Omma, attempted to burn some brush, when the daughter's clothing caught fire, and before her father was aware of it, her clothing was in flames. She soon fell to the ground and Bro. Tenison, in trying to save her life, burned both hands severely, which may possibly leave him a cripple. Omma lived twenty-four hours after the accident. Her age was about sixteen years. -J. S. Buckley, April 15.

Wayside Notes.

BIDDING adieu to the Brethren and friends of Eureka, wife and I started northward April 1, via Palatka, Jacksonville and Savanna. Here we left what is known as the Coast Line to Washington and also the most direct, but, in order to meet and visit the churches in North Carolina, we go by way of the Augusta, Columbia and Piedmont line, or Danville and Richmond Railroad to Washington. This is the longer line but passes through by far the best country, so that Brethren, going southeast of the Alleghanies and Blue Ridge range, can have a choice of routes and perhaps more of interest.

At Augusta we were delayed several hours. After a night ride we noticed that since the incessant rain, the streams were full to overflowing. We heard many complaints about the wet weather since the Holidays, which caused some delay in the planting of cotton and corn. This is a cotton country, and cotton may be seen piled up in the streets and on the side-walks in bales.

Upon our arrival at Greensborough, N. C., wife left me and continued north for Washington, Baltimore and Pennsylvania to visit her daughters, while I went on to Salem and into the country ten miles, to the Fraternity church, N. C., where I have been laboring since then, preaching the Word as best I may. I met with fair attendance and good interest, though bad roads and lateness of season somewhat interfered. This is the locality of the old Faw family. Isaac Faw, a minister, came here about one hundred years ago and settled near where the meeting-house now stands but which then was a wilderness. Here he lived and labored to a good old age. After his death, the church had no minister, and, in consequence, became weak. Many of the older members passed away and as the final outcome of the condition of things, Jacob Faw, son of Isaac Faw started on horseback for Ohio, to find the Brethren and to receive baptism. He found the Brethren in Franklin County, Virginia, and so was saved the trip to Ohio.

Just here I refer to an incident seldom, if ever, met with. Bro. Isaac Faw, shortly before his death, preached his own funeral sermon, there being no brother to be had. The Faw family is not very numerous, but bears an excellent reputation.

On the return of Jacob Faw, and a few years afterward, Bro. John Bowman and probably Bro. Barnhart, came to the little flock, and Jacob was placed in the ministry, with the assistance of Amos, his son. Since then Rufus and Frank Robertson have been elected. The two former brethren having passed away, the care of the church now rests in the hands of Eld. Jeremiah Barnhart, who has recently moved there from Virginia. This little flock is isolated from the main body of the church. No members live nearer than about one hundred miles. This church is attached to the First District of Virginia.

Since the late unpleasantness in the Brotherhood a few have separated from the church, and identified themselves with the Old Order element. The church is now in a healthy condition and under the care of Bro. Barnhart, with his assistant, prosperity seems to be assured. I shall remain here next week and hope that my labors may be beneficial to saint and sinner.

I will probably stop at Roanoke, Va., on my way north, and, perhaps, at other points. I expect to reach wife and friends before our Annual Meeting at Hagerstown, the home of my boyhood. Brethren, let us pray for a successful meeting, for the strengthening of that fraternal bond of union. Let us be an army of workers, with our banners unfurled for God and his cause! God sparing us, it will be pleasant to meet here below, but much better above. J. C. LAHMAN.

NUMBER SIX.

THERE are but two ways,—one to destruction and one to life. The Savior makes the following exposition of them: "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. 7: 13, 14.

It has been truthfully said that the gate to life is s-t-r-a-i-t not STRAIGHT and the way narrow, for the simple reason that they pass between two extremes. Man is either too high or too low. The high things must be brought down and the low things up. "Middle Maas die beste Sitz."

What to do in certain emergencies has been the hardest problem of my life. It strained my best thoughts and bowed me before "The Rock that is higher than I." One of the most delicate problems is to walk in the narrow way while surrounded by an honorable but opposing element, especially so when they are of a critical disposition. "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Mark 8: 38.

You know there is a common proverb among Pennsylvania Germans (perhaps elsewhere too) "If one wants to be praised he must die, if despised, he must marry." So common is this that a young wife once, when the Lord's Day was drawing nigh, aptly said. "Yes I must be up and doing for the examining committee will come on Sunday."

When one unites in wedlock with Jesus, the lover of our souls, the critic is no less busy. Men want to see if we are faithful to our Beloved. A single lady can keep a lawful company with a single gentleman, and if she finds him objectionable she can dismiss him and try another, but when she marries she is under permanent obligation to her husband. Even so when we join in wedlock with the Bridegroom from heaven. Before such wedlock we could do much as we pleased, but now we are no more our own,—we are bought with a price. 1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.

It is not material to the critic whether the bride is the president's or a beggar's daughter. She must be criticized! Consequently she should double her diligence to please her husband. Think you not the Bride of the Lamb should make yet greater efforts to keep her wedding garment pure and clean, and unspotted from the world? James 1: 27.

As in earthly wedlocks all are not equally criticized, so also in the heavenly. From the inferior there is not so much expected as from the superior. "For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more." Luke 12: 48. I hope that your judgment will tell you that from the minister, his wife, and their children more is expected than from any others in the church. Oh, if only all of us, who are called to teach, by precept and example, could but fully realize this! Sad it is to think of our shortcomings, and there is an apparent inclination with some, in their responsible position, to take liberties which other members would not. I have really heard it said of such: "O, she is the minister's daughter," or, "She is the minister's wife,"—as much as to say such can or will take greater liberties. "These things ought not so to be."

In Memoriam.

JAMES EVANS was born July 1, 1825, in the City of Glasgow, Scotland. When he was about two years old, his parents emigrated to Prince Edward Island. At seventeen years of age he and his two brothers, — George and Alexander, joined the Methodist church. Soon after this the boys left home and he never saw them again. James commenced speaking in public at the age of about twenty-one years. A few years after, he, with his father and mother, went to Canada where he united with the Disciples. He continued with them for some years, preaching, and teaching school for a maintenance. He studied hard and read theology, especially everything of a controversial nature, but did not embrace any new doctrine without a thorough examination, and by comparing Scripture with Scripture.

From a child he knew the Holy Scriptures, but he was not satisfied with the common version, so he commenced the study of the original, both in Greek and Hebrew, and became quite a proficient student in those languages.

Aug. 31, 1863, he was married to Mary A. Hacking, of Listowel, Ontario. At this time he was a follower of Dr. John Thomas, who had split off from the Campbellites on account of his Millenarian views. He then became a student of prophecy, advocating the near coming of Jesus, the literal return of the Jews to Palestine and the reign of Christ and the saints over the earth. He held many debates concerning the kingdom of God, the state of the dead, and the eternal torments of the wicked, preaching and lecturing in Toronto, Hamilton, and most of the towns and villages of Ontario, but more especially was he well known as a debater in the Counties of Oxford, Waterloo and Perth. He and his father-in-law, W. H. Hacking, were at this time publishing a monthly periodical, called the Masturian, or True Witness, which they continued for ten years, so his time was wholly taken up by teaching school five days in the week, and by traveling and preaching the other two, besides reading, studying and writing for the paper at night. He was a vigorous writer, an energetic speaker, and a sharp debater.

His attention was never called to Trine Immersion until 1874, when "Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles" fell into his hands. He and W. H. Hacking then gave it a careful examination and, when they found it to be the practice of the ancient churches, they were baptized; also his wife and several of her family, by W. C. Thurman in July, 1874, at Listowel, Ontario. They also believed that Jesus was coming in 1875, so James sold his property, gave up his school, and spent the winter in traveling, preaching and baptizing, through Ontario, Michigan and Wisconsin where he made a great many converts. But when the time passed away, many gave up the Bible and walked no more with him. He, however, never doubted the Bible, but imputed the errors in chronology to man's interpretation of it, and as he was now without home or means, he accepted an invitation from some friends of the same faith, who had been readers of his paper, to go to Lunenburg, Va., where he labored for the next five years, until W. A. Thurman came with a new baptism, which he could not receive, it being without Scripture or precedent.

Finding that he had no more influence with that party, he concluded to unite with the Brethren, with some of whom he had become acquainted and with whom he agreed as to matters of faith. He sent for brethren B. F. Moomaw and Peter Nininger, of Botetourt County, who came and preached about a week at Lunenburg, baptizing James and his wife in February of 1880. Soon after they left Virginia and went to Missouri, where he remained over a year. From there he went to Illinois, where he preached and taught school, for a short time. He was now getting pretty well broken down, and unfit for mental labor to some extent, and as his boys were old enough to work on a farm, he was anxious to have a home where he thought they might make their own living, and be independent of the help of others, for though he was always willing to minister unto others, he could not bear to be felt a burden, so, in the spring of 1883, he went with the tide to Dakota, where he took a homestead, but, having no means to start with, he endured many hardships and trials. Having to mortgage the land and then the crops failing, he lost all and was obliged to leave, after eight years' hard toil and anxiety of mind. It was more than he could endure; his worry and trouble caused indigestion from which he suffered for eight months with the greatest of patience, never complaining, seldom asking for anything. He continued to preach, while he was in Kansas, nearly every Sunday, though sometimes he was not able to stand up.

He had long ago given up all controversy, and he seldom spoke on first principles. He was not a revivalist, and never baptized since coming to the Brethren, but he felt that his mission was to the household of faith, teaching them the way of the Lord more perfectly, for he was apt to teach. His favorite themes were, "The Love of God," "The Redemption in Christ Jesus," "The Kingdom of God in all its fullness and all its many Phases," "The Glories of the Heavenly World," and "The Work of the Saints in the Ages to Come." He had strong faith in God, that he was able to heal him and raise him up if it was his will, but he said, if his work was done here, he would have a great work to do in the restitution.

He had a deep insight of the future. During his sickness, though he could not read nor talk much, he could repeat whole chapters to himself both in Greek and German as well as English, and he seemed to get within the veil.

He was anxious to get to Oklahoma, where his sons had preceded him, hoping that he would recover when he could feel at home again. He stood the journey very well and he seemed to be better at first, but he soon grew worse and became more feeble every day until March 21, when the doctor gave him up. Then he said, "I die in peace with all mankind." For three long hours his wife and children stood around his dying bed. He was conscious to the end, but could scarcely speak. When asked if he suffered pain, he shook his head. His son said, "Pa, you will soon see Jesus, won't you," and in reply he bowed his head. They all promised to meet him in the kingdom of God, and very quietly and without a struggle he breathed his last, just at sundown. He sleeps in Jesus. He was sown in corruption, he will be raised in incorruption. He was sown in dishonor, he will be raised in glory. He was sown in weakness, he will be raised in power. He was sown a natural body, he will be raised a spiritual body, and when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory, Oh death where is thy sting! Oh grave where is thy victory!" Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

He has left a wife, two sons and a daughter to mourn their loss, but they sorrow not as those without hope, for they who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Blessed consolation!

MARY A. EVANS.

The Lord's Work in Chicago.

WHAT is true of the work in Chicago, is true to a greater or lesser extent in any other city. No one can have a true conception of the difference between the work in cities and in the country, until they see for themselves. The idea of a man making a success of ministerial work in the city, and at the same time giving his personal attention to some line of secular business, will have to be abandoned, before success will ever crown the Lord's work in cities. We hope that if these lines ever come under the notice of the members in Chicago, they will not think that we are speaking disparagingly of their work. On the contrary, we feel that they deserve praise for their efforts, under such adversity as confronts them there. They have to pay a high rent for the use of the church in which they hold their meetings, and can not have it at that, on Sundays, except in the afternoon. The forenoons and evenings the house is occupied by those who own the property. The members have the use of the house on Thursday evenings for their social meetings.

What is absolutely necessary to the success of the work in that place is, a house that the church can call her own, so that they can control it at will, and have regular services there at the regular hours. Then the shackles should be thrown off of their minister, so far as the affairs of this life are concerned, and he should be armed with plenty of tracts, etc. You may rest assured he will find no time to loaf on the street corners, or smoke cigars by the way. If he will give himself wholly to the work, and go from house to house and call attention to the character of the doctrine which he represents, he may in this way, encourage the people, thus visited, to come to church and listen. He must be prepared to give them something to listen to, that has the true Gospel ring about it, having his own heart aglow with the fire of God's Holy Spirit, and the love of Jesus beaming forth in his language and manner, so that people to whom he speaks will be impressed with the idea that he has been with Jesus and learned of him.

Then let every brother and sister be armed with circulars, giving place of regular services, giving also the hours, etc., also be well equipped with the Brethren's literature, tracts, etc. In this way the work may be greatly helped along.

This may be stale and insipid to some of my dear brethren and sisters who have spent all their life in the country, but if you will visit the City as I did, you will not think strange of me for writing as I do. The failures in cities are largely owing to a want of means and system.

Literary Notes.

Six Centuries of Work and Wages.—A History of English Labor.—By J. E. Thorold Rogers, M. P., late Professor of Political Economy in the University of Oxford. —abridged.—With Charts and Appendix by the Rev. W. D. P. Bliss.—Introduction by Richard T. Ely, Ph. D., Associate Professor of Political Economy in Johns Hopkins University.—Price 25 cents.—THE HUMBOLDT PUBLISHING CO., Astor Place, New York.

This is the first number of the SOCIAL SCIENCE LIBRARY, which puts at the disposition of the public a record that is invaluable. It is the story of the struggle of the English poor against the avarice of priest and king, landlord and capitalist; a story told by the records of thousands of court rolls, and stewards' accounts, compiled by unconscious historians, who little dreamed of the tale the figures they so patiently added up would one day be made to tell. From the beginning of the thirteenth century, when almost every one not only possessed land, but cultivated it; when a landless man was looked on as an outlaw and a stranger; when the use of the common pasture was without stint, and the arable land of the manor was usually communal; from that remote date to modern times, Prof. Rogers, conducts the reader through the successive stages of a drama whose motive was the cheapening of labor for the benefit of the monopolist. And surely no time could be more fitting than the present for publication of this work which, with its special charts, clear type, good paper and elegant make up, is destined to have an extensive sale.

ULLOM.—At her home near Cadiz, Wis., and within the bounds of the Waddam's Grove congregation, sister Julia Ullom, wife of Eli-ha Ullom, aged 66 years, 9 months and 16 days.

Sister Ullom's birth-place was Knox County, Ohio, from which place she, in company with her husband and a number of others, moved to Green County, Wis., the place of her sickness and death. She was the mother of ten children, five sons and five daughters.

Three daughters preceded her to the grave, one of whom was sister Addie Puterbaugh, who recently died at Mt. Morris, Ill. Only two of the surviving seven children,—Joseph and William,—could be present at their mother's funeral. Sister E. Shank, who has been under the hand of affliction for some weeks, though improving, was not able to attend. Franklin, Charles and Homer, who all live in Kansas, and Minerva Denison, of Nebraska, were also deprived of the privilege of attending the funeral. In her death Bro. Ullom, who, on account of affliction, was scarcely able to follow his loving companion to the grave, has sustained an inreparable loss, the children are bereft of a kind mother and the church of an exemplary and conscientious member, meek and gentle in spirit, loving and hospitable in her ways. The large attendance at her funeral, despite the extremely bad roads, indicated the esteem in which she was held by all. Funeral improved by the Brethren from the words, "She hath done what she could." Mark 14: 8.

She united with the Brethren church Sept. 27, 1890, and lived a faithful member until God called her home. Funeral services were conducted in the Blue Ridge church by Bro. The constantly increasing travel via the Monon demands additional accommodation Hereafter the night train, known as "The Electric," will consist of a Compartment Sleeping Car, a regular Sleeper, a Ladies' Car, with an addition of Sleeper for use of Indianapolis passengers The entire outfit has been built by Pullman expressly for this line, and is simply the best The addition of a Compartment Sleeping Car to the equipment, fills the bill. Families traveling together will appreciate this special accommodation, while those preferring the regular Sleeping Car can have their choice. This train leaves Dearborn Station daily, at 8 35 P M, reaches Indianapolis at 3 45 A M, and arrives at Cincinnati at 7 25 A M Passengers in Indianapolis Sleeper can occupy their berths until 7 30 A M

The Fahrney Hammock Carts.

GUARANTEED ENTIRELY FREE FROM HORSE MOTION AND TO RIDE AS EASY AS A BUGGY.

INVENTED BY
C. FAHRNEY, POLO, ILL.
PATENTS APPLIED FOR.

Made With Tops On, or Without.
Canopy or Bow Top.

A SPECIAL OFFER. In order to get our Hammock Carts introduced all over the country, we will ship a sample Cart at wholesale price to any brother that will agree to do what he can, conveniently, to get some responsible party (if he does not want to do so himself) to handle our Carts. We do not expect any one to lose time to do this, but whenever you can conveniently show it to your dealers that handle carts, and get them to ride in it, please do so. Or if you know of any one else that would make a good agent, please make an effort to have him try the work. We make this proposition, believing it will aid us in covering a greater amount of territory in a shorter time than any other way. We can not canvass the whole County in time for this spring's trade and whatever territory is canvassed by others will only help our traveling agent. Write us at once for circular and full description of Carts and Terms to Agents. If our Hammock Cart does not come up to what we claim for it, you need not keep it. Simply notify us and we will take it off your hands. We hope that a number of brethren will accept this offer, and assist us in advertising our Cart and at the same time get the benefit of a very fine riding and durable Cart at a low figure.

We want one man to travel in each State where Carts are sold, to establish agencies to handle the Hammock Carts. It would be best for agents to travel in one of the Carts from town to town and let the dealers ride in the Cart. Then they will be sure to want it. This could be done in connection with some other business that necessitates traveling. Write for terms and give reference to save time. We must have some one at once.

ELD. JOHN S. SNOWBERGER, of Colorado, is East, visiting his relations and friends in Bedford, Blair and Huntingdon Counties, Pa. He expects to attend a number of love-feasts and remain East until after Conference.

ELD. JOHN W. BRUMBAUGH has so far recovered from his late illness, that he was able to attend the District Meeting and be present at all the sessions. His presence was hailed with apparent pleasure, as we were all glad to see him with us again. He also hopes to be able to attend the Annual Meeting.

WE have been informed that Eld. Daniel Hollinger, of the Upper Cumberland church, though past his four score, determined to make a pastoral visit to all the members of his church, and, by divine permission, has been able to carry out his wishes, greatly to his own satisfaction. We have no doubt but his visit was greatly appreciated by his people.

WE are informed that the brethren and sisters of the Altoona church, have taken into hands to repaint and give general repairs to their church-house. The main audience room, which never had been seated, is now being supplied with good seating, so that it can be used hereafter for their regular preaching services. We hope that success may attend their efforts, and that the members may be as solicitous to beautify their own Christian character, as they are to beautifying the house in which the Lord is to be worshiped.

THE inspiration of spring-time has come, and there is a general disposition on the part of all to appreciate the lovely and the beautiful—and how can we help when God has made us so? Our Heavenly Father might have made trees without fruit, and fruit without flowers. But as man is his highest and best creation, and as he has given us of his divine attributes, he gives us these things for our enjoyment. Truly may it be said: "And his works praise him," and in our appreciation of the things which he has made, we honor him. If, when, visiting our friends, and being shown their lawns and flowers we would manifest an entire indifference towards them, we would insult them, and indeed we would be ashamed of our own rudeness. How do we treat our Heavenly Father who has done so much to make our journey through life pleasant and inviting? Every-where God is! In the growing of the corn, in the green meadows, in the lily and the rose,—there he is seen.

A PLEASANT CALL.

District Meeting.

ON Monday evening we had the pleasure of a call from elders J. F. Oller, C. Ness, D. Landis, Henry Etter and Bro. George Wolf—all delegates on their way to our District Meeting.

After learning that a number of delegates went up to the "Normal," we, in company with the brethren with us, also went up, where we found brethren Jacob Hollinger, J. F. Stamy, Henry Beelman and M. M. Mummert. We then went to the parlor, where a number of the members, teachers, students and others met with us, and an hour was spent very pleasantly in singing, talking, and prayer, which, we think, was greatly enjoyed by all who were present. As there was no general announcement made, only a small proportion of the members knew of the meeting.

This is the kind of association we recommend in our schools. The schools and the church ought to be on the most intimate social relation and all of our ministers, especially, should make themselves familiar with the managements and their workings. The schools belong to the church, and the church belongs to the schools, and the more fully this relation is felt, the better it will be for both.

We, as members of the church, are deeply interested in the moral and religious training and education of our children and, therefore, have a right to know the moral and religious status of the place to which we send them for this training, and not only this, but these associations have a most beneficial effect on all the parties concerned. It tends towards and approximates the family relation that should exist and be cultivated among us.

On the following morning the brethren left us for the place of meeting, while we, being very busy, remained back to take the evening train, which would still take us to the place in time for the business opening.

During the afternoon we had a call from brethren B. F. Kittinger and Wolf, who remained for the evening train, where we met quite a number of others on their way to the Meeting. As the weather was fair we had a very pleasant trip, reaching the place about 8:30 in the evening.

On Wednesday morning the meeting opened with a good attendance, all the churches being represented but three. The business before the Meeting was unusually small and everything was done in a most brotherly spirit. Though it was in the midst of the spring work for the farmers, the attendance was large, and a deep interest was manifested in the deliberations.

After the regular business of the meeting was done, the pastoral visit, as recommended by the Annual Meeting, was considered, and a number gave their experiences in the work, and gave some practical suggestions as to how it should be done.

Pastoral work is comparatively a new feature in our ministry, but it is an approach towards the true ideal and, we believe, will result in great good. It develops the relation that should exist between the pastor and people, and the better this relation is understood and carried out, the more effective will be the work.

The subject of an "Old Folks' Home" was also before the meeting and discussed briefly. A committee was appointed to mature plans, etc., and report to the next District Meeting. This is a matter that appeals strongly to our Christianity, and is a vital part of practical religion.

Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these, the least of my brethren, ye have done it unto me. In the poor we have the living Christ, as well as in the rich, and we should give them such consideration as we would give him were he with us. Do you think that if he had no home of his own, we would send him to the alms-house as a common pauper? Perhaps some of us would, because inasmuch as we do it to "one of his," we do it unto him.

In our deliberations on this subject, it will be well for us to study carefully our true relationship to each other and in Christ. If we do this as we should, we will understand more fully the duty we owe to our infirm and aged poor.

Our selfishness, if we could clearly see it, would surprise us beyond measure, and it is important that we do see it, or it may debar us from the enjoyment of heaven in the day of judgment. There we must see it, if we don't care to see it now. We hope the proper steps will be taken in this matter, and that a judicious move may be made in the near future.

The brethren and sisters of the Hopewell church did all they could to entertain the delegates while with them, and all were well cared for. The next meeting will be with the brethren of the Lower Cumberland church.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

PRECIOUS FAITH.—Galatians 3: 26.

Give us, Oh Lord, a faith,
To see thee as thou art;
A pure and undefiled belief,
An humble, contrite heart;
A faith well founded, firm,
Unfaltering in trust,
That lifts the soul beyond this clay,
Beyond this mortal dust.

To realms of pure delight,
To an immortal state;
Where joys unnumbered, joys untold,
The faithful pilgrims wait;
Oh, precious, living faith,
Inspired by love divine;
We look and wonder and adore,
And bless thee, thou art mine.

More precious than fine gold,
Or regal diadems;
'Tis sweeter, better, brighter far
Than any earthly gems;
Oh blood-bought, King-sealed faith,
We worship and adore;
Our Lord and Master, Prince of Peace,
Our Savior evermore.

A faith that makes us see,
And feel, and hear, and know,
That Christ is ours, and we are his,
As pilgrims here below;
A faith that helps us live,
A faith that helps us die,
A faith that guides us home at last,
To realms of bliss on high.

Most glorious, precious faith,
Our hope, our trust, our stay.
Our joy, our comfort, our delight,
Abide with us, we pray,
And when the final trump
Shall bid us welcome home,
We'll shout through all eternity,
Saved—saved—by faith alone.

JESUS CHRIST—HIS PERSON AND WORK.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To "one of these little ones which believe in Jesus:"—

You are one of the silent Marys, sitting at the Great Teacher's feet, and yet none the less one of the busy Marthas when active service calls. That you are "careful and troubled about many things" is sad, but not surprising. Millions grow up in Christendom, on whose eyes and hearts the veil of Moses rests through life. The Rabbis in Christ's time, with all their theological refinements and amazing casuistic dexterity, could not see the Christ of God in the meek, quiet, obscure Nazarene carpenter, although his person and words and works were blazing with the unanswerable evidences of Godhead. The law of solidarity is now what it was then. It makes no exceptions in favor of class or individual.

John, the Baptist, and Emmanuel had the same environments as the Rabbis. John rose partly above their influence, and Jesus altogether. Among all with whom I am acquainted, personally, or by correspondence, or through literature, not one do I know who has wholly escaped from the tyranny of unfavorable surroundings. I have been reared in the atmosphere of stringent orthodoxy after a certain standard. Bitter and prolonged has been my struggle to "Know no man after the flesh," and "to know nothing but Jesus Christ, and him crucified." My feeling of loneliness is sometimes almost insupportable amidst so much that is purely traditional and coldly formal, and wholly alien to the Eternal purpose of God in the incarnation.

Your trouble lies exactly at this point, and nothing but direct communication with Jesus, through the Holy Spirit, can raise you above the mental mouldings and decisions resulting from the combined influences of your entire past life. I congratulate you, and at the same time with all my heart I pity you. The peace of thousands is very cheap, resting on nothing better than their efforts to conform to certain forms and regulations, and keep on a level with a conventional standard of morality. You are past that, thank God. You are in the seventh of Romans now, in the heart of verse 24, and nothing but a vision of Jesus and an assured interest in him will let you into the blessed mystery of Rom. 5: 1, and 8: 1, 2. You were "alive without the law once; but when the commandment came, sin revived, and you died." Such an awakening will some day come to every soul that thinks to stand well with God on the basis of its own obedience.

Banish forever from your mind the fatal sophistry that anything but direct, personal, vital dealings with Jesus Christ can bring you "the peace of God which passeth all understanding." Salvation in its simplest, profoundest sense, is not by circumlocution. "Come unto Me, I will give you rest." You can take no yoke upon you until you have accepted a Person. Jesus is the only Revealer of the Father; and the Holy Spirit is the only Interpreter and Communicator of Emmanuel.

As the genesis of your new life, and the ground of your peace, and the verity of your judicial relation to God, allow nothing to come between you and the one Mediator. When the divine immanence has occurred in the virgin, by the direct agency of the paraclete, then is the time for the secondary, life-supporting, and life-expressing media to be called into requisition. The initial stage which brings the soul and God into vital conjunction, possible only by faith, includes all the developments in every form of work, as the germ infolds all the possible evolutions of its type.

"You did run well," you saw Jesus before you thought of His ritual, and from Him you passed to His service. This is the divine order, and any other Gospel is accursed, whether preached by man or angel. But, like the Galatians, you imperceptibly slid back into the legal attitude and consciousness, and your peace is gone. There is but one way of peace possible; not by trying to satisfy the claims of a law whose death-penalty we have incurred, by believing in Him who has satisfied it. We start with Jesus as a person, and with Him we end. "He is Alpha and Omega."

It is not our faith in the commandments that saves, but faith in Him who is their origin and substance. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Rom. 14: 23. Unless we apprehend Jesus, and through Him gain access into the grace of reconciliation by faith, our obedience is vanity and presumption. Rom. 5: 2. Obedience is an absolute necessity of the Christian life; but to claim for it what attaches only to the obedience of the Sinless One is to "frustrate the grace of God." If righteousness is by legal fidelity, "then Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21.

Do not, for a moment, think that you are exonerated from obedience, because you are "saved by grace through faith." Who could be so foolish as to conclude that because the fruit is not the source of sap to the tree, but vice versa, therefore fruit is a matter of indifference. All history proves how insidious is the self-centered disposition of human nature. This is the sole reason why there is so little genuine and perfect soul-rest among Christians. Before we are aware, we fall back on our volition and consciousness as a ground of peace. There no soul ever found it, nor ever will, save Adam and Eve before the apostasy, and "God manifest in the flesh."

If Jesus has not cleared every judicial impediment out of the sinner's way, his incarnation and crucifixion were an awful failure. This is an awful thought, and I would shudder to put it on paper, if I had not the whole Bible to sustain me. I am no controversialist, and it is far from my purpose to enter into disputation with anybody, but "necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." "The gift by grace" which we start with, is the possibility and guarantee of all "the fruits of the Spirit" through time and eternity.

Turn away promptly from every argument that seeks to transfer to your obedience what can only belong to the immaculate life of God incarnate. And with equal decision and steadfastness renounce every definition of grace that admits the faintest intimation of antinomianism. Both are fatal. Justification by faith is fundamental. Without it salvation is impossible. Justification by works is declarative, educational, evolutionary, and is the necessary issue of the relation established by faith, and the grace imparted by direct contact of spirit with Spirit. "Justified freely by His grace," you go forth with a bounding heart to the "good works which God has before ordained that we should walk in them," "fully persuaded that what He has promised, He is able also to perform." Eph. 2: 10; Rom. 4: 21, and 3: 24.

If this will not bring you into the realization of Philpp. 4: 7, and 1 Pet. 1: 8, then it is not in the power of God to make you happy in the perfect assurance of His complacency in His Only Begotten Son, whom He made SIN FOR US, that we might be made THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD IN HIM. 2 Cor. 5: 21. If you accept, without a doubt, the divine announcement that "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, WHICH IS JESUS CHRIST," and that "there is salvation in no other" as "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," and if you "believe on him," you "will not be confounded," but "your peace will be as a river, and your righteousness as the waves of the sea." 1 Cor. 3: 11; Acts 4: 12; 1 Pet. 2: 6; Isa. 48: 18. He is our RIGHTEOUSNESS. Philpp. 3: 9. "He is our PEACE." Eph. 2: 14.

He dwells in our hearts BY FAITH." Eph. 3: 17. It is only "according to his working, which worketh in us mightily," that we have any ability to "labor," or "always abound IN THE WORK OF THE Lord." Col. 1: 29; 1 Cor. 15: 58. In conclusion I offer for you and for me, and all "the Israel of God," the blessed assurance of Rom. 5: 2; Eph. 2: 18, and the sublime prayer of Heb. 13: 21, 20.

THE ATONEMENT.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

"The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1: 7.

The events which transpired at Jerusalem more than eighteen centuries ago were the most important and far-reaching of any other period of the world's history. It has been often said, and truly, that all the past pointed forward to the cross of Christ, and all the future looked back to it. Around it all history revolved as around a common centre from which it derived all its significance and unity. It could be easily shown that the rise and fall of nations, the development of arts and sciences, the growth of ancient and modern civilizations, the dispensations of Providence, notable or obscure; peace, war, everything which marks the flowing tides of time, stands in essential and intelligent relation to this one stupendous scene, the dying Son of Man, the pouring out of his blood, the spiritual, mental and physical agonies of his cross.

But we have to do more particularly and more profitably with those facts and deductions which relate directly to our personal life, our spiritual condition, our hopes, our happiness, usefulness and destiny.

To be most effective in the lives of men, truth must be taught in its relation to the practical duties of life, and as every outward action is qualified by the inward motive, the important office of truth is to control and purify that secret spring of action, and so regenerate the man from his heart outward to his daily life.

To this end nothing can be more effectual than a display of the wise purpose of God, the intelligent adaptation of means to ends, the perfect fitting in and working out of all the various parts of the plan of salvation, and especially the infinite goodness and mercy which it exhibits.

The doctrine of the Atonement, in respect to its necessity, its history, and its results, is a conspicuous illustration of this thought. In speaking of the necessity of Atonement we need not dwell upon the well-known and oft-repeated story of the first and most fatal sin. It has been the horrible nightmare of all the ages. It has been the fierce burning of passion, and the black pall of despair to countless myriads of the sons of men. All wandering in trackless deserts, all hunger of spirit in blasted fields, all thirst in presence of the mirage and mockery of human desire, all the mighty torrents and thunderbolts of agony and death were conceived in the first thought of disobedience, and brought forth in the first transgression.

Wise men (wise above what is written) say that the story of Eden, and of the fall of man, is mythical, but they do not, and can not explain why the higher creation of mind and soul is imperfect, deformed, and has been so in all recorded human observation away back through the misty ages, while the lower physical creation is every-where confessedly perfect. The grass, flowers, trees, all the laws and appointments of nature, the eternal lamps swung in the dome of heaven, suns, worlds, stars, and all the visible creation, is perfect, save where the deformity and death which, by some strange reason, has its seat in the human soul, is directly reflected upon its material habitation. Did creative power find a limit? Could it make a perfect blade of grass, a perfect flower, and not a perfect mind and soul? Did God reach a point where some impossibility set bounds to his might, or some inexplicability confounded his wisdom? Or we might ask those, who, endowed with an infinite credulity, profess that there is no God beyond nature, and that there is no divinity besides universal law. Why did nature bungle only this task? Or why was law, almighty in every other field, impotent in this? Was it a limitation of power, or a lapse of wisdom which made the house perfect while its inhabitant was made imperfect? Or did God, every-where and always infinitely good in everything else, deliberately decree this awful mockery, and set in motion all the springs of misery, and all the forces of destruction? No; reason rejects with scorn the silly hypothesis of evolution, which involves all these absurdities and supports the hypothesis of Genesis that man was created perfect in mind, soul and body, and fell by his own deliberate disobedience. Free to stand in his original estate, he was equally free to fall from it; and in the event, actually falling by his transgression, he dragged after him all his posterity. A third part of the sons of heaven plunged into the awful rebellion of Lucifer, but none of the sons of men escaped the ruin of their race. Death came by sin, and passed upon all men, the death of every high thought, of every noble affection, the death of purity, the death of hope, the death of body, mind and soul.

At this point begins the history of the atonement. God saw the ruin and provided the remedy. Specifically the necessity for atonement lay in this, that in the very nature of things, satisfaction must be made to violated law, either by the transgressor himself, or by some one acting in his behalf. In this case, where death was the penalty of transgression, it was impossible for the sinner to find any other equivalent which would satisfy the law, and consequently it was impossible for him to atone for his own sin without surrendering his life. On this ground salvation was impossible, for all that salvation comprehends is deliverance from the consequences of sin, and restoration to a perfect state. It proposes a reversal of all the effects of sin, which would be impossible, or, at least too late, once the sinner had suffered all those effects and penalties. There could, therefore, be no atonement or satisfaction made for sin, involving the deliverance of the sinner, except by a second person whose character, position, authority, power and dignity, qualified him to act as the substitute of the sinner, and offer a complete satisfaction to the offended dignity of the law. And even this one could offer no equivalent in other kind than what the law demanded. He must give his life for the forfeited life of the transgressor, and to render the substitution effectual, the offered life must be a perfect one, against which the law could not bring the slightest accusation. Had he a debt of his own to pay, it would have been impossible for him to pay ours, for his own would have taken all that he had wherewith to make satisfaction, and there could be nothing left.

Early, therefore, in the history of sin, and almost, if not quite, contemporaneous with it, we begin to see the development and shadowing forth of the purpose of God, a purpose which, we are told, was formed before the foundation of the world, that the innocent should suffer for the guilty, and that atonement for sin should be made by shedding the blood, or giving the life of a Perfect One for the life of a guilty race. As all that we have ever known of the purposes of God came to us by revelation, it could not have been by chance that Abel, or possibly Adam himself, stumbled upon the sacrificial altar as the acceptable means of reconciliation with God. The divine will in this particular, and doubtless the divine and prophetic meaning and purpose symbolized in the sacrifice must have been imparted to our first parents shortly after the transgression in one of those personal and familiar conversations which in those primeval times the Holy One often vouchsafed to the children of men.

Two of the most extraordinary facts of human history are, first, the universal, and, we might say, involuntary consciousness of sin; second, the universal tradition that atonement for sin could be made by the sacrifice of animal life. That it is a tradition, handed down from the earliest ages, from the very source and fountain of the race, and fixing itself firmly in some form upon every wandering and widely separated branch of the one great family, can not be denied, and this fact is proof of the vital hold which it took at the first, upon the very heart and life of man. It was his only refuge, his only consolation, the one beacon of a distressed and storm-beaten hope. His soul took hold of the altar with all the deep instincts of self-preservation. Behind it he hid himself from the pursuit of death. He lifted his beseeching eyes and watched the wreaths of incense mount the sky, bearing his supplications to the listening ear of mercy. He realized dimly that the altar made mercy possible, and stood as a barrier, forbidding the messengers of wrath.

In every age and clime and family that altar has burned. It has been often polluted with horrid cruelties and crimes; it has been often prostituted to the patronage of vice, and the worship of devils; and even where it flourished under the appointment and protection of Jehovah, its votaries took the sign for the thing signified, and looked not to the end and meaning of the symbol, vainly expecting the blood of bulls and goats to take away sin. But none the less are we impressed with the great fact that in some dim way, stumbling in darkness and groping for the path of life, the children of Adam have always realized that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins."

Previous to the giving of the law from Mt. Sinai, the patriarchs, acknowledged servants of God, zealously maintained the sacrificial altar and received the visible signs of divine approval and acceptance. Notable instances of this service, and of its immediate and often marvelous results, are recorded in the lives of Noah, Abraham, Jacob and Job. It was with sacrificial blood that they prepared the way for near approach to God, building first the altar, and afterward calling upon the name of the Lord. In this they exhibited a perfectly accurate conception of atonement, the sacrifice typically, and by faith, actually putting away sins as an essential preparation for communion with God. Nor are we without evidence that they saw through and beyond the type and shadow of the sacrifice to that great atonement on the cross when the Lamb of God should take away the sin of the world. By faith they saw his day, and it made them glad.

The sacrificial law was thoroughly set in order, perpetuated and nationalized by the decrees from Sinai. Every possible aspect of the great atonement, principally for the consummation of which the nation of Israel was separated from all other nations, was set forth in appropriate symbol in the many and various sacrifices ordained for the tabernacle and temple service. This service, in all its multitudinous details, appointments and accessories, was enjoined by strict commandment, enforced by tremendous penalties. A twelfth part of the nation, and a tenth of its wealth was consecrated to the temple and the altar. It was not fully explained, and it does not appear that the masses of the nation understood perfectly that those sacrifices were types and symbols of the one effectual atonement. They obeyed simply because of the commandment and its penalties, and often lost the spiritual benefit, the quickening faith, the purifying and sustaining hope, the patient, trustful waiting for the salvation of God, which came to those who were able to look to the end of the commandment, and see the divine meaning of it in the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Even now the external or visible ordinances of the church (which have no office except to point back to Christ, as the ordinances of the Old Testament church pointed forward to him), are sometimes practiced with a kind of perfunctory or mechanical obedience, simply because they are commanded, without any effort being made to understand what truth is symbolized, and what relation it bears to the plan of salvation on the one hand, and our spiritual life on the other. In every case the meaning lies so plainly on the surface that he who runs may read, but many worshipers, and even many teachers, are satisfied with the obedience of the letter, and not of the spirit,—a kind of service which, we have excellent reasons for saying, is neither acceptable with God nor profitable to the soul.

In the fulness of time Christ died,—the just for the unjust. He gave his life for the life of the world, and for the forfeited life of every individual who will avail himself of this stupendous sacrifice. He was holy, harmless and undefiled, and therefore could take our place under the law, and pay our enormous debt to it, because he owed nothing to the law himself. By the divine and sovereign decree he, the second Adam, stood in the same relation to the human family as the first Adam, i. e., its representative, its federal head, so that "as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Precious and vital as is this doctrine of the vicarious sufferings of Jesus, it has felt the bitterest hate, and received the fiercest assaults. The enemy knows full well that right at this point is the refuge of the soul. Salvation no longer stands as simply an act of mercy, but rises also to the higher plane of justice and right. In Christ we have died to the law, for the death of a substitute is regarded in equity as equivalent to the principal. It is so regarded in the Scriptures, in reference to this great transaction. "Because we thus judge that one died for all, therefore all died." 2 Cor. 5: 14, Revised Version. "Therefore we are not under the law but under grace."

The atonement is no exception to the universal and inflexible law of exact justice. A full equivalent for sin was demanded from Christ as our substitute, and was fully met, satisfied and discharged by him in his death on the cross. We are therefore declared to be "the purchase of his blood." What a man purchases and pays for, is his by right and not by favor. We are saved on the ground of righteousness, only it is not our own righteousness but the righteousness of Christ, and therefore a perfect righteousness, securing a perfect right to eternal life. For this reason we are under grace, and owe to God and the Lord Jesus Christ all the love, gratitude and obedience which can possibly be deduced from an immeasurable and endless obligation. If we were to be saved on the ground of our own right, or righteousness, as proceeding from ourselves, we might have grave reasons to doubt the result, but when our salvation is put on the ground of the righteousness of Christ, we need not doubt, as his is a perfect right,—a spotless righteousness. In that perfect dress, which is often described under the symbol of a white robe, we are reconciled with God; we stand in his sight as though we had never sinned. We are judicially pronounced righteous, not that we are righteous within ourselves, but because the righteousness of Christ is imputed to us by faith. "For the righteousness of God is by faith of Jesus Christ unto and upon all them that believe. The abounding comfort, the sweet, heavenly consolation of this great doctrine may be vividly imparted to the soul by dwelling reverently upon these blessed words, so expressive of the results of the great atonement of our divine High-priest, reconciled with God.

How blessed to realize this overpowering truth; what deep peace it gives to the troubled soul, how it binds up the broken heart, to be able to look up into the face of God and say, "Abba, Father," to feel safe in the strong clasp of his almighty hand, and to know that "neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord!"

MISCELLANEOUS QUESTIONS.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

The following questions, on the resurrection and communication with the departed dead, were sent me for consideration and answer through the Messenger by a sister:

1. "Is it only the saints that sleep? Why did not the spirit of Christ sleep before he took up his natural body? If God had a work for him to do in that short time (preaching to the spirits in prison) may he not have a work for us to do?"

Ans.—The mission of Christ was supernatural,—divine. It could not be expected that, in all things, we could follow Christ. We can not lay down our life and take it up again, as Christ said he could and did do, neither is it stated in the Scriptures that Christ went and preached to the spirits in prison, between his death and his resurrection, though this is the inference generally drawn. Yet Christ might have preached to those imprisoned spirits, long before he took upon himself our humanity, "For he was a lamb, slain from the foundation of the world." Rev. 13: 8.

2. "If Moses and Elias could appear with Christ on the mount, so that they heard them talk, they were surely conscious. Will not all be alike? If some sleep, will not all?"

Ans.—Moses and Elias were more than ordinary characters here in the world,—great leaders. They were men who represented the truth in the interests of the kingdom of heaven, hence a conference with them, by the Lord, seemed necessary for reasons not known to us. We do not doubt for a moment, but that God can bring forth from the sleep of death, at any time, such persons as he may want, when he deems it necessary to do so.

It is no argument, however, that, because Moses and Elias talked with Christ, that, therefore, all the saints, between death and the resurrection, are in the full activity of life. We might about as well conclude that because Lazarus was resurrected back into his mortal body again, therefore we will likewise be resurrected the same way. We must not take special cases for the rule, for all rules have their exceptions.

3. "Why is it that, in prayer and deep meditation, we can almost, or altogether, feel the presence of our dear dead?"

Ans.—The partition between the material and spirit world is, in places, very thin. Still we can not see through with our mortal vision. At best we see through the glass but darkly. Yet our affections for loved ones, sleeping in Christ, are so strong and active that we bring our dear ones to us again, through the imagination, and we feel, for the time being at least, that we have been with them again. This, however, does not prove that our dead are in active life, for we may have the same spiritual impressions of our dear friends, who are living here in the flesh, but who are far distant from us.

4. "If we can have guardian angels near us, not seeing them, may not our dead be near?"

Ans.—Such a thing is possible, still we have no Scriptural evidence that such is a fact. But, in regard to the angels, the Scriptures clearly testify that they are ministering spirits, ministering to the heirs of salvation. Heb. 1: 14. Again, "For I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 18: 19. Here the mission of angels is clearly defined.

A vast difference also obtains between the angels and the spirits of our departed dead. Angels are perfect in their spiritual organism; the spirits of the dead are not until they are clothed upon with an immortal body. That angels are the constant attendants of the saints here, I fully believe. That they, in some way, commune with and influence our spirits daily, I also believe. That they are hovering around our dying bed, and bear our spirits away to the fair fields of eternal beauty, is in full accord with the teaching of God's Holy Word. But this can not be said of the spirits of our dear departed ones.

5. "If saints are unconscious, why not the wicked?"

Ans.—We have not the least Scriptural evidence that the wicked are, in any sense, alive, or that they will be, until the hour when all that are in their graves shall come forth, the just and the unjust. However we do not believe that the sleep of the wicked will be pleasant, as those who fall asleep in Christ. The sleep of the wicked will be disturbed by evil premonitions of their impending doom, when they will stand before the judge,—self-condemned.

6. "When do the wicked go to hell?"

Ans.—Doubtless immediately after the judgment. See Matt. 25: 32–46 inclusive. "Death and hell delivering up their dead," means death and the grave, for the term "hell," in this connection, is from the Greek word, Hades, meaning the grave. The above passage seems to imply that both death and the grave will be despoiled of their victims.

7. "Please give an explanation of the thirteenth and twenty-second chapters of Revelation."

Ans.—The thirteenth chapter abounds in figurative expressions (the oriental style of writing) through which is conveyed, to the mind of the reader, the cruel power of Pagan and Papal Rome against the saints of the Most High. Volumes might be written on this chapter, for which we have neither time nor space.

The twenty-second chapter gives, in beautiful delineation of heaven, the pure river of life, the tree of life ever fair and beautiful, a clime that knows no night, no storm, nor clouds, a life that knows no pain, no sorrow, no hunger, thirst, cold or death. There the society is perfectly pure and forever free from all the defilements of sin.

8. "What people compose the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth?" See Rev. 20: 8.

Ans.—Doubtless all the nations in the world that oppose the worship of the true God. Their object was to exterminate the saints off the earth, by taking the camp of the saints, when fire fell from heaven and devoured them.

9. "Who are the elect that shall be gathered from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other?"

Ans.—All God's children. They are known by the term "elect," because, by their obedience, God elected them to salvation.

10. "When Christ comes, Matt. 24: 31, this coming he speaks of here, is this to be the beginning of the thousand years here on earth?"

Ans.—On this question a variety of opinions have obtained in the religious world, and we are sure that it is quite difficult to make the "thousand year millennium" harmonize, in all respects, with the second coming of Christ. We can not discuss this question in this correspondence, as it would require a lengthy article of itself. Suffice it to say, if we are ready when Christ comes, we will have a millennium that will last through all eternity. May God help us to be ready!

11. "Do children that die here always remain children over there?"

Ans.—On this question we are left without one solitary Scriptural evidence, one way or the other. But we have the pleasing assurance that the children are happy over there. Jesus blessed the children and said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Again, "With God all things are possible." He can give full stature to children in the spirit world, as well as here, either by the law of development, or instantaneously.

12. "When is the end of the Gospel Dispensation,—at the beginning or end of the first resurrection?"

Ans.—It may be that the writer meant, "At the beginning of the first resurrection, and end of the millennium." However, we must confine ourselves to the question. In all probability the beginning and end of the resurrection will not be over twenty-four hours apart. When Jesus comes, the resurrection will take place, and all the saints, whether asleep or alive, will be awakened and changed, and that very suddenly,—"In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and we shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

This, no doubt, will be the end of the Gospel Dispensation to mortals here below. The writer of the questions will excuse brevity, on account of the number of questions presented.

"WHO IS MY MOTHER, OR MY BRETHREN?"

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

THIS rather significant question was asked more than eighteen hundred years ago, by him who spake as never man spake, and was undoubtedly intended to convey to the minds of those to whom he was speaking, the relationship that existed between him and all others who were willing to do the will of God. It is not reasonable to suppose that he did not fully comprehend the meaning of the message delivered to him, "Thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee," or, "Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee." Matt. 12: 47; Mark 3: 32. We remember that, at the age of twelve, he informed his mother that it was his duty and his business to be about his Heavenly Father's business. He felt it his duty to yield implicit obedience to his Heavenly Father, in preference to his earthly parents. And whilst he was so busily engaged in doing the work which he was sent to accomplish,—healing the sick and afflicted, physically, in order to establish in the minds and hearts of the multitude, his indisputable right to the name of the Son of God, and in calling the twelve apostles into his service, to be witnesses of his mighty works, and to assist him in establishing his church and kingdom on earth,—it appears that, for the time being, his earthly relations were neglected, not from want of filial or fraternal respect, but for lack of time or leisure from his more important duties.

In reply to the announcement of the presence and desires of his relatives, he simply asks the question, "Who is my mother or my brethren?" At first thought this would seem to be rather an impertinent question, coming as it did from one who could read their very thoughts, and discern the intents of their every mind and heart. But his motive, no doubt, was to inculcate into their spiritual understanding, the kinship or union of heart and life of the true believer in Christ, the mutual heirship, the love and sympathy of motherhood and brotherhood of the children of God.

There can be no other title or appellation, by which we may address those with whom we associate, so endearing as "brother" or "sister." In the family, mother, brother and sister are terms used to express our love and our relationship to each other.

In the "household of faith," this title of endearment has a nobler and grander, loftier significance even than it does naturally in the home and family. We may be poor as Lazarus, despised and ridiculed by those whom the world calls rich and great, but if we are "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ," we can "smile at Satan's rage and face a frowning world." If we have those around us to whom we can look for sympathy and fraternal love,—in whom we can confide as a brother or sister or mother, even though we be strangers in the flesh, the tie of brotherly love unites our hearts in bonds of peace and union of sentiment which the world knows not of, neither can give nor take away.

But while we contemplate the joy and happiness, as experienced by the children of God, a sad thought intrudes into our hearts,—the fact that there are some among us, whose professions of brotherly love are not genuine, but who will extend the right hand with, "Hail, brother," "Hail, sister," and at the same time thrust a poisoned arrow through our heart, and turn away, leaving the venomous sting of the viper's fangs in our aching and bleeding heart. Oh, how sad to reflect on the many instances where true love has been blighted, fond hearts estranged and alienated forever, through the Judas-like treachery of some whom we once highly esteemed, and in the anguish of our souls we exclaim: "Who is my brother or sister!"

THE RIGHT HAND OF GOD AND ITS POWER.

BY SAMUEL T. HARNES.

"He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God."—Mark 16: 19.

IF our Lord ascended to heaven with a material body, heaven must be a material place, for a material body can not go into a spiritual world. Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God, and it would not be a fitting abode for angels and pure spirits, much less for the Father himself. Furthermore, how could a being with a material body sit down at the right hand of a spiritual or of a divine being? The doctrines which teach the necessity for this gross, legal mediation and which declare that all our hopes of salvation rest upon it, even after satisfaction has been fully made, declare also that God has neither body, passions, or parts, and those who accept such a theory, consider it derogatory to his infinite nature to attribute to him any form, much more the human form. How, then, could the Savior sit at his right hand, if he has no right hand?

The literal meaning can not be the true one, according to the common ideas of it; indeed the prevalent doctrine of our Lord's present mediatorial work is encumbered with innumerable difficulties and, after all, according to the theory which demands it, there can be no necessity for it; for if, according to this theory, a full satisfaction has been made, the demands of the law have been satisfied and all that the sinner has to do is to accept pardon on the terms offered, where is the need of any further intercession? The whole question, so far as regards the Father and Son, is settled. Surely, a Being of infinite love and wisdom can not forget his promise. He could need no urging to do what he has formally contracted to do. The very implication that he does, is derogatory to his character. An honest man needs no urging to comply with his contract, even when it is not in his favor, much less when it is carrying out the very ends he desires to accomplish. How, then, can it be possible that the Lord needs urging to do what he has entered into the most solemn obligations to do?

I do not see how it can be shown, according to the doctrine of the atonement, that there was any necessity for a Mediator after the demands of the law have been satisfied, and it is generally admitted that the mediatorial office will cease at the judgment. When all human accounts have been settled, the Savior will cease to be our Advocate, and will become our unrelenting and terrible Judge. If he sits at the right hand of the Father, it will only be as an Associate Judge to receive homage, and to reward merit, but the text says, "He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God," and afterwards Stephen said, "Behold, I see the heavens opened and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." Acts 7: 56. We must believe this.

When the Bible speaks, I admit that we ought to believe, but we also ought to know what it means before we assent to it. We must be sure we have a correct idea of what is meant by the right hand of God, before we draw any conclusion involving important consequences as the one we are now considering. If we look to other parts of the Word, we shall find that the right hand is used as the symbol of power. "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool." Ps. 110: 1. At another place we read, "His right hand, and his holy arm, hath gotten him the victory." Ps. 98: 1. "Thou that savest by thy right hand them which put their trust in thee." Ps. 17: 7. "The right hand of the Lord is exalted: the right hand of the Lord doeth valiantly." Ps. 118: 16. "Ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power." Mark 14: 62. "Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God." Luke 22: 69.

In these and many other passages the right hand is evidently used as the emblem and instrument of power. All our power over matter is exerted by means of our hand. How perfectly helpless is even the wisest man without hands! How did the Lord bring his divine power to bear upon man's enemies? How did he reach man himself? I answer, "By the power of his right hand, he lifted up man from death by the humanity he assumed, and thus the arm of his strength became the instrument. It is now, and must be forever, the right hand of his power.

The divinity that was made flesh has become the perfect and permanent instrument of his love and wisdom. It is the instrument with which he brings all his saving power to bear upon men. It is the arm of his strength; it is his right hand. "He ever liveth to make intercession for us," is a plain statement of a literal fact and involves no inconsistencies with the divine character; it is merely carrying out the great purposes of our Heavenly Father in assuming our nature into successful accomplishment of his purposes. It does not involve the necessity of making heaven a material place or the impossibility of taking a material body into a spiritual world.

I have aimed to set forth that all that was material in the human nature was put off. This is evident from the fact that the Lord appeared to the disciples in a room when the door was shut and vanished from their sight without leaving them in the ordinary way, thus showing that material substances formed no obstruction to his passage. His body, even to his flesh and bones, was of an ethereal nature.

"EVERY man ought to be an exemplary man, a man to be looked up to as an example by all men. No man ought to be worse than the best. Many persons seem to suppose that because they do not occupy prominent places in the church, they are therefore in a measure released from the obligation to be exemplars of Christian character. But if there is an obligation to select exemplary persons for those positions where example is conspicuous, there is no less an obligation on the part of those who do the selecting, to live up to the standard which they set up for him whom they have selected."

OUR PROFESSION.

BY N. H. SHUTT.

THE beginning of our Christian life is to be like the "morning dawn," which increaseth in light more and more until it is like the perfect day.

When we begin our Christian life, we can not expect to become men and women in the full growth or stature of Christ all at once. Paul says, "we are babes in Christ." Our evidence in a life of piety is not so much in high emotions of any kind, as in real humility, in hungering and thirsting after righteousness, in sorrow for sin, and a continual effort in every-day life, to regulate our thoughts, feelings, and conduct by the Word of God.

We can not expect that the desires and evidences in a Christian life will come all at once. They will come by degrees in proportion to the effort we put forth in obedience to the Word of God. Religion is a principle of self-preserving energy, it will not thrive and increase unless we put forth our own efforts. The plant of divine grace can no more thrive without diligence and care, and continual cultivation, than can the natural crop which the farmer puts into the ground. God will not bring divine grace to maturity, and sustain the work of divine grace, unless our own soul, mind and heart are in the work. We are under obligation to work out our own soul's salvation.

God wants free volunteers. The Lord will assist those who try to improve themselves in a divine life. The truth is that the road to eternal salvation, and the means of obtaining it, are open to all who try to seek it, and if any do not obtain it, it is owing to their own neglect of duty, not to any deficiency on the part of God in blessing their efforts abundantly. The promises in God's Word are sure, "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." Matt. 7: 7, 8.

This is positive language of the Savior, and is as firm as heaven and earth. To be true followers of Christ requires us to be diligent in morals, and the provision of our physical support.

The apostle Peter says, "Add to your faith virtue; and to your virtue knowledge," etc. We are required to add to our faith virtue, which means moral goodness. Then the first addition to our Christian faith would be morality. We can not expect true happiness, unless we become eminent Christians.

A half-way Christian can neither enjoy the pleasures of this world nor the pleasures of religion; for his conscience will not let him seek the one and he is too indolent to obtain the other. He is trying to serve two masters, which is one of the most wearisome lives. He is like the false prophets of Baal, halting between two opinions.

Our Savior says, "We can not serve two masters; we will either hold to the one and forsake the other," etc. God's service must be first in our thoughts and affections, or else the world and its pleasures first. If we want to know whose servants we are, we must know who has the first place in our hearts. Our evidence of religion ceases when something else takes the lead of our thoughts and meditations. The Christian may be the happiest person on earth, but he must be a faithful, active, energetic and devoted Christian.

No one will be disappointed in finding religion a source of unfailing peace and joy, unless he refuses to drink deep out of the wells of salvation.

A few words to beginners of religion may not come amiss. The young disciple of Christ, or beginner in religion, after being received into the church, is very zealous and energetic in his newly-begun life. This is all right, and should be the motto of all Christians, but he sometimes makes a mistake in aiming at a standard in life, that will cause his Christian life (as he supposes it to be) a shipwreck. He takes the general class of Christian professors for an example to follow after, instead of those who walk worthy before God, and instead of taking the Bible as a standard to pattern after. The mind and conscience of a beginner in Chistianity is tender and susceptible; he is strict and watchful in performing his duties, and is hurt by any neglect of it. He wants to feel that becoming religious implies a great change, that old things must pass away, and all things become new. But when he looks around among the Christian professors, he finds that they seem to look upon Christian duties in a very different manner, and that they seem to neglect many things which the young Christian has felt to be very important in a Christian life. He finds them practicing many things which he had supposed to be inconsistent and contrary to religion.

Then commences the struggle between the world and Christianity, and he begins to feel that he has been too particular, and that he need not be more strict than those whom he has looked upon as examples. He begins to go back in his Christian life. Although he may often be admonished by good old standard bearers in the church and knows that the Bible reads differently, yet after a few trials he lowers his standard and does as others do.

Let us look in the Scripture and see how Christians ought to live. Then, if we find Christian professors live differently, we readily can conclude that they are no followers of Christ, and that we do wrong to pattern after them. If we see those who follow the teachings of the Bible, we do right to follow their example and give heed to their admonitions.

Let us remember that Christ said, "Many shall say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord," etc., claiming to be his disciples, to whom he will reply, "I never knew you."

Another characteristic that we, as Christians, must have, is this, there must be a marked difference between our appearance and conduct, and that of those who are not Christians. Let us recollect that the Divine Truth requires this of us. Paul says, "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men." 2 Cor. 3: 2. Here Paul refers to the disciples of Christ, that they are epistles, written in the heart of Paul and other disciples by the conduct of their Christian life in the world, and that the Gospel is planted in their hearts, and made manifest to the world by their Christian conduct in life, that all men could read and know that they were Christians. If they would have been like the world, they could not have been read and known of all men.

This appeal is to us as well as to the ancient Christians. The world expects that we shall be different from its followers. We can not recommend the Christian religion to the world, by being interested in everything that interests those who have nothing but the world for their portion.

May the Christian remember that his deportment in company, his conversation, his interest in dress, the manner in which he performs his religious duties are all strictly noted and weighed by those around him who do not love religion, and if they do not see a noted difference between the Christian and themselves, they conclude that there is nothing in religion, or that the would-be professor is not true to his profession. Therefore, let us adorn our profession by denying ourselves daily, and taking up the cross and following the meek and lowly Lamb of God. Christ's religion will deceive no one; it will keep us from vanity, from indolence, from pride, from moroseness, from levity, from selfishness, and all the every-day foibles to which we are exposed.

Let our profession be acted out in every-day life, and others will have to credit us for it. May we read the Bible daily with prayer, and meditate upon it, as David of old said, "I meditate upon the Word of God day and night."

The Word of God will be an anchor that will hold us in the path of duty. "May our lights so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our father which is in heaven." Let us "shine more and more unto the perfect day."

PRAYER.

BY EVERTT GIBSON.

PRAYER is the essence of true religion. It is one of the most powerful agencies of humanity. It is also an earnest memorial, and an act of addressing supplication to our God. It is not conquering God's reluctance, but taking hold of God's willingness.

It is necessary that the Christian should pray, because God said, "Pray, lest ye enter into temptation." When the enemy tempts us we should go to the Lord in prayer, asking him to take away the temptation if it be his will. God suffers us to be tempted that we may become strong. Every time we overcome a temptation, it strengthens us. We will now notice Christ's prayer in the Garden of Gethesemane. It is one of the grandest lessons that Christ ever gave to his followers. It teaches us the necessity of communication with our Father. Christ, upon that occasion, offered the most earnest prayer ever addressed to God. He says: "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine be done." This is not merely the language of submission but of petition. He does not merely say, "If not as I will, then as thou wilt," but he is willing to submit his all in his Father's hands, and in this awful time we see his willingness and his intense desire that his Father's will should be done.

So should we, when we go to the Lord in prayer, be willing to comply with whatever our Father's will may be. The Father knows best what his children should do.

Christ expressed his desires to God in the most humble manner. It is right that we should entreat God for our soul's desire, leaving the disposition of everything to him. Christ repeated his prayer the third time, and his earnestness is shown even in that act. He prayed until his sweat was as great drops of blood, falling to the ground. This teaches us to pray with much earnestness. A prayer that is not from the heart, is not acceptable in the sight of God. Our earthly parents may not heed what we ask of them, and may cast us out and forsake us, but our Heavenly Father is always ready to hear us! Oh, the blessed privilege of prayer! How blessed to think that we, poor mortals, are allowed to bow before the throne of our Creator of the heavens and earth, and all that is therein, with the assurance that the Lord will be pleased to listen to us, and that, if we come to him in faith and meekness, our prayers will be answered!

Oh, let each one of us try to be more worthy of this great love of God, by living a more consecrated life! Let us try to realize more fully the many blessings we are daily receiving, and be more grateful in the future! Let us show our gratitude by doing all we can for our fellow-beings!

Let each one of us spend more of our time in communication with God, by prayer, asking his assistance in the work!

IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

THIS is an apostolic injunction. It is a duty that we owe to God, yet how loath we are, sometimes, to fulfill this obligation! We do not hesitate to thank God for the sweet delights that are pressed to our lips. We sip the nectar which distils from the fragrant roses of life, and thank a kind Providence that provides it. Our gladdened hearts thrill with melody, as we look upon the radiant bow of promise, which stands arched just before us, and thankfully we enjoy the beams of apparent prosperity as they shine athwart our pathway. With gratitude we look upon our preserved families and dear friends.

But, in our trials, do we give thanks for our bitter experience? Do we thank God that we have been defrauded out of that hundred dollar note which a trusted creditor had given to us? How many are there who are thankful for the loss of their worldly store? Not many. The most of us are far from feeling thankful for such things, and yet the child of God ought to thank him, even for temporal losses. You say that it is too difficult for poor human nature to do this. No, it is not. Did not the weak and erring David say: "It is good for me that I have been afflicted"? Well, if it was good for him, ought he not to have been thankful? Certainly. But you again say: "I can not be thankful for the death of that dear, promising child." Can you not thank God for taking it away from the coming evil? God only can tell what might have happened to that child had it lived to grow up. Besides, very likely, you needed such discipline as came through that affliction. What kind of Christians would we be if we had no trials and afflictions? Very dull and ignorant ones. It was a great trial to the disciples to part company with their loving Lord; but they had great reason to thank God for his departure. It was a blessed boon to them. Our apparent losses are often great gains to us; while that which we keep is sometimes a grave damage to us. I say, then, give thanks to God for all things; for what we are sometimes tempted to be unthankful for, is many times a ministry of blessing.

MUSINGS BY THE WAY.

BY FANNY MORROW.

"GREAT and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty." Long before the sea of glass is reached, or the heavenly harps are handled, the true Christian's heart will vibrate with a responsive pæan of praise to that lofty sentiment. We can conceive something of God's greatness, when we consider the mighty universe which he created and governs,—the sun, the moon, the stars, etc. Then we come a little nearer to him, when we think upon the generous, bountiful laws of nature which he has established to control our little planet, earth, with all of its productions and inhabitants. On every side we see wonderful skill and evident wisdom. Here unbelief steps in and says, "Yes, I can agree with you that far,—but when you speak of this same Great God interesting himself in all the small affairs of the everyday life of each individual Christian, I do not see how that can be true."

So the sweet lessons of trust which Jesus taught, by the beauty of the lily, the falling of the sparrow, are lost because unbelief "can not see." Perhaps we can help "unbelief" a little by referring him to some circumstances of life with which he is familiar. Consider how it is with a schoolteacher. A thoroughly-educated teacher may be acquainted with all the arts and sciences, he may speak many languages, so that he would feel equally at home in Germany, France, Italy, or any place on earth where civilization dwells. He may understand astronomy, and be able to number the stars and trace the pathway of the planets. We wonder sometimes that the intellect of man can reach so far, and contain so much. When you visit this learned personage in the schoolroom, you notice he can impart some of his knowledge to those under his instruction. In time of recitation he solves problems and explains mysteries. But that is not all he does. He knows the names of all his pupils, and knows their ages, and is generally acquainted with their home surroundings and circumstances in life. He soon learns how much mental work each one is capable of performing. He knows which ones are lazy and which are diligent. He lays the best plans he can for the advancement of each one. He is patient with those who are slow to learn, he exercises a dual action of the mind, when hearing lessons recited, and notices all the points necessary to be observed in keeping good order, at the same time.

This dualistic action of the mind is very trying upon the best nervous systems. We see here a finite mind is capable of all this work and much more than we have mentioned. Take the case of a farmer. He knows how many acres of land he has to till, how much and what variety of grain he will sow or plant, how many teams he will need and how they are cared for. He can tell the number of his cattle and horses, their condition and whereabouts. He remembers when he should plow his garden and gather in the vegetables and fruit; and yet he does not forget his family, but provides for their comfort, and looks after the education of his children. If any of them incline to wayward, wicked ways, he restrains and sometimes chastises them for their benefit.

Then look at woman's work! As a housekeeper she must know the condition and study the convenience of all the furniture and household goods in her home. She will see that the clothing of each one in her family is clean and in good repair, ready for use. She will prepare all necessary food in due season; and yet as a mother she will not forget to nurse and fondle her babe who is so entirely dependent upon her mother-love. Each one of her children will receive a due share of her affection and sympathy. As a Christian she will reverence her husband and worship her God. When we remember the great achievements of which the human mind is capable besides attending to the minutiæ of life, how can we stumble at the thought, that the mighty God is capable of every great work and will yet condescend to dwell with the lowly and contrite ones of earth, to cheer, to comfort, and help them learn the lessons of life, so they may become possessed of that faith which is the "victory that overcometh the world," and binds them to the eternal throne of God.

We sometimes hear the question asked, Why do not such and such churches prosper? Why do they seem to stand still or retrograde? Then, if we only listen a little while, we may hear various opinions offered as reasons. Bro. A. thinks the elder is too arbitrary; he does too much ruling. Bro. B. thinks the elder is entirely too careless and slack. Bro. C. says there is too much jealousy among the officials. Bro. D. says there is too much pride; some of the sisters are getting quite fashionable in dress. Sister E. ventures her opinion that tobacco is the hindering cause, if only the brethren would quit its use. Sister F. declares that no church can go ahead right, so long as there is so much stinginess; the richest members not giving as much as the poorer ones, Bro. G. says some of the members should bridle their tongues, there is too much talk. Bro. H. thinks certain ones oil their words until they are smoother than butter, yet beneath their oily words there is an undercurrent of selfishness and self-esteem that entirely spoils their intended effect.

So here we have eight reasons rendered, which surely seem to be enough to spoil the prosperity of any church. But the question is, "Are we to measure the standard of our lives by man's opinion? I understand the only correct pattern for us to follow is the Word of God, and the longer I muse upon this theme, the more sure I feel that if every member of any church will daily and prayerfully study the precious Word, and do his utmost to follow every precept contained therein, with an eye single to the glory of God, there would be no question about the spiritual prosperity of that church.

IN every conflict of life, if we are sure that "God is for us," we need not fear those who will be against us.

Osborne, Kans.

"FEW men are more hopelessly wrong than those who do wrong conscientiously; and there are very many men of this sort. There are men who are conscientiously dishonest, who are conscientiously untruthful, who are conscientiously self-indulgent, who are conscientiously impure, or who are conscientiously at fault in some other way. Such men have no wish to examine into the teachings of God's Word, as to the spirit and methods of right action; for they are satisfied with that which their uninstructed or perverted consciences approve. Conscience is not given to a man to instruct him in the right, but its mission is to prompt him to choose the right instead of the wrong when he is instructed as to the right. Conscience tells a man that he ought to do right, but conscience does not tell a man what is right. And if a man has made up his mind that a certain wrong course is the right one, the more he depends on his conscience, the more hopeless he is as a wrong-doer. A man is pretty far gone in an evil way, when he serves the devil conscientiously."

"HINDRANCES to progress are helps to progress in the path of a man who is determined to make progress. And helps to progress are hindrances to progress, unless a man treats his helps as though they were hindrances. Having a hard time in life is more likely to make a great man than having an easy time; and he who has an easy time to start with, will have a hard time in rising to greatness. Herodotus, 'the father of history,' was so impressed with the truth that the more rugged regions and the more rigorous climates were the sources of strong character, that he said: 'It is a law of nature that faint-hearted men should be the fruit of luxurious countries; for we never find that the same soil produces delicacies and heroes.' And as it was in his day, so it is in ours; it requires hardships to make greatness an easy attainment for any man."

"RELIGION in its purity is not so much a pursuit as a temper; or rather it is a temper leading to the pursuit of all that is high and holy. Its foundation is faith; its action, works; its temper, holiness; its aim, obedience to God in improvement of self and benevolence to men."

INTRODUCTION.

WHEN I retired from the MESSENGER seven years ago, I had no thought of ever returning to the paper again. I loved religious journalism, and enjoyed the work even in the midst of perplexities and excitement, but, on account of ill health, I felt it my special duty to seek a milder climate for my family. I think the change was a good one. We were all pleased with our Southern home, and really enjoyed the change of labor, and had fully made up our mind to make the South our future home and field of labor, but urgent calls came from the MESSENGER Brethren, asking me to resume my work on the paper. After considering the call long and prayerfully, I felt it my duty to respond, and once more take up the pen in defense of the principles held by the Brotherhood.

It is hardly necessary for me to make any promises or outline any policy. I prefer to have my work on the paper speak for itself. Suffice it to say, that I am still in full sympathy with the general Brotherhood—her doctrine and counsels—and mean to do all in my power to advance the cause of Christianity, as generally understood by our people.

I crave an interest in your prayers, trusting that I may have the guidance of the Holy Spirit in my work, and also trusting that my work on the paper may meet the approbation of the Brotherhood, as well as have the approval of my Lord and Master, in defense of whose Gospel I hereby pledge my soul, mind and body.

Very Truly,
J. H. MOORE.

WE greatly regret to learn that our aged and much-esteemed brother, Eld. Samuel Mohler, of Covington, Ohio, recently met with an accident, which resulted in the breaking of his leg. He will have the sympathy and prayers, in his behalf, of a large number of friends.

ONLY four more weeks till the Annual Meeting.

THE Middle District of Indiana sends four queries to the Annual Meeting.

ELD. R. H. MILLER will represent the Middle District of Indiana on the Standing Committee this year.

ELD. GEO. C. BOWMAN recently organized a small congregation of Brethren near McKenzie, Carroll Co., Tenn.

THE Brethren have just completed a meeting-house in the Southern part of the Osceola church, St. Clair County, Mo.

BRO. J. E. ELLENBERGER will represent the Northern District of Missouri on the Standing Committee this year.

THE clerk of each State District will confer quite a favor, by sending us copies of the Minutes of District Meetings.

PARTIES in the West, wishing to attend the Annual Meeting, will please notice a communication from Bro. John Wise on another page of this issue.

AFTER spending some weeks preaching in North Carolina, Bro. J. C. Lahman passed up into the Shenandoah Valley, Va., where he was when last heard from. By this time he is probably at work in Pennsylvania.

ELD. MARTIN NEHER and wife, of Monmouth, Kans., are now on a visit to Clarkson, Oklahoma, where they expect to remain for a time, and where they may also be addressed for the present.

THE Brethren of the Buffalo Valley church, Union Co., Pa., have changed the date of their love-feast from May 19 and 20 to May 15 and 16. Those interested will please make a note of this.

IF people would spend half as much time looking for the good as they do searching for evil, this world would be a great deal better off. Let us seek the good and enjoy it, but turn our backs against the evil.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS are now being organized in many parts of the Brotherhood. This is right, and should be encouraged on every hand. We hope these schools will find it to their interest to adopt the Brethren's Quarterly. We think they will find it both interesting and profitable; we assure them that they will find the lessons in harmony with our faith and practice, and this is no small consideration.

THE biographical sketch of Bro. James Evans, in last issue, is exceedingly interesting and well prepared. We call special attention to it as a model way of preparing that class of articles. Well-written articles of this nature are always welcome at this office, provided they relate to persons widely known among our people. Well-written biographical sketches of good public men afford reading both interesting and profitable.

THE locomotives, which are soon to begin running between Joppa and Jerusalem, were manufactured in Philadelphia. So it is that the land of religious freedom is to furnish the means of fulfilling the prophecy of Nahum 2: 4, where it is said the chariots shall rage in the streets, jostle one against another, seem like torches, and run like lightnings. While the prophecy was meant for Nineveh, we may soon expect to see it fulfilled, in appearance at least, in the streets of Jerusalem.

$1.00 WILL PAY for the MESSENGER from May 1, 1891, till the end of the year.

THE next District Meeting for Northern Illinois will be held with the Brethren at Milledgeville.

THE Brethren at Dayton, Ohio, have been holding meetings for the last two weeks. Bro. W. C. Teeter did the preaching. Three were baptized, and one restored to church fellowship.

THE date of the feast at Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., is changed from May 22 and 23 to May 18 and 19. Bro. J. G. Royer is expected to be with the Brethren of Lost Creek at that time.

ON another page Bro. James R. Gish has some plain questions to be answered by those who have plenty of money for adorning their houses, and none for the missionary cause. We may pass over these things lightly, but there is, as he says, a day of reckoning coming when the Lord will call up our account.

BRO. J. G. ROYER, writing from Mastersonville, Pa., April 27th, says that he is feeling quite well, and on Sunday, the 26th, preached to the largest congregation he ever addressed outside of the Annual Meeting. Nineteen were baptized the same day. He reports the churches in that section of Pennsylvania strong and flourishing.

MANY persons are willing and ready to aid in a good enterprise, so long as everything is done just to their way of thinking, but let a few changes be made, however insignificant, and they turn against the project with double energy. With them it is either rule or ruin, and as a general thing it means ruin. Such persons are of little value to any church or community, and we have reason to doubt whether they have ever experienced genuine conversion.

IT will be quite a convenience to us, if correspondents will always place church news, obituaries, marriages and love-feast notices each on a separate slip of paper, and write on one side of the paper only. Where matter of this kind is mixed, we have to rewrite and arrange it before it can be placed in the hands of the printers. Then again, never write business matter on the sheet containing matter intended for publication. By observing the above instructions our correspondents will greatly oblige us.

ONE of our ministers speaks of the great pleasure that it affords him to be engaged in feeding hungry souls. There is little pleasure in preaching to an overfed, sleepy congregation, where the members do not have enough religious exercise to render them either spiritually healthy or capable of enjoying the heavenly food dealt out to them Sunday after Sunday. Only those who have preached to people hungering and thirsting after the Truth, can realize how encouraging it is to feed the hungry souls with the Bread and Water of Life.

A SISTER writes that she was greatly pained at the laughing and unbecoming talk she heard at a prayer-meeting that she happened to attend. It seems strange that such a thing could happen at a prayer-meeting. Praying is talking with God, and certainly the very best of order should be observed while this conversation is going on. We have attended many prayer-meetings, but do not remember to have ever attended one where the people engaged in levity in the least. But such might be the case where Christians are not properly on their guard. We should not only pray, but also watch that we enter not into temptation.

ELD. P. A. MOORE and wife, of Roanoke, Ill., who have been spending the winter in Southern California, expect to return to their home about the first of June.

THE editorial and mailing departments of the MESSENGER will soon be moved into a new building, which is now in the course of construction. Our quarters have been too much crowded, and we shall be glad to have more elbow room.

BRO. D. L. MILLER has been spending several days in Goshen, Indiana, preaching and delivering his Bible talks. He is now preparing for his Eastern trip among the churches, prior to Annual Meeting. It will be a matter of special interest to all of our readers to learn that Bro. Miller was ordained to the eldership several weeks ago.

WE have just published a new edition of the Brethren's Hymnal, containing the rudiments of music, and are now prepared to fill all orders promptly. We think this improvement in the book will be greatly appreciated by our people. They need not delay ordering the Hymnal on account of a contemplated new book, for even if the Annual Meeting should authorize the publishing of a new book, it will require some years to prepare it, and when published it will likely be adapted for use in connection with our present book. For prices see page 287 of this issue.

THE prayer-meeting in the Chapel, last Thursday evening, was exceedingly edifying. The subject was "Our Conversation." Many excellent things were said, and we believe good impressions were made. About one hundred members were present, and after the services were opened by a young sister, short talks were made by a number of other members on the subject stated above. We can not be too careful concerning our conversation, for by it we make impressions either for good or evil. How careful, then, ought we to be, and engage in only such conversation as is both profitable and edifying.

WHY does the church not prosper as it should? Simply because each member is not sufficiently interested in his own personal piety and salvation. Less watching of others and more searching of our own hearts is the great need of the age. We need give more attention to home and heart religion, thereby setting a good example for others to follow. It is the higher life in Christ Jesus that we ought to strive for; making our own hearts a fit temple for the indwelling of the Spirit —a closer walk with God; that we may partake more largely of the divine image. And having this image in our own hearts we become a power for good not only in our own families, but in the community where we live.

WE are in receipt of a letter from Bro. W. B. Woodard, Manatee, Fla. He and his wife are both members. They moved from Iowa to Florida about eight years ago, and write that they like it the best of any place they ever lived, if they could only have the benefit of church privileges. We wish to call the attention of our Brethren to this point, trusting that some of them may feel sufficiently interested in missionary work to go to the assistance of Bro. Woodard, and be the means of establishing a congregation of Brethren at that place. The foundation there, as well as at other points in the South, must be laid by immigration. Manatee is about one hundred miles south of Keuka, and is very favorably spoken of on account of its mild climate and adaptation to orange, lemon, and other varieties of fruit culture.

YEARS ago the District Meeting of Northern Illinois adopted the plan of having read, at the beginning of the meeting, all the queries and papers handed in by the delegates. The plan is a good one, as it enables the meeting, at the start, to understand just how much business there is before the meeting.

SOON after the founding of the Brethren at Work in Lanark, years ago, the "Brethren's Envelope," as it is usually called, was offered for sale. On the back of the envelope is a concise summary of our faith and practice. It took well and met with a large sale. There is still a steady demand for this envelope, and we believe the use of it has been the means of doing much good, as by this means our doctrine finds its way into places where it could not possibly enter otherwise. We are, at all times, prepared to fill orders for these envelopes at 15 cents a package, or 40 cents per hundred, postage paid.

THE first half of our Sunday-school lessons this year is exceedingly interesting, extending from the death of Solomon to the captivity of Judea,—a period of about 390 years. A few years ago the lessons extended from the call of Moses to the reign of Solomon. Those who have pursued this line of study in our Sunday-schools understandingly, have certainly been greatly benefited. The last six months of this year will be devoted to the history, preaching and miracles of Christ, extending from the time when the Word was made flesh, to his resurrection. This will also be an exceedingly interesting and profitable line of New Testament study, and should not be neglected by any one interested in Sunday-school work. We know of no better line of study for young ministers in ordinary circumstances.

WE should keep constantly in mind, that the same causes that prompted our people to separate from the popular churches in 1708, still exists in nearly all parts of the civilized world, and therefore it is our duty to still contend earnestly for the Gospel principles that characterized the plea of our ancient Brethren, who were first in this grand and much-needed reformatory movement. From the day that John the Baptist commenced crying in the wilderness of Judea, until the present time, there has been need of a religious body holding the Gospel principles, that we are so earnestly contending for. Had Christianity, in the days of Christ and the apostles, been what we now find among the popular churches, some parts of the New Testament would certainly read differently. Nothing would have been said against taking oaths, or taking up carnal weapons in self-defense, Not one word would have appeared against the wearing of gold or costly array, nor would anything have been said in defense of the salutation of the holy kiss, or baptism for the remission of sins. The story of the Last Supper would have read quite differently. Certainly we have good reasons for continuing steadfastly in this ancient doctrine, transmitted to the world by the apostles, and re-adopted by our Brethren in 1708.

SIN IN HIGH PLACES.

QUOTING from the Christian Cynosure we have a fearful record of sin in high places that is indeed startling:

"But it is a greater pity that our government is not alone in the liquor business. The "blue book" issued by the British Government last month discloses the fact that 152 peers of the realm are the owners of places in which intoxicating liquors are sold. The number of these drinkshops is 1,509. The list is headed by the Earl of Derby, who is the owner of seventy-two. The Duke of Bedford has forty-eight drinking-shops to his credit; the Duke of Devonshire forty-seven; the Earl of Cawdor, thirty-nine; the Duke of Rutland, thirty-seven; the Earl of Dudley, thirty-five; the Duke of Northumberland, thirty-four; and the Duke of Portland, thirty-two. Included in this list is the Rt-Rev. Richard Lewis, D. D., Bishop of Llandaff, who, this official record shows, is the owner of two places which are devoted to the sale of intoxicating liquor."

FROM SOUTH TO NORTH.

ACCOMPANIED by our family, we left Keuka, Fla., April 13th, en route for Mt Morris. We left the place with many regrets, for we unhesitatingly say that we never lived in a State that we liked better than Florida. When we located at Keuka, seven years ago, there were hardly people enough in the entire neighborhood to render it encouraging to hold meetings. But by persistent efforts quite a fair congregation has been gathered. The people are building up pleasant homes, are doing well and seem quite contented.

We not only regretted to leave our pleasant home and orange grove on the lake, but we greatly regretted to leave the church and our field of religious labor. We had learned to love the work dearly, and saw prospects of accomplishing much good in the near future. The work is left in the hands of Bro. E. J. Neher, an elder, who is in full sympathy with the church, her doctrine and work. We feel that the cause is in good hands, and that the work will prosper under his care. We think that it is only a question of time when we will have a number of churches in that State, and we now wish to urge some ministers, who think they will like the South, to go to Bro. Neher's assistance. The field is large, and help is needed. Nothing but a deep sense of duty, to resume work on the MESSENGER, could have induced us to leave the field.

When we left Keuka the weather was extremely mild, trees in full leaf, and everything in nature seemed cheerful. We stopped a few hours at Waycross, Ga., where our oldest son is living for the present. Our trip was uneventful, save that we were taken very sick soon after leaving Louisville, Ky., and suffered intensely and were relieved only by the aid of a physician, who happened to be on the train. We wired Dr. Peter Fahrney to meet us at the depot in Chicago. He being sick, had Bro. W. Miller meet us, who assisted us to the Windsor Hotel, where we received the best of care. Bro. Miller showed us no little kindness, while Dr. Fahrney gave us some very substantial assistance, thus showing special interest in our welfare and comfort.

After a journey of three days and three hours we reached Mt. Morris on a beautiful spring day. It was our first visit to the place since we left seven years ago. We notice a number of improvements, the most important being the large, commodious College building that is now nearing completion.

We are now back at our old desk, feeling much as we did in former years. Looking over the pile of manuscript, turned over to us, much of the hand-writing is familiar, yet we notice that many new writers are favoring us with their contributions. Many of those who formerly did good service, we notice are not represented by their pen epistles. Some of them have passed the age of usefulness, while others have gone to their reward.

We ask all to have a little patience with us. We shall soon get our hand into the work again, and hope to make the paper both interesting and instructive to all of its readers. J. H. M.

LET US BE DOING!

BY D. L. BRUBAKER.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Eccl. 9: 10.

IN the short space of time, reaching from the cradle to the grave, are crowded all the mighty issues of life, that make our future destiny for heaven or hell.

If ever any mind comprehended the full import of making the best and most diligent use of time, it was that Master Mind, who, in his all-comprehensiveness, in the midst of his unceasing toil, exclaimed, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work."

The immense amount and good quality of work that was crowded into the space of three years by the great Burden-bearer, is a standing testimony of what may be done in a short space, when willing hands work diligently at what is found to be done.

Art thou a minister, anointed to "preach the Gospel to the poor,—to preach deliverance to the captive?" Then to thy hand is committed a highly sacred and responsible work. By the grace of God, do this work with thy might. Perishing souls are looking to your assistance, and you do not know but that your next sermon may be your last, and that your next gathering with the congregation may be over the silent river, where your preaching is not in demand.

Art thou a mother, entrusted with the soul-training of immortal beings? Then, truly, to thy hand is committed a sacred work, fraught with eternal issues. May Jesus bless every such mother heart! Thy mission and work well demands the deepest wisdom and grace that the Holy Spirit can impart. Dear mother, do thy work well, do it NOW! The loved one will soon be out on the path of life. Well will it be for that one who has had the pitfalls and snares of Satan clearly pointed out by a mother's wisdom. Thy anxious, tired heart will soon be stilled in death. The godly impress that your children have received through thy counsel and example, will cause them to "rise up and call thee blessed." And when, with bowed head and sacred memory thy silent grave is sought in after years, grateful hearts will say, "How different my life had been but for the guiding love of that Christian mother!"

Art thou but a layman and poor in this world's goods, not even owning the frail house that shelters thy little ones? Does thy heart say, "I have but little influence, and what can I do?" Ah, my brother, if the love of God dwells within thy soul, thou art rich and not poor. That which the guiding hand of Providence has given thy hand to do, do it with thy might.

The precious souls that daily gather around thy scantily-furnished board, in thy humble home, are souls fraught with eternal destinies, and need thy fatherly counsel and Christian example to give proper direction in life. Be not discouraged; it is largely from the homes of the poor, but hard-working Christian families, that the church is looking for the great, earnest mission-workers that are to be sent out to bless the world with the pure Gospel.

Then, my poor but good brother, "lift up the idle hands!" Who knows but at thy fireside, in disguise, is sitting a young Timothy or a Priscilla? Toil on! To-morrow you may be lifted out of poverty and be clothed with glory.

That which Christian hands find to do, will be found, on approaching near the portals of death, to be an intensely personal work. The life-long piety and consecration of a dear wife, a father, a mother, a brother or sister, can not, in the great issue, be appropriated to our salvation. If our lamp has gone out and our vessel is found to be empty, the sad and bitter wail will be: "Too late, too late! The marriage of the Lamb is come, and I am at last cast out!"

"O the good we all may do,
While the days are going by!"

Mt. Morris, Ill.

THE QUESTION FOR A WORLD.

BY LANDON WEST.

THE question of our Savior, in Luke 18: 8, is practical and proper for the people of our time, and should interest the human mind, not only of our day, but for all time to come. It would have been a proper question, too, to any generation that has lived since our Savior was here, and must continue so to be until he comes again. Its importance can never be lost. It is to-day, and must continue to be for all time to come, the most important question with which a whole world can meet. No other can exceed it.

Like all the sayings of our Lord, it is a proper question, as to character, time and place, as well as the thought it gives. Had our Master come again into the world at the close of the first century, an answer would have been required to the question, and the people of that time would have been left to show whether faith was to be found or not. Had he come in any age or time since then, the people of that day would have been compelled to meet the query and its issue, whether prepared for it or not.

So with the millions of people in our day, or of those who succeed us, the one great question of faith is to be met and to be answered, whether it has been thought upon and prepared for or not.

The one great truth in which all men will agree, is, that the opportunities of our day, for knowing what faith is, how it comes, and the importance of contending for it, as the saints had it, are now greater and better than at any other time since our Savior was here,—that more nations, languages and people do have and can know the word by which faith comes, the standard by which faith is to be tried or examined, than at any other time, and at no time in the history of our world would this one question have come with such force to so many millions as at the present time. And as the word continues to spread, and the world yet obtains it wider and farther, the greater the number must be who will, in the end, meet the one great question for the world: "Will there be faith or not?"

More people can now have the Word, and of course more people can now have faith, but the point is, to have the faith once delivered to the saints. It tells us what kind to have and to contend for, and tells us, too, what kind will be approved of.

One great advantage of our day is, that all can examine themselves whether they be in the faith, or whether they have the faith the saints had, and also whether they are contending for that kind or not. It is, indeed, easy for all in this day, to see and know and try their faith, in all its standing, so that nothing may be wanting, and that all may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing.

The different translations give us an opportunity to know more of what was delivered to the saints, and thus to have more faith. Upon this passage we have all that could be asked for, to give it both interest and importance to the people of our day and for all time to come. A plain and pointed question, but wide and fair for all people who have a Bible, is thus given by Wilson in Luke 18: 8, "But when the Son of man comes, will he find THE FAITH on the earth?"

This is definite. Faith is all the while called for, it will be called for, and it has a right to be expected. It should be found in every place where there is a New Testament, but it will depend altogether upon the people of this or any other day to come, to show that they have faith and such, too, as was delivered to the saints, is among them, and held by them. Another point of it is, that to have the faith, with none taken off and none put on, is to have it as the saints had it, and to be approved of God. This is the point to gain and should be sought for. And this one question, whether the faith, as delivered, will be found or not, should arouse every professor in Christendom from his slumber, and lead him to examine himself and his faith. Whatsoever is more than that should be cut off, while that which is lacking, should be put on. In this way, and in this way only, can any man be approved, who believes in, and looks to be tried by the sayings of Jesus Christ.

Lanier, Ohio.

FROM THE HIGHWAYS AND HEDGES.

BY JAS. R. GISH.

I PROMISED many brethren and friends that I would let them hear from us,—of our whereabouts and work,—through the MESSENGER.

Wife and I left Stuttgart April 3, for a visit to the members in St. Francis County, Ark. By the Cotton Belt road we went to Brinkley. There we changed cars and took the Memphis and Little Rock road east to Palestine, where we arrived in the evening. We were met here by Bro. Jef. Sloniker. After a short ride of about three miles we reached Bro. Aaron Sloniker's. Then, after the usual friendly greeting and refreshments, we hurried around to the school-house,—the place of meeting,—where I preached to a few hungry souls from 1 Cor. 16: 13.

How easy and how pleasant it is to feed the hungry! The overfed are like the Jews in the wilderness, when overfed with manna, — that bread which came down from heaven. They exclaimed, "Our soul loatheth this light bread." Num. 21: 5. The flesh of quails stuck in their teeth until they were overgorged. Their hearts turned back to Egypt, and God sent his chastisements upon them. Many fell in the wilderness and perished. Many now are like poor Esau,—selling their birthright for a mess of pottage,—a bad bargain indeed.

On Saturday Bro. P. R. Burnett, of Caldwell, east of Long Eel River, from the Crawley Ridge County, came over and met with us. We had five meetings, and thought of continuing, but found the roads bad, and the people very busy, so we concluded to postpone the meetings until about May 13, when we expect to return, make our annual visit, and hold a love-feast on Saturday, May 16, commencing at 4 P. M. This meeting will be three miles north of Palestine, and about sixty-five miles west of Memphis, on the Memphis and Little Rock R. R.. Come and see us.

We reached home April 7, having spent in time, five days; in effort, five sermons; in cash, $6.40. But then, one soul is worth more than the whole world. Yes, especially if it were my soul.

But, my dear brother or sister, what are you doing? What effort are you putting forth to save your own soul or the souls of your children, or the souls of your neighbors? Are you making any effort? Are you giving anything? "No, we are not able." God will not be mocked. Where did you get the organ? Where the lace curtains, the fine pictures and other parlor adornings? Do they cost nothing? There will be a day of reckoning, when all will reap as they now sow. If the money, now spent for vanity and foolishness, were devoted to the work of Christ, there would be enough and to spare.

CAN ANY ADULT BE SAVED OUTSIDE OF THE CHURCH?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

This question is so frequently called up that we now propose giving some Scripture for the consideration of such as have their minds exercised upon that subject.

1. All agree that the lamb which was slain under the old law, prefigured or pointed forward to Christ,—the Lamb which was to be offered for the sin of the world. The blood of that lamb which was slain by the Israelites, was to be placed upon the side-posts and lintels of the doors, and that blood was a token to the destroyer who was to pass over the houses that night. The children of Israel were to remain in the house over night. Had they gone out, they would have been exposed to the destroyer. Then there was no promise of safety outside of the house. Then we find no promise of salvation to any adult outside of the church. Let us hear what John has to say on the subject: "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding; that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life." 1 John 5: 20.

We further quote, to show that this life is in his Son, the following: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us, eternal life, and this life is in his Son." 1 John 5: 11. Here we can see no promise to any one outside of Christ, and no one is in Christ, as long as he is outside of the church. There is but one way of getting into Christ. Let us see what the Book says upon the subject: "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. 10: 10. Then, having come unto, by faith and confession, he is now ready to take the next step, and get into Christ. Hear Paul, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 27.

Now you will notice that when the individual is baptized into the church, he is baptized into Christ, for the church is the body of Christ. Here it is, "And he is the head of the body, the church." Col. 1: 18.

Again, 1 Cor. 12: 13, says: "For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body." Verse 27 says, "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." Then we must be in the body, in order to be in Christ, and we learn from Jesus, that "the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me." John 15: 4. Then, in order to inherit eternal life, we must not only get into Christ, or the church, but we must continue in him and we must further notice that, while there is a form given by which to get into Christ, and a form of doctrine in the church, all this means much more than a mere form.

"Many people there are in the world, who will have their own way, let the result be as it may; and sometimes a few of this class get into the church. They always bring trouble with them. Everything goes right so long as it goes according to their notion, but cross their paths and the trouble begins at once. It is hard for a self-willed man to be a good Christian."

"If you had the abilities of all the great men, past and present, you could do nothing well, without sincerely meaning it and setting about it."

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

From Grundy Co., Iowa. — I was with the Brethren in Grundy County at their quarterly council. Considerable business came before the meeting, which was disposed of in a very satisfactory manner. Bro. Paul Wetzel was chosen delegate to the Annual Meeting.—Stephen Johnson, April 22.

Again at Work.—Our Sunday-school at Roann, Ind., which was discontinued during the winter, was re-organized April 12. Bro. Benjamin Neff was elected Superintendent; Henry Neff, First Assistant; John Neff, Second Assistant. Prospects are bright for a successful school this season.—Joseph John, April 21.

Sunday-school Re-organized.—Our Sunday-school, in the Sugar Creek church, Ill., was newly organized April 5. Bro. Henry McKenzie was chosen Superintendent; Bro. A. G. Gibble, Assistant. May there be zeal and energy in the work of the school! Our quarterly council, April 11, passed off pleasantly.—Mary Flora, Divernon, Ill., April 20.

From J. W. Butterbaugh.—We are now located in Pocahontas County, Iowa, and have a large field open for church work. I am the only one here to do the preaching. The people are very anxious for meetings. We have a full house and good attention at our meetings. We would like our ministering brethren to stop with us and preach some for us. We also desire to have members to move here and help us build up the church. Land is still cheap. Remember us at the throne of grace! — Laurens, Iowa, April 20.

Election for Minister and Deacons.—The members of the Panther Creek church, Ill., met in council, Feb. 7. All the business that came before the meeting was disposed of in a Christian-like manner. The church felt the need of more help in the ministry; also in the office of deacon. For minister the lot fell upon Bro. C. C. Brubaker; for deacons on brethren W. B. Gish and C. T. Eller. All were installed into their offices with great solemnity. We send Bro. Thomas Keiser to Annual Meeting. We appointed our love-feast for May 16 to commence at 6 P. M. We re-organized our Sunday-school by electing Bro. Joseph Smith as Superintendent. He is assisted by Bro. John Keiser and an able corps of officers. We expect to use the Brethren's Quarterly and Young Disciple.—C. T. Eller, Roanoke, Ill., April 20.

Quarterly Council. — The Brethren of the Clover Creek church, Pa., met in quarterly council April 18. Quite an amount of business came before the meeting, but everything passed off in a Christian manner. Brethren A. B. Burger and T. B. Maddocks were elected delegates to District Meeting and our elder, Bro. J. W. Brumbaugh, will represent us at Annual Meeting. Bro. Brumbaugh has been ill all winter, but, we are glad to say, is now slowly improving and anticipates to be able to attend District Meeting. The church decided to hold a love-feast May 19 at 4 P. M. An invitation is extended to all, and especially to our ministering brethren, to be with us. Our Sunday-school was also organized, with the writer as Superintendent, and Bro. A. B. Burger, Assistant. We had the pleasure of having with us Bro. John S. Snowberger, of Kansas, who preached three very entertaining and edifying sermons, admonishing brethren and sisters to prove faithful, and warning sinners to flee the wrath to come. We desire the prayers of God's people everywhere, that, by the help of God, we may all prove faithful, and that the borders of Zion may still be enlarged.—J. B. Brumbaugh, April 20.

DELEGATE ELECTED. The Price's Creek church, Preble Co., Ohio, met in council April 18. The business before the meeting was pleasantly adjusted. We decided to hold our love-feast May 23 at 10 A. M. Bro. M. M. Petry is our delegate to District Meeting. -Jos. Longanecker.

ALIVE TO THE WORK. The Monticello church, Ind., held her quarterly council to-day. Everything passed off pleasantly. The members are alive to the work and zealous for the extension of Christ's kingdom. We decided to hold our Communion meeting May 22. Bro. A. S. Culp is our delegate to Annual Meeting. J. A. Wearer.

INTERESTING MEETINGS. —Bro. Landon West came to us April 5, and remained with us for several days. He preached six excellent sermons for us, which were well attended, considering that there were other meetings in progress at the same time. While there were no additions during the meetings, yet we hope that much good may eventually result. —Martha Carter, Frankfort, Ohio, April 14.

ONE BAPTIZED.—The quarterly council in the Montgomery church, Pa., occurred April 10, and passed off pleasantly. April 26 we re-organized our Sunday-school. Our love-feast will occur Oct. 8, and we propose to hold a series of meetings in connection with same, of which further notice will be given in due time. One was baptized since our last report. -Lydia A. Spicher, Hillsdale, Pa.

HARMONIOUS COUNCIL — The Shade Creek church, Pa., held a pleasant and harmonious council April 7. Quite an amount of business came before the meeting, but all was disposed of satisfactorily. Eld. Joseph Berkey is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Brethren Hiram Lehman and J. E. Blough represent us at District Meeting. Our love-feast will occur June 14.—J. E. Blough, Scalp Level, Pa., April 15.

ANNUAL COUNCIL.—The members of the Brothers' Valley church, Pa., held their annual council at the Pike church-house April 11. At this meeting the accounts in the treasurer's hand were audited and the result reported to the meeting, and the different officers for the ensuing year were also elected. The church decided to hold the spring love-feast May 24, commencing at 4: 30 P. M. A protracted meeting will also be held at the Pike church, commencing one week previous to the feast.—J. J. Blauch.

ONE ACCESSION. — Bro. D. L. Forney, of Mt. Morris, came to us on Saturday, April 11, and gave us three meetings, one on Saturday evening, and two the following Sunday. Bro. Daniel labored earnestly for us. The weather was delightful, attendance good, meetings interesting, and altogether we had a very pleasant and enjoyable season The members were strengthened and edified, and one unreconciled soul was led to accept the invitation of a loving Savior to weary, sin-burdened souls. May God help him, with us, to be faithful! -M. Connell, Batavia, Ill., April 17.

SAD AFFLICTION. Our aged elder, Samuel Mohler, has been, for two or three weeks, compelled to use crutches, his left limb being disabled by rheumatism. On the night of April 13 he had occasion to go to the cupboard for medicine, when his limb gave way, causing a fall and a fracture between his knee and hip. At the time his suffering was intense; but since then he has been resting much better than was expected. As to the results they are only a matter of mere conjecture. Sympathy in his behalf is abundant. He has been a faithful brother in Israel among us, and we feel loth to spare him. I. J. Rosenberger, April 22.

FLOURISHING SUNDAY-SCHOOL. The West Dayton, Ohio, Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition, and the spring and summer seasons are promising. For the past six months we have had an average attendance of seventy-nine scholars. Our weekly collection has averaged about $1.74, including $15.28 for Western sufferers. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Brethren that we may be successful in this City!—Elmer Wombold, April 22.

CHURCH ORGANIZED. -Bro. Geo. C. Bowman, of Boons' Creek, Tenn., came to the New Hope church, Carroll Co., Tenn., Feb. 13, and began meetings at once. He preached twenty sermons in all, and the people expressed themselves as being well pleased with our doctrine. Bro. Bowman, while here, organized our church. Seven of our members live in this neighborhood, and several other members live some distance away. On the evening of Feb. 20 we held a love-feast at sister Gaunt's. On account of heavy rainfalls the meeting was not very largely attended by outsiders. The Lord blessed the labors of our dear brother, and as a result of his efforts two young brethren and two young sisters were received by baptism. One dear young brother was baptized at our last meeting. Charles W. Davis, April 14.

PLEASANT COUNCIL. — The Elkhart Valley church met in council March 28, and transacted quite an amount of business. The annual visit reported all the members to be in love and union with the church, excepting one, who concluded to walk no more with the church. May she see her error before it is eternally too late! Two were received by letter and two letters were granted. All business before the meeting was adjusted in good feeling and a Christian spirit. Brethren Joseph Kulp and Peter Plank were elected to represent this church at District Meeting. Eld. John Metzler, of the Baugo church, and brethren George Swihart and John Cripe, of the Elkhart church, were with us on the above occasion and assisted us. Bro. Metzler gave us a soul-stirring admonition on love, which, if we all took it home to ourselves, certainly did us much good. We organized our Sunday-school April 5, with Bro. David Jones as Superintendent, and Bro. Joseph Bartmas, Assistant, and a full corps of teachers. We use the Brethren's Quarterly and the Young Disciple in our school.—J. S. Kryder.

Notes by the Way.

My last was written at Pyrmont, Ind., March 13. I had commenced meetings at said church on the previous evening. These meetings closed on the evening of March 26 with a very good interest, fair attendance, and very good attention. This was my first visit to the church and I spent two weeks very pleasantly with these dear brethren and sisters, and hope that our acquaintance and labors among them were the means of doing much good. Four precious souls were baptized and one reclaimed during our meetings. May the Lord bless them to be shining lights to the world is our prayer!

We returned home March 27 at midnight. We found all in fair health, for which we feel thankful to the Giver of all good.

After being in our own church for twelve days, attending services on two Sundays and visiting a number of the sick and afflicted ones, I, with Bro. Landon West went to Oak Shade, by the authority of the Mission Board of Southern Ohio, where there are now fourteen members living. This is a new point. The first preaching by the Brethren was done here about one year ago last winter. The people here know but little about the doctrine of the Brethren, and need much teaching and preaching.

While among these people in the hills and valleys of Ohio, the thought came to us that there is still much room for missionary work here, as well as in many other places. Walking seven or eight miles over the hills and preaching two sermons in one day is not riding on our good roads in a pleasant vehicle. Brethren, go to the outskirts and get some experience and you will appreciate your blessings more than ever, and when you return you will, perhaps, thank God more and complain less. We remained at this point five days, had eight meetings and returned on the 14th. One was baptized on this trip.

At present I am enjoying the blessings of home. We had council-meeting at the Donnell's Creek church last Saturday. Considerable business came before the meeting, but all was disposed of in a good spirit, and, we hope and trust, to the honor and glory of God. On account of the expense it was thought best by the church to send only one delegate to Annual Meeting. Our delegate is Jacob Sandy. Our delegates to District Meeting are brethren D. Leatherman and I. B. Trout.

I see in the GOSPEL MESSENGER from time to time something in regard to locating the Annual Meeting permanently, and some even think everything would indicate that we should do so. While I see some things that would be favorable, I also see some that would not. I feel that if our Annual Meetings are held as they should be,—to the honor and glory of God,—they can do much good in the advancement of the cause of Christ in the community where they are held, and by changing from place to place we can establish our doctrine at many places. This, if the meeting were located at one place, we could not do. Then, again, some brethren and sisters would have the burden every year and others not at all. Some would have the meeting close to their doors every year while others would have to go one thousand miles, or more, every time. I fail to see the great saving about which some of the Brethren talk, -a saving of, perhaps, $40,000 a year,—some say. I wonder, brethren, if, even were we to locate the Meeting at one point, we would get any more missionary work done. Then, too, a number of our poor members would never get to the Meeting at all in the above case, but the way it is, it comes around near enough, so that they can go sometimes. The way it now is even some of the railroads are giving a per cent to the Mission Work, and often it is wise indeed, to let well enough alone.

I have been at the last twenty-two Annual Meetings and know a little about the workings of that body. I have also been on the Committee of Arrangements, and while I was glad to serve the Brethren in that capacity, I doubt whether it would be the best thing to have the Meeting here or anywhere else every year.

Brethren, let us ever labor for that which will do the most good, even should it cost us more means.

I also see in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 16, an article from the pen of S. S. Mohler in regard to a "supported ministry." It is well to give the timely warning. Let us read it again and be very careful that, while we may have been on one extreme, that we do not get out of the way in the other. If it is the money that moves us to go and preach, there is something wrong and we had better be at some other employment.

I also see some stir again about our church name. Brethren, let us never change in anything unless we are sure it is for the better. Let us all pray for the success of the Gospel in every way and work for prosperity of the church.

HENRY FRANTZ.

Forgy, Ohio, April 20.

Railroad Arrangements.

I JUST received the following letter from James Smith, Chairman of the Trans-Missouri Freight and Passenger Association, in reference to rates to Annual Meeting. JOHN WISE.

This Association has agreed to make a rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan from points in Kansas and Nebraska to Chicago, St. Louis and Peoria, for your meeting to be held at Hagerstown, Md., May 28 to June 5. Certificates for return passage to be honored by Ticket Agents at Chicago, St. Louis, and Peoria, from June 5 to July 3, inclusive. Such certificates to be issued in connection with tickets eastward, sold on May 12 only.

Signed,
JAMES SMITH,
Chairman.

Report of Finance Committee.

THE following is the report of the Finance Committee of Annual Meeting, held at Pertle Springs, Mo., in May, 1890:

Receipts from all sources,.....$5,393 54
Expenditures for meeting,.....$5,254 94

Paid into General Mission Fund, ..$ 138 60

We would like to have paid into the Mission Treasury a much larger sum, but circumstances over which we had no control, cut down the receipts of the meeting, while they did not materially lessen the expenses. At the time of the meeting the railroads had a rate war, and a great many who would have attended the meeting took advantages of the low rates and went elsewhere, consequently the attendance was much less than we expected, which left many of the tents not occupied. Our eating rooms were larger than necessary, and other preparations were made, that could have been left undone had we known what was learned too late. While we did not have a great surplus of money left, we felt that every one at the meeting enjoyed being there.

WM. MOHLER.

From Wakendah, Mo.

YESTERDAY was the day set for our Communion meeting and although the attendance was not as large as usual, on account of unsettled weather and almost impassable roads, still it was,—everything considered,—very good. About 120 members communed. The rest of the house, not occupied by the tables, was fairly filled but not crowded. The order throughout was most excellent. The bad order, sometimes seen at our love-feasts, is, we think, often occasioned by the overcrowded condition of part of the house,—generally a small part,—left to the spectators, rather than to any rowdyish disposition on their part. Ministering brethren present, besides the "home force" of six ministers were, brethren J. E. Ellenberger, of Smith Fork church, and Joseph Minix, of Bethel. Bro. Christian Lapp being delayed by muddy roads, did not arrive till near the close, so that we were denied the pleasure of an address from him. Bro. Ellenberger officiated, and we all feel strengthened and built up spiritually by the solemn service of the evening. Beside the ministering brethren there were a number of others present from adjoining churches, mostly delegates to the District Meeting of Northern Missouri which met to-day.

By 9 A. M. the delegates and a goodly number of members had assembled in spite of the rain. After devotional exercises the work of the meeting commenced, all of which passed off pleasantly. The reports of the different churches showed the work to be moving steadily onward, but at the same time quite inadequate to the extensive territory occupied. The Mission Board was authorized to seek help outside the District, to fill the many calls, since inside the District the few active workers are doing all they can, and, of course, can not do more. Many of the calls come from organized churches that have no minister and refuse to elect one even where there are several good, faithful brethren whom the elders in charge think eligible. If such disposition grows out of "itching ears" that must have the best or none, the sooner we get rid of it the better. There are other conditions affecting the matter, however, which we may treat of some other time.

Bro. J. E. Ellenberger was elected to represent us on Standing Committee at Annual Meeting.

After transacting other matters of business, the meeting was closed by Bro. C. Lapp, to meet next year in the Bethel congregation, Holt County. May God bless the brethren who came so far under such unfavorable circumstances to attend to the Master's business! LOUIS MACEY.

Millville, Mo., April 16.

From Douglas County, Mo.

APRIL 11 the Bryant congregation, Douglas Co., Mo., met, for the first time since the organization, in church council. We had but little business before the meeting, but we hope all was done in a Christian way. We chose Bro. J. B. Hylton as delegate to District Meeting.

We have social meeting every Sunday evening at our houses. The members all seem to enjoy such meetings and we hope some good may be accomplished. We are a small band of brethren and sisters,—only fifteen members, with but one young minister. The Mission Board sent our elder to Louisiana to do mission work, so that we are in need of a minister to come and preach for us. The field is wide and many precious souls are starving for the true Gospel. If these people die without ever hearing the Gospel preached, who will be to blame? Brethren, when there are six or eight ministers at one meeting, think of the isolated ones that would like to hear you preach!

Wayside Notes.

IN our last we were at Salem, N. C., holding meetings at the Brethren's house (Fraternity). On Sunday we were taken about five miles to fill a regular appointment at the Boyer school-house (in a Baptist house at that point). A good congregation awaited us, and much interest was manifested. Quite a number of Baptist people were present. After the meeting was dismissed, there was a strong request to return and give them more meetings. So we consented to return and hold meetings on Friday at 11 o'clock, and in the evening, but owing to heavy rain we did not fill the appointment. Bro. Barnhart, who was present, reported that only a few were present. Could we have remained, prospects would have seemed good to accomplish some good, but owing to want of time and other engagements, we returned again to the Fraternity house on the morrow, and continued laboring as best we could, though with much effort, owing to the cold contracted in the change of climate.

The church here now appears in good healthy working condition, with Eld. J. Barnhart and two assistants, Faw and Robison, in the ministry.

On our way Northward, we noticed that cotton and tobacco are the chief crops. Salem is a large shipping point and also contains fifty factories. Tobacco barns are numerous through the country. It requires much labor to grow and handle the weed. If good in quality and yield, a tobacco crop is worth from one to two hundred dollars per acre.

I left for the North and this point on Monday, by way of Lynchburg to Bonsacks. At the latter place I spent one week, my home being with Bro. B. F. Moomaw and son-in-law, Crumpacker. It is a pleasant place, nestled, as it were, here among the mountains, at the southern terminus of the Shenandoah Valley, a goodly land. Much of it is possessed by the Brethren.

Bro. Moomaw came here Aug. 1, 1837, and, of course, passed through the troublous times of the late war. He can relate many of the trials of that period, and by his efforts many of our dear Brethren were saved from the fate of war or carnal strife. Bro. Moomaw is now seventy-seven years old and he is one of the five brethren now living whose name appears in the early history of the church.

Bro. Moomaw came into active, public Christian life while young. He was a member of the church fifty-one years and was elected to the office of deacon in Ohio, and to the ministry forty-six years ago. He was a man of vigorous body and fixed purpose. He traveled and labored much in the ministry in early life, traveling on horseback over the mountains, several times to Ohio, also to Pennsylvania and other points west and south. He attended every District Meeting, excepting the one of this year. Now he is seventy-seven years old, yet he is vigorous in body and mind. His beloved companion departed to the other shore about four years ago and awaits the coming of loved ones. A large family of children blessed their union. Located in the valley for so many years, Bro. Moomaw has lived to see the present growth and prosperity of the country since the days when it was but a wilderness. Bro. Moomaw's ministerial labors in the church extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific. May his days, if it be God's will, be extended for futher usefulness, and may rising generations take up the work when he lays his mantle down, so that the work of the church may be carried forward to the saving of souls.

KENSINGER.—At the same place, from the same family, March 8, 1891, Jessie C., aged 6 years, 10 months and 20 days.

KENSINGER.—At the same place, March 9, 1891, George Elvin, aged 14 years, 1 month and 20 days.

KENSINGER.—At the same place, March 11, 1891, Lewis W., aged 17 years, 3 months and 22 days.

The subjects of the above notices were the victims of a complicated disease of diphtheria, membraneous croup and measles. Jessie and Elvin were buried at the same time.

On Sunday evening, March 8, Lewis, the oldest of the deceased boys, requested that Bro. G. W. Brumbaugh be sent for, who, upon arrival, prayed with him. The next morning he requested to be baptized. After the necessary arrangements were made, he was taken from his bed to a stream near by, where he was baptized by Bro. Brumbaugh. After he was taken back to the house, he expressed himself as feeling much better. Next day he called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, after which he passed away with the blessed hope of meeting his little brothers, who preceded him to the spirit world. The father, mother, three brothers, and one little sister remain to mourn for those who were so near and dear to them. E. D. Kensinger.

YEARIAN.—At Deep River, Iowa, March 28, 1891, by accident, Amos, son of Albert and Phebe Yearian, aged 20 years, 2 months and 28 days.

He was taking his father and mother to a neighbor's, in a bobsled. He and his father were standing up. The clevis that coupled the sleds together gave way, which caused a jerk, by which he lost his balance and fell forward on the dash-board. This produced an injury to the bowels, which caused his death in about twenty-four hours. Services by the writer. H. R. Taylor.

ROYER.—Near Bryan, Williams Co., Ohio, April 6, 1891, Bro. Daniel S. Royer, aged 73 years, 9 months, and 2 days.

Funeral occasion improved by the writer and Eld. John Brown.

George W. Sellers.

THOMAS.—At Markleysburg, Pa., March 22, 1891, of spinal fever and La Grippe, Laura Susan, daughter of Bro. Ross and sister Diana Thomas, aged 13 years, - month and 16 days.

Funeral services by brethren Jeremiah Thomas and S. C. Umbell.

M. N. Thomas.

HAGENS.—In the La Forge church, New Madrid County, Mo, April 7, 1891, sister Melinda Hagens, aged 16 years, 11 months and 15 days.

Deceased leaves a kind husband and an infant child to mourn the loss of a kind companion. Funeral services by the writer from Rev. 22: 14, to a sympathizing congregation.

Daniel Lorah.

NISWANDER.—In the Brooklyn congregation, Powesheik Co, Iowa, April 10, 1891, Bro. Samuel Niswander, aged 82 years and 5 months.

Deceased was born in Rockingham County, Va., and was married to Barbara Burner Sept. 9, 1830. They emigrated to Brooklyn, Iowa, soon after the close of the war, where they lived until the time of his death. Bro. Niswander and companion have been members of the Brethren church for fifty years. His companion still survives. They had eleven children. Five of them, including the father, have crossed over the river. Five of the six, who are yet living, reside in the Brooklyn congregation, and are members of the church. The other one lives near Harrisonburg, Va. The funeral services were conducted by the writer.

H. R. Taylor.

RITCHEY.—In the Hopewell church, Bedford Co., Pa., July 11, 1890, Bro. Abram Ritchey, aged 66 years and 11 months.

Deceased was afflicted with paralysis for over six years. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters to mourn their loss. Shortly before his death he called for the elders of the church and was anointed. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. D. S. Clapper, assisted by Henry Clapper, from Gal. 6: 7. Mollie Ritchey.

SHREVE.—In Waterford, La Porte Co, Ind., April 10, 1891, of heart failure, Mrs. Eliza W. Shreve, at the age of 77 years, 8 months and 12 days.

The subject of this notice was born in Mifflin County, Pa., July 28, 1813. In 1816 she moved with her parents to Holmes Co., Ohio, where July 20, 1833, she was married to Israel Shreve. May 17, 1837, they moved to Porter County, Ind. Ten years later they moved to La Porte Co., Ind., finally settling at Waterford, where she died a widow, — her husband having died many years ago. At sixteen years of age she joined the Baptist church, but nearly thirty years later she changed her membership to the Christian church, in which she remained until death.

Mrs. Shreve was the mother of a number of children, two of whom cast their lots with the Brethren church "Grandma" Shreve,—as she was called by everybody, — will be sadly missed by her hosts of friends, wherever she was known, but most of all by a granddaughter that was left motherless when a mere child, and whom "Grandma" took to her great mother heart, to love and nurture in her old days. Now, at the threshold of womanhood, Ellie is again bereft of a mother's care.

Funeral discourse by the undersigned in the M. E. church, one mile south of Waterford on Sunday, April 12, in the presence of a large audience of sympathizing friends and mourning relatives. Thurston Miller.

WADE.—In the bounds of the Ryerson Station church, Jan. 22, 1891, Bro. Wenman Wade, Sr, aged 72 years, 2 months and 22 days.

The deceased was a faithful member of the Brethren's church for thirty-eight years, being a deacon the most of that time. He was beloved by all who knew him, and will be greatly missed by the church as well as his family. He leaves a sorrowing, but faithful wife, and a number of children to mourn their loss, which is his eternal gain. A part of the children are still out of the kingdom. We pray that the life of our departed brother may speak to them, causing them to strive to meet their dear father in the haven of eternal rest. Funeral sermon preached by the writer from the words: "Them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." 1 Thess. 4: 14. Funeral services April 5, 1891, at the Beaver Dam school-house, W. Va.

Andrew Chambers.

ROOSE. In the Sandy church, Ohio, April 12, 1891, Laura Josephine Roose, aged 6 weeks and 3 days. Services by the writer assisted by Jos. Sheehen of the Presbyterian church. Eli Stroup.

HAHN.—In the Sandy church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, April 10, 1891, Clara Alice Hahn, eldest daughter of Bro. Henry Hahn, aged 17 years, 3 months and 22 days

Deceased was left without a mother when between ten and eleven years old. She leaves two sisters, three brothers and a father to mourn their loss. Services by the writer from Rev. 7: 9. Eli Stroup.

BLOOM.—At Greenville, Clearfield Co., Pa., March 29, 1891, Carrie A., little daughter of Bro. Isaac and sister Mary Bloom, aged 10 months and 16 days.

Funeral services conducted by brethren Geo. D. Cleaver and W. Charles from Matt. 18: 10. E. J. Cleaver

PETERS. — In the Pine Creek church, Marshall Co., Ind., April 17, 1891, sister Leah Peters, daughter of Daniel and Catharine Peters, aged 20 years, 3 months and 24 days.

She united with the Brethren church while quite young. Her mother preceded her in death three years ago. One brother and sister and father mourn their loss. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. John Knisley. Jacob Hilderbrand.

BEAR.— Near Milford, Ind. April 11, 1891, of heart failure, sister Martha Ann Bear, aged 56 years, 10 months and 11 days.

Sister Bear retired as usual. Near midnight she awoke the family, stating that she was smothering, and appealing to them for help, but before any assistance could be rendered, she passed away. Her husband preceded her to the spirit world about twelve years, leaving her with a family of ten children. By habits of industry and economy she succeeded in raising them. She was a devoted Christian mother, and a faithful sister in Christ. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer from Rev. 14: 13 to a large concourse of people. W. R. Deeter.

DEVER.—In the Beaver Creek congregation, Rockingham Co., Va., April 13, 1891, sister Fanny Dever, aged about 84 years.

Funeral services at Sangerville, by the writer and Bro. J. A. Miller, from Job 14: 14. G. W. Wine.

HESS.—Near Fredonia, Kans., in the Fredonia church, Jan. 13, 1891, sister Catharine Hess, aged 60 years and 12 days.

Deceased was born Dec. 31, 1830, at Donegal, Westmoreland County, Pa. Her maiden name was Burger, — she being a daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Burger, deceased. She was married March 28, 1849, to John F. Hess, who preceded her to the spirit world Feb. 24, 1890. Both united with the Brethren church about 1851. They were the parents of six children,—three boys and three girls, two of whom have gone before. They removed from Pennsylvania to Ashland, Ohio, in 1860; thence to Knox County, Ohio, and lastly to Kansas in 1867, where they have lived ever since. Her illness continued but four days. Her disease was simply prostration of the vital forces, the magnet of life pointing stronger to her home beyond than to this care-worn world of sorrow. When the hour of her departure arrived, she quietly passed away without one solitary struggle. In the first of her illness she said she made no arrangements to get well. If she did recover it was the Lord's will, — not hers. She had the consciousness of having spent a Christian life, and this gave her a bright prospect of a glorious immortality. She admonished her children to prepare to meet her. Her last words were, "By faith look on high." She repeated this often during her last day on earth. We mourn not as for the lost, for her sweet spirit is at rest. A more beautiful and fragrant memory for her children was never left by a departed mother. We know that she will soon meet with those she loved, who have gone before.

Allen A. Oberlin.

WORRELL.—In the Spring Creek church, Greenwood Co., Kans., March 24, 1891, Lydia Worrell, aged 15 years, 1 month and 19 days.

Deceased was the youngest daughter of Bro. J. A. and sister M. A. Worrell. It was her desire to come to the church. During her sickness she had an opportunity to be baptized, but was very weak. She set another day and hour. No minister being present they sent for one, but before he arrived Lydia had gone to her peaceful home. Shortly before she passed away she looked into her father's face and said, "Oh, papa, can't I be baptized?" She died rejoicing. She leaves father, mother, five brothers and one sister to mourn for her, but we hope that their loss is her eternal gain. Funeral services by Bro. W. H. Leaman.

Susie Nelsen.

WIRT.—At his home in Warren, Winona Co., Minn, March 26, 1891, Eld. Christian Frederick Wirt, aged 74 years, 5 months and 6 days.

The subject of this notice was born in Wurtemburg, Germany, in 1816, Oct. 20. His parents came to America in 1818, and settled in Lancaster County, Pa. Some years later they moved to Jennings Co., Ind. Here Bro. Wirt was united in marriage to Lydia Fiant, Nov. 22, 1838. Nine children were born to them,—six daughters and three sons. In April, 1855, he, with his family, came to Minnesota, at which time he buried four daughters in one week. Three years later he buried the oldest and only daughter left. The three sons, — J. H., Jacob, and Christian Wirt, still survive him. Sept. 13, 1888, we buried our mother, - his faithful wife. Shortly after his marriage he united with the Brethren, and was elected to the ministry, and, in 1871, ordained an elder.

Within the last few years of his life his mind failed him, so that, for the last two years, he had to be cared for as a child.

J. H. Wirt.

WEBER. -In the Niobrara church, Sheridan Co., Nebr., April 11, 1891, of La Grippe, D. L. Weber, aged 29 years and 10 months.

Deceased was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio. He moved to Iowa with his parents in 1863, became afflicted with consumption nine years ago, went to Colorado for his health, and came here three years ago. He was joined in matrimony to Etta Bowman Nov. 29, 1889. Their union was blessed with a bright little son, who preceded him two weeks ago, aged nine months and seventeen days. Bro. David was a consistent member for nine years. He served in the deacon's office but a short time. He bore his sufferings with patience He requested to be anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, by which his faith became strengthened, yet he was willing to die.

Funeral services were postponed on account of sickness in the family.

John Weber.

"THERE are treasures laid up in the heart—treasures of charity, piety, temperance and soberness. These treasures a man takes with him beyond death, when he leaves this world."

BRO. W. J. SWIGART while in Westmoreland Co., Pa., last Sunday, April 5th, was unexpectedly called upon to preach the funeral of the Nicely boys, who paid the penalty of the law for the murder of Mr. Umbarger, two years ago in Somerset County, Pa. He describes the scene as being a sad one beyond expression, and one that he wishes never to see again. While we know but little, or nothing really, about the affair, our sympathies go out towards the family of those unfortunate young men. Since hearing of their sad death, we have thought of it much, and more than ever we are impressed with the great responsibility that rests on parents in whose care God has given children to nurture and bring up in the way they should go. We, as parents, have no more important charge in life, and we should feel it, because we are largely responsible as to what their future life shall be. There must be truth in what the wise man said: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and he will not depart from it as he gets old." This is on the principle that a right start generally leads to a right end. Of course there are exceptions to all rules, but the exceptions do not destroy the general force of the rule.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Dear Brother: -Can a brother, according to the rules of our church, be a member of a secret, oath-bound society? If not, please give the reasons why, as it is reported that several of our brethren are members of such societies.

AN INQUIRER.

IN answer to the above we have this to say: No one can be a member of the Brethren church, who is a member of an oath-bound society, without living and acting a falsehood, as every one, before uniting with the church, is asked, or should be, whether or not he belongs to such societies, and is also informed that it is against the rules of the church to be a member of any such societies.

If any should be members at the time, they are asked to withdraw, and, if they refuse to do so, they can not be received. So it is very plainly to be seen that, when churches do their duty in receiving members by baptism, there can be no excuse for any brother being a member of such society. And when those who have been members of such societies, and perjure themselves at the time of their baptism, by falsely promising to withdraw and then not do it, or unite with such societies after becoming members, they make themselves unworthy of church fellowship, and they should be promptly disowned unless they make full and satisfactory amends for the great wrong which they have done.

We look upon this matter as a wrong of no ordinary character. Again we say, no brother can be a member of a secret or oath-bound society without acting and living a lie, and this fact alone unfits him for Christian fellowship.

This much we have said, presuming that the regulations of our church are in harmony with the Scriptures on this subject. We are now asked for reasons why we have taken and hold this position. We have not the time to discuss the subject fully, but will give a few of the reasons why we believe that such societies are not in harmony with the letter and spirit of the Gospel.

The first reason we give is, we have no precedent for such societies, either in the life and precept of Christ or his disciples.

In the New Testament Scriptures we have positively but one organization for the followers of Christ. That is the church which is sufficiently comprehensive and beneficiary to meet all the wants of God's people, whether they be Greek, Jew, or Gentile. In its rules and regulations are embodied every known duty of man to man as a Christian Brotherhood, as well as toward those who are outside of the kingdom of grace, so that there is no room, no need, or no provision made for any beneficiary society, outside of the Christian church. Therefore no man can connect himself with any other society for personal good, or to extend benefits to others, without stepping down from that which is higher and better to that which is lower and worse.

It is virtually ignoring the Author of the greatest scheme for the accomplishment of human good that was ever introduced into the world. The scheme of salvation, as embodied in the church, contains all and every possible element for human good,—physically, morally and spiritually. In its provisions for the people, in all their various conditions, it is cosmopolitan for all ages and all time. Indeed it is the perfect and the only perfect society that has ever been formed in the world, and therefore the Christian needs nothing more and should desire nothing less.

Our second reason is that secret societies and their designs are not in harmony with Christ's methods of doing good. He brought the scheme of redemption into the world for the purpose of doing man good. He knew what poor, miserable man needed to liberate him from the bondage of sin, and to make him good and happy, and this he made manifest, not to the few that were secreted somewhere within barred, locked and guarded doors, who were bound by a terrible oath not to reveal or divulge it on the outside, but in the crowded cities, by the seaside, in the homes of the rich and poor, as well as to the beggars who sat by the wayside, begging. The good that he brought was intended for all, and therefore his work was to make it manifest, so that all could receive it. It is represented as the light of the world, and therefore not to be hid under the bushel or in the lodge, but to be placed on the candlestick that all might see and receive its saving power. His ministrations were alike free to all who felt the need. He went about doing good, and it was a public ministry,—nothing concealed, all revealed.

The same beneficent spirit was to characterize his followers, and in its primitive purity it was shown by those who were the called after his purpose. They knew no bonds and no pledges, but the bond of love and the fellowship of the saints. The church of the Living God was their highest ideal of right living and right doing, and they were right, for therein was the fullness of wisdom. We do not say that there is no good connected with secret orders, but we do say that whatever good may be there, it must necessarily be short of the good that ought to be and is found in the church of Christ. As the church of Christ is the source and fountain head of all good, why should we not remain at the source for it, and thus get it in all its fullness and purity? And if we have good to give to others, we should give it as did the Christ,—openly and freely, to all in need.

Our third reason why we are opposed to secret societies is on account of the oath of secrecy and its character. Just what the character of this oath is, we do not know practically. But if it is anything like what it is represented to be, there ought to be no question as to whether or no we, as Christians, should take it. To do a thing so barbarous and heathenish is a disgrace to Christian manhood.

ESSAYS.

Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

CALMED.

"When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, Then thou knewest my path."

Crimson-girt the sun was sinking
Over mist-robed hills afar,
Twilight shades and daylight linking,
Leaving evening doors ajar;

Flooding all the land with splendor,
Gilding waves of crystal mold,
Dusky shadows grave and tender,
Bathing in a sea of gold.

But my heart was not in keeping
With my years, nor scene so fair;
Noon not reached, yet care and weeping
Wove gray threads amongst my hair.

And amidst this gleaming beauty,
My young head was drooping low
With the weight of arduous duty,
And the turmoil of earth's woe.

Must God's highest, noblest creatures
Bow submissively to pain,
Which leaves traces on their features,
Time can not remove again?

Father, why these sore afflictions,
That our wearied frames endure?
Are they only stern convictions
Of our sins, our souls impure?

Must we ever strive with longings
Of the soul unsatisfied?
Will temptations cease their throngings
Never, till our spirits hide

In the realms of life eternal,
Where unsullied waters flow?
Shall we find in lands supernal,
Rest from every care and woe?

Fretfully I asked these queries,
Born of trial, pain and toil,
And the troubles, which in series
Cross life's arid, sterile soil.

As in answer, a soprano,
O'er the lake's expansive view,
Floated like a sweet hosanna,
Falling with the evening dew.

Calmly as the daylight stealing
Into rainbow tints and gold,
On my soul in blissful healing,
Fell the hymn so grand and old:

Jesus lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly;
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high.
Hide me, O my Savior, hide,
Till the storm of life is past.

Then God's love refulgent, glistened
On life's restless, changing tide,
While the next sweet strain I listened,
"Safe into the haven guide."

But the voice had ceased its singing,
And my heart its sad unrest;
Chimes of peace were sweetly ringing
Strains which chorded with the blest.

When wild surges swell above us,
In the Savior we can hide;
Storms nor billows shall not move us,
Safely sheltered in his side.

And when sorrow-pressed and troubled,
We shall find repose in him,
And the light of guidance doubled,
When our visions have grown dim.

HEROD AND PILATE.

BY SELAH MERRILL.

It was a strange Providence that brought these two men together at the trial of Christ. Herod Antipas was the most prominent native ruler in the land, and Pontius Pilate was the highest Roman officer in Judea. Upon such men it would have been difficult to practice imposition or fraud. There was nothing to prevent them from expressing their real convictions. Both based their testimony upon personal examination, and both testified without qualification or reservation to the innocence of our Lord. It may be interesting to take a nearer view of these men,—Jew and Roman in high authority,—whose names will be forever associated with that of Jesus of Nazareth.

Judged by the length (B. C. 4 to A. D. 39) and prosperity of his reign, Herod Antipas was a successful ruler. He was appointed to succeed his father as king of Judea, but Herod the Great, a few months before his death, substituted the name of Archelaus for that of Antipas, and the latter became "Tetrarch" of Galilee and Perea. He took his reverse of fortune in good part, and made a faithful governor of those two provinces. He inherited his father's passion for building, and forfified Sepphoris, the capital of his little empire. He also built Julias, at the north-east corner of the Sea of Galilee, and Tiberias, on the west shore of that lake. He was a capable military officer, and was chosen to accompany Vitellius on a Parthian campaign to the Euphrates. Even if he went by command, it was because he was considered worthy of this responsible commission. That as governor and military leader he made careful provision for emergencies, is evidenced by the fact that in a single arsenal in Galilee he had armor and weapons ready for sixty thousand men. To see Jerusalem in the hands of a Roman governor, may have galled his Jewish pride. At all events, his relations with Pilate were not pleasant, but during the trial of Christ, the two men became reconciled to each other. With these few hints as to the character of Antipas as a ruler, we must leave him, to consider the other name associated with his in the examination of our Lord.

Of the life of Pontius Pilate in Europe, before he became procurator, we know practically nothing. Officers of that rank were generally Roman knights, and it has been thought that his name would identify him with some noble family. Details of his life after he returned from Judea are equally meager, except that there seems to be a well-grounded tradition that he put an end to his own life. It is his career in the East with which we are specially concerned.

From A. D. 6, when Archelaus was banished, to A. D. 66, when the war with Rome broke out, there were fourteen procurators. Deducting the four years A. D. 41 to A. D. 44, when Agrippa I. was king, the average for each procurator is four years. Two served one year each, five served two years each, and Felix, in the time of Paul, served eight years. The longest term was that of Valerius Gratus, the immediate predecessor of Pilate, who served eleven years; and the next to his was Pilate's term of ten years. This was from A. D. 26 to A. D. 36, the last half of the reign of Tiberius.

Of the coins of Judea, which we class under the "Procurator Series," fifteen belong to the reign of Tiberius; and four of these were struck under Pontius Pilate. Nearly all of these fifteen coins I have in my collection, and they are deeply interesting objects, for the reason that they were in common use in Christ's time. We can handle today the same pieces of money that Christ handled.

Pilate's character has been painted in many shades, but in a majority of instances, only the darkest colors have been used. A few quotations from two popular writers will bring the matter before us at a glance: "He was destitute of fixed principles;" "A weak man, and therefore a corrupt character;" "Selfish considerations, a love of distinction, of power, and self-indulgence, were the motives of his action;" "He was always ready to shed the blood of a people he hated;" "Pilate's hyena-like nature;" "He was harsh, hot-headed, and malevolent;" "The irresolute man, with no force of character, and too unprincipled to be an upright judge;" "He has come down to us as one of the most unrighteous, cruel, arbitrary and hateful of men." The authors' names are withheld chiefly for the reason that these are typical phrases common, so far as their sentiment goes, in many works on the life of Christ. Not one of the above statements, however, will bear the test of examination. History contradicts them all. They are strong epithets without specifications or proof, and no more true than if one had said that Pilate was a monster with ragged jaws and teeth, with one eye, and with a forked tail. Over against this awful caricature of Pilate, we may place Tertullian's charitable and tolerant view of him when he declared that "Pilate was at heart a Christian."

While Pilate has been condemned in violent language, there is a phase of the matter which has received comparatively little attention. To be governor of a country, inhabited by Jews, was a difficult and a disagreeable position for any man, whatever might be his nationality. That Pilate held his office for full ten years, is evidence of his ability to manage fault-finding, restless, and rebellious people. Doubtless he knew beforehand that he would be hated by those whom he was appointed to govern; that his subjects would take every possible means to circumvent his plans and to bring him into trouble; that to interfere in the slightest degree with any ancient custom, however insignificant that custom might be, would be sufficient to throw them into a state of rebellion: that, whenever any difficulty should arise, they, were their demands not complied with, would not hesitate by unjust accusations and cruel falsehoods, to traduce him to a higher authority; that acts of restraint, necessary in every government, would be interpreted as violations of their rights; that, whatever his intentions as governor might be, the governed would make it impossible for harmony to exist between them. Such are some of the obstacles that would stare in the face any one who should look forward to the position of Procurator of Judea.

We have three sources of information respecting Pilate: 1. The New Testament, the best of all; 2. Flavius Josephus; and 3, Philo. The last, a Jew of Alexandria, who made a single visit to Jerusalem, was a contemporary of our Lord, but bitterly partisan on all questions between the Jews and the Romans. Five public acts of Pilate are mentioned: 1. His introducing images of Cæsar into Jerusalem; 2. Using sacred money for an aqueduct; 3. Quelling an armed mob of Samaritans; 4. The condemnation of Christ; and 5. The slaughter of the Galileans, which is mentioned only in the New Testament (Luke 13: 1). Philo mentions but one event, supposed to be the same as No. 1 above,—the affair of the images,—although his version is so different from Josephus's account that some have thought he describes another occurrence.

The Gospels have no word of censure of Pilate; they were not written to criticise the conduct of rulers in Palestine. Their calm, impartial statements are of the highest value in forming our judgment of the Roman Governor. From the account they contain of the trial of Christ we learn that Pilate was in a most delicate position. He realized that without the slightest provocation, simply "for envy," the Jews had delivered Christ into his hands. With Pilate was the power of life and death (John 19: 10). Christ tells him that in giving him up to death he commits a wrong, but adds that he who placed him in his power committed a much greater crime. Pilate had a high regard for his wife, and perhaps was accustomed to listen to her advice and suggestions on public matters, otherwise she would not have sent to him on the judgment-seat the message which she did (Matt 27: 19). All students of this event admit that Pilate made several earnest attempts to save the life of Jesus. We ought not to overlook the fact which Christ knew as well as Pilate, that the governor was in the hands of a mob, violent, unreasonable, and frenzied, — a mob that meant death to their enemy or destruction to their ruler, if he did not yield to their demands. What was to be done? It is frequently asked, "Why did not Pilate do what he knew to be right, regardless of the consequences?" Let us consider (1) that Pilate lived before the principles, which Christ inculcated had taken possession of men, and (2) that very few persons in Christian lands come up to the high standard which Pilate is blamed for not reaching. I believe it was neither in contempt nor in fear, but rather with feelings of compassion, sincere pity at the sad fate of an innocent victim, that Pilate wrote with his own hand that wonderful epitaph, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews," an epitaph containing history that we know by heart, containing prophecy that coming ages will see fulfilled.

The language which Josephus uses of Pontius Pilate is in striking contrast to that which he uses of Gessius Florus. The cruelties of the latter are exposed and condemned in no mild terms, for in consequence of his acts the Jews plunged into a war with Rome. But for Pilate Josephus has no word of condemnation, nor indeed of criticism, with perhaps a single exception (Ant. 18, 3, 1, at the beginning). Had Pilate been a bad man and a wicked ruler, Josephus would have said as much, just as he spoke the truth respecting Florus.

In Josephus's account of the Samaritan affair there is not a hint that Pilate was not justified in dispersing, even by force the great crowd that had come together armed. The complaint against him was based on the theory that the people had assembled for peaceable purposes, and hence that the killing was unjustifiable. By the fact that Vitellius sent him to Rome, is to be understood that the case was a complicated one, and that it was necessary to bring both sides before the emperor. While Pilate was on his way to Rome Tiberius died, and we do not know that his case was ever settled. Had it come to a trial under Tiberius, Pilate might have been acquitted. It is certain that the complainers would have been obliged to explain by some valid reason why they had assembled in such numbers with weapons in their hands.

Again, what harm could there be in taking the images of Cæsar into Jerusalem? They were small objects carried on the military standards, and would be kept in the palace, or only where the soldiers were quartered. The act would be an honor to the emperor, and would not interfere with the Jews or their worship of God. Yet this simple thing set all Jerusalem in an uproar. Pilate did not wish or intend to take the lives of his subjects; and when his threats did not avail, he yielded to their demands, and removed the objects from the city. For a people who ignored essentials and exalted trifles into matters of the greatest importance, the conduct of the Jews on this occasion was just what might have been expected. God and religion were not dishonored in any way; but a "custom" was violated, and rather than tolerate this the Jews would die.

Again, Pilate could see no reason why the large fund that had been accumulated at Jerusalem, regarded as sacred money by the Jews, should not be devoted to the completion of a work of great public utility, the introduction of water into the city. This work would be an honor to the province, and of its advantages the inhabitants of Jerusalem would enjoy the largest share. He little thought that in carrying out this, to him, legitimate plan, the nation would thereby be thrown into convulsions, and that both city and country would rise up against him. Insults and abuse were heaped upon Pilate by the mob. Not wishing to put any one to death, he ordered his soldiers to go among the crowd in citizens' dress, and at a given signal to beat the people with sticks. Some of the soldiers exceeded their instructions, and a few of the rioters were killed.

Our summary of Pilate's character must be very brief. There is no evidence to justify the charge of cruelty against him as governor of Palestine. On the contrary, there is evidence that he sought the good of the people and the prosperity of the country. He had a strong sense of justice, and was forced against his will to consent to the execution of Christ. So far as history describes his conduct, his actions will bear inspection, and it is to be regretted that we could not have had the emperor's decision on the Samaritan affair; for it appears that the verdict might have been in Pilate's favor. As a Roman governor he does not rank among the best. At the same time there is very little in his conduct that merits condemnation. —S. S. Times.

THE DIVINE PHYSICIAN.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

"They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick."—Mark 2: 17.

Our first parents ate forbidden fruit which made them sick, and the sickness was of such a nature that nothing could be found to cure it.

It proved to be so contagious, that it fastened upon every man and woman who ever lived, or who is now living in the world. Many remedies have been tried by many doctors, but no man ever succeeded in healing a single patient afflicted with this deadly disease. When it has run its course it not only results in the death of the body, but also in the death of the soul.

When God saw that no one else could cure it, he sent a physician, who had knowledge and skill to discover and apply an effectual remedy. In doing so God has shown his great love. The physician whom he sent was his only begotten Son.

Once there was a community of lepers who were shut out from the rest of mankind, and compelled to live by themselves. When any one entered that place he could never come out of it in this life. They endured all the tortures of that dreadful and loathsome disease without any one to relieve their sufferings. A good physician had pity on them and volunteered to go among them, and devoted his knowledge and skill to their relief. He knew that he must leave home, and friends, and comforts behind him forever, never more to return while life lasted, but he sacrificed all for the sake of those poor people, and took up his abode among the lepers. So came the Son of God away from his bright and holy heaven, from his Father's house, and from the sweet company of angels, and took up his abode among us lepers, that he might heal our deadly disease, and give us eternal life.

No one is so well qualified to mend a delicate piece of machinery as the one who made it. The Lord made our bodies, minds, spirits, and souls, and surely he could make us over again if he found that it was necessary to do so. We were so badly broken, or so thoroughly diseased, that he found it better to make us over again than to mend us. He said it was not wise to put a new patch on an old garment,—better make the whole garment new. So he makes us "new creatures" by "creating us anew in Christ Jesus." This he does by planting a very small seed of the new life in the midst of the old nature. This seed he watches and nourishes, and keeps alive, and causes it to grow until it becomes like a great tree, branching out into all the life of the man, and bearing the beautiful and abundant fruits of the Spirit.

He gave his life for our life. Not many physicians will do this for their patients. They may be willing to go through cold, and wet, and darkness, to visit the sick, but we never heard of one who gave his life, who shed all his blood, to save some one else. This the Divine Physician did of his own free will, and because of his own great love.

Now there are certain things for us to learn in this parable which will enable us to make a practical and saving application of its principles to our own case. Physicians in this world do not often go where they are not wanted. They wait until they are sent for. So Jesus, the Divine Physician, while he offers his services to us without money and without price, will not intrude where he is not sent for. My dear friend, ask him to come to you that he may heal you! But no one will send for a physician unless he feels his need of one. A man who does not believe that he is sick will not send for a doctor, or take medicine. So there are a great many who do not feel their need of Jesus. They refuse to believe that they are sick, yet all the time they are actually dying of the most terrible and deadly of all diseases.

Again, when we are in need of a physician we send for the one in whom we have the most confidence. Indeed the physician would not come at all unless he knew that we had confidence in him. Confidence is faith. There is no difference between the two. It is this same confidence in the Lord Jesus Christ, the Physician of our souls, which the Bible calls faith. We will not send for this Physician, or go to him, nor will he come to us, unless we have confidence in him,—unless we confide in him. This is the faith which saves. Now, because we have this faith in the Physician, we carefully follow all his directions.

Finally we note that while the human physician does not always succeed in curing the sick, but frequently loses his patients, the Divine Physician was never known to lose a case. We may put ourselves in his hands with perfect assurance that he can and will make us perfectly whole. Although the human physician may heal us once, we are liable to get sick again; but when Jesus heals us once, we will never again be sick. Sin and death will have no more power over us—but we will be in perfect health in every part of our being, and will so remain throughout all eternity.

Moreover, the measure of life which we shall receive from his skillful and loving hands will be greatly more abundant than what we now have, and there will be many other blessed things to follow, of which we can not now think. Should not every one come to this Physician, or ask him to come to them, so that we might have eternal life? And should we not diligently study how we may show the love we have for him who first loved us, and gave himself for us?

"Just praise is never ill bestowed. But indiscriminate praise is only a grade better than indiscriminate censure. The undiscriminate critic—if such a thing can be—soon loses all power of being helpful. There is a sense in which truly discriminating praise is always high praise. Many a child —many a man, indeed—is kept upon a low plane of life, and is practically a useless and hopeless element in society, because he is treated as though he had no higher aspirations, no finer sentiments, no worthier motives. It is not unqualified and unstinted praise that such a person asks and needs, but just discrimination."

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

HERE is a sentiment current, that too much ncial assistance is required to build church-ses among our Brethren in Denmark.*

or the information of the readers of the Gos- MESSENGER, we clip a few items from the istian Standard, relative to the first church-se, built by the Disciple church in Copenhagen, dedicated Oct. 26. The work seems largely to a Dr. Holk, — a native Dane, who came to country some years ago, and, after uniting the Disciple church, returned a missionary his native country. The size of the house, iven in the Standard, is, 71 feet long, 33 feet e, and 46 feet high at the apex of the roof. lower story contains several rooms, including ll for Sunday-school, also rooms for a family ve in to care of the house. The expense is n thus: Total cost of the house, $20,000. Of amount it is said Dr. Holk contributed him- $7,000. Their board of church funds has nised $8,500. Of this latter sum only $2,000 then paid. For the remaining $5,000 they e a strong appeal to their brethren in America. here is much spoken and written about the ving efforts of the missionary cause. In look-over the reports, there are two sad things that e under our notice: (1) a fragmentary Gospel, aly a part of the Gospel is held out to the un-ered; (2) with their religion they carry exces- pride, luxury and extravagance.

o doubt, the readers of the GOSPEL MES-GER will be surprised to learn, that the Mos- s have planted their cause in England. On of the busy streets of Liverpool stands an fashioned church with this inscription, "There nly one God, and Mahomet is his prophet." lay is the Moslem Sabbath. On this day e are two services for the faithful only. On day there are four mission services for the lic. "The formation of this Moslem institute been brought about as follows. A few years a young English barrister, named Quilliam, Methodist parentage and training, went to rocco; and while there noticed the devotion of Moslems, and their freedom from many of vices which disgrace our civilization. He n gave attention to the teaching of the Koran, soon formally renounced Christianity and le a public profession of Mohamedanism. On return to England, he, with a number of ian Mohamedan gentlemen, residing temporari-n this country, combined for mutual edifica-." The above is sad, yet not surprising. The wing pride, waste and corruption in much of religious society of to-day, is enough to cause erving men and women every-where to doubt authorship. This was what caused Mr. Quil-n to first doubt and next renounce his Metho- raising. The useless expense in building ghty houses of worship, the various schemes roduced in the churches to raise the large sums money needed, is a great provocation to sin-e, honest minds,—a sad hindrance.

The following query with the answer appended sed our recent District Meeting. Query: "As re is a growing practice of holding exercises in public schools of the nature of negro shows l theaters, by which our growing young are bjected to a dangerous influence, will not Dis-ct Meeting provide some measure to counteract s corrupting influence?

ANS.—This Meeting recommends, (1) That rents,—brethren and sisters,—unitedly throw their influence against these exercises. (2) That brethren, who are members of school boards, associate with other brethren and expostulate with school boards in session on the evil. (3) That ministering brethren shall point out the evil in their public preaching.

The Christian Cynosure is published weekly at 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, at $2.00 per year,— in advance $1.50. We scattered a large bundle of sample copies at our recent District Meeting. Many of our brethren, rearing families, have great need of this paper, just now. In many places our cause is suffering much from the growing, corrupting, inflexible cord of secrecy. The evil needs probing.

[*For the information of those who think that too much money has been appropriated for building church houses in Denmark, we wish to state that no appropriation for that purpose has been made since April 3rd, 1888, or over three years ago, at which time $810 was given to build a house in Limhaven, Sweden.—ED.]

WHAT SHALL OUR CHURCH NAME BE?

BY DANIEL DIERDORFF.

I SEE quite a number of queries go to Annual Meeting, through District Meeting in reference to our church name, and quite a number of suggestions are made in regard to what it should be. I, also, feel impressed to make a few suggestions.

"But be ye not called Rabbi: for one is your Master even Christ, and all ye are Brethren." Matt. 23: 8. The wise man said, "Add thou nothing unto his (God's) words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar." Adam called his wife Eve, because she was the mother of all the living. The name was significant, and meant something. God gave names, as Abraham, meaning "father of a multitude;" Sarah, meaning a "princess;" Israel, meaning a mighty prevailer. Jesus said to Simon, "Thou shalt be called Cephas," meaning a stone. We see that all these names were significant and expressive, and were applied to their true meaning.

Now, with regard to our church name, "German Baptist," means a German who advocates the baptism of believers only, and that by immersion. Does this name fit our Fraternity? We verily advocate the baptism of believers by immersion, but we are not all Germans. Our membership is composed of people of many nations, hence we can not consistently use the name according to its true meaning. Brethren, we can not make the name German Baptist fit an Irish, French or American Christian.

Now, with reference to some of the names that are advocated, I will say that the word Dunkard simply signifies nothing. It expresses nothing, and is a meaningless and insignificant word. May the Lord deliver us from ever adopting such a meaningless term for a name. According to the knowledge that I have from my ancestors, this name was attached to us within the last hundred years. Born, if not of malice, it was given by way of derision and contempt, and that by our enemies.

Now, dear Brethren, shall we assume and adopt such a name, simply because it was given us by our enemies? I hope not. We admit that the name Christian, first given to the disciples at Antioch, may have been given by way of derision by their enemies, but it was appropriately applied. A Christian means a follower of Christ, and is significant.

Jesus was, at one time, identified with Beelzebub by his enemies, but he did not assume or adopt the name that his enemies gave him, neither should we assume the name Dunkard, which was given us by way of derision. Jesus was also called a gluttonous man, and a wine bibber. Did he acknowledge the name? Nay, verily, for the reason that it did not apply to him. We are called Dunkards by the world. Shall we adopt the name? I say, No, brethren, no.

If not, then what name will we adopt? Let us adopt the dear old name that was given to us over eighteen centuries ago, and that by Christ, the Head of the church. Let us add nothing to it, lest he reprove us for adding to his Word! Let us be content with it! Let us cling to it; let us waste no time in looking for a new name, but let us spend our best energies endeavoring to be worthy of the name which the Lord has given us! Let us be Brethren, and when our work is done here below, and we have overcome, then he will give us a white stone, and in the stone "a new name written," etc.

THE SEA OF DOUBT, AND GROUND OF FAITH.

BY J. HANNA.

Number Two.

ANOTHER consideration is the danger of tempting God to withdraw from us, by thus spurning "his friendship and doubting his Word." "A scorner seeketh wisdom and findeth it not." Prov. 14: 6. "For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord: They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof. Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices." Prov. 1: 29 31. Then "cease . . . to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge." Prov. 19: 27.

Furthermore, although the sea of unbelief does not disprove the abundant air above it, its artificial basin is deep enough for soul suicide.

> What dif'rence, though the clouds we view
> Can not affect the sun so bright,
> If they their shadowing work pursue,
> And lose its beams from sight?

Comparatively speaking, but few have the information at hand to reveal the errors of infidelity, for who knows the slanderer's heart, to meet his studied words? Simply speaking of deception by infidels, would perhaps leave those inquiring for the truth, still bewildered over their presumptuous stories: for truly "they set their mouth against the heavens and their tongue walketh through the earth," "deceiving and being deceived;" hence, we will follow our reference to the same with illustrations of proof.

Perhaps one among their most popular stories current, is to the effect that the Council of Nice, (A. D. 325,) decided, by miracle, which, among accumulated Gospels and Epistles were genuine. That the reader may decide for himself whether the books had or have become very uncertain, we will go back of that Council for information concerning them. Origen, born A. D. 185, in a comparison, says, "Matthew first sounded the priestly trumpet in his Gospel. Mark, also Luke and John, each gave forth a strain on their priestly trumpets. Peter moreover sounds loudly on the twofold trumpet of his epistles; and so also James and Jude. Still the number is incomplete, and John gives forth the trumpet-sound in his Epistles and Apocalypse," (Revelation); "and Luke, while describing the Acts of the Apostles. Lastly, however, came he who said, 'I think that God hath set forth us apostles last of all'" (See 1 Cor. 4: 9), "and, thundering on the fourteen trumpets of his epistles, threw down even the ground the walls of Jericho." Judging by this, the books are still the same.

Tertullian, born A. D. 160, wrote, "If you are willing to exercise your curiosity profitably in the business of your salvation, visit the apostolic churches, in which the very chairs of the apostles still preside in their places; in which their very authentic letters are recited."

Further, the Nicean Council story is unrecorded in the Acts of the Council; (so says "The Anti-Infidel Library," Boston, Mass., to which we are partly indebted for information herein contained); neither is it found in any writings extant, of the five hundred years succeeding that Council, as the reference to events of so late a date in that, first containing it, is proof; which writing even bears no signature, but nameless, dateless, and unreasonable as it is, it is credited by persons who call others credulous for faith in that which was heralded by prophecy, substantiated by miracles, and testified to by martyrs, who sealed their testimony with their blood; the miracles being so open as to never be questioned as to their reality by observing enemies, cunning men, seeking by every means his overthrow. As to the books, we would say further, that the church was too much interested in the truths for which her martyrs died, not to have used every means to preserve their identity, not to have settled every question concerning their acceptance, while the reasons therefor remained evident. Why, were it possible that one-half could be uncertain, the rest would convict the sinner. But their very age,—as skeptics would own,—were they bank-notes—proves the more their genuineness.

ARE WE SOLDIERS OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST?

BY JAS. H. LARKINS.

WHAT would be thought of a king's soldiers, who, while swearing that they were loyal and true, were unwilling to do their Master's bidding? What, if they should say, "Number us in your army! Let us wear your uniform and be under your protection, but do not ask us to fight for you; do not ask us to do anything by which we shall be known as yours!" Is not this the attitude of many professing Christians to-day? They want to be under their King's protection, but are utterly indifferent about doing his bidding. If only Satan's power over them is broken, they seem not to care for the multitudes who are still under his galling yoke. The church of Christ is to them a sort of religious community where they may be entirely "at ease in Zion" where the "chief end" is rest, and the enjoyment of special advantages.

It is Satan's peculiar delight to mislead men by such errors. God certainly does give special privileges and blessings to his own people, but he calls them by these privileges to special duties. "Royal honors bring royal responsibilities." "Pure religion before God" is not only "to keep unspotted from the world," but "to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction." Here is shown the real nature of Christianity,—active as well as passive. Both are necessary to the symmetrical development of character as well as for the evangelization of the world. Can one be truly Christ's and ignore either?

Not always should the blame rest entirely on individuals. Too often a part of it, at least, belongs to the church which fails to properly "shepherd" the flock. It seems that with many, all duty is done when a soul is brought to Christ and to the church. Many a young Christian, left to himself, sins ignorantly, not knowing how or what to do. Said one, when first converted, "I would have gone through fire to bring a soul to Christ, but left so long inactive, I have grown indifferent." Said another, deploring his coolness of heart, "When first I knew the love of Christ, I felt that I must stop people in the street to tell of him. I do not feel so now." Another said, "I wanted to work for the Master, but I was so young and ignorant I did not know how, and no one told me what to do." This failure to develop and train young disciples, together with the suppression of the voices of Christian women in some localities has forced a vast power for good to lie dormant in the very midst of the church. Thank God that she now begins to realize these errors and that this age, characterized as it is by progress in every direction, is especially remarkable for the advance made by the church in these very lines,—an advance which is already telling powerfully on her religious life.

Oh that a mighty force of consecrated righteousness be set at work in the church, and may God grant that it may permeate every department, and that the love of Christ may be kindled anew in every cold heart, burning up the dross and fitting Christians for the Master's use.

THE BRETHREN'S INSURANCE.

BY JOHN HECKMAN AND J. B. KEPNER.

THE Brethren's Mutual Aid and Insurance Association, of the North-eastern District of Kansas, was organized April 1, 1885, at Ozawkie, Kans. The District Meeting accepted the rules and by-laws and appointed all the officers. It was decided to pay no loss till $50,000 worth of property had been insured.

The work started with a donation of $7.50 to purchase necessary books and stationery. The cost of insuring was $2.00 initiation fees, one-half mill on the dollar additional in the country, two mills on dwellings in towns and cities, five mills if placed against other buildings; factories, mills, and machine shops, one per cent.

The first meeting was held Jan. 12, 1886, about eight months from the time it was started, when it was found that $80,000 worth of property had been insured, therefore it was considered fully organized.

At the end of five years, Jan. 12, 1891, $598,162 worth of property was insured. The sum of $1,507.52 had been paid out for labor, car-fare, printing, postage, stationery and safe; $2,491.12 had been paid out for losses. In September, 1888, an assessment of two and one-half mills on the dollar was made; in June, 1890, an assessment of two mills was made; and in October 1890, an assessment of one and one-half mills on the dollar; total, six mills on the dollar in five years.

The following are the officers: P. R. Wrightsman, President; George Myers, Vice President; T. G. Winey, Treasurer; sister B. S. Katherman, Secretary; J. D. Trostle, J. C. Metsker and Henry Lawver, Directors.

The fundamental principle of the company is expressed in the name, "Brethren's Mutual Aid Association." The company is formed within the church. It is not incorporated; hence not held responsible for any rules made for its own convenience, neither is it compelled or required to make any financial reports to the State Department as are other companies. Furthermore, this is in accordance with the principle of not going to law. To be incorporated, gives the power to sue and be sued, for which we have no use.

Christ surely meant that we should bear one another's burdens. When one's home is torn to pieces by storm or destroyed by fire, it is indeed a time of distress. How beautifully we show our love to one another, and our willingness to obey,—"bear one another's burdens," — when we all throw together and make good a large part of the loss sustained.

It is the Gospel plan systematized. We, by this plan, have our property insured without being unequally yoked together with unbelievers. 2 Cor. 6: 14, 15. A very tender conscience should be our guide in such things.

Again, some have withdrawn from the company when an exceptionally large loss has occurred. Surely, brethren, you did not properly and prayerfully consider, when you decided to do that. Supposing the loss had been yours and others refused or failed to make good their pledges! The rule must work both ways to be brotherly.

It is true there are some insured in that part of the West where they have not the means with which to pay. Our sympathy goes out to them as well as our prayers, but the Insurance Company must observe its rules.

Again, there are some who say they will pay all assessments; then cancel their policies. We think they make a mistake for these reasons: we, as Brethren, ought to stand together as a unit. We can insure much cheaper than in the old stock companies, which, we think, you will see.

It is true, there may be mutual companies which insure country property only, which may be cheaper than ours. But how can you join those worldly companies? They are based upon and bound together by civil law and not upon the Gospel principle, hence you are joined together with unbelievers. We are joined together by love.

It may be asked, "Why not insure country property only, to make it cheaper?" Ans.—Some members live and own property in towns and by the law of love we can not forbid them protection. It is not dollars, "by love we are constrained."

We give some figures for comparison. The losses for five years have been six mills on each dollar insured. The first cost of a policy is $2.00, to which is added two mills on the dollar. All assessments are made when losses occur.

The amount of policies taken out, is $598,162. Estimating the losses at six mills, makes a net loss of $3,588.97 for five years. Adding to this $1,507 for labor and all incidental expenses, and we have a total of $5,095.97, the entire expense of the company for five years.

Taking the same amount of insurance in the old line insurance companies, at the regular rate for fire, lightning and tornado,—three per cent,—we would have $17,944.86. After deducting $5,095.72, actual expense of our company, from the amount, it would have cost in one of the old stock insurance companies, we have a balance of $12,849.14 which our members have actually saved. It certainly stands to reason that, if a worldly stock company can afford to pay not less than twenty-five per cent of the premiums to local agents, and large salaries to a score of needless men, and yet become a millionaire, we surely can afford to pay one-fifth the amount for insurance in our Mutual Aid Association. The old line companies require a payment of three per cent which is thirty mills on the dollar; we pay six mills.

We trust that this may set the Insurance Company before our Brethren in its true light.

"A TEACHER who comes late to the Sunday-school may be better than no teacher at all; but such a teacher is not as good a teacher as he ought to be, or as he could be. The fifteen minutes before the school session begins may be made the most important fifteen minutes of a teacher's work with and for his class. The teacher who loses these minutes loses a golden opportunity for the day; and if in addition to these he loses the first fifteen minutes of the school hour, he is at a disadvantage that no work or skill of his will enable him to make good."

ADULTERY AND FORNICATION.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

ord adultery occurs seventeen times in the tament and sixteen times in the New. In a ense it always refers to a crime committed rried person, or persons,—never to a person ed. Its penalty under the Jewish law was ly death. Lev. 20: 10. Hence marriage, s crime was committed, was impossible if was enforced.

ord was also used in a figurative sense,— es for idolatry, either on account of the practices connected with some of the idol- ites, or because the worshipers of Jehovah and consorted with idols.

erm fornication is used four times in the tament, and twenty-five times in the New. ary and literal sense refers to the sins of committed by unmarried persons. 1 2.

penalty under the Jewish law for this as either compulsory marriage of the par- olved, or the payment of a fine by the man ing the crime, to the father of the woman s wronged. See Ex. 22: 16, 17; Deut. 22:

y that Christ or the Holy Ghost used two f the same meaning in such a connection e to charge them with inconsistency. No ould be assigned for Christ's doing so. It fore clear that the words adultery and for- in Matt. 5: 32 and 19: 9 must have refer- two different crimes. "How can a man y his wife for fornication, when the word ion refers only to crimes committed by the ed?"

—A woman may commit this crime when nd her husband may only find it out some- er marriage. This would be a fraud prac- the husband, and we can not, for a moment, at such a marriage was "in the Lord" or Lord's approval, since true marriage can ke place "in the Lord." 1 Cor. 7: 39. e Lord is never a party to a fraud. This teral interpretation of Matt. 5: 32 and of people the Brethren take the literal sense Scriptures when that sense fully satisfies conditions, and I have not found a case ere the literal sense is taken at all, in which rd fornication does not apply to the unmar-e hope that these few reflections through SSENGER, may be accepted as an answer to ny private inquiries received, I respectfully them.

LOVE.

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

nat loveth not, knoweth not God: for God is love."— : 8.

apostles, and especially John, dwelt largely ne theme of love. It was the natural flow heart; being imbued and filled with the God. They talked about it, and wrote t. "Out of the abundance of the heart the speaketh."

1. God's Love to Man.—The love of God to man was free, boundless and far-reaching in its effect, though unsolicited and unreciprocated by the human family. God manifested his love to them in their alienated,—unreconciled,—state. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"God did not send his Son as an avenger to condemn the world, but that the world through him, might be saved." John 3: 16, 17. "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners (enemies) Christ died for us." Rom. 5: 8; 8: 32. "Christ died for the ungodly." Verse 6.

In viewing the love of God, and the sacrifice it produced, we are lost in wonder and amazement, and are made to exclaim, with the Apostle John, "Behold what manner of love the "Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God! Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." 1 John 3: 1. "Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment, because as he is, so are we in this world." 1 John 4: 17; 2: 28.

2. Our Love to God with its Test.—Love is not a momentary, emotional outburst of feelings, but the deep-seated unchanging affection of the heart. God's love is reciprocated by us, not from a sense of dread, and fear, but we love him because he first loved us. Verse 19. "Perfect love casteth out fear." We stand in awe of the object we fear, and yield passive obedience to it for fear of the condemnation that would follow disobedience. There is no reverence, or worship in such service, but dread and "torment." "The love of God is the first duty of man and this springs from just views of his attributes, which are wisdom, love, mercy, goodness, and purity, and afford the highest delight to the sanctified heart. Esteem and reverence constitute ingredients in this affection, and a fear of offending him is its inseparable effect." If our affections are right, we love God above all things, as the sum of all excellence. We love him who is lovable and loving in all his ways. This love is unifying in its nature, binding us together, as with an endless chain, identifying us with the family of God. Thus we are made heirs (sons) of God, and joint heirs (brothers) with Christ. Rom. 8: 17. "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." John 17: 23; 1 John 3: 2. "And I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus." Rom. 8: 38, 39.

The whole being is affected and brought into action by this love. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." Mark 12: 30; Luke 10: 27; Deut. 6: 5. Our obedience and faithfulness to God is a test of our love to God. We conform to the will and wishes of the object we love. "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." 1 John 5: 2, 3. "If ye love me keep my commandments."

"If a man love me he will keep my words: he that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." John 14, 15, 21, 23, 24; Deut. 10: 12.

All our professions of love to God are vain unless our lives are consecrated to his divine service. 'If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another; and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7.

3. Our Love to one Another.—Being born of God, and blessed with this heavenly characteristic,—love, we should "love one another out of a pure heart fervently." 1 Pet. 1: 22. "For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." 1 John 3: 11; John 13: 34. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the Brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." Verse 14. "For he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" 1 John 4: 20. "Being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ. In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Col. 2: 2, 3.

All our worship, faith, charity, and actions, are as a sounding brass, or tinkling cymbal, unless they be the effect and outgrowth of love.

4. Love to our Enemies.—The love of God was manifested to his enemies, and we, as the children of God, should love our enemies. "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you: For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same?" Matt. 5: 44, 46; Luke 6: 32, 33.

There is, however, a difference between our love for one another, and the ungodly, or the world. As members of the family of God, we should be possessed of a kindred spirit, perfectly joined together in the same mind, and of the same judgment. This love is so deep, so cementing in the body of Christ,—the church,—that it is likened unto our physical body by the Apostle Paul. See Rom. 12: 4, 5; 1 Cor. 12: 27. If an arm, hand, foot, or any part of the body be hurt, or afflicted, the whole body sympathizes, and suffers with it, and the strong and healthy parts bring their energies and influences to bear, to heal and restore the weak and afflicted part. So it is in the church of Christ where love has the controlling influence. "We, then, that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." Rom. 15: 1; 14: 1. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ." Gal. 6: 1, 2; James 5: 19, 20.

How easy it is to work with the weak and sickly where love reigns supreme! Our love goes out to mankind, because they are our fellow-beings, possessed of an immortal soul which must exist through time and eternity. We love them (not their evil ways) because God loved them, and gave his Son to die for them. Our entreaties and pleadings with sinners to turn from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God; and our intercessions, and prayers, that ascend to God in their behalf, are the outgrowth of that heavenly love within us.

We pity those who oppose the influence of the love of God, and those that persecute us, and speak all manner of evil against us, because of our adherence to the sacred principles of the Gospel. From the depth of our souls, in the spirit and language of our Master we cry: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." This love enters into every song, every prayer, every sermon, every gift, every admonition, and every warning of danger. "Love is long suffering, is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own; is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." 1 Cor. 13: 4, 5, 6, 7.

Love is the brightest jewel of earth, and its resplendent rays will shine from every brow on the evergreen shore of perpetual bliss on the Elysian fields of glory. We will then only begin to enjoy that love in all its sweetness, and fulness, when faith and hope are lost in the full realization of perfect love.

This love should be the Moderator of every Church Meeting, and be enthroned in every heart. Were this the case, we would never hear that oft repented declaration, "I can forgive, but I can never forget." To forget is to forgive. As long as we remember grievances, and brood over them they cause bad feelings. What if God were to remember all our sins and iniquities when we appear before the judgment seat? How about the consequences? When we come to God in his own appointed way he casts our sins and iniquities into the dark sea of forgetfulness and remembers them no more. They are cancelled,—blotted out. "For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more." Heb. 8: 12; Jer. 31: 34; Isa. 43: 25.

We are to have the Spirit of Christ, forbearing one another and forgiving one another. If any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." Col. 3: 13; Matt. 6: 14, 15; Eph. 4: 2. If we forgive those that offend us as we desire Christ to forgive us, our repentance will be thorough. All malice will be expunged from the heart, and we then can "love as Brethren, be courteous, kind, and affectionate one to another, in honor preferring one another." When love goes out of the church, or a congregation, malice, ill-will, hatred, strife, backbiting, and slander will take its place, and, oh, what a change is wrought! The believers no more walk together in love and union, but a wrangling, and a devouring of one another is witnessed by the passers-by, who exclaim, "Behold a religion without love! There is not a semblance of Christ in it!! We, as Christians should love the Holy Trinity,—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—the house of God, with its divine service, the church, purchased with the blood of Christ, all mankind for whom Christ died, all that is good, true and pure.

Some things we are not to love,—the world with its lusts and evil doings, 1 John 2: 15, 16, 17; James 4: 4; lies, Rev. 22: 13. All manner of evil, and "every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God."

Eight things we should hate: Evil with its terrible effects; Amos 5: 15; Psalms 97: 10; a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among Brethren. Prov. 6: 17, 18, 19.

AN EXPLANATION.

BY D. VICTOR LONG.

In Gospel Messenger of April 14, page 228, I notice an article written by Bro. J. H. Peck on the subject, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." I am not a little surprised that such an impression could be drawn from my article, or that I could be so greatly misunderstood. I confess I did not explain as clearly as I should have done; I make my articles as brief as possible, for I know there are many waiting of more importance.

If Bro. Peck will read again my article, and also read Bro. Hertzler's article,—the one to which I replied,—he can not fail to see that he and I are of the same opinion, and that I fully endorse every argument he advanced.

I never held the idea, that Christians, when they die, go immediately to heaven. I do not think my arguments convey that idea. My good brother uses some of the same Scriptural evidences that I, with those who thought as I did, used at our ministerial meeting, to show that our Savior, in pronouncing that blessing upon the "meek," did not allude to this earth, sin-cursed and defiled as it is now, while other brethren advanced arguments to show that the meek "inherit" or "possess" this earth right here and just now. He will notice that I said, "The inheritance is not in this defiled earth since we can not stay here if we desire, for death will take us away."

Further, "The meek do not desire to stay here." On this point I referred to St. Paul's language, meaning, of course, this earth in its present condition. When I referred to the patriarchs, I only tried to show that the "earth" which the "meek" are to inherit, is "incorruptible, undefiled, and one that will never fade away," while the patriarchs confessed they were only pilgrims here, and looked for a country more lasting,—one they could call their own.

When the meek are taken by death from this world, they go to a place prepared by the Lord. There they remain until God's own appointed time, when they will come forth and these "vile bodies will be changed and fashioned like unto his glorious body." Then this earth will be purified, brought again to its primeval state,—after the great conflagration, the full consummation of all things. Then will the meek come forth and inherit the "new earth," — as the Psalmist says, "when the wicked are away." Now, whether right or wrong, I trust I am understood. I am glad my brother carried out my views so clearly. I am pleased with the explanation, given by Bro. Hertzler in his reply to my article. The meek, no doubt, do inherit this earth here and just now, in one sense, but we believe our Savior's words on the mount refer to the "new earth." Rev. 22: 1, 2. We do not all think alike on this subject, but I thank my Heavenly Father that we, as brethren, are so united on that part of God's Word, which concerns the immortal soul, and will lead all the faithful home, to dwell eternally with Christ, in the world to come.

INTEMPERANCE.

BY H. SHAFFER.

"At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."—Prov. 23: 32

Intemperance, like other vices, is deceitful and seductive. Much has been said and written on this evil, yet tongue or pen has failed to describe fully the wretchedness and bitter woes caused by intemperance. This evil often commences in social drinking, so-called. There is something pleasing in the idea of taking a social glass with a friend, or a glass of sparkling wine on some public occasion. The young fail to perceive the danger. They can not see how it is that a man is led on from moderate drinking to brutal excess, and hence use the wine cup freely and without fear of any evil consequences. The idea that any one might become a drunkard does not enter the mind of the young man when he sips the poison, but day by day the habit grows upon him. Deeper and deeper he sinks into the vortex of wretchedness, and that which was "a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his pathway," he sees no more. His last star of hope sinks in utter darkness, to rise no more!

If we go to the saloon, to the gambling house, to the theatre, to the dark cell of our prison houses, or to the scaffold, there we can behold the fruits of intemperance. Many men, of strong and vigorous intellect, have been bowed by it. The fairest prospects of intellectual greatness have been blasted by its fatal influence. Many homes to-day are ruined by it. Many sad mothers are weeping for a dear son or a lost and ruined husband.

Intemperance in its last stages is fearful. I would say to all who tamper with strong drink, "Stay thy hand from the cup and consider what the end shall be, for poison and death lurks beneath its brim." In 1 Cor. 6: 10 we read, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." This is a solemn declaration, but how reasonable its truth! The kingdom of God is a place of purity and holiness. "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without a cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine." Prov. 23: 29, 30. "For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty, and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." "The drunkards of Ephraim shall be trodden under feet." Isa. 28: 1, 3.

How far shall the burning wave of intemperance sweep on, and where shall it be stayed? Dear brother and sister, let us arise in all the vigor of youth and manliness, and arrest, if possible, the tide of ruin which is sweeping over the beauty of our land. We need warm hearts and willing hands. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Is there any other evil so prevalent as this? Knowing this, can we go on seemingly unalarmed or unconcerned? Brother, do not let this serpent coil in some secret chamber of your house. It may do you harm. Seeing this evil in the world and even in the church, can we not war against it? May those who stand on the walls of Zion to blow the Gospel trumpet, warn the aged and the young to flee from this evil!

Often, as we remonstrate with any one personally about this matter, he becomes offended and says, "Can I not govern myself? Can I not drink when I please, or let it alone when I please? Father used it all his life and never became a drunkard, neither will I be one." We fear that this was the mind of many who are to-day sleeping in a drunkard's grave, awaiting the great day of God's wrath. "If we have been renewed in the spirit of our minds," and "put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness," Eph. 4: 23, 24, we should do all in our power to stem the terrible tide. Let us, by all lawful means, reprove the "unfruitful workers of darkness," lest we be partakers with them! Let us take the Scriptures for our instruction in this matter, that we may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. 1 Tim. 4: 17. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness; as the stars forever and ever." Dan. 12: 3.

Cherry Grove, Va.

"It is a matter of great importance, for our own future consolation, that we learn to appreciate our obligations to the loved and useful ones around us, whilst they are still with us, and that we, before it is too late, and in a proper manner, manifest our appreciation of what they are to us. Soon they may descend into the grave, and we, in the bitterness of impotent sorrow, shall hasten 'to garland the tombstone when we have not crowned the brow, and to pay the honor to the ashes which we have denied to the spirit.'"

BRO. JACOB WITMORE is on the Standing Com- ittee from the Middle District of Missouri.

THE District Meeting of Michigan has selected ro. Isaac Rairigh to represent them on the anding Committee.

BRO. M. M. BASHOR, of Oregon, is now on his ay to the Annual Meeting. He is stopping a w weeks in East Tennessee.

THE District Meeting, of Denmark, has selected ld. Enoch Eby to represent them on the Stand- g Committee at Hagerstown this year.

SOUTHERN Ohio sends three queries to the An- ual Meeting this year, one of them, we notice, rotesting against the agitation of our church ame.

SOUTHERN Ohio will be represented on the Standing Committee by Eld. J. Smith.

THE Brethren's new church in Philadelphia is now completed for services, and, we presume, was dedicated May 3, as that was the day appointed for the dedicatory services.

BRO. WM. HERTZLER will represent the Eastern District of Pennsylvania on the Standing Committee at Hagerstown. He also served as Moderator of the District Meeting.

BRO. S. W. HOOVER reports that one more has just been received in the West Dayton church by confession and baptism. Bro. Andrew Hutchison is now preaching for them with good interest and attendance.

BRO. T. T. MYERS, who left here two weeks ago for Philadelphia, reports his safe arrival in the city, and as being very much pleased with his work. He also reports two good meetings. His address, for the present, is 1608 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WE are sometimes offered pay for publishing long obituaries. This we can not accept. We aim to treat all alike as much as possible, and publish long notices only where the deceased seems to be widely enough known to justify a more extended notice.

ON another page of this issue, Bro. Enoch Eby has a special notice to the visitors of the different schools in the Brotherhood that deserves consideration. It seems to us that his suggestion is a good one, and may result in much good to the different visiting boards as well as to the schools themselves.

THE eye needs watching, for it is an open door into the heart, through which the most dangerous evils may enter. Let not the eye rest upon that which is either evil or may lead to evil, for where the eye is there the mind is sure to be. He who trains the eye to turn from everything that is wrong, bids fair to keep a clean heart and clear conscience.

THE following notice was received five hours after the last issue was put on the press. We fear the time is too short for this notice to be of much benefit, still we publish it here, hoping that it may reach some of the Virginia Brethren in time for them to act on the suggestion, in part at least:

Brethren coming to District Meeting at Mt. Vernon, Augusta Co., Va., over Valley branch of B. & O. R. R., will be met in Staunton in time to take the train on C. & O. R. R. at 1 o'clock P. M., going east, on Wednesday, May 13. Brethren coming on train on said day, will write to I. D. Grove, Waynesborough, Va., who will meet them at that place, and to E. D. Kendig, who will meet them at Fishersville, Va.

E. D. KENDIG.

IN a private letter from Bro. M. M. Eshelman, we have the following: "I am out of the real estate business. Results and experience: Some pleasure; a little money; one or two thanks; much censure; lots of expenses; heaps of worry; a great deal of worldly knowledge and the tangles of human nature. I shall continue to be identified with the Southern Californian, and fit myself for another important educational work." While we do not regard the real estate business as being dishonorable or unbecoming a Christian, still "results and experience," as pictured above, are not much, if any exaggerated. It is a business where men get their fingers, as well as their souls, sometimes badly scorched, with the smell of fire on their garments. We think the business is adverse to Bro. E's element, and we are pleased to learn that he is working into something more congenial with his nature.

IN consequence of the hostility manifested against the Jews in Russia, hundreds of thousands of them may be expected to emigrate to America during the next two years.

DURING the year 1889, Great Britain raised for foreign missions $6,506,530. Of this amount $49,095 was raised by the Roman Catholics; the remainder by Protestant denominations.

SOME one, without giving either his name or address, sends a marriage notice for publication. Such notices can not be published unless accompanied by the writer's name and address, as a safe guarantee of good faith.

WE shall always be pleased to receive copies of local papers containing news concerning the doings of the Brethren in any part of the country, but it will greatly aid us if the items intended for us to read, should be plainly marked.

ON another page Bro. Isaac Frantz calls our attention to an important duty that we owe to the transportation companies, favoring us with special privileges. We, too, have been pained at the unchristian and ungrateful conduct that we have frequently witnessed while traveling. O for more of that Christian meekness that can enjoy comforts and favors without complaining, and let the light of Christianity shine on the public highway, as well as in religious assemblies.

TOO late for this issue we received a report of the meeting for the Western District of Pennsylvania. It will appear next week. From it we learn that the meeting was a very pleasant gathering, and sends no queries to the Annual Meeting. Eld. J. C. Johnson represents the District on the Standing Committee. A committee of five was appointed to take into consideration, and report at the next meeting, on the propriety of establishing a home for the worthy poor of the District. This is certainly a commendable move, and we are glad to know that many other Districts are interested in a similar manner.

THE River Brethren are publishing a paper at White Pigeon, Mich. At the head of the editorial page is the following:

Evangelical Visitor, a semi-monthly religious journal, published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren in Christ, commonly called in the United States "River Brethren" and in Canada "Tunkers," for the exposition of true, practical piety among all classes.

It would then seem that the River Brethren are sometimes called "Tunkers" too. While they resemble the Brethren very much, still they differ from us in a few points,—in not requiring baptism for the remission of sins, and also holding the Lord's Supper as a common meal for the public as well as for the members.

IT is to be hoped that Satan may never entice any of our ministers into the nonsense carried on in the name of religion in some of the popular churches. We clip the following from the Religious Herald, and we, too, think that such conduct is a disgrace to the Christian church:

"On the front of the Methodist church in Bristol there recently appeared the announcement that Rev. Mr.——, 'tornado evangelist,' would conduct revival services in that church. A tornado generally tears up, but does not build up. The evangelist announces that he will speak to men on a certain evening, and tell the young men how 'to see the elephant and buck the tiger.' Now we submit that all such services are a disgrace to the Christian church, and tend to debauch the intelligent Christian sentiment of any community. There is a true and a false sensationalism. The Gospel of Christ, faithfully, plainly and earnestly preached, is calculated to produce a true sensation in the minds of men. But 'tornado evangelists' are sensationalists of the wort kind and aninjury to any church."

TALMAGE'S new Tabernacle in Brooklyn was dedicated a few weeks ago, with a mortgage of $225,000 resting on it. In the wall, just to the right of where the pastor stands, are four remarkable stones protruding from the wall. One was brought from Golgotha, two from Mt. Sinai, and one from Mars Hill. If these stones could speak out, as did the holy men who may have rested upon them, what a denunciation of pride and extravagance the great audience in the costly Brooklyn Tabernacle would hear!

FOUR ministers, driving through the country, found it convenient to lodge with one of their well-to-do church members, one night. They were well cared for, and kindly entertained. The next morning they went on their way, feeling thankful for the Christian hospitality they had enjoyed, but each one with a guilty conscience. The brother, it seems, was not in the habit of having family worship, therefore did not invite the ministers to hold a season of prayer, either in the morning or in the evening. And not one of these ministers could muster courage enough to propose family worship, and thus do their duty and set a good example for that family. May the Good Lord help these preachers never to do that way any more!

WE had a very pleasant call by Rev. E. G. Smith, of Princeton, Ill., District Superintendent of the American Bible Society for Illinois. He reports that the Society is now endeavoring to place a copy of the Scriptures in the hands of every child,—able to read,—who has no Bible of its own. This is certainly a commendable step, and one that will result in much good to the rising generation. There is no question but that the American Bible Society has done a grand work in publishing and distributing the Holy Scriptures in nearly all lands where the people use a written language. They have translated the Bible into more than one hundred different languages, have distributed millions of copies among the poor, and have brought good, well-bound volumes within the reach of every person in anything like ordinary circumstances. As these Bibles are without note or comment, the work is certainly to be commended, for it is the placing of the pure Word of God in the hands of the people, thus enabling every man to read and understand it for himself.

FROM the Minutes of the District Meeting of Middle Indiana, we glean several items of special interest. There are, at the present time, seventeen inmates in the Old Folks' Home at Mexico. The amount received during the last year, for the support of this Home, was $1,482.16. Expended $1,357.79, leaving on hand a balance of $124.37. This report shows a cost of less than $100.00 a year for the care of each inmate. But, as the average number of inmates in the Home for the year has been about twelve, it will be safe to place the cost of each one at a little more than $100.00. The tendency of this report will be to encourage those who are interested in similar homes for the aged poor in other localities. It should, however, be borne in mind, that this Home has no farm connected with it. It is run and sustained on the endowment plan. The amount raised for home mission work was $245.68; expended, $181.40; for General and Foreign Missions $71.03, and the Minutes say that over one-third of this was raised by the Ogan's Creek congregation. This speaks well for that little congregation.

OUR NAME.

QUERIES concerning our church name are coming up to the Annual Meeting from several States. There are grounds for more or less dissatisfaction on this point. The Founder of the Christian religion, concerning his followers, once said, "Ye are brethren." Matt. 23: 8. Years afterwards they were first called Christians at Antioch. Acts 11: 26. But it is likely that they always spoke of each other as brethren, for that is what they were. It seems that when our people, in Germany, decided to re-establish the apostolic form of worship, they also adopted the name Brethren, and were known by that name for many years. After settling in America, and on account of being from Germany, they became known as German Baptists. Respecting the origin of the reformatory movement, the name fits the people. But it is not by the origin of our movement that we prefer to be known. We are brethren in Christ, claiming that we are carrying out the apostolic order in our faith and practice, and it is altogether proper that we retain the name approved by Christ, endorsed by the apostles, and accepted by our ancient Brethren. The name has remained sacred with us for nearly two hundred years, is thoroughly imbedded in our church literature and engraven on the inner chambers of our hearts. It will be virtually impossible to get rid of it even if we wanted to. Very few of our people ever use the term German Baptist only parenthetically. Among each other we always use the endearing appellation "Brethren," and we are decidedly in favor of emphasizing this custom. It is probable that the public will always know us as Dunkards,—a name that is now becoming quite common.

Any one who will take the time to examine our legal documents, will be amazed at the confusion existing among deeds, endowment notes, bequests, incorporation papers, etc., etc. They will find "German Baptist," "German Baptist Brethren," "German Baptist or Brethren," "Brethren (or German Baptist)," "Brethren (German Baptist)," "Brethren," "Brethren or Dunkards," "Brethren or Tunkers," "Dunkards," "Tunkers," "Dunkard Brethren," "Tunker Brethren."

Ever since the Annual Meeting, a few years ago, decided in favor of "German Baptist Brethren," there has been more or less confusion in regard to the name used in legal documents. We again repeat, that there are grounds for further consideration of the question, and it is believed that our past experience, and the public sentiment of the Brotherhood will enable the coming Conference to act on the question to better advantage than in former years. J. H. M.

WHO ARE THE POOR?

IT is our duty to do good unto the poor—feed the hungry and clothe the naked. But who are the poor? This may be no easy question to decide, but let us consider it a mement.

The man who has no food, and no way of obtaining it is certainly poor, and is deserving of sympathy. But the man who is able to work, and can get all the work he can do at living wages, is certainly no object of special charity, though it may be our duty to aid him in a manner that will prove beneficial to him in both the present and the future. There is a class of persons able to earn a good living, and yet they choose to spend their time in idleness, depending on the charities of a generous public for a living. While we would not like to refuse bread to this class of hungry persons, yet we doubt it being a special duty. Begging is their sole occupation, and it is their manner of making a living, yet a dishonorable manner it is. We much prefer to give that class of persons work to do in order that they may earn their bread by the sweat of the brow. If they are able to work, and yet are unwilling to do so, they are certainly not entitled to any further help. This manner of aiding them is for their own good. We place the food within their reach, and they should be required to make an effort to get it. Even the birds of the air, which God feeds, must make an effort to gather their food, and so should the able-bodied class of the human race.

All healthy people who come into this world, owe this world a consideration for what they are permitted to enjoy. If they spend a life of absolute idleness, they die in debt to the world. True, the world may owe them a living, but God never intended that these men should not render to the world some equivalent for their support. Just how to handle this class, who come to our doors begging for bread, is a difficult problem to solve. We have never had the heart to decline when we had the food on hand, thinking that it was safer to err on the side of mercy than to turn a deserving poor man away hungry. But we, nevertheless are of the impression that it will be better to give them some work to do, knowing that the strong who do not work ought not to eat, so says the inspired Paul.

In London there is a society of beggars, with a regularly organized system. They have accumulated considerable property, and some of them are in good circumstances. In this country we have thousands who make their living by begging from house to house, and some of them carry considerable money. Most of them enjoy good health, and are able to labor. These facts being known to the public, has given rise to a strong prejudice against what is known as beggars, and for that reason many a deserving poor is turned away hungry.

We should exercise our very best judgment in singling out the deserving poor, and do them all the good that Christian charity entitles them to, but the professional beggar should be discouraged on every hand, not alone for his good, but for the good of the public, whose feelings for the poor are already too much blunted by the deceptions of those who are receiving undeserved assistance.

But, again, who are the poor? The man who is able to work, and can get plenty of work at living wages, is not poor.

The man who, though weak physically, has a well-stored or trained mind for mental work, and can get that class of work to do at living wages, is also not poor.

The family, when the members of the family are able to work, and can get employment at living wages, is not poor.

In short any person, and every person who is able and can make a living, should not be considered poor. As long as they can clothe, feed and shelter themselves within reason, there is no cause to consider them poor. They may be unfortunate,—not as well off as others,—yet they are not the objects of special charity. Still it may be our duty, and certainly it is our privilege, to lend such persons a helping hand, that their condition may be improved. But while we lend them a helping hand, we should not place on their shoulders a greater burden of debt than they had before, unless it is clear that they will be benefited by the additional burden. PREACH THE WORD.—2 Tim. 2: 4.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

THE epistolary writings of the New Testament riptures abound with exhortations, warnings, d reminders of duty to the disciples of the Lord sus, so that the man of God might be thorough- furnished unto every "good work." The Sav- r himself, while here among men, called to his mediate aid in the propagation of his everlast- g Gospel, the twelve apostles, and after his de- rture, in due course of time, others were enlist- into the Master's service who labored with the ility which God gave them to perpetuate the ospel, or "good news," which the angels herald- l to the shepherds of Judea, "good will to men, eace on earth." Luke 2: 14. "For after that the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew ot God, it pleased God by the foolishness of reaching to save them that believe." 1 Cor. 1: 1.

"By the foolishness of preaching" the children f men are brought to a knowledge of God and a aving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. hose that believe "must believe that he is, and hat he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek im," Heb. 11: 6. If we believe that there is a God, we must believe his Word, we must believe n the Son of God who came to earth not to do is own will but the will of his Father that sent im, and believing, we must have faith, a strong biding faith in the precepts and examples of Je- us our Savior. We must believe that the apos- les were inspired men, and that their writings are ea and amen to the believer in Christ.

Christ himself told his disciples that "whosoev- r heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, will liken him unto a wise man." Matt. 7: 24. While he was instructing his disciples in the way of righteousness, he gave them precepts and ex- mples of public duties, and, also, private or indi- vidual duties. While preaching to them and tell- ng them of spiritual things, he did not neglect to give examples of temporal things. While the multitude was held, as if by magic, by the things which he taught them concerning heaven and eternal interests, their physical natures wearied and became hungry for the things that were nec- essary to maintain their physical existence, and the disciples would suggest to their Divine Mas- ter that he "send them away to the cities and vil- lages that they might buy themselves something to eat." But his infinite love, sympathy and pow- er said, "Nay, but make them to sit down upon the grass in companies." While to the eyes of mortal man their supply of provisions seemed en- tirely too small, yet his blessing, pronounced upon their bread and fishes, enabled them to feed the entire multitude. While these circumstances of the feeding of the thousands might be considered as only a manifestation of his miraculous power, it also conveys to our minds the demonstration of a sublime and remarkable degree of hospitality. "Preach the Word," is the command of the apos- tle Paul to his co-laborer Timothy, and in another place he also says, "Study to show thyself ap- proved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth." 2 Tim. 2: 15.

It is not preaching the Word, or in other words the whole Truth, if we fail to preach, and teach the people in regard to private duties, or hospital- ity and benevolence. When a man is called of God, and set apart by the Holy Spirit, to preach the everlasting Gospel of Christ, he is in a re- markable degree the servant of God, and has tak- en a responsible and momentous vow upon him- self. It should be regarded by the church as her indispensable duty to see that he be properly ed- ucated to make "full proof of his ministry." Too often he is left to his own resources, and as a re- sult too many fail to be approved workers.

It requires no great amount of learning, from a worldly point of view, to read the Bible; but when it comes to preaching the whole Gospel so as to make it effectual, a minister must be "thoroughly furnished." And if our ministers are not so cir- cumstanced in life that they can make the neces- sary preparations for the work, it is the duty of the church, those who say to him, "Preach the Word," to enable him to become an efficient work- er in the Master's vineyard. A neglect of the church to perform her duty in this respect has, in time past, caused the shipwreck of some who, oth- erwise, might have proved themselves workmen approved unto God, and also caused shame and confusion in the church.

CARVED FROM WOOD.

A Wonderful Representation of the Passion of the Savior.

HERMANN JACOBS, a carpenter of Bunzlau, Prus- sia, has been credited with constructing a wonder- ful piece of mechanism representing, in several successive scenes, the passion of our Savior. All the actors in the grand but beautiful drama are carved from wood, and are each about six inches in height. The machinery runs by clock-work, and enacts the various parts three times in each winding. The panorama first unfolded is a beau- tiful garden, with a figure of Jesus kneeling in prayer under one of the trees, figures of the three sleeping apostles being plainly discernible in the distance. As the machinery warms up, the wheels and the figures move more rapidly, quickly un- folding the last scenes in the earthly career of Je- sus. The last supper, the betrayal, the remorse- ful look which comes over the face of Judas when he first realizes the extent of his crime, the exam- ination of Jesus before Caiaphas, the dialogue be- tween Pilate and the Jews,—all flit before the gaze in a manner so astonishingly life-like and real as to make one almost believe himself at Cal- vary. After the sentence has been pronounced, a figure of Jesus, with the cross, appears. The cross is mechanically erected, while the little figures busy themselves binding the figure to be nailed upon it. Ladders are run up to the arms of the cross, a little figure quietly slips over the rungs, then there is a sound of hammers as two figures hold the one that is being nailed to the cross by the figures on the ladders. At last when all is thought to be finished, a figure on horseback slides across the platform, draws his sword and thrusts it into the side of the figure on the cross. The last scene shows Jesus in the sepulchre with angels guarding the remains.

Mr. Adams, in his "Letters on Silesia," says: "It is the most remarkable piece of mechanism I have ever seen. The traitor's kiss, the scourging, the nailing to the cross, the sponge of vinegar and every seeming pain inflicted, occasion feelings which can not be felt at mere description."—St. Louis Republic.

Notes by the Way.

I CAME home from the Hurricane Creek church, Bond Co., Ill., Monday, April 20. This church is fast recovering from a hard struggle with the Old Order element, but, thank God, a brighter day is dawning. The clouds seem to be passing away. The writer spent nearly two weeks with the above church last November, but had to go home on ac- count of sickness. There being quite a strong de- sire for me to return to them, I consented to spend one week with them. During the eight meetings with them, five made the good confession and oth- ers are counting the cost. Oh, may they decide for Jesus!

The above church is under the fatherly care of Eld. Henry Lilligh, who resides in the Mulberry Grove church, Bond Co., Ill. Brethren who labor in word and doctrine, passing through Smithboro, Bond Co., Ill., over the Vandalia or J. S. E. R. R., should notify Cornelius Kessler, of the above sta- tion. He will meet them at the station, and make all needed arrangements. MICHAEL FLORY.

BRO. BOWSER preached his first sermon for us at Mt. Horeb, on the second Sunday of this month. It pleased the Lord to restore unto them their dear little Ethel, who, while suffering from pneumonia, was so near death's door. For this we, with them, feel quite thankful. They left us to-day for their new home, being delayed five weeks and two days on account of sickness. They have a nice home rented for this summer and we trust they will be pleased. May they meet with the proper encouragement in the good work, for they have made a great sacrifice to come here and help us in the good work. May the Lord prosper them in their great undertaking!

Our prayer-meeting, owing to bad weather and sickness had been temporarily suspended, but now we are having nice weather again and all have improved. We expect to begin a teachers' meet- ing this week, on Thursday evening.

We organized our Sunday-school, recently, with twenty-two scholars. Since then more have joined and others expect to fall in line soon. Of- ficers were elected as follows: Bro. David Myers, Superintendent; Bro. Wilson Denlinger, Assistant Superintendent. They are assisted by an able corps of officers and teachers. All seem to take a great interest in the school and we trust that it may continue. Next Saturday evening we expect ganize a singing school to be taught by Bro. nger. Singing is a part of the worship of It carries our minds over yonder where all surround the great throne of God and vith the heavenly hosts, in singing the joyful s which shall never die. Oh may we live so join that holy band! When we meditate on things, our minds are wafted far away and el that we are almost in the state of bliss.

It is said that nearly one hundred per cent of the churches to-day are the children of Christian parents or had Christian influences of either father or mother.

How often comes the thought, "Am I, by precept and example, teaching mine and other children as I should, or do I, in some unguarded moment, speak or do some things, that may, some day, cause an aching heart and tears of sorrow? Oh how solemn! May God grant his people grace that their influence, at all times, may be for the right!

IN GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 16, Bro. Brumbaugh, speaking of the South-land booms, called to my mind what I heard the presiding elder of the M. E. church say, a short time ago,—that seventy-five per cent of the people in Texas to-day came here for the purpose of bettering their condition financially (and the same may be said of many places) and by their actions it could be seen that that was their only object. Said he, "It has been noted that in a majority of cases when a man settled in a neighborhood and worked and used every means to get rich, that probably in six, twelve or eighteen months it would be found out that he was a Methodist,—that he had come to Texas with his church letter in his pocket, and set about to make a fortune at all hazards."

In a measure, the same has been experienced by other churches. We hope it may never be truthfully said of the Brethren.

We have had some inquiries of late about Texas. We always try to answer all as best we can in our judgment, but would say to all, "Come and see for yourselves, before moving." Brethren, come and possess this fair land, not only to make money, to lay up treasures upon earth,—but to lay up treasures in heaven by working in the vineyard of the Lord. The laborers are few.

In the Census report we see that there were ninety-five members here when it was taken, while some States are not represented at all. The question comes to us, "Are we doing what we can in the way of spreading the Gospel? As the Texas members have been formed into a separate State District by the last District Meeting of Southern Kansas, we hope it will give a stimulus to immigration and the work in general.

IN MESSENGER No. 16, Bro. J. L. Switzer seems to favor strongly the plan of permanently locating Annual Meeting, and thinks there is not a single advantage in moving it about from place to place. I see a great advantage in the present plan. Were we to permanently locate the meeting at one place, it would deprive thousands of poor brethren and sisters from attending those grand reunions, as the meeting would be entirely out of their reach. Had we any assurance that the money, thus saved, would go into the Lord's treasury, well and good. But will it be so, as in a measure those, who help to support Annual Meeting, also contribute a good part for the mission work? A. J. WINE.

Nocona, Tex, April 24.

From the Pleasant Valley Church, Ohio.

IN MESSENGER No. 16 sister Esta Simmons gave notice of the council-meeting which occurred in the Union City church, April 4, when it was unanimously decided to divide the territory of said church and organize a new church in the Northern part. April 22 the adjoining elders and others met with the Brethren at the Pleasant Valley house, to complete the organization. Elders present were Jeremiah Katherman, Tobias Kreider, Joseph Groff and W. K. Simmons. Quite an amount of business came before the meeting but all was disposed of satisfactorily. A clerk for the church and also trustees were elected. The new congregation will be known as the Pleasant Valley church. Our love-feast will occur Sept. 18, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M. Arrangements were also made for quarterly councils. Bro. A. C. Young was elected Sunday-school Superintendent and Bro. B. F. Sharp, Assistant. Delegates to District Meeting are brethren A. C. Young and the writer; the latter will also represent the church at Annual Meeting. It was also decided to elect a minister and two deacons. Bro. B. F. Sharp was elected to the ministry while brethren David Minnich and Daniel Clark were chosen to the office of deacon. Bro. A. C. Young was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. These are all young brethren of promise and they, with their wives, were installed with great solemnity. I hope and pray that they will fill their callings with honor to God and to the prosperity of the church. Eld. W. K. Simmons has the care of the church. This congregation covers a territory of about one-hundred and ninety square miles. We have at present about eighty-five members,—two ministers in the second degree, one in the first degree and four deacons. Here is a great opportunity for missionary work at home. We kindly invite ministers to visit us and help us to build up the cause of Christ. SILAS GILBERT.

From Loraine, Ill.

THE Brethren have organized a Sunday-school at our chapel in Loraine. Bro. Henry Pittman is our Superintendent, Bro. B. F. Britt, Assistant. So far we have had a large attendance.

Bro. B. H. Strickler has also organized a Sunday-school at our school-house. We think both will be a success.

Our church is still moving onward. Yesterday we baptized one more precious soul. The prospects are good for others to come soon.

I have just recovered from a severe attack of La Grippe, which confined me to the house and my bed for five weeks. I am now able to be out again and attend to ministerial work, to some extent, at least. I expect to start to Missouri, May 1, to do some work for the Missionary Board of the Northern District of Missouri. May the Lord bless his people! H. W. STRICKLER.

Notes of Travel.

After enjoying our own District Meeting March 24, we thought it good to be at the District Meeting of the North-Eastern District in Brown County which we also enjoyed very much. The paper that passed through our District Meeting, relative to the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home project, also passed through that Meeting. From there we went to Beatrice, Nebr., where we spent nearly one week, giving a few brief talks on church government, with as good interest as could be expected, considering the condition of the roads.

We also spent two nights with our son, L. H., in Lincoln, where we enjoyed a council-meeting with some of the members of that congregation. Their elder, B. F. Flory, was also present. Most of the business was in relation to the Mission Work now inaugurated at that place. So far it is only as a grain of mustard seed, and it will take a great deal of long, patient, zealous, and careful nursing and watering before it becomes to be a large tree. The start is a good one, and I think the foundation is well laid, but I fear it will need more help and encouragement than the local church or even the District of Nebraska is able to give, to make it a success. We hope it will get it; if not, stop the work now.

From Lincoln I went to Norton County, Kans., to the District Meeting of North-western Kansas. Here we also felt it was good to be, and when the paper, above alluded to, was read and explained, it also passed unanimously, thus showing a union of sentiment to encourage the work through the entire State; and we fondly hope that the different Districts will continue to encourage the raising of the means yet necessary to complete and carry on the work, by helping the solicitors who may be appointed by the Trustees, and who expect to meet here, in the Pleasant View church, May 4, to organize and permanently locate the site; then make any measures necessary to put into active operation the good work so nobly and encouragingly begun. After that further notice will be given.

The Trustees' names of the respective Districts are as follows: A. F. Miller, Booth, for the South-western District; I. B. Wolf, for the South-eastern District; M. Metzger for the North-eastern District; S. L. Myers for the North-western District.

These four are to choose the fifth. We hope and pray that the blessings of God may rest upon the work! ENOCH EBY.

A Few Days' Outing.

APRIL 24, Bro. D. L. Miller said, "Go to Indiana for a few days with us." Hurriedly saying, "Good-bye" to wife and business (for I always leave business at home when I go away), we were soon speeding our way eastward. I stopped at Nappanee, Ind., while our brother continued his journey to Goshen, where he was booked for his course of Bible Talks. At Nappanee I remained over Sunday, and much enjoyed the season of worship, Saturday evening, and Sunday morning and evening. If the churches whose spirituality, life and light, seem to be running low, could spend a short time with the Nappanee church, and see their prosperous and interesting Sunday-school, their earnest prayer-meeting, and share the general good feeling, I am sure they would gather new life.

At this place is the home of our evangelist, Bro. J. C. Murray, and wife. Through their earnest devotion new life has been infused into the church. When they have such dear ones as the Mellingers, the Millers, and many others whom we could name, to hold up their hands, what can stand in the way of the onward move of right against wrong? It is here that Dr. Geo. L. Shoemaker and wife are located. We miss them sadly in our Chicago work, and can only say this: "Chicago's loss is Nappanee's gain."

After our few days' rest here, Bro. Murray and I were taken across the country to meet our brother at Goshen. I would like to say something about the beauties of Northern Indiana, and especially at this season of the year, when all nature seems alive and earth is putting on her carpet of green, but, as I am no landscape painter, I must desist.

We were much encouraged at Goshen to see the large and spacious house filled to overflowing with earnest hearers, who left field and plow, and traveled for miles to hear of the Bible and Bible Lands. There seems to be a hungering and thirsting for more of God's Book,—more of the Truth as found in God's Book. This we are glad to see, especially since we can place beside it the precious promise, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

We are gratified to see the manifest interest taken in God's Word, and say not only to the church at Goshen, but to the churches everywhere, "Awake! Awake!"

April 29 found me home again, after a most enjoyable short vacation and, we trust, some spiritual growth. W. R. MILLER.

Wolf Creek Items.

OUR church meeting April 24, was very pleasant. Eld. Jacob Garber was chosen to represent our church at Annual Meeting and brethren George Erbaugh and Samuel Horning, delegates to District Meeting.

The District Meeting of Southern Ohio was held in the Wolf Creek church April 28. It was largely attended and characterized by brotherly kindness and harmonious action. Eld. A. Hutchison, of Missouri, was present and assisted us with his council.

The Meeting was organized by electing Eld. J. Smith, Moderator; Eld. J. Stutzman, Reading Clerk; and Eld. I. J. Rosenberger, Writing Clerk.

The Missionary subject was first before the Meeting. Eld. J. Horning reported the monetary status of the Mission Work. Nearly $200 was expended for missionary work in Southern Ohio, with a balance of $165 on hand. The visible results were not marked.

Three Queries were sent to Annual Meeting, one protesting against the revision of our Hymn Book, one against the agitation of our church name, and one desiring a uniformity of practice in receiving fallen members, and recommending that the members should go to the ones to be restored and receive them.

The Meeting decided to hold an annual ministerial meeting and brethren Frantz, Crosswhite, Trout, Filbrum, and Simmons were appointed to arrange for the first meeting. Two queries, asking for an Old Folks' Home, were deferred.

The Meeting discouraged the practice of members occupying a neutral position in voting on church matters, and assisting other denominations in opening and conducting their Sunday-schools. It decided that it was inconsistent to install brethren into office who use tobacco, in view of the decisions of Annual Meeting. It condemned, in strong terms, improper exhibitions at our schools, and joining "Law and Order Leagues." The missionary subject was encouraged by a query. Other queries were lost or tabled. Eld. J. Smith was chosen to represent our District at Annual Meeting, with elders J. Stutzman and T. Kreider as alternates.

The next Meeting will be held in Lexington church, Highland Co., Ohio, the third Tuesday before Pentecost. JNO. CALVIN BRIGHT.

New Lebanon, Ohio.

An Interesting Meeting.

THE delegates from the different churches of the Middle District of Missouri, convened with the brethren and sisters of the Mound church April 28, at 9 A. M., for ministerial meeting. Good admonitions were given on the best plan to open and close regular appointments for public worship, and the best way to introduce the good work in a new place. Methods for missionary work and various other topics of interest were honorably and pleasantly disposed of. In the evening about sixty-five members surrounded the Lord's table and united in Communion services to the strengthening of saints, and, we trust, to the aid of tearing down the stronghold of Satan. Brethren S. Click, D. Bowman, M. T. Baer and A. Reese did the preaching. Bro. D. Bowman officiated.

The next morning the meeting assembled at 8 A. M., and organized for the work of District Meeting by electing Bro. F. Culp, Moderator; Bro. A. Reese, Writing Clerk, J. W. Brooks, Assistant; and J. Witmore, Reading Clerk.

Queries were handed in and disposed of in a Christian manner, by either giving an answer, or sending up to Annual Meeting.

The missionary workers gave in their reports, which were accepted, and the same brethren continued in their fields of labor.

Bro. J. Witmore is our delegate to Annual Meeting. The next meeting is to be held in the Warrensburgh church on the second Thursday in February, 1892. The work was completed during the day and evening sessions.

The work could not have been done in a more Christian spirit than it was, and, we trust, may prove to be for the good of the cause. Brethren Culp and Hougendougler remained until Saturday, and Bro. Hougendougler gave us an interesting sermon on Friday night, from Rom. 1: 16.

There are about forty-three members here, in the Mound church. All are in love and union, and alive in the work of their Heavenly Master. We meet on the first and third Sundays of each month for preaching, every Sunday at 10 A. M. for Sunday-school, and each Sunday night for singing. Remember us at a throne of grace, that we may ever be faithful! A. J. SMITH.

District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania.

THE District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania was held April 22 and 23, in the Big Swatara church. The queries presented were disposed of for the greatest good of the churches. As is generally the case there was a diversity of sentiment on some of the business presented, but explanations, and some warm discussions in a Christian spirit, caused nearly everything to be decided unanimously. If memory serves me correctly, there was but a single negative vote. To do so, requires considerable moral courage, as the writer can testify from past experience. Sometimes a single negative proved to be the only one right.

The Mission cause received much attention. Very few objections are raised to the way the work is carried on. Such a course is not always the best. A critical investigation will keep things in a healthier condition. For my own part I have often wished and prayed that I might more deeply feel the responsibility of the work. All the brethren and sisters should remember the cause at the Throne of Grace. Pray for your servants that they may go forth with power from on high, in true humility of heart, and in the belief that they have many brethren and sisters as vouchers, for the work they do in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Several queries were presented in reference to German hymn books. One was intended for Annual Meeting, and one asked for a new edition of the Lancaster Hymn Book. After much discussion the following passed the meeting unanimously:

The District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania to Annual Meeting, greeting:

Inasmuch as several queries were presented to this District Meeting in reference to German hymn books;

Therefore this District earnestly petitions Annual Meeting to appoint a committee of three to compile a German hymn book;

And we further petition Annual Meeting to select two of said committee from the German churches of Pennsylvania, and we also ask that said committee shall have special respect to the Brethren's and the Lancaster Hymn Books, when making selections.

Bro. J. G. Royer was present at the meeting. He preached a sermon in the evening of the 22nd, on church government. This District has a rule that one can not be elected to serve in the same office twice in succession. Another rule is that the outgoing Moderator shall preach on church government. This year the outgoing Moderator, — Bro. C. Bucher, — preached his sermon mostly proxy. Bro. Royer spoke in such a manner at a fool could not have misunderstood him. Bro. F. P. Cassel was re-elected on the Mission oard, and Bro. J. H. Price elected for the first ar. This is the best, and about the only way, get our ministers to work in the mission field. hen one is on our Mission Board once, it does t amount to much any more when he says, "I n not," or "I will not." Our mission work is st the kind very few want to do, unless they are shed to do it. It is onerous work in new fields d in run-down churches, and being away from e home church so much, the feeling of the home embers is apt to grow cold towards him, and at in his mission field is not always the warmest. Elder Wm. Hertzler was elected to represent is District on the Standing Committee. May od qualify him to prove a faithful steward! Bro. John Herr has been elected District Treas-er of the Mission funds. Those who omitted to nd in their quotas last year, and all others, ould remember the new treasurer. His address Myerstown, Lebanon Co., Pa. Our next year's strict Meeting will be with our brethren in stern Maryland, in the Ridgely church. Bro. Y. King,—the Corresponding Secretary,—is lo-ed at Ridgely, Caroline Co., Md.

After the work was all done, we parted with the pe to meet again where partings are known no ore. Bro. Wm. Hertzler was Moderator of the eeting; F. P. Cassel, Reading Clerk, and Geo. ucher, Writing Clerk. GEO. BUCHER.

You are hereby requested to report, to the Clerk next Annual Meeting, the number of Minutes oth German and English) needed in your re-ective Districts to supply the churches, as di-cted by Annual Meeting. Do not fail to give e name and address of the brother to whom the inutes are to be sent.

The request of Annual Meeting, for each family the Brotherhood to be supplied with a copy of e Minutes is meeting with favor, and the Clerks the State Districts should remember that it is eir duty to attend to their part of the work omptly, thus enabling the Clerk of Annual eeting to put the Minutes into the families as rly as possible.

J. G. ROYER,
Clerk of Annual Meeting, 1890.

Special Notice to the Board of Visitors to the Different Schools.

WOULD it not be a good idea for all that are present at our next Conference, at Hagerstown, Md., to confer with one another, relative to our duties and the best manner of procedure, so as to make our work as uniform as practicable. If none, or not too many of them, are on the Standing Committee, we could meet on Friday, Saturday or Monday before the general business commences. I merely suggest the thought for consideration, not by any authority. If all can be there, so much the better. ENOCH EBY.

Notice to the Churches of North-eastern Kansas.

As many are wondering, and some severely censuring me in regard to the delay of the Minutes of our District Meeting and Ministerial Meeting, I offer the following by way of explanation: The meeting was held April 1, and April 4 the copy was sent to the printer, with the request that he get them out as soon as possible. Since then I have written to him twice, urging the matter, but as yet (April 29) I have not received the Minutes.

From the Silver Creek Church, Williams Co., Ohio.

THE brethren and sisters of the Silver Creek church met April 26 and organized their Sunday-scool by electing Bro. Noah Long, Superintendent, and the writer, Assistant. They are assisted by an able corps of officers. We were very much encouraged by seeing so many present, and look forward to a successful year's work. The entire church seems to be in sympathy with the good work, but it seems that some think the Sunday-school is for the children, and that it does not matter whether they are regular in attendance or not. This is a great mistake; if the Sunday-school is for the benefit of the young, there is great necessity for the older ones to be there and help teach those children, and also help carry on the good work. Who knows better how to teach the children than those brethren and sisters who have children under their care? May we all remember that we are here to represent the body of Christ, hence we should conduct ourselves so as to be bright and shining lights to those around us, especially should the teachers in our Sunday-schools be zealous workers in the Lord's vineyard, for the children will, to a great extent, pattern after their teacher. May we have a burning zeal for the cause of Christ and put forth every effort to enlarge the borders of Zion every-where, is our prayer. J. W. KEISER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

ONE ADDED TO THE FOLD. April 26, the eastern part of the Belleville church, Kans., met at the water-side, where baptism was administered to one dear soul. One was also added by letter.—Wm. Lugenbeel.

TWO SOULS ADDED. April 26 we had the pleasure of receiving two dear souls into the fold of Christ. May they be shining lights in the vineyard of the Lord! The Lord willing, we expect to be fully organized, into a working congregation, by May 9. We shall give particulars in the near future. M. M. Ennis, Marlow, Ind. Ter., April 27.

NOTICE.—In the Minutes of the Southern District of Illinois, Art. 13, is the following: "It shall be the duty of each presiding elder to see that some one in his charge shall report to the District Clerk immediately preceding each Annual Meeting, the number of families in his charge." Please see that this is complied with.—G. W. Gibson, Sec. of District, Girard, Ill.

FIVE ACCESSIONS. — The Hurricane Creek church had a season of rejoicing quite recently. Bro. Michael Flory came to us April 11, and commenced meetings on the 12. During the week we had night meetings. On Sunday, April 18, at the close of the regular services, five dear souls were received into the church by baptism. All are grown-up people, four of them are heads of families. — Cornelius Kessler, Smithborough, Ill., April 25.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED. The members of the Chippewa Creek church, Mich., met in council April 4, and transacted all business before the meeting in a Christian spirit. April 19, we organized our Sunday-school. Bro. George Stoddard was elected Superintendent, and the writer, Assistant. We have decided to use the Brethren's Quarterly and Young Disciple, and hope, that, under the blessings of God, we may have an interesting school. J. Tombaugh.

FROM OREGON. Wife and I left our home at Sodaville yesterday, on our way eastward. We arrived at Brooks this morning, and intend going to Portland this afternoon to take the train for the East. We expect to stop off at Watson, Mo., for, perhaps, two weeks, then proceed by way of Kansas City, St. Louis and Knoxville, Tenn., hoping to arrive at Annual Meeting by May 28. My address will be Bashor's Mills, Tenn., until further notice. M. M. Bashor, April 28.

PLEASANT COUNCIL.—The Covington church, Miami Co., Ohio, met in quarterly council to-day. Our annual church visit was paid previous to the council, and though there was considerable business before the meeting, all was disposed of in a pleasant manner. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; brethren J. M. Neff and Geo. Mohler to District Meeting of Southern Ohio. Our Communion is appointed for June 11, at 2 P. M., at the Sugar Grove house, three miles south of Covington. Ministers will please stop with us on their return from Annual Meeting. Our elder, Samuel Mohler, now confined to his bed with a broken limb,—is doing as well as can be expected, considering his age.—A. S. Neher, April 25.

MINISTERIAL AID DESIRED.—Bro. R. A. Patterson, of Pueblo, Colo., would like to have the Brethren stop off and preach some at that place. There are a few members living at Pueblo, and any one, wishing to stop, will please notify Bro. Patterson as above, and he will meet them at the depot.

RELIEF FOR THE NEEDY.—I have received this winter and spring, to be distributed among the needy of this country, $85 from the Kingsly church and friends, Woodbury County, Iowa; also $17.25, a package of garden seeds, and small bundle of merchandise from the Brethren and friends of the Fairview church, Appanoose Co., Iowa. The above donations have been distributed, and many good wishes have been expressed for the donors. May the Lord bless them abundantly, both temporally and spiritually, for it truly is "more blessed to give than to receive." Lomax Miller, Beaver City, Nebr., April 24.

DEACONS ELECTED.—The Warrensburg church, Mo., met in quarterly council March 5. All business was transacted in love. Brethren D. M. Mohler and Levi Mohler were elected as delegates to District Meeting. Bro. J. M. Mohler is our delegate to Annual Meeting. April 23 the church had a special council-meeting to hold an election for two deacons, which resulted in the choice of brethren W. A. Weaver and John E. Mohler,—a son of S. S. Mohler. Brethren John W. Brooks and D. M. Eller were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. May they be useful to the church, and a light to those around them.—John Bowman.

He was the eldest of a family of twenty-one children; he was the father of nine children, six having preceded him to the spirit world, awaiting his arrival there. His wife and three children survive. He was a kind father, an affectionate husband, a good neighbor, and a zealous worker in the church. He united with the Brethren church about fifty years ago, and in 1849 was elected a deacon, in which capacity he served nearly forty-two years. Though far advanced in years, the church feels that one of her pioneers has gone from labor to rest. He was desirous of complying with all the demands of the Gospel. About a month ago he called for the elders and was anointed according to the instruction of the apostle James, which gave him great peace and happiness.

When the summons came he was ready and fell asleep without a struggle. His funeral services were conducted by the home ministers (by his request) from Rev. 14: 13 to a large audience. J. B. BRUMBAUGH.

SAMPSON.—In Hutchinson, Kans., in the Pleasant View church, April 12, 1891, of heart trouble, Bro. Geo. Sampson (a deacon), aged about 63 years.

Funeral services by the Brethren at the Pleasant View cemetery from Philpp. 1: 21. Psalm 90 was also read. ENOCH EBY.

LANE. — In the Ten Mile congregation, Washington Co., Ia., April 10, 1891, of cancer of the stomach, sister Annie Lane widow of Bro. Daniel Lane, aged 76 years, 11 months and 22 days.

Sister Lane was a faithful and consistent member of the Brethren church of this place. Her sufferings, during the last week of her stay on this earth, were great, but she bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude and strong faith in a Redeemer's saving blood. She expressed a willingness and desire to die,—being conscious to the last. She said, "I want to go home and be at rest." Two sons and one daughter survive her to mourn their loss, which, we hope, is her eternal gain. Funeral services conducted at her late home by the writer from Isa. 40: 6, to a large circle of sympathizing friends and neighbors.
N. B. CHRISTNER.

WHEELER.—In the Ten Mile congregation, Washington Co., Pa., April 17, 1891, sister Catherine Wheeler, wife of James Wheeler, aged 62 years, 1 month and 11 days.

Her death was caused by a severe cold together with La Grippe. Her sufferings were great. May those of her household who mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate mother, take warning and seek an interest in Christ's offers of salvation Funeral services in the Pigeon Creek church by the writer, from the words, "Set thine house in order for thou shalt die and not live." Isa. 38: 1.
N. B. CHRISTNER.

PETRY.—At Pueblo, Colo., March 28, 1891, of whooping-cough and measles, Earl, infant son of W. H. and Lydia Petry, aged 2 years. LIZZIE PATTERN.

THE SEVEN QUESTIONS.

The Friends, like our own church and some others, hold their Annual Meetings, but in character they differ very much from ours, especially in attending to church business, and this part of it strikes us as being a commendable feature which, it seems to us, we might adopt with profit.

They have seven questions which are supposed to cover all the duties of the membership. These are presented to all the members at their Quarterly Meetings, and from these, delegates are sent to Annual Meetings, where they report as to how these questions are answered. In what way they proceed when the questions of any of the meetings are not answered satisfactorily, we do not know, but suppose the proper efforts are made to have the matter remedied.

What strikes us especially favorably is that their system works at the cause of troubles, rather than the troubles themselves. Or, in other words, they labor to prevent the trouble from coming, while it seems that we are all the time legislating against the effect. That you may know what these rules are we here give them:

First. Are all our religious meetings for worship and discipline duly attended, is the hour observed, and are Friends clear of sleeping and of all other unbecoming behavior therein?

Second. Are love and unity maintained among you? Are tale-bearing and detraction discouraged? And when any differences arise, are endeavors used speedily to end them?

Third. Are Friends careful to bring up those under their direction in plainness of speech, behavior and apparel; in frequently reading the Holy Scriptures, and to restrain them from reading pernicious books and from the corrupt conversation of the world?

Fourth. Are Friends careful to discourage the unnecessary distillation and use of spirituous liquors and the frequenting of taverns; to avoid places of diversion, and to keep in true moderation and temperance on the account of marriages, burials and all other occasions?

Fifth. Are poor Friends' necessities duly inspected and they relieved or assisted in such business as they are capable of? Do their children freely partake of learning to fit them for business, and are they and other Friends' children placed among Friends?

Sixth. Do you maintain a faithful testimony against oaths; an hireling ministry; bearing arms, training, and other military services; being concerned in any fraudulent or clandestine trade; buying or vending goods so imported, or prize goods, and against encouraging lotteries of any kind?

Seventh. Are Friends careful to live within the bounds of their circumstances, and to keep to moderation in their trade or business? Are they punctual to their promises and just in the payment of their debts; and are such as give reasonable grounds for fear on these accounts timely labored with for their preservation or recovery?

By reading these questions over carefully, it will be seen that they are very comprehensive and strike at the foundations of church government and anticipate all its multitudinous variations. The first covers, very fully, the duties relative to religious services even down to the sanctified nap that is so sweetly enjoyed by some of our church-going Christians. We believe that these questions would not be at all impertinent to our own congregations, four times a year.

While we may not coincide with the whole of them, they are certainly very practical, and, if carried out by all the members, would save our Annual Meeting a great deal of unpleasant work.

Our trouble is, instead of working up to well-defined principles we have been following after a thousand and one little violations which are outgrowths of slackness in teaching and living up to principles that should be well understood.

It is simply impossible to have a printed and numbered rule for every violation that it is possible for professing Christians to make, as we are now doing in regard to the use of gold. The first queries were about having gold watches. Then came the ear-rings and finger-rings. Then, followed the breast-pins and cuff-buttons. And next in order will be the wearing of gold-framed spectacles. After this, gold in the teeth, and still further on, will it be right to carry gold in the pocket? All of this is the result of the improper manner in which Scripture is interpreted or rather misinterpreted.

That gold, like all other precious things, has its uses and abuses, there can be no question, but when it is referred to in the Scriptures it has reference only to its use for personal adornment, and to apply the references in any other way is illogical and unscriptural. So when gold is forbidden to be worn for personal adornment, every unscriptural use of it is covered, and one such decision should decide the right and the wrong in its use in every case, and Annual Meeting should not be asked to decide as to the right and wrong as to all the different purposes for which gold is and can be used. If it is used for personal adornment, no matter how, it is forbidden in the epistolary writings. The purpose for which it is used is the only thing to decide, and if the home churches that have the cases before them are not able to decide, how can Annual Meeting decide when she can not have the cases before her?

The same can be said about a great many other things which have their uses and abuses. We must be able to discriminate between the use and the abuse, and when this is done, one decision will be sufficient to determine on all.

In the third query above quoted there is sufficient to cover two-thirds of all the decisions contained in our Minute Book. The idea that we must make decisions to meet all possible violations is a wrong one. The better way is to carry out strictly a rule that will avoid them, and this is the underlying principle for which the seven rules or questions referred to have been framed and used. We, at this time, refer to them with the hope that they may be pointers to us, as we have loudly accepted the adage, that "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Our Christianity ought to commence in our homes and with our children. Here is where the causes for future church troubles are born and nurtured, and if born and nurtured in our own homes and by our firesides, we should not be surprised when the effects are made manifest. Children that are raised like Zophar's wild asses are often fruitful sowers of trouble even when born again. A leopard may have his nature somewhat changed, but the spots remain all the same. Somehow, we fail to appreciate the fullness of the religion of parents whose children drink like topers, and are as wild and as boisterous as Indians. Our religion ought to do more for our homes than this, and if it does not there must be something wrong with ourselves or our religion. Let us look more carefully after the causes, and the effects will give us no trouble.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

(Concluded from last Week.)

How a man, making any pretensions to Christianity, can so sell himself to bondage, we can not understand. But such are the ways of sin. Start in its deceptive ways, and it is an exceedingly hard thing to back out. Few men, who can be induced to pass the ordeal of entering the lodge, have the manhood to stop at the critical moment. Rather than be laughed at, they will risk the frowns of an offended God and pass through. There are, however, a few who have dared to stop and refuse to take an oath that ought to shock the ears and deaden the soul of a heathen or an uncivilized Indian.

We know of one at least who had consented to enter the lodge, and, though then unconverted,

...o do so and went no further. His experi-
...hns far, satisfied him fully and forever as

*...lh reason against the lodge,—the unequal
...g.* These brotherhoods form an association
...ich there is the unequal yoking, forbidden by
...eligion of the Scriptures. "Be ye not une-
...y yoked together with unbelievers." This
...oking that can not be sanctioned by God be-
...e he wants his people not only to work, but
...rk together. In our uniting with the church
...ot only become a yoke-fellow with Christ,
...lso with one another. Receiving the same
..., we all become like him and therefore like
...another. Thus being of the same mind and
...d together, we can all pull together, and, in
...way, do the work that is given us to do. But
...n we are yoked with unbelievers, this unity of
...ose is destroyed, and nothing can be accom-
...ed for the Lord. How can the man who pro-
...s and believes in the atonement of Christ
...t and pray with the one who does not? This
...ng together with unbelievers is done in the
...e, and therefore it is no place for the Chris-

...e remember, years ago, of standing beside the
...e when an aged minister performed the burial
...ice of a member of the lodge. Our soul was ...led at the empty form, the hollow service, and ...Christless prayer. We went away from that
...e fully convinced that such organizations are
...n Christless and Godless, as God can not be
...ored when his Son is disgraced.

*...ur sixth objection to secret societies is that
... are robbing the church of its glory, power
...d usefulness.* Its first tendency is to alienate
...rch members away from the regular church services, and attract them to the lodge meetings. The associations tend to blunt religious feelings and convictions, so that, by degrees, the love for the simple worship of God, as found in his house, abates while it grows for the lodge associations, and in this way the glory of the church is lost to his people, and the power of the service and the ministry is proportionately lost. This is being sensibly felt by ministers of all the churches. Not only is it felt in this way, but the lodge is also interfering with the support of the church. The vast amount of money that is paid for the support of the lodges—paying the officers and building expensive lodge halls, is telling on the finances of the people, and as a result there is less left for the use of the church.

But you say that many of the ministers of the different churches are members of these societies. Yes, and be it said to their shame! But some of them feel that they are almost driven to it, because the lodges are becoming a greater power for protection and support than the church and they are willing to risk themselves, in case of need, to them rather than the charities of the church. Sad will be the day when even professed ministers of the Gospel turn away from the church, to worldly organizations for charity and support in old age. But such seems to be the tendency, and because of this and other worldly advantages, the shepherds are following the sheep into other folds that they may get pasture suitable to their wants. Surely, the church is being shorn of her glory and power!

Our seventh reason for opposing the lodge is that its charities and beneficiaries are selfish and, therefore, not in harmony with the spirit and teachings of Christ. Do good to all men is the charity of the Christ. Do good to my brother only is the principle of the lodge. By a most binding oath they are bound to stand by each other, not only in the right, but also in the wrong. This is often done to the great injury of those who are thus related. So manifest has the carrying out of this principle become that even our courts of justice have, in many cases, become a farce and a sham. It is impossible to have a brother of the lodge convicted of crime before judges, lawyers and a jury of the same Brotherhood. A beneficiary society that covers up crime and gives license to wrong is a threatening danger to our country, and is in no way in harmony with the higher code of Christian law which does the good to all men. The whole system is founded and built on a selfishness that is antagonistic to the intent and purpose of the Gospel, and therefore should be discountenanced by all Gospel-loving people.

The last reason that we have to offer at this time, is that the Christian has no need for such organization. The church of Christ has in it all that is needed for man's happiness in this world and in the world to come. Truly has David said: "The Lord supplieth all my needs." We are glad that we and some other churches hold to the position that the church of Christ is the best beneficiary organization in the world. And as we rightly hold this view, we are under the highest moral and religious obligations to make it all that our Heavenly Father intended it should be,—the Christian's home.

Let us all labor to keep the church up to the standard made for it by its Divine Head and there will be no need for anything outside of it. Anything that the church can not give and do, is not worth having and doing, and we are better off without it.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

ON THE DEATH OF ELDER ABRAHAM CASSEL.

LIFE'S long, weary path is trodden,
All its cares and toils laid down,
May thy rest be sweet, dear pilgrim,
Till thou wear thy robe and crown.

On the wings of mental vision,
Since thy death our thoughts have soared,
Tracing up thy pilgrim journey,
And thy union with the Lord.

When in youth my heart was tender,—
O those bright and golden years,
Then I knew thy meek deportment,
Heard thy prayers and saw thy tears.

Near the verge of life I met thee,
Ere the dismal shadows fell,
Ere thy life from mortal vision,
Sank beneath the Jordan's swell.

Bereaved ones we are swiftly passing,
Down life's ever rolling stream,
Soon we'll sleep beside our fathers
Where death's gloomy shadows reign,

When the dead but risen Savior,
In bright glory shall appear,
Death shall yield its hidden treasures,
Saints shall meet him in the air.

Then, from every clime and country,
We shall gather with the blest,
In the land of health and beauty,
Of pure joy and lasting rest.

CHICAGO'S GREAT SPIRITUAL NEED.

BY W. R. MILLER.

THAT there has been great physical suffering and distress in the West, no one will doubt, and, the work which the church has done all will commend as an act of mercy. It is just such as the children of God should be engaged in, whenever an opportunity presents itself. When the church (and that means us as individuals) fails to see and meet such wants as have been and are yet in the West, we are not doing as our Master would have us to do, neither can we expect to meet the divine approval.

Now, then, if it is right to feed people when they are hungry and look after their physical wants,—and we believe it is from the reading of Matt. 25: 35, 36, "For I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me," etc.,—how much more should we be concerned about men's spiritual condition? Since the vast amount of suffering in the West has been brought to our knowledge, our mind and eyes have been turned in that direction, and in a measure we have forgotten, that, here in Chicago alone, are eleven hundred thousand souls, less than ten per cent of whom are church members, and less than fifty per cent of them could attend church, if they so desired because there would be no church room for them.

We said, in a measure we have forgotten that here, in this great "Nineveh" are, not only hundreds but hundreds of thousands dear precious souls, spiritually naked and starving. The question must press itself upon every Christian heart, "Will we feed and clothe the hungry and naked?

What can be said of the spiritual condition of Chicago, may very truthfully be said of many cities, — Philadelphia for instance. If memory serves us rightly, statistics show about the same deplorable condition, spiritually, as our own city. Dear brother, God has intrusted to your care the eans, and upon the manner in which they are ed depends the salvation of some souls. I fear at many times we hold our money too tightly. Sometimes we entrust the little girl or boy, to with a dollar to the store. We tell them, Hold it tight,—so you may not lose it or some e get it from you." When the little dimpled nds unclasped the precious charge, the print of e coin was left in the little hand, and the tem- rature of the cold metal near that of blood heat. his reminds us how some hold to wealth,—so ose to their hearts and pressed so tight in their nds, that they seem never to have forgotten other's first injunction, "Hold it tight." James 3 is applicable in their case: "Your gold and ver is cankered: and the rust of them shall be a tness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it ere fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for e last days."

Dear ones, shall we not together think more, t only of the great distress in the West, but of e spiritual distress and suffering of humanity ery-where? If we can not preach, if we can not rsonally give our time we can send our dollars, hich may help some one else to preach. Finally ay we hear the King say, "Come ye blessed of y Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you om the foundation of the world!"

SUPPORTED MINISTRY.

BY DAVID E. CRIPE.

Some of our brethren are advocating a support- ministry, and seem to think there is a radical fference between a salaried ministry, and a sup- rted ministry. A close study of the question ll show that, while they are unlike in some par- culars, they are the same in the one great feat- e, that the minister is to receive a compensation om the members of his flock for the time and la- r he devotes to the Lord's service. The differ- ce consists in this: A salary is a stipulated sum money, to be paid at certain times, while to pport him is to supply all his wants, such as use rent, board, clothing, fuel, doctor bills, trav- ng expenses, children's schooling, books, papers, c., at all times and continually. It may amount less, or it may amount to more, than a salary, t it is always an unknown sum. Again, a salary a stipulated sum, agreed upon between two par- es,—the minister on one side and the congrega- on on the other. But when a minister is to be pported, he alone has the right to say how uch he needs. The congregation can only sup- y his demand; they dare not fix a limit to the mount he needs for support, for that limit would ange it from a support, into a stipulated sum,—a lary.

If a minister is supported by the church, he ed not work. He is set apart and above his ethren and sisters, for God's people are always working people. "In the sweat of thy face thou alt eat thy bread," is for his congregation, but t for him. Our great High-Priest can be touched th the feeling of our infirmities, but a minister at is supported and above work, can hardly be uched with the feeling of our cares and weak- ss and our weariness. He can not sympathize th us in our trials and toils, for he has none of em.

What must he do with his spare time? There e many days through the week when he is not quired to minister in his office. He has time to much reading and reflecting, but there is dan- r that his prepared sermons will be so fine and lished, so full of science and philosophy, per- ps even of anecdote and reminiscences of his n experiences, that they will contain but little the true Bread of Life,—but little about the meek and lowly Jesus. Resting all through the week will weaken and enervate him, and idling his time away will evaporate the true manhood out of him, so that his sermons can not contain the energy, zeal and vigor of a strong man. Our brethren who have preached the most powerful sermons and have labored the most effectively for the welfare of the church, are those who, like Paul, have labored earnestly with their own hands, that they might not be a burden to the church.

He who has the love of God and his service in his heart can follow the plow, or use the saw and chisel, and yet meditate on God's goodness and his Word. His thoughts can dwell on holy things, and he need not rise before his congregation on Sunday and say that he is empty and has thought of nothing. If he does, it proves that there is more lacking in the man than in his opportunities.

"Ye can not serve two masters." While a man is preaching for the Lord and looking to him for his reward, he is free to preach as the Lord requires, whether it pleases man or not. If he is supported for his preaching by his congregation, then he must preach to please them, or else his support may be cut off. He must be careful what part of the Scripture he preaches, for if he says anything that will hit any of his congregation, they may take offense. Then the Scripture which is unpopular, will no longer be preached. When he receives his support as a recompense for his preaching, then he has had his reward. "Son, remember that thou in thy life-time receivedst thy good things." Scripture does not tell us that we will ever receive two rewards for one act.

A church that has two or three ministers will not feel like supporting more than one, and must dispose of the others in some way. Just how this is to be done is a difficult problem. Then, too, a church may have a minister with very little talent and plenty of able, faithful brethren, well-qualified for the ministry, but she is unwilling to support more than one minister, and so strong and able men are kept out of the sphere where they would be very useful, and the work of the church languishes.

As circumstances now are in our church, a minister has no opportunity of becoming rich, but it is not necessary that he should. If he yearns for riches, if he has a strong desire to lay up treasures upon earth, then he is not in his proper sphere; he has mistaken his calling. Riches do not make a man happier, they do not make him better, nor can they increase his talent for usefulness. Many of our brethren acquire riches by hard work, not because they expect to be happier or better for it, but because they have a large amount of native talent and energy, and have no channel of usefulness open to them except that of making and spending money. A brother, who, under ordinary circumstances, has not sufficient energy to make a living for his family, generally also lacks the energy to become a useful minister of the Gospel. Our church has always held that it was her duty to assist needy ministers, and has generally done so, and has prospered. But it will be a sad day for the church when it will become necessary to recompense our ministers for their services, either by a salary or by supporting them.

"TESTIMONY."

BY L. ANDES.

In perusing the pages of the "Gospel Messenger," I am prompted, by a sense of duty, to bear testimony to the golden truth contained in some of the articles. I will first refer to Bro. C. D. Hylton's article, "Who is to Blame?" found on page 203, present volume. I believe the article, from first to last, would call out an Amen from hundreds of our poor ministering brethren, especially in the Western States, where the members are few and scattered, and the labors of the minister doubled. They could say, "It is the unvarnished truth of their sad experience.

Our heart is often sad and filled with pain when we think of the great loss to the church, and the souls of men by our unsystematic ministry in many places. Brethren are called to the ministry by the scores, who are in limited circumstances, with a family depending on them for support, so that they have neither time nor opportunity to qualify themselves properly for their work. Now, is it not a fact, that when such is the case, it would be wisdom for the church to lend some aid to such a brother, so that he could become more efficient in his labors, and be of more use to the church? Is it not a fact, that if this were done, that often one minister could accomplish as much work for the church and the souls of men as three under our present system?

What is the use of electing a multiplicity of brethren to the ministry, only to be spoiled? It reminds me much of the milk-man who cut down on the rations of the cows as the feed advanced in price, which soon caused the milk to diminish until but very little was given. Then the dairyman bestirred himself to get more cows to keep up his milk-trade, not having wisdom enough to know that it would have been more prudent to buy more feed, rather than more cows.

I am glad to know that a "supported" ministry has long since been sanctioned by our General Brotherhood, but in many places it is woefully neglected, and we think a remedy for it should be instituted, else, ere long, we will drift into a "salaried" or paid ministry. We know that circumstances are fast generating it in more than one place, and this should be avoided, if possible. It can be done very easily by a simple Gospel rule, if we are only willing to follow it, viz., "By helping to bear one another's burdens." This can be done in more than one way, and should be done just in the way it is needed, whether by remuneration for time and expense incurred by the ministry, by sympathy, encouragement, or in any other way that may be beneficial to the cause of Christ.

We expect our ministers to be men of veracity and be diligent. They are expected to do a great deal more than many of the other members are willing to do, for, while the majority are mostly concerned to look after their own temporal wants and desires, the minister is expected to provide for his own household and the church besides, which often proves too much for him, and he sinks beneath his burden; often never to rise,—at least not in this life.

Now, is it not a fact, that it is unreasonable to expect a brother to be able to do his duty in the ministry as he ought, and also make his temporal affairs a success? Whilst we may find one, now and then, who can do it, because good fortune happens to smile on him, we can find scores, who can not, hence one or the other must suffer,—either his temporal affairs or his ministry. Brethren, let us "think on these things."

Newton, Kans.

"To do as well as one knows how, is a fair attainment in morals. But to know what one ought to do, and then to do it, is more than a fair attainment. Many a conscientious person is so sadly deficient in moral perfection as to fall very far short of well-doing even while doing his best. In order to do what is right, it is essential to know what right is. It is not enough to keep up to one's own highest standard; but one's own highest standard should be a correct standard."

LAST WORDS.

BY D. G. COUSER.

THE last words of those dear to us are usually e last to be forgotten. How sad to think of the st words of the unrighteous!

"When I lived I provided for everything but eath; now I must die, I am improvided to die."— esare Borgia.

"How happy should I have been, had I spent retirement those twenty-three years during hich I have held my kingdom! My concern is ot for my body, but for my soul."—Philip the hird, King of Spain.

"Had I been so diligent in serving my God as have to please my King, he would not have for-ken me now in my gray hairs."—Cardinal Wol-y.

"I am taking a fearful leap into the dark."— obbes, the infidel.

"Abandoned by God and man."—Voltaire.

While the wicked shrink from death, to the ghteous it has no sting.

"Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in eace." —Simeon.

"Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."—St. Stephen.

"God be praised for everything."—Chrysostom.

Thus we see that even the Christian martyrs ear the pains of torture and death, with calmness
d fortitude, knowing in whom they believed,
d put their trust, remaining firm in their faith,
ntil death released them from their sufferings.

The will and testament of our Lord and Savior e have with us. Who will not look into it and e what shall be their portion?

In talking to his disciples, when about to leave em, Jesus told them of the mansions in his Faer's house, of his departure and of his coming gain. Then, on the cross, he cried, "It is fin-hed," and gave up the ghost. Then, at his asnsion, he gave them his last words, "Go teach l nations, . . . teaching them to observe all ings whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

Paul, when nearing the end of life, could ex-aim, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept e faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a own of righteousness, which the Lord the right-ous judge shall give me at that day, and not to e only, but unto all them that love his appearg." And again, "For me to live is Christ, and die is gain." Philpp. 1: 21. Balaam said, Let me die the death of the righteous, and let y last end be like his." Num. 23: 10.

To die the death of the righteous and praise the ord in death, we must live a righteous life, and raise the Lord while he prolongs our days; then ur end will be peaceful, quiet and joyful.

OUR CHURCH NAME.

BY D. C. MOOMAW.

THE question of our "church name" is before
s for "due consideration," but as I esteem it, here is very little consideration due it. It is f vastly more importance that we adorn the name r names we have, than to try to get a name that ill adorn us. I confess that the name "Dun-ard" is very unmusical. "Tunker" is a slight odification of the offensive original. "German aptist" is a misnomer and it has been properly ppropriated by German Baptists de facto. We ould more wisely call ourselves American Bap-sts, for such we truly are, for we are Americans nd we are Baptists, and if we must have the Baptist" connected with our church name, let s call ourselves what we, in truth, are. All men and women who have been born in America are Americans, and no national or religious prejudice or partiality can make anything else of us. By assuming this name, we would not come in contest with others, neither would we alienate our church property. We could annex "Brethren" to it, and increase its beauty, and also retain an evidence of our former nomenclature. Personally I am wholly indifferent as to the issue of the controversy. Propriety, good sense, convenience, fact, and a reasonable deference to the wishes of a majority of the Brotherhood, should prevail in any action that should be taken in its adjustment.

Let me suggest that five, more or less, different names be placed in nomination by the MESSENGER and then let our brethren and sisters in America, who feel inclined, signify their preference by addressing a postal, with their choice written on it, to the editors, who will keep a record of them and publish a list of the same weekly. By such a procedure the will of the church could be ascertained, and to begin, I cast my lot for "American Baptist Brethren."*

Our European Brethren may not take kindly to a name that would denationalize them, but it is patent to observing brethren that, for generations to come, America will contain a vast majority of our people. It certainly is preferable to a name that is misapplied to nineteen-twentieths of our Fraternity, — "German Baptist." Write your choice, brethren and sisters,—just the name,—on a postal and let us see by what name we will be known in the "sweet bye and bye."

LOYALTY.

BY J. C. BEAHM.

"And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other Gods."—Jos. 24: 16.

FIDELITY is a duty we owe to all. It personally concerns every man's relation to his fellowmen, to his country, and to God and heaven. There are duties one owes to himself, which stand first and should be performed though he live in solitude.

Without self-control, man is dangerously wayward. He starts out in life with no concentration of his powers, making his labors a sad failure, and his life a blank.

The absence of love and patience, and the fearful consequences of an unbridled tongue, all of which is accompanied by abasement, make him a wretch, suffering in flames "kindled by his own neglect." Rom 6: 23.

A second duty to one's self is that of purity; for man grows into spiritual excellence by proper culture, which is his true glory.

To neglect this culture is an indignity to our own souls, but to afford it, secures the approval of God and meets the demands of our spiritual worthiness.

To others we should be bound by the golden cords of help and peace. In our conversation, in our companionship, and in all our dealings with each other, honesty should be the underlying principle, and charity the over-reaching arch wherein shine many glittering acts of love and purity, thus acquainting many a lost sailor with the true compass. When such is the history of our lives, the wanderer will know that Christ is the way, the truth and the life.

Upon every hand we have the law breakers and the infidels who may well be classed with that man, who, when the Americans were engaged in a struggle for liberty, committed one of the most heinous crimes of disloyalty that ever darkened the pages of history.

Gen. Arnold gained many noble victories upon the field of battle, and won a great name as a patriot, yet, at the time in which he was most needed, he lost his loyalty, and his sun soon set. He sold his good name and his enjoyments with a free people for sordid dust. He saw the warning, but the temptation was great (1 Tim. 6: 10), and he died a miserable traitor.

No man has come to true greatness, who has not felt, in some degree, that his life belongs to the race, and what God has given him is for mankind. Mark 12: 31.

There are those, of like preciousness as ourselves, steadily drifting down the stream of corruption into the dead sea of an aimless life. Who knows not that you and I have been disloyal to some good creature and caused him to weep, fall, and mar that once fair brow—a type of heaven's own beauty? No doubt we have partially failed!

To rescue the perishing and care for the dying is the duty of every son and daughter of Zion. O young brethren and young sisters, would you be loyal to yourself, loyal to good parents, loyal to the church, and loyal to God? Then robe yourself in that manhood and womanhood which characterizes every true heart, and rise up where you can see the condition of mankind; then, by that grace which is sufficient, try to stay the mighty tide of vices, which brings to fallen humanity, devastation and want. A boisterous current is bearing away its millions upon its black waters to meet the fiery dragon whose abode is hell!

He who claims to be a citizen and harms the Government is a traitor; he who professes to be a Christian and does not walk in fidelity is a hypocrite, and he who denies the power and existence of God, is a monster and a devil!

Of loyalty there is none greater than that, manifested by the Savior of the world, when he was led away to be tempted. He saw the blooming fields, the gay cities with their temples pointing skyward. He also beheld the proud nations and all the kingdoms of earth. All of this was offered him if he would only forsake the right, and bow to sin at the shrine of the goddess of wealth, just where scores of unthinking men sacrifice their birthright to a glorious immortality. But in the very center of his affections was a God-given and heaven-born principle which was not to be shaken by the adversities and calamities of sin. Therefore it is extreme loyalty on our part, to study the history and keep the statutes of this Divine Hero.

In this life we may not be wholly familiar with his heavenly ways, but it is ours to search and then we we will be furnished with fuel sufficient to make the spirit of God's love burn brightly upon the altar of every heart, and is it not a precious thought that his word is to us a glorious gift? From its perfection we may secure enough to aid us in all the difficulties of life.

Brother, sister, if we are loyal to our Pilot, by and by we will anchor in that harbor near the port of peace, on the evergreen shore of God's eternal love!

BE CAREFUL!

BY FLORIDA J. ETTER.

THIS is a short sentence, but the sum and substance of it contains much for our consideration. In many ways should we be careful. "Let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven." Let us be careful not to deceive others by our conduct. Let us be careful that we are not an obstacle or hinderance to the great work of saving souls, nor impede the progress of the great work for Christ. Let us be careful that, in all our efforts, we try to build each other up in our most holy faith, encouraging each other on our pilgrimage journey. Let us walk hand in hand, letting love and union exist, working together as valiant soldiers for King Immanuel, our Great Redeemer! Let us not spend our time in riotous living, speaking evil of each other. Nothing so darkens our Christian spirit as to backbite or slander. It demoralizes our Christianity and is very degrading to our moral character. Let us be careful that we live up to our profession, for though we may deceive others, we can not deceive that dear Eye that never sleeps. Nothing can pass without his observation; there is nothing beneath his notice,—nothing too great or small. Let us remember this! Let us be careful to observe all of God's divine will. Let us beware of being false prophets or teachers. Let us beware of idleness, for every day there is a work for us to do! Let us be careful that the great adversary does not get the upper hand of us and lead us astray. Let us be sober and vigilant! "Be careful for nothing but in everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God."

To be a Christian requires great care on our part. We can not carry religion half way, or single-handed. It requires a great effort to walk in the narrow way, to bear the cross, but we must bear the cross in order to wear the crown, for outside of this we have no promise. Let us be careful to examine ourselves to see that our lives harmonize with the Gospel. "Be not conformed to this world, but," says the Word, "be ye transformed." We must be truly regenerated,—be changed in all of our ways. Then let us serve the Lord with all of our soul, mind and strength. Without this we can not be his children. Let us be careful to have our treasures centered on things that pertain to our spiritual welfare, and lead us unto eternal glory. God requires a great work of us in his vineyard, so that we may reap our great reward in his kingdom. The harvest is great but the laborers are few. Let us be faithful servants, that it may be said, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make you ruler over many."

"How careful then ought I to live,
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give,
For my behavior here."

The wisdom of this world is foolishness in the sight of God. Let us be careful to seek that wisdom which will make us wise unto salvation!

THE SEA OF DOUBT, AND GROUND OF FAITH.

BY J. HANNA.

Number Three.

As to the flings of infidels against certain Bible characters, its candid revelation of the faults of its writers is internal evidence of the whole truth, while he upon whom our faith rests, is without spot or blemish, and he alone of the sons of men. Would you desire his word for the surety of the Scriptures? "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Reaching back, he embraces the law and the prophets with "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

False philosophy, evolution, etc., may contradict these, but it is scarcely worthy the reader's attention, for, were it true, so unlikely it is, that unbiased, we would hardly believe it, after we had perfected our change, that is, attained to a perfect intellect, for, outside of Revelation, our only source of information lies in the relics of ages passed, and these, reaching back some four thousand years, coincide in the stability of animal nature, and excavation still throws its firm embankment about the foot of the cross.

But infidelity, though apparently vanquished by overwhelming refutation, may, in a more subtle manner, renew its attack. Realizing that from the strength of union, it can not affect the Word in our hearts, as a whole it may attempt to do so by dividing it into parts, and stamp some parts as being essentials and others as non-essentials, as they are more or less suited to our tastes. However, we have received instructions neither to compromise, nor to retreat; for, "if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

We now turn from infidelity to that treasury of promises, which alone answers the desires of the soul, –the soul whose aspirations locate its sphere above. We have seen that it is but the slimy track of the serpent that affects our own footing, while the Truth remains secure. And to discover all of the quicksands would avail us nothing, if the sure foundation were undiscovered.

Dear friends, we now invite you to a realm,

"Where Reason, once 'tis there, will own
Full room to live in Faith's own home;"

And where, instead of trying to open a path from creation outward, to be lost in conjecture, it will move toward its glorious center and become concentrated in God.

First, then, we would have you behold that Author of Nature and Revelation.

Mind, mounting over matter, proves a God:
Chance churned not nature's law, from chaos odd,
Find thou the rules that nature worketh by,
Look still beyond,—a ruler thou must spy,
And, finding God enshrined in nature's heart,
In Revelation seek the counterpart.

First in order, then, will be to seek for design in nature, by which to prove a designer. This we may find in the adaptation of things. We instance vision with light to correspond thereto; life to operate, and mind to comprehend it, and objects to behold. Who would presume to say that, although spectacles were designed for the eye, the eye itself, with all of its co-operative agents, is an indication of chance?

Second in order,—though to our observation united with design,—is creation, proof of a Creator. Can we illustrate,—short of an infinite Creator,—anything that exists independent of production? Certainly, so far as our knowledge goes, and reason continues by the stakes of sight thereby set, effect results from cause, and supply from production; and in accordance with its first principles, existence unlimited, proves an infinite Creator and "from nothing, nothing comes."

Our third feature we find in the operation of nature. The working of the planetary systems, etc., is a proof of an Operator. If any one would prove that motion is independent, he must, obviously, invent a perpetual one.

A BUDGET OF FRAGMENTS.

BY SADIE BRALLIER NOFFSINGER.

—NEVER despair. Do what you can, and trust God for what you can not do.

—Speak cheerful words. They do not cost you much, but all around you hearts are fainting for them.

—Brother, sister, have you gold or silver to lay by? Trust it not to earthly vaults, which thieves can break and rob. You have toiled earnestly and long for your hoarded wealth; you would not like to lose it now. Give it all to God, and he will deposit it for you in the bank that never fails.

—"He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord;" and the Lord will pay him back with compound interest.

—The tear is the truest token of sympathy, the richest emblem of sincerity, the firmest pledge of fidelity and love. Scoff not at tears! They are so pure that it were sacrilege to scorn them,—so exalting that it were ignoble to deny them. Jesus wept; and it is always a noble soul from which is seen to fall the gentle mist of tears. Then, too, there are healing tears,—tears which carry with them the blessedness of peace,—tears which bring repose and calm after the fierce and mighty struggle. O tears, how high, how holy is your mission! How many times has your sacred fount welled up in our souls, and washed away a weight of grief which nothing else had power to remove!

—Of all God's precious promises there is none so sweet as his promise of a great reward for faith. Sorrow may come, perplexities may surround us, despair may be on our track, the winds may howl, the billows roar, the thunders crash, the very earth cave in, but we need not tremble,—we shall be saved through faith. Satan, with his legion, may pierce our hearts, and try to slay us in his bloody war; but with the shield of faith we shall be able to subdue a multitude of demons, and come out conquerors against the mighty force of the infernal one. The God in whom we trust, will not allow us to be lost, though hell should marshal all its host to drive us to the awful pit!

—A friend writes: "The foul monster, intemperance, is slaying men and women, even where there are no saloons." And it is true. Many drunkards there are to-day, who, perhaps, have never even tasted intoxicating drinks. Thousands are drunken with that baneful pride of life; thousands have become intoxicated with fiery lust, and are the branded victims of licentiousness and crime; while a thousand times ten thousand souls lay groveling in the mire of selfishness and greed. Ah, were we to count them all, what a host of inebriates we would find, all living the drunkard's life, and hastening to the drunkard's hell! God grant that we, as Christian men and Christian women, go forth and labor mightily in the temperance cause, and speed the day when our fair land shall rise above the sweeping curse of drunkenness!

Defiance, Ohio.

"OUR blunders that have hindered us may prove helps to our progress, if they are used aright. By disclosing to us our weakness and our dangers, they may incite us to better and wiser endeavors in the future. But if we are to gain through our losses, we must look forward and not backward. As soon as we see where we have been at fault in any particular we must turn away from that error, without stopping to worry over it: and must press on all the more earnestly because of our lost time. Not until we reach the end of our life-course will it do for us to sit down and grieve that we have made so little progress thus far. As long as there is any portion of the road to be covered, our business is to be covering it."

"GOD leads none of us by the rapid and easy path to knowledge, or fortune, or happiness. We all of us travel by a path that has long stretches of barren and weary march, and here and there only soft resting places, flashing like emeralds on the diadem of the desert, where we may wait and sleep and play awhile before we gird up our loins and pursue our way."

"BECAUSE."—John 14: 19.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

r Fellow-servant in the Kingdom of God:—

Yours written on the anniversary of the cifixion is here. Strange things do you tell. y should my last letter have so "enraged the l in every corner," as to eject you from your field of labor?

ıst turn to Philpp. 1: 12, 19, 20, and 1 Thess. and see how apostolic experience repeats it-

O that we knew how to "rejoice that we are ıted worthy to SUFFER SHAME for HIS NAME!" s 5: 41. O that we appreciated our high call- as the representatives of the Crucified in the mption of the world!

ometimes I feel so ashamed of myself and oth- that I know not where to hide my face. We n to have well-nigh lost the conception of the ious life that is ours in Christ Jesus, and the lime mission intrusted to our charge. I often nk from speaking or writing the thoughts and ings that press for utterance when I contem- e the eternal purpose of God in the Incarna- of His Son. I am thoroughly satisfied that, eneral, we have no adequate idea or conscious- s of the solemn and momentous responsibility ing upon us as the illustrators of the Divine e. There is not that profound and awful sense he exceeding sinfulness of sin, and the direful hopeless ruin to which it leads, nor that burn- vehement passion for the salvation of souls ch characterized Jesus and the primitive ristians. We lack wisdom to direct us, zeal to e us to great sacrifices for the triumph of the ss, and skill in the divine art of commending us as altogether lovely and omnipotent to save. alvation is indeed the great, overtopping mas- piece of Jehovah! It is not simply the outgo- of His resources as in creation, but it is the ing of Himself in the utter immolation of a minal's execution, as a voluntary, vicarious of- ing for rebels and enemies! Oh, the height l the depth! Past finding out! The lowest ception we can form of it is the cancellation of nalty, and the assurance that hell is not going swallow us up. And yet this is the highest ught many of us have of our interest in the gedy of Golgotha. Jesus Christ has engaged accomplish nothing less than to wash our souls iter than snow, from every taint of sinful im- nation, thought, feeling, desire, impulse, tem- , disposition, and to make every member of our lies an instrument of righteousness unto God. m. 6: 13, 19, 22.

To be saved from sin is indeed a work worthy the Triune God. We have so lost sight of the rinsic excellence of human nature, and of the ful significance of sin and the tremendous fact damnation as the necessary evolution of our rverted moral force, that but few can be found, o are in deep and practical sympathy with rist in His soul-travail for the redemption of e devil's bond-slaves, "unto the glorious liberty the children of God." We do not know what is to wrestle "with strong crying and tears," ying hold of "all the fullness of God," with the ry "faith of Christ."

With unutterable reverence I say it,—God has verdone His work and overstated His Word, or e have yet to learn what He means by the em- odiment of all the fullness of His Godhead in ır nature, and His assurance that by faith we re "complete in HIM who is the head of all prin- pality and power," and "able to do all things y the in working almightiness of His Holy Spir- ." Col. 2: 10; Philpp. 4: 13; 2 Tim. 1: 7.

My eyes are only beginning to be unfilmed from ne blinding power of tradition, and natural wis- dom and self-complacency, and I sometimes feel as if the voice of seven thunders were struggling in my poor, contracted, darkened heart to utter the message of one crying in the wilderness, so that every saint might catch the fire of Calvary and Pentecost, and run out in all directions with flaming censers for the staying of the plague. Num. 16: 46, 47, 48. A thousand Boanerges are needed to give voice to the great love that flames in the heart of God and His Christ for sinners.

The thousand sinful ways in the church of pleasing self, and spending money, and courting the world, must be utterly abandoned, and Christ wholly accepted as the flesh-crucifying, devil-conquering, sin-annihilating, death-abolishing Redeemer, if "the Word of the Lord is to have free course and be glorified." When our consecration is complete, Christ's promises will be triumphantly verified—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye SHALL ASK WHAT YE WILL, and IT SHALL BE DONE UNTO YOU." Matt. 28: 20; John 15: 7.

If the divine veracity is unapproachable, we must own that our faith is hardly worthy of its name. Let us take the blame and shame to ourselves, and "not charge God foolishly." A deeper, clearer cognition of Emmanuel, and a closer identification with Him in child-like trust and unreserved self-sacrifice, will prove to ourselves and the world, that mighty signs and wonders are for the nineteenth century no less than for the first. To plead the superfluity or impossibility of miracles in this age is to saddle our "unbelief and hardness of heart" on Divine Providence.

I am glad you are stopping with Bro. Quinlan. His is a noble aim, and he not only needs, but is worthy of our prayers and help. Of his methods I know little, nor of the simplicity or wholeness of his faith in God; but he has the Gospel idea of man primeval, man lost, man redeemed. Such an enterprise is a standing testimony of the divine faithfulness, the glory of faith and the power of real prayer.

We sense-christians can not even imagine to what tests those are put, who are living hour by hour by faith, for funds which can come in no other way but by direct supernatural answers to prayer. When I contemplate the history of the great eleemosynary institutions of Christendom, I am filled with amazement and admiration at the trials and triumphs of faith. How frequent and prolonged and apparently terrible is the pressure to which these heroic God-trusters are subjected! And yet, how calm, restful, and confident in and through the fiery ordeals which would pulverize and calcine our poor, paralytic faith into blank despair and consternation!

To have thousands of orphans to feed and clothe, with not a dollar in hand, and not knowing where the first penny is to come from, and not food enough for a single day, and yet as peaceful and happy and assured as if the coffer was heaped with gold, and the cellar and pantry and granary loaded with provisions,—ah, this requires an Abrahamic grip of the hand of Omnipotence. Oh, what a blessing it would be if we could but believe that it is our lack of faith that shuts off the divine presence and power! But we will "limit the Holy One of Israel," sooner than confess that Jesus does no mighty works among us "because of our unbelief." Ps. 78: 41.

Not only in great matters, but in things that most Christians regard too trivial to bring to God, is our faith tested. I do not ask God to give me a new coat or daily food, in a supernatural way, for with close economy I can supply the most pressing necessities of life. Luxuries are not for me, save the luxury of Philpp. 3: 8. But stamps and stationery for the support of my pen-ministry, I ask of God all the year round. When your letter came I was entirely out, but you had inclosed the exact number I needed "for the present distress." Just before commencing this letter, the mail brought me four tablets of writing paper from the Brethren's Tract Department. By whom sent I know not, only that God laid it on some one's heart to care for me. Philpp. 4: 10.

I am using of that "odour of a sweet smell, that sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God," in writing this article. Philpp. 4: 18. I often write with as little knowledge of where the stamps are to come from as the Tishbite knew where the ravens got his meals, when he was closeted with God on the bank of the brook Cherith. It is by trust in God for little providences that we are schooled to the exercise of faith in greater emergencies. And God will honor faith, little or much, as unmistakably as He binds indissolubly His veracity and honor.

The hardest thing in the world for man to do is to believe God. Some seem to think that it is too easy a way of salvation; but the sad truth is that it is anomalous to find a soul that has risen to the majesty and repose and glory of a genuinely Christian faith. Grace and faith dovetail, and these two comprehend all the possibilities and manifestations of the divine and human. It is idle to talk of salvation by works, and ditto to preach faith without works. To dissociate faith from unreserved dedication to the divine glory, is the very essence of sin. The immediate connection of our works with justification, is to ignore the whole intent and achievement of the Incarnation, from the conception to the ascension. To die, rise, to live by and in and for God, is "the potency and promise" of Eph. 3: 20; Col. 1: 29.

WHAT ST. PAUL FORGOT.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

"Forgetting those things which are behind"—Philpp. 3: 13.

In running a race it is necessary to be forgetful of all things else, and to be intent upon "this one thing." In overcoming the world, the flesh, and the devil, and working out one's own salvation, it is necessary to concentrate one's thought and energy on "this one thing." So did Paul. He forgot the things that were behind. He had made great sacrifices in becoming a disciple of Christ. His genealogy and his record are given in the previous part of the chapter. He was of the pure and ancient stock of Israel, circumcised in accordance with the customs of pure Israelites, on the eighth day. He was of the tribe of Benjamin, which had never mixed with foreigners, nor lost its identity, as the ten other tribes had done, but, on the contrary, had been, all through its history, a champion of Israel and of Israel's God. He was a Hebrew of Hebrews. Neither he nor his family before him, though living out of Palestine, had abandoned the language or customs of the ancient people of God.

As to his own personal record, he was, by his own, personal choice, a Pharisee in scrupulous devotion to the law. In his jealous zeal for the integrity of ancient Judaism, he was a persecutor of the seceding and opposing sect of the Nazarenes, which constituted the church. In the righteousness which consisted in punctilious observance of all the points of the law, he was not at all deficient. It was a spotless pedigree and an unimpeachable record, and this as a member of the aristocracy of Jehovah.

But all these things, which had been so many separate advantages, which he put down to his credit and "gain," he had, for the sake of Christ, added up and set down in one comprehensive item to the account of "loss."

These advantages, with his intense nature, his unfaltering courage, and his matchless training, opened the way for his becoming the foremost man, if not of all this world, at least of what was to him the foremost nation of all this world. He had renounced it all for Christ, nor did he ever regret or reconsider that act of renunciation. "Nay, I do still consider them as loss and dross for Christ." He cast no longing, lingering look backward, out of regret, at their loss, nor did he recall these sacrifices as matters of self-gratulation or complacency. He forgot the sacrifices of the past.

SUPPORTED MINISTERS.

BY J. H. MILLER.

UNDER this caption, in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 16, I notice an article, written by an afflicted brother, that I am not able to fully understand.

1. The writer says: "To me it does not seem possible to discover any difference in principle between a supported and a salaried ministry."

2. "To give abundantly to ministers, who are in fair circumstances, is not just, but to give to the faithful; poor minister should every-where be encouraged."

To me it is difficult to reconcile the latter clause of the second proposition with the first. I will notice the two propositions more fully.

In the first, the writer sees no difference between a supported and a salaried ministry. In the latter, he wishes the "faithful poor" to have a support. I can see a difference between the two, salaried and supported ministry. The term "salary" implies "the recompense or consideration stipulated to be paid to a person for services, annual or periodical wages or pay, hire." "To fix or pay a salary to one."—Webster. "Support," "to furnish with the means of sustenance or livelihood; to maintain, as to support a family, to support a son in college, to support the minister of the Gospel."—Webster.

In a salaried ministry we have a stipulated sum. A man who preaches for a salary knows how much he will get for his year's work. A stipulated sum will be paid him. In a supported ministry no stipulated sum is given. Jesus and the apostles do favor a supported ministry. A hireling will flee, because he is a hireling, and careth not for his sheep. John 10: 12, 13. A man who is a hireling works for wages, or a stipulated sum of money. Such work I could not endorse, but for a minister who is poor and needs help or support, the Gospel will hold up the idea of giving aid. Read 1 Cor. 9. This is the best Bible proof for a supported ministry. "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." Where is there a stronger Scripture in the Bible in favor of a supported ministry?

A few things have come under my observation of late years.

1. Our evangelists, in some instances, especially when poor and not able-bodied, and when afflicted with much sickness in their family, have been getting a scanty support. In some instances some churches have done well, and the Lord will abundantly bless such.

Again, I have noticed ministers who are abundantly able financially, and have more wealth than they can possibly use during their life, who have received a large support. Such money would better be turned over to the General Missionary Fund.

2. If a salaried and supported ministry is all the same, or will lead to the same end, as set forth in my brother's article, in first proposition, our missionary workers do wrong to pay out money to those who are sent out to preach the Gospel. Such articles are calculated to discourage the missionary project. Missionary money, at best, is hard to get in some localities. Not long since I spoke to a good sister about this noble enterprise. Her answer to me was: "I do not know what they do with our money. Some preach for money, and I do not feel like giving anything." It takes but little to discourage our missionary work.

3. I have been present several times when such, who were sent by Annual Meeting to local districts on committee work, did give their expense on a piece of paper, and handed it to some one, to see the church and collect so much money. I call it a stipulated sum. One place I distinctly remember, where the church was too poor and could not reach the stipulated sum. Then the matter was thrown into two State Districts. As far as I know, each one of the committee had a good farm, and a reasonably good livelihood. Some of the committee traveled hundreds of miles to the meeting. If those brethren (all of whom were farmers) would have spent their time in a busy part of the season, giving in addition to their time, also their traveling expenses, how long could such brethren meet expenses? I say, "It is all right to support the ministry when they are called to work for the church."

4. I have a personal knowledge of several good brethren who had many calls to do evangelistic and missionary work, years ago, and where did they drift to? My heart beats with sympathy at this writing. Such brethren spent time and money. At one time they had good farms, but where did they drift to? I am sorry to say,—they died in poverty. "Well," says one, "they will receive a crown in the glory world." True enough, but how much of a reward will those obtain, who were rich in this world's goods, and yet did not heed the golden rule of Christ, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

I do hope our brethren will remember the poor, —be they ministers or lay members. I am much in favor of preaching the Gospel free, if at all in our power to do so.

I have a knowledge of some who preach against a salaried ministry, and, at the same time, are anxious, when called upon to preach, first to enquire, "Could you see that I am left whole? I can not come unless my way is paid." We are safe to advocate a supported ministry, but in doing so we need not favor a salaried ministry.

WE ARE ALWAYS OWING.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

IT is the duty of every one, when in debt, to see to it that he pay promptly what he owes, lest he be blamed for his failure to pay. Any debt a man owes and does not pay, if able, renders him a dishonest character.

No man has any right to contract any debt that he is unable to pay, for when we make a contract, we bring ourselves under obligations, which we should ever be ready to meet when due.

Rom. 13 says, "Owe no man anything but to love one another." Here we are all brought under an indebtedness that we always owe, and we should make a payment on it every day of our life, for we have it to pay by installments, that continue to come due every day. We have great reason to be very thankful to our God, that he made the daily installments small enough that the very poorest of us can make our daily payment, if we only keep up the proper spirit of industry.

No one needs to be discouraged, no matter how great the indebtedness is. God himself will fill your treasury, if you only live right.

The greatest amount we have to pay, and that which we owe daily, is love to our neighbor, love to the Brotherhood. 1 Pet. 2: 17. First of all we are to love God with all our heart, mind and strength, and for this cause "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." When our heart is well filled with the love of God, then we will have plenty to pay the three, above-named, daily installments, and enough to spare that we can also love our enemy, do him good and overcome all evil with good.

And if we thus continue to pay our daily installments while we live, it will secure unto us the best life insurance treasury that can be found anywhere,—the only one that can do us any good in the world to come.

Do you realize, my dear brother and sister, that you are owing so much? Are you daily struggling to pay up your dues, that the Lord may require at your hands? It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the Living God unprepared!

Abilene, Kansas.

"OUR well-doing may look very well to others. It can not look very well to ourselves. No one of us has always done as well as he might have done. Every one of us is conscious of having failed, in many an instance, of doing the plain duty which was before him for the hour. Others may not know this to be the fact; but we know it. If a strong swimmer, who was by the seaside, were to rescue one man who was drowning, and allowed ten men, one after another, to drown before his eyes because he could not help them, his well-doing, in the one case, would look very well to those who knew no more than that; but if the memory of his failure in the other cases was always in his mind, with what grace could he accept the praises of those who called him the rescuer of his fellows? If, indeed, he had saved ten men, and neglected one, would he not still feel that he was undeserving of praise as a well-doer in that sphere where his willful failure had cost another's life? The case of such a man would be as the case of the best of us in this matter of being satisfied with our well-doing. Whatever others may think of us, we know that we do not deserve all the credit they are ready to award us."

"The Bible is the ladder whereby men may climb to heaven. And yet we need not ransack the Indies to enrich ourselves with it, nor venture shipwreck to bring it home. We need not sell lands and houses to purchase it, nor run the hazard of fire to secure it. It is a thing always to be had, always within call, ever at hand and very portable, no burden in a journey, no load in a voyage. We may carry it wherever we go; when at home or abroad; and even in the stillness of night we may dwell on it with holy contemplation, as did the ancient patriarch in his dream of angels ascending and descending."

"WITHIN reach of every one there is an ability to be and to do, which is in one sense outside of and beyond one's own natural ability. This ability is a willingness to hear and heed good advice. It was Goethe who said that to be willing to take good advice, is practically to have the same ability that is shown in the advice itself. And so the man who refuses to consider the proffers of an adviser, deprives himself of a power at once greater than his own, but which he yet might have as his own."

FULL REPORT.

E have arranged to publish a Full Report he Annual Meeting, and for that purpose e again engaged Mr. James Abbott, who for several years made our Reports for us. e coming Meeting will be a very important , and will consider questions that should ncern every member of the Brotherhood. r aim is to make the Report as complete as ssible, and have it ready for mailing within few days after the Meeting closes. We de- e our readers to send in their orders imme- tely. Our agents will do well to canvass the urches and ascertain the number of copies anted and send in their orders soon. We sire to have all orders in early so as to get e Report to our patrons as soon as possible. he work will be well printed, in good, clear pe and should prove interesting and profitable reading to all of our members. Single copy, twenty-five cents. Per dozen, $2 50.

MUCH matter that came too late for this issue, must lay over till next week.

THE paper for next week will be the last issue of the MESSENGER before the Annual Meeting.

BRO. JOHN ZUCK, of Clarence, Iowa, is a member of the Standing Committee for this year from Central Iowa.

THE District of Southern Missouri and Arkansas will be represented on the Standing Committee by Eld. Samuel Click.

THE new meeting-house in Snake Spring Valley, Pennsylvania, will be dedicated May 24. Bro. Brice Sell and others are expected to be present.

JUST as we go to press we receive the sad intelligence concerning the death of sister Angie Eby, wife of Bro. Levi H. Eby. More extended notice will appear next week.

FOR particulars concerning Annual Meeting arrangements, see first column on last page of this issue. The notice came too late to find room in any other part of the paper.

THE General Missionary Committee will have its next meeting at the Annual Meeting at Hagerstown, Md. All petitions and requests to come before the Board at that time, should be sent to Galen B. Royer, Mt. Morris, Ill., before May 27.

WE have decided to publish a Juvenile Quarterly for the use of the little folks in our Sunday-schools. We aim to have it ready for use the first Sunday in July, and will shortly announce the price of them. The lessons are well prepared and adapted to the capacity of children, and we know that the work will fill a long-felt want in our Sunday-schools.

AFTER his return from Goshen, Ind., and remaining at home a few days, Bro. D. L. Miller started East, not expecting to return till after the Annual Meeting. He is booked for Dayton, Ohio, May 14; Waynesborough, Pa., the 16th; Lower Cumberland, the 17th and 18th; Upper Cumberland, 19th and 20th, and then to Waynesborough again the 23rd and 24th. From there he goes to the Annual Meeting.

THE new mayor of Chicago gives promise of a decided reform in the administration of justice. Concerning him the Chicago Evening Journal says:

> His first act when he reached the City Hall this morning, was to send for Chief of Police Marsh, and to him he spoke in no unmeasured tones.
> "Gambling must be stopped, utterly and completely," remarked the Mayor with emphasis. "See that orders are issued to that effect, and impress this fact on all your subordinates. Any officer who fails to find a game that a newspaper man has located, will be stripped of his star."

BRO. W. M. LYON, who will soon complete his business course in the Brethren's school at Bridgewater, Va., desires to secure a position as bookkeeper, clerk or something in that line, at a point where he can make himself useful to the church, in the ministry and Sunday-school work. He is a young minister of ability and should be encouraged in the proper use of his talent in the interest of religion. Let those who feel interested in Bro. Lyon endeavor to find a suitable position for him, and then also have him aid in the work of the ministry.

85 cts WILL pay for the MESSENGER from June 1, 1891, till the end of the year.

REMEMBER that the Annual Meeting will be held at Hagerstown, Md., commencing June 2.

ON Sunday, May 10, Bro. G. B. Royer preached two excellent sermons in the Chapel on Missionary Work. The evening discourse was largely made up of facts pertaining to our financial and mental ability to preach the Gospel to other nations, what we are doing and what we could do if we would. He exhibited a well-prepared table, showing the number of members in each State, the amount of money given by each State for missionary purposes, and the amount per capita. One of the leading States showed 44 cents per member, while many other large States gave only 9 cents and 8 cents, and as low as 5 cents per member. The highest rate was a State where there are only 41 members, showing 67 cents per member. A few other States, where we have but few churches, gave 60 cents and 65 cents per member. These figures made a startling effect on the audience, and many members went from that room resolved to do more, and work harder in the interest of the missionary cause. Taking the Brotherhood over, the average for missionary work will not exceed 11 cents per member, while the money spent for unnecessary things will perhaps reach almost if not quite that many dollars.

THE WESTERN SUFFERERS' FUND.

OWING to the fact that our work takes us away from home a good portion of the time, we asked the Committee, having charge of the fund, to examine the books, relieve us of the work of distribution, and appoint some one else to take charge of the funds. The Committee met and carefully examined the books and vouchers, and made the following report:

This is to certify that we have this day examined the account of Bro. D. L. Miller in the distribution of funds to Western sufferers, and find that the sum of $13,709.61 has been properly distributed, as per receipts on file.

(Signed), D. R. PRICE,
L. A. PLAIE.

May 2, 1891.

The Committee then appointed Bro. D. E. Price as General Distributing Agent, to whom the money, balance on hand, amounting to about sixteen hundred dollars, was turned over. Bro. Price will carefully look after the distribution of the money.

The money received for the needy in the West will amount to about fifteen thousand dollars. Add to this the various sums sent out by churches and individuals to friends in the drouth-stricken districts, and the car loads of grain, provision and clothing donated, and it will doubtless amount to the sum of twenty thousand dollars. In the distribution of the money, care has been exercised, so that it might reach the needy, and we rejoice to know that over one thousand sufferers have received help. Receipts are on file, given by those who received aid, with post-office address, so that there can be no doubt as to where the money went. The caring for and the distribution of the large sum of money, was attended with a good deal of labor and anxiety. Much letter writing was necessary, but the labor was performed with a willing heart and without charge.

That all should be satisfied with the distribution was not to have been expected, as all could not be helped to the full extent of their wants, but for the most part general satisfaction was rendered. And we know from the scores of letters received from thankful hearts, that the liberality

Brethren and friends has been appreciated. a lonely widow, who knew not from whence was to come for her little ones, has been re-, and tear-stained letters attest the grati-o those who have given.

e money was distributed to the needy with-egard to denominational lines. We shall know those whom we have helped, but the knows and that is enough, for "Inasmuch as ve done it unto one of the least of these my ren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40.

ATES TO OUR ANNUAL MEETING WEST OF CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS.

E had hoped to secure a half-fare rate for e of our Brethren, who wished to attend Annual Meeting, and live in the territory of Western Passenger Association. The matter reconsidered, but the former decision was hanged.

he rate will be one fare and a third for the d trip to Chicago or St. Louis, with a special te of fifty-eight cents to those going via ago. This is arranged to equalize the rate een St Louis and Chicago. Our Brethren purchase tickets to Chicago or St. Louis, pay-the regular fare. At the same time the agent he station where the ticket is purchased, will the purchaser a certificate, which must be erly signed by Bro. W. S. Reichard, Secretary he Committee of Arrangements at Hagerstown,

This certificate will authorize the holder to chase a return ticket, either at Chicago or Louis, at one-third fare. It is understood that n Chicago and St Louis, or from any point in territory of the Central and Trunk Line As-ations, the rate is one fare for the trip, and nd-trip tickets will be placed on sale. The bash road is in the Central Association, and Brethren on that line will enjoy a round-trip e of one fare.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

N this issue will be found a few articles treat-the supported and salaried ministry questions. former issues similar articles have appeared, l now there seems to be a disposition to dis-s the subject. While we wish to grant our ntributors all the liberty prudent to express ir minds on this or any other legitimate ques-n, that may be to the edification of the Broth-hood, we nevertheless desire to avoid discus-n as much as possible, believing that it is not ely to prove profitable among our people. We ist that these remarks, in connection with what s already been published, will enable all of us to derstand the subject to better advantage, at least e readers will be enabled to see just where the ESSENGER stands. Our aim is to stand with the neral Brotherhood, and, if possible, voice her ntiment in full.

Our Brotherhood has always been opposed to e salaried ministry system in vogue among the pular denominations, believing that it tends to departure from Gospel simplicity. The MES-NGER holds to the same view, maintaining that is in keeping with the Scriptures, and for the st interest of Christianity. We further state, at we will lend no aid whatever in defense of e salaried ministry system. We voluntarily and clearly committed against it.

We are, however decidedly in favor of a sup-orted ministry where prudence and circumstances render it advisable. On this point our Brethren have clearly committed themselves in favor of supporting and aiding ministers, where it is found necessary, and for the good of the cause. In harmony with this we must necessarily make a distinction between a supported minister, and one who receives a stipulated salary. The former receives his living, while the latter receives a fixed amount of money, and out of that he lives. The salaried ministry we oppose, but the supported ministry (if discretely managed) we favor. To show that our Brotherhood makes the same distinction, and favors supporting ministers, where deemed necessary, and is opposed to the salaried ministry, we quote from Minutes of 1890, Article 17:

"Whereas our Brotherhood has always been opposed to a local, salaried ministry, what shall be done with such brethren who, against all advice, are preaching for a stipulated sum? We think it wrong for brethren to receive, and churches to give, a stipulated salary, and brethren and churches doing so shall be admonished to stop receiving and giving such salary; and if they persist in doing so, shall be dealt with as disobedient members. But this shall not be so construed as to prohibit mission boards or churches from giving a proper support to those laboring under their instruction."

The last clause of the above makes it clear that Mission Boards and churches are not prohibited from giving a "proper support to those laboring under their instruction." This is the view held not only by the Annual Meeting, but we maintain that it is both Scriptural and reasonable. If the Mission Board takes a man away from his family and his business, and places him in the mission field, it is the duty of the board to properly support him, and to see that his family is also properly maintained. This position is so reasonable that it needs no argument in its defense. If a church deems it wise and right to give a minister work, so as to require all of his time, it is in harmony with the above decision to also give him "a proper support."

This must not be so construed as to allow churches to hire ministers; it only permits them to properly support those they may select for work under the instruction of the church. Churches that are abundantly able to place men in the field, and support them while thus engaged, have a perfect right to do so. Then we have men among us who ought to be kept in the field. Their work in the ministry is too valuable to be lost. If a church, or the Mission Board, sees that it is for the good of the cause to support such a man, while he devotes all of his time to the ministry, it is perfectly right for them to so act. It is not only right, but it is wisdom.

We have poor ministers among us who need some aid. They work hard for the church, and in many instances are neglecting their financial interest, and sometimes their families. It is but just that these needy preachers should receive some temporal assistance. A few sacks of flour, other provisions and clothing, and even money, frequently, or when needed, will be in perfect keeping with the Gospel.

Ministers who are abundantly able to support themselves in good condition need no aid, nor ought they to expect it. We know ministers who are financially able to devote their entire time to the work of the ministry, and they ought to do so. They need no support. By the above we mean to encourage the helping of the ministry. We believe many of our ministers need aid. The church should help them bear their burdens. Then, on the other hand, we mean to discourage the salaried ministry system. It is not in keeping with our teachings, and must not look to the MESSENGER for support or endorsement.

We are further of the impression, that there is little or no necessity for discussing the salaried ministry system. But few of our people are in favor of it, while the Brotherhood, as a body, is decidedly opposed to it, nor will our people take readily to it; they are not trained just that way, and perhaps never will be. The only chance for a difference of opinion, that we can see, is the manner of "giving a proper support to those laboring under" the instructions of the "Mission Boards or churches." There is, or should be, no controversy about those who are not laboring under special instructions, and especially about those who are amply able to take proper care of themselves. But those who are called to special work by the Mission Boards, or even by churches, are entitled to "proper support," whatever that may mean. Then, in 1891, Art. 6, Section 4, the Annual Meeting decided thus:

"Let the General Committee (Mission Board) give the regular missionaries to understand, that they will be furnished with steady employment, as long as they prove to be the right men in the right place, and that, while thus employed, they shall be sustained temporally."

We quote the above as further proof of the statement, that our Brotherhood is in favor of a supported ministry when circumstances demand it. When a man devotes his whole time to the work, under proper instructions, he is entitled to "be sustained temporally," and only those who are thus employed are entitled to "proper support" in that manner.

If churches desire to aid her ministers temporally, so as to enable them to give more time and attention to the preaching of the Word, it is certainly their privilege so to do, and always has been. We know of many ministers who have been thus aided, and among them some of the best and ablest elders, with whom the church has ever been blessed. We have ministers of rare ability, sound in the faith, and in full sympathy with the Brotherhood, yet lacking sufficient financial ability to properly care for themselves and their families. Such men need more or less aid.

All of this we can do to the glory and honor of God without either running into, or in any manner endorsing the salaried ministry system, or the evils resulting therefrom.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

(Owing to lack of space on First Page the following items are here inserted.)

WE have appointed our love-feast for Saturday afternoon, May 23, and will be glad to have those who may be passing this way to stop off with us. We expect to hold meetings during the week before.

THE lesson for our last prayer-meeting was, "Be a good soldier of Jesus Christ," and it was a good one indeed. The remarks made were to the point and we hope the truths advanced will be made practical in the lives of many who were present.

BRO. W. J. SWIGART was present at the opening of the Brethren's new church in Philadelphia. The Brethren there have now a very pleasant and commodious place for worship and hope that success may attend them in their efforts to build up the church in the City of Brotherly Love. The field is surely a large one, and there seems to be no reason why the work there should not be a success as well as anywhere else.

On the Way.

APRIL 24 was the time appointed by Bro. D. L. Miller, to commence a series of Bible Talks at Goshen, Ind. As I had a special call, by some of the elders, with Bro. W. R. Deeter, to meet in the Bethel church, on some church work, I met with them in church council.

On my return home, I stopped at the depot of the B. & O. R. R., at Milford Junction, where I found Bro. D. L. Miller waiting for a train going to Goshen. He, however, consented to take a ride with me in a private conveyance, and a ride of twelve miles took him over some of the beauti- ful country of Northern Indiana, and soon he was made welcome at the home of the writer, only a few rods from the church-house.

Bro. Miller commenced his Bible Talks with a good audience, - the interest growing until the close of the meeting. Both Jew and Gentile were in attendence. On Sunday Bro. Miller gave us a practical sermon from 1 Cor. 13. The beauty of such sermons is, that none could say that it was in- tended for some one else, but we all felt to say, "I am the man."

On Sunday afternoon we organized our Sunday- school. Bro. Reuben Trimmer was appointed Superintendent, and Bro. Jacob Gorsuch, Assist- ant. Bro. Miller gave the school an encouraging talk. Bro. I. L. Berkey was also present at all of the meetings, and Bro. Lemuel Hillery at a few of the first meetings. Those visiting ministers (including Bro. D. Shively and others) that came to our meetings did us much good.

On Sunday evening a number of the Jews came out from Goshen (one mile) to hear the "Talks." I saw one old Hebrew merchant who was, seem- ingly, much interested. Bro. Miller spoke of the "Jews' Wailing Place," and how desolate a part of Jerusalem now is, comparing it with its former splendor, in King Solomon's time. How dear this ancient city is to the Jewish race, and how some of them will go to that much loved place and weep over their sad condition! Now they are driven and scattered amongst all civilized nations of the world, and can no longer worship at Jeru- salem as once they did.

Bro. Miller, said that, when he viewed the scene at the Jews' Wailing Place, his heart was moved to sympathy and his eyes to shed tears. At this point of the meeting I saw the Jew, referred to above, weeping, until his heart swelled with emo- tion! Oh how dear that place must be to those wandering Israelites. Bro. Miller then exhibited a piece of olive wood on which was carved "Ab- salom's Tomb," and also the name "Jerusalem" written in Hebrew letters. Bro. Miller held up the piece of wood and said, "Perhaps some one can read it." This same Jew came forward, took the wood in his hand, turned to the congregation and read it in Hebrew. The house was packed that night, and most of those present knew the Jew. A death silence, for a minute or two, passed over the large audience, while many wept. Some of the Methodist people from Goshen were almost determined to have Bro. Miller come over in- to the city and give them a talk, or, using their own language, "Give us a good shaking up."

I admire Bro. Miller's way of delivering his "Talks." So many Bible facts are brought out; and the truthfulness of God's Word was brought t in a forcible way, so that the infidel and eptic must say, "There is is a God."

On Monday, April 28, Bro. Wm. Miller, of icago (brother to D. L. Miller), in company th Bro. J. C. Murray, of Nappanee, Ind., came our assistance. When a brother is holding a ies of meetings, and can have a number of nisters help in that good work, it does much to crease the interest of the meeting.

On Tuesday Bro. Murray and I took our leave om the brethren, and, with Eld. W. R. Deeter, et on committee work in the Cedar Creek church, ar Garrett. I was not at the last meeting at oshen, and left very reluctantly. I was told by veral brethren that the good wine was left for e last. The two Miller brothers made their me with the writer, and we enjoyed it much.

Speaking of committee work, how unpleasant it both to the church and the committee! If all urches would adhere to one rule that a school icher gave her pupils the first day, "I have but e rule to give, I want you all to do right,"—ere would be but few calls, if any, for com-ittees! I never heard of any committee that rried off any laurels. Generally some one or ore are seemingly dissatisfied. Well, such is life, d, I presume, a smooth sea and a vessel that ils without meeting any storms will not be und this side of death, but to the faithful ristian soldier, who stems the storms, and out-les the sorrows and troubles of life, there is a rbor to enter at the beautiful city of our God.

THE District Meeting for the Western District Pennsylvania met at the Summit church April ,,and, it may be said, was well attended, and nducted in the spirit that should manifest itself all our actions. Bro. John S. Holsinger was e Moderator. Nothing will be sent to Annual eeting from our District. A committee of five lers was appointed to report at next District eeting upon the propriety of securing a home r the poor brethren and sisters of our District. e think the appointing committee has exercised od judgment in their selection, as the elders pointed are in good circumstances, and have her no heirs or very few. We hope they will member, "That he that hath pity on the poor ndeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given ll he repay him again." Prov. 19: 17.

Eld. J. C. Johnson is the one selected to repre-nt our District at Annual Meeting. The differ-t congregations were well represented by dele-tes. Only a few failed to send delegates.

Wayside Notes.

ON the evening of April 11, I began a series of eetings at Union Bridge, Md., the home of Eld. W. Stover, who is well known in the Brother-od. The meetings closed on Sunday evening, pril 26. Services were held each night and on nday mornings during this time, with the ex-ption of several evenings, commencing with hursday night, April 23. We attended a love-ast at the old Pipe Creek meeting-house on Sat-rday and Sunday, April 25 and 26. Union Bridge a point in the Pipe Creek congregation. The tendance was small at the start, but grew until it came quite good. A most excellent spirit per-ded the meeting. A young man and his wife cided to be baptized in a short time.

The brethren and sisters of Union Bridge know w to support a meeting, and to hold up the hands a weak preacher. I shall remember the dear es there.

The love-feast was largely attended and passed off nicely. About 350 members communed. Bro. Jos. C. Lahman and wife took in the meeting on their way northward. On Sunday morning Bro. Lahman gave us a very practical talk on missions. Bro. Joe knows how to talk on this question, and appreciates its importance to the church.

On Monday, April 27, I had a few hours at Hagerstown, Md., which were spent in looking over the grounds and noting the preparations for the approaching Annual Meeting. The location is well nigh all that could be desired. The buildings are up and nearly finished. They are well arranged and well located as to their several requirements. The Tabernacle is 114 by 120 feet, and will, I think, be considered satisfactory in every respect. All conditions essential to a successful and pleasant Conference exist at Hagerstown, and doubtless will be made available. Altogether we expect this year's Conference to be a success, in some respects the most successful in the history of the Brotherhood.

The Brethren have arranged to have some preaching in the Tabernacle between now and Annual Meeting. May Heaven's blessings attend!

BRO. JACOB FREDERICK held a series of meetings here during the month of December, 1890. He preached about fifteen sermons in all. We then changed our meetings to the meeting-house that we are now going to buy. Wife and I were among the number baptized into the church. Our brother got the people of this place greatly stirred up. Bro. Isaac Bilheimer and Bro. Sol. Blickenstaff assisted him in his meetings. There are thirteen members here now, who have united with the church since our brother commenced his meetings here, and others are seriously considering their soul's salvation. We think that they will soon start to serve the Lord. May the Lord help them to come to him before it is too late!

On Sunday, April 19, Bro. Jacob Frederick preached for us, and after meeting one dear soul came out on the Lord's side.

We organized a Sunday-school here April 19. Bro. George McKenny was elected Superintendent; Bro. Henry Kester, Assistant.

APRIL 11 the members of this church convened in council. Preparations were made for our love-feast, April 24. Bro. C. C. Gibson was chosen as delegate to represent us in Annual Council. Four were received by letter,—two of them officials. All that came before the meeting was satisfactorily diposed of, and, we think, in harmony with the Gospel.

Bro. M. J. McClure assists our veteran elder in the bishopric and occasionally holds forth the Word of Life to this little flock. He is sent as delegate this year from this District.

Our Communion, now in the past, will be remembered by some as being the first occasion of this kind. To others, no doubt, it will be the last time on earth. Among the evangelists who labored with us during the feast and afterwards, were Bro. Daniel Vaniman, of McPherson, Kans., who is visiting the churches on his way eastward to the Annual Conference, Bro. Landon West, of Lanier, Ohio, and Bro. D. B. Gibson, of this State.

On Sunday following, the Sunday-school met in session with over two hundred in attendance. We are glad to report the school as gaining in interest. After the close of the school, Bro. L. West conducted the public services in the interest of the children. Those who have witnessed such efforts, will acknowledge the benefits of such meetings.

Bro. D. B. Gibson addressed the people in the evening from 1 Pet. 2: 29. We hope the day is not far distant when sermons like the one delivered by our brother, may be printed in the GOSPEL MESSENGER for the general benefit of all.

OUR recent quarterly council was a pleasant and amiable meeting. A considerable number of members were present.

We decided to have our Communion Sept. 19, and extend a cordial invitation to all. We also decided to hold a series of meetings, commencing two weeks previous to the love-feast. We also organized a Sunday-school, and we have fair prospects of success. Our prayers are that we may make it a success. Our school will open on the second Sunday in May.

By order of the Mission Board Bro. Solomon Bucklew preached for us on Saturday evening and Sunday morning April 18 and 19. Sunday evening Bro. Bucklew preached a very instructive and interesting discourse in the Free Methodist church in Colchester. Many of the citizens were very favorably impressed, and requested him to preach in our town whenever an opportunity presents itself, offering to procure a house for the purpose. There are quite a number of citizens who never heard one of our members preach, although there has been preaching by the Brethren in this town, occasionally, some years ago. What a grand opportunity for mission work right in our midst! It seems to me, such brethren as Bro. Bucklew, and some others we know of, ought to be employed by the church in evangelistic labor and receive a proper support. There is no danger of a salaried ministry in such cases.

Comparatively few ministers have the gifts and proper qualifications to do evangelistic work to the best advantage, consequently those, who are gifted and qualified for this special work in the church, should be employed in the work. This we believe is the duty of the church, in order to carry out the design of the great commission.

Notes by the Way.

OUR feast occurred April 25. We had a pleasant meeting, good order, and plenty of ministerial help. We are glad to see so many of our Brethren expressing themselves in regard to the best interest of our common Brotherhood. All seem to favor a consolidation of the Book and Tract Work, the Church Erection and General Mission Board, and the MESSENGER. If these were all combined, and managed by the General Brotherhood, it would certainly aid the Mission Work much, and the MESSENGER could, no doubt, be sent out to a better advantage.

Then comes up the thought, "Let well enough alone," and "Who would run it?" I answer, there is always some one to keep all business going. Other denominations manage theirs. We can do the same. It would greatly help our mission work. Let us try it! We can make changes as they are needed for good. I hope that this Annual Meeting will start it.

We would remind our Western Brethren that we would be glad to have them stop, while on their way through our valley. They can come on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad from Cincinnati to Staunton, and north through our valley. We hope to see some at least. We are trying to get a home for the homeless in Second District of Virginia. May the District Meeting grant us the privilege this year and may God be with his people in every good work. S. H. Myers.

Railroad Arrangements.

In addition to what we published for Bro. Geo. W. Cripe last week concerning rates on the Wabash Railroad to the Annual Meeting, we have the following from Eld. John Metzger:

I have been advised by the Wabash R. R. that stop-over privileges will be granted on return passage within limits of tickets over their lines. John Metzger.

Later.—Since receiving the above we are in receipt of a note from Bro. Geo. W. Cripe, stating that parties going to Annual Meeting will leave Cerro Gordo on the morning train of May 29, instead of the 27th as printed last week. Interested parties will please note the correction.—Ed.

The Annual Meeting Grounds.

When I arrived here on Saturday, I noticed that the interests of the Brotherhood are now centering here. I was induced to visit the grounds, located at the extreme South-eastern part of the city, upon the elevation adjoining the Seminary Grounds,—a beautiful location, well adapted for the purpose, situated as it is, upon the apex of a hill. The grounds face to the West, and toward the city. In the East we overlook the valley of Antietam, and the South Mountain. All this forms a beautiful view,—at once grand and beautiful. The surface of the ground is covered with a beautiful rich sward, with plenty of surface drainage. The buildings are well arranged. The Tabernacle has a seating capacity of five thousand. It is well elevated and covered with boards. This affords as good protection as can be had for temporary use. The Dining Hall is large and roomy, as is also the Restaurant, Baggage and Lodging Committee Office at entrance to Grounds.

Electric lamps,—five in number,—will furnish sufficient light to illuminate the Grounds.

The Committee of Arrangements are doing all they can to have everything in good working order. Committees are at work, and everything is well arranged in the several departments, especially on Lodging, which will be ample and reasonably convenient. The Seminary building will be utilized for Standing Committee and other Committees, furnishing also five hundred lodging places. Upon the whole we think the arrangements are as good as can reasonably be expected.

Our Final Report of our Winter's Work For Suffering Homesteaders.

The work has not entirely closed yet, but is in such a shape as to enable us to make our final report.

From Oct. 24 to April 13, my time was almost wholly employed in the interest of the Western drouth sufferers. Some may wonder how we came into this work. It seemed to be a special call to me. Last summer, as I was employed at the carpenter trade, I was often deeply impressed that something should be done for those poor people.

Oct. 24 I started on my first trip West to see the true condition of the people and to fill some calls for preaching. As I preached and visited among the people, I found their condition to be a sad one,—even much worse than I expected. I wondered much what I could do for them. One night, as I lay thinking on the matter, and asking God to direct, the course in which I have labored was presented to my mind. I wrote many private letters to influential churches, and a number of letters for publication in several papers. The readers of the Messenger know the result of the appeals that came to the church from different sources.

My part of the work was much greater than I had anticipated at first. One reason of this is, that the suffering extended over a much larger territory than was known at first. Then the donations were far beyond my expectations. It was not an easy task to supply the people with food to supply all. My aim from the beginning was to do right, to the best of my judgment, to all, and wrong to none.

I want to state to the Brotherhood, who have pitied the poor in reality by such liberal giving, that I did the best I could with the means you intrusted into my hands. I thank and praise the Lord who by his Spirit has so moved the brethren to make the record we have made this winter. I believe that, if the work has been done from a sense of duty and love toward our fellow-men, the record is kept by God as well as man. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40.

My report shows that not a cent has been lost. The receipts show where every dollar has been applied. The amount I received was, $3,544.31; the amount paid out, $3,221.84; balance on hand, $322.97.

Besides the above, I estimate the goods that were sent me at about $1,000.

Of the above amount there was used for family provisions, $1,862.48. We have over a thousand receipts from families. For seed and feed I used $1,160.00; for goods I purchased and freight bills I expended, $144.34. My expenses while in the work were $54.52.

The above expenses include car fare, hotel bills of myself and those who assisted me. I traveled over 2,500 miles during this work.

Since I have commenced my report I have received a letter, containing a draft of $100 from the committee at Mount Morris, for my services, this winter. This is very thankfully received.

When I started at this work last fall, I thought I could give my time and labor free, but being absent from home so much and having no other income, I run behind.

Including this hundred dollars, the cost of getting the means into the hands of the needy was a little over three per cent of the amount handled. If this should not give satisfaction, I would rather not accept the compensation.

We have the records so that we could state how much money was used in each County, but we did not think it necessary to state this. We left no calls unattended to. The balance of the funds on hand will be used as the calls come in.

May the Lord bless all who have assisted the poor in this trying time! J. E. Young.

This place has a population of about 4,000. I received several hundred tracts from the Tract Work, which I am circulating among the people here. I am an entire stranger at this place, and have not seen a member (outside of our family) since my arrival. I want to go down into Oklahoma,—into the part where Bro. John Clingenpeel lives,—as soon as I can arrange to do so.

I felt sorry to hear of the death of Bro. James Evans. I did hope to see him once more in this world, but the dear brother has gone before, and we are left to follow. May we, one and all be so happy as to reach the shore of happiness, forever to dwell with the Lord! Wm. B. Sell.

April 22.

The Lincoln Mission.

During the winter months we have held our services more in the outskirts of the city, in a thrifty, growing suburb, near the locality in which the chosen site for our church house is located.

We held our services in our own hired house to to save expense, but of late we were necessitated to change our services to a Hall near by, on the corner of Twenty-seventh and Holdridge Streets. We believe there are those here who are seeking the ways of the Lord, and we hope and believe that ere long the waters will be troubled and some soul saved. May the Lord work the salvation of many, is our prayer!

While the leaven may be working, yet Satan is also trying to deceive and discourage. We hope all passing this way will stop and enjoy a season of worship with us, thus encouraging the work of the Lord in this city! L. H. Eby.

Bro. Daniel Dierdorff, of Franklin Grove, Ill., has been with us two Sundays in succession, attending to our spiritual wants. About two weeks ago we sent for him to come and bury one who had died to sin. He came to us Saturday, April 25, and gave us a meeting on Saturday evening. The next day he attended to the wants of our applicant, besides giving us two interesting sermons. The next Friday a neighbor came to us, saying that his little daughter had just died. He requested us to send for one of our ministers to conduct the funeral services, to be held upon the following Sunday. Bro. Daniel was sent for, and responded to the call. The funeral was well attended, and Bro. Daniel held forth the Word in his earnest, powerful manner, basing his remarks upon Mark 5: 39, "The damsel is not dead, but sleepeth." Good impressions were made.

May some ministering brother cast his eye upon our goodly town, and select it for his home! We are a little flock, without a shepherd; and are no exception to flocks of that kind, but I think our number might be increased, and we be bound more firmly together in the bonds of love, if we had a shepherd among us to feed and care for us.

Lordsburg Love-Feast.

The first love-feast of the German Baptist Brethren at Lordsburg, California, took place on Saturday evening, April 25. A commodious store building, recently moved to this place, was suitably arranged for the occasion. At 2 P. M. the members of the Lordsburg church convened in council. After a number of certificates of membership were read, those who visted the members of the church made their report. It was shown that love and union prevailed.

Tables were provided for about eighty members, but when the time came to be seated, it was found that a good deal of crowding was necessary to make room for ninety communicants. Twelve ministers were present. Elders J. S. Flory and Wm. Horning spake on the subject of self-examination. Eld. P. S. Meyers officiated in the Communion services. The best of order and attention was given by the spectators.

On Sunday morning Bro. M. M. Eshelman delivered a very interesting address to the children, after which we had very profitable Sunday-school services. At 11 A. M. the large congregation present listened to a very practical discourse, delivered by Eld. P. S. Myers.

Thus ended the first love-feast of the Brethren at Lordsburg. The members seemed to be edified and renewed in Christian vigor. This meeting will long be remembered. Here, for the first time in California, many of the members, recently from different localities of the East, united in holy Communion and Christian fellowship, and renewed that bond that should characterize every child of God.

We hope and pray that we may ever prove to the world that we are the disciples of the Lord, by the love we feel and manifest to and for each other. J. F. NEHER.

[We have received another well-written report of the same feast, but give the above preference, because it happened to reach us first. We sometimes do that when two reports of the same meeting happen to reach us near the same time. We usually select the best, but in this case both were good.—ED.]

Ministerial Help Solicited

WE are very much in need of help in the Martin's Creek church, Wayne Co., Ill. When the writer and several other families arrived here, three years ago, from Kansas, there were seven members living here. They were under the care of Eld. M. Forney, who lived at that time in Richland County. It is a wonder that these members were not almost starved for want of spiritual food, as they had meetings only about twice a year.

We were organized into a working body the summer after our arrival, and we now number about twenty-six members, including three deacons and one minister. There is more work here than any one brother can possibly do. Not only is there a pressing demand for preaching here, but there is also assistance needed in three or four sister churches who are rather weak. There are very few elders in this part of Southern Illinois, and we feel much concerned about help in the ministry. Faithful workers, true to their profession, would be made more than welcome among us.

Those seeking cheap lands, and a pleasant climate should give us a call. Hundreds of acres are being planted in apple trees. A bearing orchard is, with the proper care, almost as valuable here as an orange grove in Florida. The apples on the trees in our large orchards have been selling for about one hundred dollars per acre.

While there is a great deal of poor farming done here, the soil is good enough to make farming a success with proper industry and care. Land ranges in price from $8 to $15 per acre. Improved farms, both timber and prairie land, range from $15 to $30 per acre, according to improvements.

Ministering brethren, contemplating a change, should seek a location where they can be used to the greatest advantage. We think they would do well to call on us here, before going elsewhere. We will gladly give any further information that may be desired. Address us at Jeffersonville, Wayne Co., Ill. Railroad men call the station "Jeff." JOHN HARSHBARGER.

Messages Dropped by the Way.

THE good work of the Ozawkie church is moving onward steadily. Our evergreen Sunday-school and our perennial Wednesday evening social services are producing some of their glorious results. Two weeks ago to-day (Monday) we had occasion to meet for special services and to baptize five precious young souls who came out on the Lord's side after Sunday evening services. Also again to-day for similar services, when six young brethren, ranging in age from twelve to sixteen years, were baptized. All of these are of our regular Sunday-school attendants, and two of them the only two sons of the writer that had remained without the promise. I take courage and thank the Lord. May the grace of God abide with them all and may they prove an adornment to the holy profession of the Christian religion. Since we made this congregation our home, last October, fifteen have been added to our number by baptism, and four have returned who had wandered from the fold.

Our regular councils occur monthly, and much of the time of these meetings is taken up in social service, such as prayer, singing, reading and testimony. A devoted sister remarked to me to-day, that this continuous work had made this church what it is, and keeps it in the right way. Brethren and sisters, pray for us that we grow not weary nor faint by the way! C. C. ROOT.

May 4, 1891.

From Stillson, Iowa.

WE met for public worship at the Stillson school-house the first time, May 3, and after the regular service, organized a Sunday-school. Bro. Elias Long was chosen Superintendent, and Bro. D. Aschenbrenner, Assistant. Bro. Long was baptized five years ago and has never had an opportunity to attend a love-feast. We hope that the time will not be long till we can have such a meeting in Hancock County. There are seven of us who moved from the Garrison church to this County, making nine members living in this County that we know of. Three members are living in Wright County, sixteen to twenty miles away. We will try to see them soon, if health will permit. I am improving slowly, and though not yet able to do any work, I can do some preaching and a little work in the Sunday-school. Our Brethren in Northern and Middle Iowa will remember us, and assist us in our labors. We will do what we can to build up a church in Hancock County, but trust that all the Brethren will remember us in our isolated state.

G. ASCHENBRENNER.

From Cartersville, Va.

FOR the satisfaction of all, I will give a list of the persons who so liberally contributed to the purchase of Hymn Books for our meeting-house:

Southall, 5 cents; Mrs. Miriam Gray, 50 cents; Mrs. Mary Sheets, 20 cents; S. D. Sheets, 15 cents; E. L. Brower and family, 50 cents; Wm. H. Bowser, 25 cents; F. J. Etter, 20 cents; Mrs. S. J. Etter, 5 cents; Mrs. E. Hewitt, 5 cents; Agnes Hewitt, 6 cents; Parker children, 10 cents; Matthew Robertson, 10 cents; R. F. Parker, 10 cents; Robert Hudgens, 10 cents; Mrs. F. J. Johnson, 25 cents; Bommill Frayser, 10 cents; total, $5.86.

The above funds were collected by my mother, and she extends her thanks to the brethren for their kindness in sending the books at such a low price, and she also thanks those who so liberally contributed something toward helping to get them. My mother expects to leave me in a few days for a trip to Illinois to visit her brothers and sister. Remember me in my lonely hours.

Literary Notices.

Mr. D. K. THOMPSON has placed on our desk a copy of the "Beaten Paths," a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 627 pages, by Charles Henry Keays, M. A. The print is large and clear, and the book is finely illustrated. The object of the work is to set forth the leading and well-established principles on which success in living depends. It aims to point out the beaten paths along which the successful in all ages have traveled. It will be found exceedingly interesting for general reading, and will impart many a profitable lesson. It contains chapters on Training the Young, The Elements of Success, The Conflicts of Life, Health, Mind, or Mental Powers, Habits of Life, Dressing, Good Manners, Self Culture, Training the Will, Economy, Making and Spending, Toiling for a Living, and a dozen other subjects of equal importance, on the Bible, Religion, Old Age, etc. For general reading we do not hesitate to recommend the book, especially for the young, and those in the common walks of life.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The Price's Creek church, Ohio, re-organized their Sunday-school April 12 with a full corps of officers. We elected Superintendent, Bro. Joseph Longanecker; Assistant, Bro. M. M. Petry. The interest and attendance so far have been good. We use the Missionary Hymn Books as our singing books.—Jos. Shaeffer, El Dorado, Ohio.

TWO SOULS FOR THE LORD.—At our regular meeting at the Beaver Creek church, May 3, we were ably addressed by Bro. John W. Click. We then repaired to the water-side, where two young sisters were buried with Christ in baptism. May they hold out faithful unto the end!—William T. Eavey, Rushville, Va.

PREACH FOR US.—We are permanently located at this place (the only members here), and should be glad to have any one,—ministers especially,—stop with us on their way to Annual Meeting, or return. We have arranged with the Baptist people for the use of their house, both before and after Annual Meeting. They seem anxious to hear our doctrines expounded, having never heard any of our ministers preach.—V. J. and Anna Drayer, 246 Seventh Street, Ironton, Ohio.

CHURCH DEDICATION.—The Cedar Creek church Anderson Co., Kans., expects to dedicate their new meeting-house on Sunday, May 31. Our Communion meeting will be on Tuesday following. The dedication meeting will commence at 4 P. M. Those coming by rail will stop at Mount Ida on the M. P. railway. The train from the West will arrive here at 1: 34, and from the East at 2: 10 P. M. Those coming from the north on the Santa Fe R. R., will have time to make the change at Garnett.—Lafayette Watkins, Mount Ida, Kans.

GOOD NEWS.—One more was baptized at our late quarterly meeting which passed off very pleasantly. Quite a number of our brethren and sisters have moved to California. This we much regretted. We feared that it would weaken our congregation here in town, but at our meeting, on Sunday evening, the house was quite full and many remarked: "We do not miss the California members so far as numbers are concerned." In our social relation, of course, we miss them. The Lord bless their labors in California.—Geo. W. Cripe, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.— April 11, 1891, the brethren and sisters met in regular, quarterly council. All business was adjusted pleasantly. After council, one precious soul was baptized. April 16, the members were called together to receive two more by baptism. That makes five received by baptism since last summer. Bro. Van Dyke and wife have moved here and expect to remain with us. We expect to re-organize our Sunday-school on the second day of May. The health here is fair.—Thomas Barklow, Myrtle Point, Coos Co., Oregon.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE MAYSILLES FAMILY.—It was thought good by Bro. Maysilles to state through the MESSENGER for the satisfaction of all the friends, both East and West, that the funeral of the mother and the two daughters was preached at the Pine Creek house, April 26, by the Brethren. We are glad to say that the remaining part of the family was able to attend the funeral. All the above three died and were buried inside of a week. None of the family was able to witness the burial of those who died, as the disease proved to be a fatal form of scarlet fever. E. Forney, Polo, Ill.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

ALBAUGH. — In Preble County, Ohio, April 19, 1891, Lewis Albaugh, aged 73 years, 11 months and 28 days.

He removed with his parents to the State of Ohio when one year of age, and has ever since lived in Preble County. He was married to Hester Eikenberry, Oct. 15, 1844. This union was blessed with three children, all of whom survive him to mourn their loss, and comfort their widowed mother. Much of their time was spent at their father's bedside during his last sickness, and their tears flowed together as his spirit took its flight. The first link in the family chain is broken and a tender tie is severed, but the Lord saw that his life work was done, and we trust that he has entered upon his eternal rest.

His principal trouble was an affection of the lungs and heart. He united with the church of the Brethren May 27, 1877, and for nearly fourteen years lived according to his convictions of right in the sight of God and man, expressing much willingness, during his affliction, to depart and be with Christ. Funeral services were held at the Wheatville church, April 18, conducted by Bro. Daniel M. Garver, of Farmersville, Ohio, and the writer, from Rev. 14: 13.

A. G. CROSSWHITE.

BROWN.—At Lamar, Ottawa County, Kansas, March 26, 1891, Bro. Jacob C. Brown, aged 76 years, 9 months and 24 days.

He was born in Stark County, Ohio, June 2, 1814. In 1856 he with his family moved from Ohio to Iowa, where he lived three years, and again returned to Wyandotte County, Ohio. May 3, 1852 he married Mrs. Alvira Kennedy, she being his third wife, and he her second husband. From this marriage, seven children were born, six boys and one girl. In his 21st year he joined the Brethren church, of which he has ever since been a member. In October 1869, with his family he moved to Washington County, Kansas, where he resided until, some five years since, he removed to this place.

The funeral discourse was preached at his late residence by the writer from John 6: 27.

REV. L. WING.

HAZELL.—In the Rock Run church, Pa., April 19, 1891, John Hazell, aged 82 years, 1 month and 8 days.

Deceased was born in Centre County, Pa., March 11, 1809. He had six sons and one daughter who are all living. He is the first one to die in the family. Funeral by the writer at the Forest Grove meeting-house. Text Ps. 71: 18. I. L. BERKEY.

KELLENBERGER. — In the Monticello church, White Co., Ind., April 17, 1891, Bro. Peter Kellenberger.

He was received into the church by baptism, April 12. He leaves an aged father and four brothers to mourn his departure. A. S. CULP.

HORNER.—In the Johnstown church, April 11, 1891, Bro Elias Benton Horner, aged 78 years, 10 months and 22 days. Funeral services by Bro Hiram Musselman and the writer. DAVID HILDEBRAND.

MOOS. — In the same church, Cambria County, Pa., April 20, 1891, Elizabeth Moos, aged 62 years, 1 month and 20 days. Funeral services by the writer.

DAVID HILDEBRAND.

MELTON.— Near Mt. Pleasant, Augusta Co., Va., April 27, 1891, little Clayton, only child of W. D. and Mollie Melton, aged 6 months.

Little Clayton was troubled with an affection of the heart, of which he was a great sufferer. All was done for it that could be done by the hands of a kind mother. The Lord saw fit to remove the tender bud from earth, to transplant it in heaven, there to bloom forever.

Funeral services at Churchville by Rev. Sampsel of the United Brethren church.

R. F. MOWBRAY.

ROBBINS.—In the Yellow Creek congregation, Stephenson Co., Ill., April 22, 1891, Bro. Lewis Edward Robbins, aged 46 years, 1 month and 26 days.

The deceased, when but a boy, hurt his limb in some way. It grew worse continually until last spring, it was deemed necessary to amputate the limb. It seemed to heal at first, but he then began to grow worse, and gradually wasted away until death came to his relief. About a year ago he made application to be received into the church, and has since, we believe, lived a Christian life. The deceased leaves a loving wife and four small children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and loving father. Funeral services by Bro. Jacob Delp.

LEWIS E. KELTNER.

FRY. — In the Allison church, Lawrence Co., Ill., March 10, 1891, sister Elizabeth Fry, aged 58 years and 13 days.

J. TOMBAUGH.

ALTIES. — In the Greenwood church, Texas Co., Mo., sister Catharine Alties, aged 63 years, 10 months and 16 days.

Sister Alties has been afflicted for some time, having become almost entirely helpless. Early in the winter she called for the elders of the church and was anointed in the name of the Lord. She calmly submitted to her affliction until Feb. 17, 1891, when she peacefully passed away. Services by the Brethren. J. J. TROXEL.

MORGAN. In the Monroe County congregation, Iowa, April 30, 1891, sister Sarah Ettie Morgan, aged 26 years, 5 months and 5 days.

The funeral sermon, preached by Eld. Hiram Berkman, was listened to by a large and sympathizing audience.

The deceased was the daughter of A. J. G. and sister Matilda Bailey, and the faithful wife of Bro. A. L. Morgan. Bro. Morgan is now left to care for three small girls,—all quite young.

Nearly two years ago deceased gave her heart to God, and has lived a consistent life since. Her sorrowing brothers and sisters, eight in number, can well pattern after her quiet life and pious example.

ISAAC H. MILLER.

WATERS. — In the Rock Creek church, Whiteside Co., Ill., April 28, 1891, Bro. Lewis M. Waters aged 72 years, 10 months and 13 days. Funeral services by the Brethren from Job 14: 14.

JOHN A. MYERS.

CAMERON.—In the bounds of the Sandy church, near Homewoith, Ohio, April 24, 1891, Catharine Cameron, aged 78 years, 9 months and 2 days.

Deceased was a member of the Evangelical church for many years. Services by Rev. Mony of the Evangelical church, assisted by the writer. ELI STROUP.

SUMPSTINE.—At her home, near Salem, Nebr., of paralysis, April 2, 1891, sister Elizabeth Sumpstine (maiden name Martin) aged 56 years, 9 months and 3 days.

Deceased was born in Richmond, Wayne County, Ind., June 27, 1834. She joined the church in October, 1852, in Northern Indiana, then being only eighteen years old, and has lived, up to the time of her death, a practical Christian worker. She lived out the doctrine she professed, and enjoyed the love and esteem of all who knew her. She had selected text and songs to be used at her funeral. Text, Ps. 31: 5. Songs, "Cross and Crown," No. 206, Gospel Hymn Book, and Brethren's Hymn Book, No. 592.

She has left a monument in the little town of Salem,—a neat brick meeting-house, built mainly by her instrumentality. Though she was limited in this world's goods, she built a house unto the Lord. Would to God we had ten thousand such sisters! Though the worker is dead, the work goes on. Dear children, may the Lord incline you all to meet that faithful mother in the New Jerusalem. An attentive, weeping audience attended the funeral within the sacred walls she built. Funeral services by Eld. P. R. Wrightsman, from Kansas. Rest, dear sister, till we meet again.

KENSINGER. — In the Clover Creek church, Pa., Hannah Elvira Kensinger, daughter of Bro. John and Christian Kensinger, aged 2 years, 2 months and 9 days.

Little Hannah was a victim of diphtheria, and, after a week of intense suffering, her pure spirit took its flight to join the angelic band in the spirit world. The family circle is broken, her place is vacant. She leaves her fond parents and a little brother to mourn her departure. Funeral services were deferred on account of the illness of Mrs. Kensinger. J. B. BRUMBAUGH.

PAUL. — In the Salamony church, Ind., May 3, 1891, sister Elizabeth Paul (nee Linn), aged 61 years, 10 months and 18 days.

Deceased was born in Bedford County, Pa., June 15, 1830. She was united in marriage to Isaac Paul in 1848. They moved to Henry Co., Ind., in 1849, and one year later to Huntington County, same State. Twelve children blessed their union. Of twenty-eight grandchildren two have gone over the silent river. Sister Paul united with the church of the Brethren in 1862, and lived a faithful, Christian life until she was called to her reward. Funeral services by the Brethren. SAMUEL MURRAY.

SHUCK.—In the Pleasant View church, Phillips Co., Kansas, April 13, 1891, sister Catharine, wife of Bro. Samuel Shuck, aged 67 years, 11 months and 18 days.

Deceased was baptized in Somerset County, Pa., in 1849. In 1890 she and her husband came to Phillips County, Kansas, where she resided until death. Funeral services conducted by J. W. Jarboe from Rev. 14: 13.

Deceased was born in Miami County, Ind., Oct 7, 1871. She was a sufferer for about a year with consumption. She bore her sickness with the greatest of Christian courage to the last. Always genial and pleasant, she had a smile for every one.

Sister Florence united with the church in the early part of February, during Bro. I. J. Rosenberger's meetings with us. Only a few months after she called for a Communion, which was much enjoyed by her.

Funeral services from Acts 9: 36-42, by Frank and Jacob Fisher.

J. M. REPLOGLE.

GRAFT.—At her home in Mexico, Miami Co., Ind., April 19, 1891, sister Hannah Graft, wife of Bro. Benjamin Graft, aged 73 years and 22 days.

Sister Graft was born in Preble Co., Ohio, March 21, 1818. She was united with Bro. Graft in holy matrimony, April 14, 1839, and served him as a faithful companion until her death, which was caused by an injury received from a fall which soon proved fatal. Uræmetic poisoning was the immediate cause of death. She was loved and highly esteemed by her many acquaintances. She has been a consistent member of the church for more than twenty years. She leaves a husband, three sons and four daughters.

Funeral services from Rev. 7: 13-17 by Frank Fisher and Dan. Shively.

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report, Notice by the Executive Committee of Annual Meeting.

ALL persons writing to friends attending the Annual Conference, should address them at Hagerstown, Washington Co., Maryland, in care of Annual Meeting Box (writing Maryland in full). We have arranged to have the mail regularly delivered on the Annual Meeting Grounds, where we have an office erected, from which it will be distributed.

All telegrams should be directed in the same manner. All persons, as soon as arriving, should apply to the office of the Lodging Committee, who will assign them to their respective places.

Persons who come with a return certificate to be endorsed by the Secretary, will find his office on the Grounds, and should attend to it at once, for if delayed until the close of the Meeting, he may be so crowded, as to cause some trouble.

We anticipate one of the largest Meetings the Brotherhood has ever experienced, and while we expect to have ample provisions for all (as the good people of Hagerstown are entering very liberally into the spirit of the Meeting), yet we would suggest that, in packing your satchels, not to conclude your preparations completed until you have put in a pair of towels, a comb, brush whisk, etc. W. The constantly increasing travel via the Monon demands additional accommodation. Hereafter the night train, known as "The Electric," will consist of a Compartment Sleeping Car, a regular Sleeper, a Ladies' Car, with an additional Sleeper for use of Indianapolis passengers. The entire outfit has been built by Pullman expressly for this line, and is simply the best. The addition of a Compartment Sleeping Car to the equipment, fills the bill. Families traveling together will appreciate this special accommodation, while those preferring the regular Sleeping Car can have their choice. This train leaves Dearborn Station daily, at 8: 35 P. M., reaches Indianapolis at 3: 45 A. M. and arrives at Cincinnati at 7: 35 A. M. Passengers in Indianapolis Sleeper can occupy their berths until 7: 00 A. M.

A SHORT time ago the almost universal salutation was, "Very wet, very wet; more rain," etc. Now it has changed to, "Very dry, very dry; everything is drying up," etc., and we seem to take pleasure in telling our neighbor what he knows as well and as fully as we do, and then we murmur and complain, just as if our Heavenly Father did not know that we have need of these things. O, for more of that simple, childish faith, which makes us feel that Father knows, and that he will do that which he knows is best for us.

"LIFE has, at its best, a pathetic side; and he who strives hardest to be a true man, and to do a true man's work, is surest to be unsatisfied with himself, and to have an oppressive sense of comparative failure in his life struggle. Even when a strong man seeks to show a cheerful spirit, and a light heart in his intercourse with his fellows, so that others may deem him peculiarly free from sorrow or care, he cannot but suffer through his consciousness of inability to reach his noblest ideal, or through his lack of an ideal that is worthy of his striving. Speaking of the sweet temper and the uniform self-control of the poet Horace, Sir Theodore Martin says: 'Like most playful men, a tinge of melancholy colored his life, if that is to be called melancholy which more properly is only that feeling of the incompleteness and insufficiency of life for the desires of the soul, which with all thoughtful men must be habitual.' Unrest of soul is an essential condition of progress and of a desire for high attainment."

THERE is a home-like feeling in having Bro. Moore with us on the editorial staff, that we enjoy. The Eastern House extends to him a most kindly welcome, with the hope that the relation may be long and pleasant. An office editor necessarily encounters many sorrows, and is made to pass through great tribulations, but then they are so far away that the distance greatly modifies the force of the intended blows. And then, too, the rifts of sunshine that intervene are so bright and refreshing, that they cover a multitude of sorrows. May it be the lot of our office editor to have much of the sunshine and little of the shadows!

DURING the present school term we are having a class in exegesis on Job, and more than ever are we made to feel that Job is a wonderful book. While Job is set forth to the world, as the man of patience, yet patience is not the pith and substance of the record. The book is a most curious and wonderful discussion with three against one. The subject under discussion is, "Are afflictions the outgrowth of special sins?" His three friends affirm, Job denies. After considerable discussion both sides appeal to God as arbiter, to whom they attribute all power, all wisdom, and who therefore can render a satisfactory decision. He points out the defects in the positions of both parties, but gives the question to Job, and exacts an humble acknowledgment on the part of his friends. Yes, it is a wonderful book. Read it carefully.

WE believe that it is a very general feeling on the part of us all, that the church shall prosper, and for us to know that it is not doing so would be painful. Yet, should we not consider seriously what we, as individuals, are doing to make it prosper? We look for it and pray for it, but expect it to be done outside of ourselves. The feeling seems to be that everybody else has better opportunities than we have. Now suppose that every body else entertains this same feeling, who will do that which we so much desire should be done? After all, individual effort is the secret of success. A wonderful work could be done were we all to do our very best. God works through us as instruments, and he will most gladly use each one and all of us, if we are only willing so to be used. When there is almost enough to do a thing, only a little more will do it. This little more we can be. Let us all feel this, and when the Lord calls, may the answer be, "Here, Lord, I am."

"CHILDREN cannot be expected to prove themselves well trained, where the cardinal rule of their parents is to 'treat them all alike.' And what is true of the family, in this respect, is true of the school. The mark from a blue pencil on yellow paper will have a greenish hue, and on red paper it will have a violet, or purple, hue; while on orange-colored paper it will be almost a neutral tint. Only on white paper will the blue pencil make its own blue mark. Not often does nature put exactly the same tint on two minds, or dispositions, or souls, of a family or of a school. And he who would write his teaching upon the young must vary the color of his pencils, if he would make a true blue mark on them all alike. Never can a man put the exact tint of his pencil on any one person; for the white soul is a soul that he never has to deal with. The same word spoken, even the same tone of a word, will never make the same sound on one hearing soul that it does on another. Here is a responsibility laid upon every one—not parent or teacher merely to be incessantly vigilant of his manners and his moods and ways in the presence of others. And here is the special duty of a parent or teacher to learn that the only way to make all the members of a family, or of a class, turn out alike well, is to treat each and all according to their soul-colors,—differently."

DID you ever see the pictures of the sick terrier, in the latter one of which he is made to say: "Who said rats?" It is rather a ludicrous illustration to use in a religious paper, but it is so apt that we must be pardoned for using it. We, in our religious work, represent the sick terrier. We are so awful bad that we are fit for nothing but to lie around, have our heads tied up and take medicine. But let some one cry out rats (a chance to make money), and if there is not a a mighty waking up, there must be sickness indeed, nigh unto death. We hear of a good field for Gospel work, but we are so sick, so indifferent, that we give the matter only a passing notice. But in addition to this, let there be another voice,—a splendid opening for making money, great bargains, and we have a wonderful awakening in that direction. The souls out there become doubly precious, and we have plenty that are willing and anxious to take up the cross (?) and go,—what for? Professedly, to save souls,—really, to make money and get rich. Of course, to this picture is given a shade of modification when it is taken into consideration that our circumstances often make it necessary that we should look after the one, in order to be able to accomplish the other. But in no case should the salvation of souls be made dependent upon our chances of making money in the move.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

As many of our people will have occasion to travel on our railways in the near future, let us make a few suggestions that may be in place.

1. In entering the coaches, don't crowd or hurry that you may get the choice of seats. To do so is a breach of good manners. It may also save your pockets from being picked.

2. When in the coaches, be respectful and courteous, and don't talk or do anything that will interfere with the comfort or pleasure of others. Be peculiar in the sense of ladies and gentlemen.

3. When you reach your destination, wait till the train stops before attempting to get out. Railroad men always give ample time to get out, decently and in order. To be uncouth, rude and boisterous is not the work of godliness.

About lunching in the coaches enough has been said. We heartily approve and hope that it will not be forgotten.

THE ANGELS.

"Ministering spirits."—Heb. 1: 14.

BLEST angels! Guardians from above,
Swift messengers of the Father's love,
Glad tidings from the throne to bear,
For suffering saints in conflict here.

When dangers threaten by the way,
The angels guard with heavenly sway;
No evil can us here betide,
On either hand the angels glide.

When doubts and fears begin to rise,
And hope to sink beneath the skies,
Kind angels whisper, "Faithful be,
There's just a step from heaven to thee."

The tempter's seeking here and there,
The souls of men with sin to snare;
Like cruel beasts he seeks his prey,
That souls of men he might betray

But angel-guards, of power and might,
Will put the tempter's hosts to flight,
And from temptation's evil fate,
Provide a means for our escape.

When dear ones from our side are torn,
And hearts are sad and all forlorn,
The angel bands keep hovering near,
To heal the wound and dry the tear.

When on our couch of death we come,
The angel-guards come in the room,
And wait to bear our souls away,
To brighter worlds of endless day.

THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS.

Will you compare and harmonize Matt. 12: 40 with Matt 20: 19, concerning Jonas and the time the Son of man was in the heart of the earth? A. J. SMITH.

[IN No. 11 of the present volume, Bro. D. E. Price has a well-prepared article on this subject, and, for the benefit of those who may not have noticed his article, we reproduce a part of it here, trusting that it may receive a careful examination. To us the position taken by Bro. Price is entirely new, and if correct, makes a very satisfactory harmony between the two passages referred to.—ED.]

We will first refer to the language of our Savior, Matt. 12: 40, "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." This Scripture is almost universally applied to the time that Christ was in the grave, which we cannot sustain by any testimony. Now the skeptic demands of us to show that he was three days and three nights in the grave, which we invariably fail to do and bring reproach on the cause, while strengthening the infidel in his course.

According to the record, Christ was only about thirty-six hours in the grave, and was not buried in the heart, but in the surface of the earth, which still makes more of a contradiction, or disagreement. Hence we must look somewhere else for the fulfillment of that Scripture.

We will hear what Paul has to say on the subject, Eph. 4: 9, 10, "Now he that ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heaven, that he might fill all things." We understand that the heart is near about the center of the body, and Paul's language, "the lower parts of the earth," would convey about the same idea. When did he descend to the lower parts of the earth? Did he do so while his body lay in the grave? Nay, verily. He descended after his resurrection. Everybody believes that he ascended to heaven in his resurrected body, and Paul says, "He that descended is the same as he that ascended." Hence, if Christ ascended to heaven in his resurrected body, he also descended to the lower parts of the earth, or the underworld, in his resurrected body.

We will now refer to 1 Peter 3: 18, 19, 20: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which he also went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

Here is where a great many again fall into the same error, by taking the position that Christ preached to the spirits in prison while his body was in the grave. However, no one can sustain that idea if he properly reads the text. One of the greatest reasons of our misunderstanding the Scriptures is, because we do not read them careful enough.

Another point to which we must pay strict attention is, to supply in the mind what is not expressed in language; for all written language as well as spoken, is more or less elliptical, and if the omitted part is not supplied, we do not catch the full meaning of what is written or spoken.

Now, then, let us examine Peter's language, "For Christ once suffered for our sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh." Now we have a dead Christ, which all have to admit, but quickened by the Spirit. Quickening means to make alive, hence now he (Christ) is made alive. How is he made alive? Peter says, "By the Spirit." Now we have him dead and made alive, and are ready to read further. "By which (Spirit,—not expressed, but understood, which must be supplied in the mind) also he (not his spirit, but he through the influence of the Spirit by which he was made alive) went and preached to the spirits in prison. Hence, if language has any meaning, we are driven to the conclusion that he preached to the spirits in prison after his resurrection, which perfectly agrees with the language of Paul, already quoted.

The question may now arise, "When was Christ three days and three nights in the heart, or the lower parts of the earth?" We answer, "Some time during his forty days' sojourn on earth between his resurrection and ascension into heaven."

SHALL WE CHANGE OUR CHURCH NAME?

BY LEWIS W. TEETER.

To my mind there has not been sufficient argument offered to justify the changing of our church name.

It has been argued that the church should not have "German" in its name, because so many of its members are not Germans, and do not speak the German language. This is, at this time, the greatest objection to the present name. This is, however, not a disreputable feature. While some of the neighboring countries to Germany may have a dislike to Germans and their country, yet it is true that dislikes and malice are often held without sufficient ground for doing so.

The reputation of Germany stands fair as compared with other nations; not so much so as a Government, as on account of the great men she has produced,—men whose reputation is world-wide, and they are known to be of German birth. There is no combination of ideas more characteristic of the church than the name, "German Baptist Brethren church."

If there were but one body in the world professing to be followers of Christ, then simply "The Church," would be name enough. If no other body called itself "Brethren," "The Brethren" would be name enough to make the proper distinction, therefore words must be added until the name becomes sufficiently definite.

If we combine these two names, above mentioned, we have "The Brethren church." But there are other bodies, calling themselves Brethren. They also say that they are a church, hence there are a number of "Brethren churches." This, therefore, is not definite. We next add "Baptist," which is a characteristic of the church, in allusion to baptism; for its literal meaning is, one who baptizes or immerses. Then we have "Baptist Brethren church." But there are others who call themselves "Baptists." They say that they are also "Brethren" and a church. Therefore "Baptist Brethren church" is not sufficiently definite. Hence we add the word "German," pertaining to the country where the church assumed a greater prominence as an organization, which gives us the name, "German Baptist Brethren church."

It is no doubt necessary, in some places, to give explanations of the name, where other bodies call themselves by almost the same name. But while this may be required in a few cases at present, we may be assured that if we should change the name, we would be called on many times to explain the new name; for a new name would be new to all, while the old name is new to only a few.

Suppose that we should change our church name and make our announcements in the new name, many would wonder what new sect this is, because the name is new. What else could they think? This would necessitate an explanation or else it would be very misleading, and an influence against the cause, for the more considerate and solid-thinking people are not much inclined toward a new sect.

Again, many would not know why the name was changed. To them a full explanation would have to be made, which could not be done in a few words only, while the old name would need none to such.

Again, to make a change in the church name without sufficient justifiable reasons for doing so, would impress the public mind with the thought of instability, which is always regarded as a mark of weakness by the best minds.

Again; even in the event that some other religious body should call itself by exactly the same name, there would be no necessity for us to change our name; for we would have no difficulty to prove priority of name, hence it would militate against them, more than against us.

For illustration, it is said that surnames of persons originated from some circumstance peculiar to persons, such as occupations, locations, etc. Suppose, then, that there are three persons living in the same locality, named John. One of them is living on a hill; another is a blacksmith; the third, a farmer. Now to distinguish those Johns from each other, the neighbors will, from circumstances, call the first, "John on the hill," but afterwards, more briefly, John Hill. The second, "John the blacksmith," afterwards, John Smith. The third, "John the farmer," afterwards, John Farmer. Now if John Hill moves down into a bottomfield, he dare not call himself "John Bottomfield," for the people would not know what had become of John Hill, who was a real good neighbor, neither would they know who this stranger, John Bottomfield, is. Similarly, if John Smith would go to farming and John Farmer would go to blacksmithing, they could not with safety nor propriety, change their names, for it would confuse the whole neighborhood.

Suppose now that the original John Smith had been a very poor man with a large family, which had excited the sympathies of some wealthy neighbor, who, in making his last will and testament, had bequeathed to this poor man or his heirs, one thousand dollars. Afterwards the rich man and poor John Smith both die. The rich man's executor settles his estate, and, in making the final distribution, he goes in search for the said John Smith. He finds a John Smith in the village, but he is in good circumstances with a good farm in the country; but the family of the original John Smith, who was in the mind of the said testator, is poverty-stricken, living in a hovel, and desolate, but, because the father changed his name from "Smith" to "Farmer," when he moved on the farm, the family is known as the "poor Farmer family," this may now result in a total loss of the bequest to the real heirs, or a vexatious suit at law, and a great loss to the estate.

The German Baptist Brethren church is now a body of no little property, as the last census shows; and nearly all, if not all, her property is now in her present name. It is a question whether there would not be disturbances of otherwise quiet titles of lands donated for church edifices and yards, by persons who are not members of the church, or the heirs of such donors, as some of those titles are drawn up, granting a lease of certain described lands to be used as specified and by the religious body identified in said lease, and when such lands shall no more be used by the said religious body for the purpose specified in the lease, the lands shall be owned and controlled by the original owner, his heirs or devisees.

Again; if any bequest were made to any of the charitable institutions of the church in the present name of the church, all such bequests would be imperiled by the changing of our church name; for an executor could not find such a church as he finds named in the will, and could not secure such a voucher as the court would require him to file, as the name on a voucher must correspond to the name of the devisee named in the will.

If a change of name could be made at all with safety to church properties, local and general, the new name should have to be legalized by the courts of every County in which there is an organization of the church, by a petition to such courts, setting forth the reasons for the change of name, and what the new name shall be. All incorporated bodies of the church, whether for County, State, or general purposes, should have to adopt a resolution in their respective conferences, that the names of such corporations be changed. It might not affect Endowment Notes, so long as the original design of the endowment is not changed, yet it might give a pretext to find fault and make trouble.

If a change of name is to be made, we should wait until the necessity for a change becomes more apparent to a greater number of the members of the church; for it cannot be done satisfactorily till then. So long as the necessity is not very pressing, many different names will be proposed, so that if we should decide to change the name, it would take a longer time to agree on what the new name should be.

To change the church name is a matter that concerns about 60,000 persons who are members of the church, and I am not certain that a change should be made without the consent of all of them, for the rights of all members on such a question are equal. It would be quite unsatisfactory to me, for my family to change our family name from Teeter to anything else, even to the extent of a single letter, without my consent. Though they might have the majority, yet all would concede to me the right to object, if not satisfactory.

Again, it would be inconvenient to have the name changed, for instance, in writing up biographical accounts of members who had lived a long time in the church, before a change of name was made, and died some time after. To such biographies, necessarily an explanation would have to be added in every case. This would often occur, even in writing up obituaries of members to be used at funerals, which, without an explanation, would be misleading, and unsatisfactory to relatives, and it would be a long time before it would be otherwise.

In conclusion we will say: Any name that does not carry the mind far back to the original organization, needs an explanation appended to it, that will carry the mind back to something original. In the present name, such references are made: The first intimation of baptism that we have, is from the preaching of John in the wilderness, and because he baptized, he was called "John the Baptist." Christ was a Baptist, because he was baptized, and had his disciples to baptize, and commanded baptism. "Baptist" refers to one of our most prominent characteristics. Again, Christ says, "One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren." Matt. 23: 8. "Brethren" is therefore a very prominent feature.

Then, when the gloom of the "Dark Ages" was dispelled, when persecution had lost its fierceness, when the effects of the Great Reformation were as a beam of sunlight peering into the dark chasms of skepticism, illuminating the way of the earnest seeker after the Truth, causing Antichrist to step down and out,—then the everlasting principles of faith and works, as taught in the Gospel, were once more raised as the Royal Banner of King Jesus, by the instrumentality of eight brave Germans, at Schwarzenau, Germany. Hence, as a distinguishing feature of the latter uprising of the church, according to God's will, nothing is more prominent next to the words "Baptist" and "Brethren," than the word "German," for the work was done by the Germans in the German land.

Jesus was called a Nazarene, because he was brought up in the city of Nazareth. Hence he was also called "Jesus of Nazareth." The question, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth," shows that it did not rank among noted cities. Paul was called a "ring leader" of the sect of the Nazarenes. This name may not have pleased the fancies of the church at that time. It had, however, the positive effect of referring the mind to the geographical spot where Jesus, the Great Head of the church, was brought up, which no other word but Nazareth could do.

So the mere utterance of the word "Dunkard" sometimes has the desired effect. It is an anglicized cognate of the German word, and means baptism.

Let us be content with our name. The cause is prospering, the church is growing, our corporations are well founded, and if we all live out the principles of our profession, our reputation will be good with the name we now have. If we do not live so, there is no name in the world that will remove, nor hide our short-comings.

THE NOBLEMAN, SERVANTS AND CITIZENS OF LUKE 19: 12-14.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

THE parable was given by our Lord on the way to Jerusalem to remove the idea that prevailed among his followers, "that the kingdom of God should immediately appear." It is clear from the meaning of the parable that Jesus was not at that time about to set up his kingdom, but that he was going to leave the world for the purpose of taking a journey into a distant country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and then to return. During his absence he commits the Truth to his servants to improve as a sacred treasure, until he should return. He would reckon with them on his return, for the manner in which they had used the treasure, and call them to a strict account, rewarding the faithful and punishing the negligent.

The parable receives additional force as addressed directly to his hearers, who were familiar with the case of Archelaus, to which it is supposed our Lord particularly alludes. "Archelaus went to Rome to solicit the Emperor that he might be re-instated in his father's kingdom. (See Matt. 2: 22). The Jews sent a message (an embassage) after him to plead and petition against him. Notwithstanding, he was confirmed in the kingdom of Judea, and when he returned, took ample vengeance of his enemies and opposers." This circumstance, in a literal way, fitly illustrates the peculiar nature of Christ's kingdom.

THE NOBLEMAN.—A nobleman is one well-born, one of noble birth. This may be truly said of our Lord. He was born King. His parentage, lineage and royalty are the highest, with an ancestry unequaled, and a dominion coeval with the ages. This nobleman did not enter directly into his kingly power. He goes into a far country to receive the kingdom. Christ did not exercise his kingly authority while here on earth. His work, while here, was a preliminary step, in which he would establish his right and title to reign, and to organize a system of government and religion into which his followers might be introduced, that they might become proper subjects of his kingdom.

THE SERVANTS.—The ten servants of the parable certainly represent the disciples of Jesus. "The servant is not greater than his Lord." The ten servants receive ten pounds, each servant a pound, with the instruction, "Occupy till I come." Each disciple of Christ receives the Truth, the Word of God, as a treasure which he is required to use, not for selfish ends simply, but also for the good of others, and in this way he improves it and gains more to it, and by so doing, he gains a reward when Christ returns with his kingdom.

THE CITIZENS.—A citizen is one that enjoys the rights and privileges of a city, or country, and in the parable the term is applied to the Jews generally. The Jews are they of whom it is said. "He came to his own, and his own received him not." The Jews were the chosen people of God, "to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever." (Rom. 9: 4, 5).

But a citizen is not a servant; for his "citizens hated him," according to the parable. Concerning this our Lord said in John 15: 24, "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father. But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause."

The message, or embassage, which the citizens sent after him, saying, "We will not have this man to reign over us," cannot so well be employed in the application of the parable, in my judgment. While the Jews show by their actions, by their persistent rejection of the Savior, that they will not have this man to reign over them, yet a literal message, or embassage, does not apply, save as it relates to their prayers and their expectation of a Messiah yet to come.

One important lesson which we may learn from the parable is, that being a servant does not insure salvation. The servant that had kept his Lord's money laid up in a napkin, who failed to improve the pound entrusted to his care, was called a wicked servant by his Lord, and the pound was taken from him and given to him that had ten pounds. It becomes, then, a vital question with every servant of the Lord: How shall I improve the precious treasure committed to my trust? How shall I use the Truth so as to save my soul, and save the souls of others?

Simply being a servant will not insure the reward. We may, by our negligence, coldness and indifference, be classed among the slothful and wicked servants. God wants workers—live men and women. A servant and yet not in the Lord's work! How is this? His chief aim is to serve himself. "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion," says the prophet Amos. We should not trust in mere profession, and rely upon church membership. It is true service that avails.

Is it not wonderful that the more we do for others, the more we disseminate the Truth, the brighter, the purer, the richer our own souls become? This makes the service of Christ doubly enjoyable, since he has made it more blessed to give than to receive, and this giving should be service,—willing, loving service.

TRY THE SPIRITS.

BY C. F. WALKER.

CHARITY should never fail us, but fidelity to God will not allow us to tolerate errors in others. Our love for God and them will make us hate their delusions. Many shout and sing in what they call the Holy Ghost revivals of to-day, and carry at least an outside showing of sanctity, but their hearts are as tightly closed against what we call saving Truth, as was Jericho to the hosts of Joshua. Shall we say, "Theirs is a spurious work?"—some will think this is akin to blasphemy, for they hold it to be the direct work of the Holy Spirit. Others look at this matter indifferently, but say of modern evangelists, "They are good Christian men," and even many who profess Christianity think that great and good works are being wrought in this way.

Deferring all hasty judgment, let us first have the testimony of the Word, by which to formulate our opinion. "He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." Religionists are here placed under two heads, and the connection shows them to be dominated by two spirits,—one of Christ, the other of Satan; and so the Spirit spake expressly that there would be a revolt from the faith in the latter times, wherein seducing spirits and doctrines of devils would be received,—a lawless departure from Truth would cause the temple, from which the devils had been cast out, to be again polluted by them, so the last state would be worse than the first. 1 Tim. 4; 2 Thess. 2. It would not have been thus if the Spirit of God had been cherished. "The word will go out against her. Babylon is fallen, is fallen, -and is become the habitations of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit."

Here Satan is an angel of light and his apostles are in the guise of the apostles of Christ. 2 Cor. 11: 13-15.

It has been believed in the past by the Protestants, that many false prophets had gone into the world,—even in John's day,—by whom Gospel Truth was soon corrupted. We must try carefully to discern between the false and the true. The Savior spake of ravening wolves coming to us as lambs of the flock, professing to be the heralds and embassadors of Christ, saying, "Lord, Lord." Howbeit they were not doing the will of the Father. In the final day of accounts, they will say to Christ, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" Matt. 7: 15, 22.

Evidently they are under great delusions. Thinking their mighty works are wrought in Christ, in his name, they have cast out devils and showed great signs and wonders insomuch that, had it been possible, they would have beguiled the very elect in the belief that God was with them. Nevertheless Christ will say, "I never knew you: you were destructive to the flock; your work was wrought by the power of lawlessness, and it is evident, therefore, that, by works or belief, so far as your feelings guide, we cannot discern the way of life." We may add, to the wonderful works now seen, the casting out of devils, the healing of the sick, and great signs, and yet it may all be of Satan in the name of Christ. But we have an infallible detector in this matter, which Christ gave, when he said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." The will of God is made known in his law, and by his holy prophets and apostles, hence if we speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them,—the fruits of true love toward God and toward our fellow-men, which leads us to attend to every Word of God, rejoicing in the Truth, believing all things and hoping all things. This shows what spirit we are of.

Another test is given in the following: "Hereby know ye the spirit of God. Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God." A superficial glance would lead us to think that this is not an infallible test, for false prophets will preach Christ, but it is quite evident that to acknowledge Christ as come in the flesh, is to accept and believe his glorious mission, for no one truly accepts Christ in the flesh, without accepting and believing his Word in full. False prophets may profess to do this and yet be in the condition of the Jews, who said, "We know that God spake unto Moses." They mystified and perverted and virtually rejected Moses, notwithstanding their lying profession. If they had lived in Moses' day, they would have rejected him as they did Christ.

So to-day the father of lies will speak in his children. When God spake by Christ, the followers of the adversary rejected his testimony by misconstructions and to-day haters and rejecters of Christ's Truth, whether spoken by himself, or his servants, do not keep his Word and hence do not love him. John 14: 21. Christ is the truth, and God is a God of truth, but these have not the spirit of Truth but the spirit of error, which will lead them to love and make a lie, hence to be damned. Rev. 22: 15. No lie is of the truth, and when truth is exalted, loved and sought with all the heart, it will lead us to hold fast that which is good, and to prove all things. Thus we may discern between the false and the true. "By this we do know that we know him (God) if we keep his commandments." "He that saith, I know him (judging by his feelings), and keepeth not his commandment, is a liar and the Truth is not in him."

"MOTHER."

BY PETER BROWER.

WHAT word is impressed so forcibly upon the human heart as the word mother? Coming from the innocent lips of little children, it has a peculiar charm. It speaks of one to whom he has looked for trust and protection. A mother is the truest, earthly friend that we have. When trials, sudden and heavy, fall upon us, and when times of adversity fall upon us, only mother can give us the consolation we so much appreciate. When friends, who rejoiced with us in prosperity, have forsaken us in adversity, mother still proves true to her noble character and name. Often friends, who rejoiced with us in our sunshine, desert us as soon as troubles thicken and gather around us like a threatening pall, but mother still clings to us, and endeavors, by her kind counsels and sweet love, to drive away the dark clouds which hover over us, and she causes peace and sunshine to return to our hearts again.

The kind voice of a mother has often been the means of reclaiming a wayward or dissipated child, when it had wandered far out in the paths of sin and wickedness. Even after that loving voice is hushed in death, its gentle wooings seem to haunt the prodigal child until he is persuaded to return. Though she is "dead yet she speaketh." The lonely convict, in his dreary cell, no doubt often thinks of the innocent days of his childhood, when this guardian angel watched over him.

Mother is indeed a sweet name, and her station in life is a holy and noble one. In her hands are placed minds to be molded for good or evil, almost at her will,—minds fitted to shine in all their splendor and usefulness here upon earth, if taught aright. All this is but little, compared with that which awaits them in heaven.

A mother's love, how great! As we see her at the bier, weeping over her offspring, we are made to think that the depth of her sorrow cannot be exhausted. As we hear her offer that sympathetic, plaintive prayer for her wayward child, in even the lowest vices of sin, we are made to exclaim, "What wonderful love!"

There is One that has still greater love. "God is love." 1 John 4: 8. All the love upon earth is but a small portion of godliness, or God's nature, among the human family. How great his love was toward us, that he "sent his Son to be a propitiation for our sins!" O how his love must go out after the erring ones of the human family, and entreat them to forsake the error of their way!

Kind reader, have we not often felt his wooings even when we were far out in the cold world? Those of us who have returned, have no doubt often had to confess how little his love is known to us. Let us try more fully to appreciate this great love, and manifest it in our lives towards the erring ones, as well as toward our brethren and sisters, "for by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

ANOINTING.

BY JESSE CROSSWHITE.

[A letter addressed to Dr. J. C. Yoder, Huntingdon, Pa., and sent by the doctor for publication in the MESSENGER.—ED.]

YOUR letter, in reply to my article on "Anointing the Sick," published in GOSPEL MESSENGER, is to hand, and carefully considered. You seem to be under a misapprehension of my language somehow. You say that in my opening remarks I say that I believe the practice of the Brethren on this to be right, and then, before I am through, I contradict the statement. Now, just how you ever came to such a conclusion as that, I am unable to understand. If you will examine the article carefully, you will certainly see that I make no such statement. I suppose you have reference to the clause in my article where I say, "It is not the design of this article to criticise Bro. Miller's representation of the practice of the Brethren in the administration of this service, because I believe that Bro. Miller has, in this, as in all the other subjects treated, given a very correct exposition of the subject, as understood and practiced by the general Brotherhood."

This statement applies to Bro. Miller's article in the Almanac, as being a correct exposition of the general practice of the Brethren, but is by no means an acknowledgment of the correctness of the practice. If so, what would have been the sense in making the arguments I adduced to correct the practice as now existing?

The next point in your letter, which I wish to notice, is an error which I think you, in common with many others, have fallen into, viz., that James does not mean ordained elders. There are two kinds of elders spoken of in the Scriptures. Both of them you will find alluded to in 1 Tim. 5. In the first verse we read, "Rebuke not an elder, but entreat him as a father, and the younger men as brethren." Here notice also the German, "Einen Alten schelte nicht sondern ermahne ihn als einen Vater; die Jungen als die Brüder." Now in this case it is clear that the word "elder" has reference to age and not to office. The word "elder" here is spelled in the English just as it is in the following verse 17, "Let the elders that rule well, be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine." In the German we have it, "Die Aeltesten, die wohl vorstehen, die halte man zwiefacher Ehren werth; sonderlich die da arbeiten im Wort und in der Lehre."

Now there can be no doubt but that this refers to officers in the church. Now I want you to specially notice the difference in the spelling of the word "elder" in the German,—one being Alten, the other Aeltesten. You will also notice that in the case, as given in James 5, the word is not Alten but Aeltesten. This surely ought to convince any one that the text means "an officer in the church,"—an Aeltesten.

There is also a very clear distinction made in the German, as also the English, between elders and deacons, while there seems to be no difference between an elder and a bishop. See Titus 1: 5, 6, 7.

It is clear that the words elder and bishop are here used interchangeably, and that both expressions refer to officers in the church who have been duly set apart by the proper authority, else what does the text mean by saying, "Set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I appointed thee," German: "Dass du solltest vollends anrichten, da ich es gelassen habe, und besetzen die Städte hin und her mit Aeltesten, wie ich dir befohlen habe." It is surely quite clear that these were ordained elders and were called bishops. The words "elder" and "deacon" are never used interchangeably, neither in the English or German. See 1 Tim. 3: 8. "Likewise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre." German, "Desselbigen gleichen die Diener sollen ehrbar sein," etc. True, a minister in English is called a Diener in German, but this has reference to service, or work, and not to the office which he holds.

From all these facts in the case, I think it is clear that the apostle James refers to officers in the church as being the persons to perform the anointing, and not the laity, or women, as you seem to infer.

As to the "faith cure," or miraculous healing, to which you seem to refer in your letter, I have no faith in it, or even tolerance for it. I do not believe that any one, since the apostolic age, has been able to perform a miracle in the true sense of the word. My understanding of the word "miracle" is the performance of some supernatural work which requires either the suspension of the organic laws which govern it, or the bringing into requisition some unknown law or power which has heretofore been totally wanting. In the Scripture to which you refer, Mark 16: 17, 18, these were evidently the miracles which the first converts to Christianity should perform as signs to the unbelieving Jews, and also to the apostles themselves, as evidences of the universality of the Gospel kingdom. See Acts 10: 45, 46.

You will observe in the case, to which you refer in Mark 16, that the word "signs" is used in the English instead of "miracles," but the German has the same word, Die Zeichen, that it has in John 2: 11, "Das ist das erste Zeichen," etc., and, indeed, throughout the entire Scriptures you will observe this same word, Zeichen, for miracles. Therefore I conclude that the proper rendering in the English is thus: "And these miracles shall follow them that believe, in my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues," etc. Now if all the "signs," Zeichen, "miracles" do not follow, what evidence have we that any of them do? In other words, if the speaking with new tongues does not obtain, why credit the assertion of those who make pretenses to the "faith cure?" As no one professes the "gift of tongues" in a miraculous way, and as no one professes "the interpretation of tongues" in a miraculous way, and as no one professes to "drink any deadly poison" without any dangerous effects, I must conclude that the pretension to miraculous cures is an imposition for if all the signs do not follow them that believe to the present time, it is an evident fact that none of them do.

But you will probably say that this is a contradiction of my former position in my article on the anointing. No, not at all. I do not believe there is any miraculous cure in the matter, no more than I believe that the remission of sins, as a result of water baptism, is miraculous. I have stated in a former part of this letter, that a miracle is either the suspension of all organic laws governing, or the creation of some supernatural power, which is not inherent in the case. But wherever there already exists an inherent or divine law, and we only work in harmony with such existing law, the result which follows is no miracle. Hence, when we baptize the believing penitent in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, for the remission of sins, it is no miracle if he receives remission in accordance with that law which says that "Whosoever believeth in his name, shall receive remission of sins," for, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." No more is it a miracle if we say we can aufrichten—"lift up" the believing sick from their bed of sickness, when they call for the elders of the church, and are anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, and a prayer of faith is made to God for their recovery.

This recovery is just as surely traceable to one of God's divine laws and promises, as is the case of the remission of sins in baptism. The only question which remains in the case is this, "Do you believe that the man who would take the penitent sinner into the water and baptize him, doubting God's promise, as to his receiving the remission of sins, would be a proper administrator?" I want you or any who may ever read this letter, to ponder this question well before answering me. Then, if you answer in the negative, ask yourselves the same question with reference to the anointing of the sick: "Can a man perform this service acceptably, who doubts God's promise?"

I have now referred to all the points contained in your letter, except those special gifts in 1 Cor. 12. These I understand to be special bestowments which were necessary in the early establishment of the church, but became unnecessary after the claims of the church were fully recognized. Hence I do not recognize the existence of any of them in the same sense in which they existed then. The recovering of the sick, as in James 5, is quite different to that alluded to in 1 Cor. 12. That was evidently a miraculous healing, while the other is the result of organized law.

THE PATH OF THE JUST.—Prov. 4: 18.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

THE sun shines. It beautifies the material objects around us. How dark and cheerless would we be without the light of day! The human face, the animal creation and the natural world would possess no discernable beauty. The light unfolds the beauties of nature, "and fills us with admiration and praise." The Christian shines. His path breaks out of darkness and obscurity. With him the darkness is past and true light shineth. The principles of religion will display themselves.

Religion with the Christian is real. It cannot be hid, for it is like a city on a hill. It is like the sun that shines and gives light to the world. The Christian's life is a light that is beautiful. Put out this light by removing at once all pious and godly people, and let the wicked and unprincipled control the affairs of the world, and how soon it would be darkened by crime and become a vast reservoir of wretchedness, in which no Christian would have the least desire to live.

The light is not only for beauty but for utility. It is indispensable to the growth and maturity of all life,—human, animal and vegetable. So the light of the life of the Christian is essential. "The work of faith, and the labor of love, and the patience of hope, and the fruit of the Spirit," which can come only from the Christian, is needed every-where and always. Pity will fill the eye with tears. Meekness will smile in the features. The law of kindness will dwell upon the tongue. The ready hand will help in time of need. Yes, when the true light shines in them who sat in darkness, they will manifest in a thousand ways the usefulness of their Christian life. The sun shines more and more. So does "the path of the just."

In the sun we observe first the dawning light, then the clear, bright, full noonday light.

Religion is a gradual and progressive work. We read of growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior. The blade grows into the full corn in the ear. The mighty oak was once a little acorn, the strong man a little babe. "What is the dawn to the noon?" To remain stationary in our religious attainments, the image condemns and censures us. Of the Thessalonians it is said, "Their faith grew exceedingly, and the love of every one of them toward each other abounded." The sun shines more and more "unto the perfect day." The allusion is not taken from a meteor, that blazes for a moment and then disappears, nor from the morning cloud and early dew that soon passeth away, but from the rising sun, that always attains its end, and completes what it begins, rising upwards, shining onward, till it is perfect day.

When did we ever have only half a day,—one that was not complete? Who can stop the sun in his course, or drive him back in his career? How progressive and glorious is his way! "He rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race. His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it; and nothing is hid from the heat thereof." So shall it be with the just man, who has entered upon the heavenly way. Divine grace will shine in him, and from him, until that perfect day when all the "righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

ALPHA AND OMEGA.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Jacob T. Myers, of Green Tree, Montgomery Co., Pa.:—

WHO? A body without a Head, or a minority, however exalted in position, lording it over the rest? Who is this that claims to be "First and Last?" "All and in all?" A veritable man, and yet very God. ONE there must be to whom final appeal can be made in every problem that pertains to our eternal destiny.

He must know us perfectly, both as being above us and as our Fellow. Not the wisest man on the earth, nor any body of men, though they be Daniels and Solomons and Pauls, can occupy this position. Eighteen centuries have shown how incompetent the most saintly men to arbitrate in spiritual matters. How often have the most insignificant questions led to protracted and passionate discussions, and schisms, which were not worth a minute's serious disputation. Did we really know our position and privileges "in HIM who is the Head of all principality and power," we would have more of the unction that teacheth all things, and the love that suffereth long, envieth not, seeketh not her own, endureth all things. 1 John 2: 20, 27; 1 Cor. 13: 4-7.

To know God as a man, and man as God, in Christ Jesus, by the faith that kept Father and Son in unbroken unity during the earthly ministry of Incarnate Deity, is the realization of John 17: 3. All other knowledge of God is empty, inflative, and delusive. Godlikeness is the only kinship that makes knowledge of salvation identical with the fact of existence. Direct communication with, and immediate knowledge of the living God, as embodied and revealed in Emmanuel, is the only certainty of joint-heirship with the Only Begotten Son, who is the Fountain, Ideal, and Perfection of all the afterborn.

The church has its mission, and it is a glorious one, although little understood and poorly exemplified; but it is not as legislator, nor dictator, nor savior. The elect people of the pedagogic dispensation so utterly mistook God's purpose in their election, that when the grand consummation came which their whole economy prefigured, they knew not their own Messiah, and "rejected the counsel of God against themselves."

In like manner does the present Israel so largely misapprehend the mind of Christ, that He puts the fact in this startling interrogation: "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" Sever the head from the body, and the members are not. "All power in HEAVEN AND IN EARTH IS GIVEN UNTO ME." "THEREFORE, GO." The foot does not move because the hand proclaims its authority. The little toe is as much of the body as any superior part. "Those members which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor. 1 Cor. 12: 23. No member does aright at the bidding of any fellow-member, or of all the members together. But all perform their appropriate functions through a conscious impulse common to all. "Christ is our life." Col. 3: 4. One is your MASTER even CHRIST. Matt. 23: 8.

The one great central truth to be taught, and accepted and exhibited, is, that "we live because He lives." John 14: 19. The profound, well-articulated discourse on Church Government to which we listened at our late District Council, needs to be well filled up with the muscle of practical life, in order to give symmetry and efficiency to the body of Christ. If that fundamental exposition will be fully carried out, we will have a revolution from Dan to Beer-Sheba, and we will "know our election of God," and others "will report that GOD is in us of a truth." 1 Thess. 1: 4; 1 Cor. 14: 25.

There cannot well be too little government by members, nor well too much OF the members by THE SUPREME AUTHORITY. Those churches are invariably the most spiritual, and do the most and best work for Jesus, who adhere the most firmly in child-like faith to the life and power of the Divine Man "in whom dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." "Nearer, my GOD, to THEE, nearer to THEE," is the motto of the soul that sees in Jesus its Alpha and Omega.

Those whose "life is hid with Christ in God" will lose all sense of government from any source save Him in whom it is Divinely deposited. There is no sense of restraint or compulsion in hands or feet serving the necessities of other parts of the body. E pluribus unum is the secret of health and strength and beauty and achievement. The members look to each other for inspiration of holiness and endeavor,. not for magistracy and menace and goad. Good eldership is a blessing, but only as it represents the wisdom and love and self-sacrifice of the Good Shepherd who laid down His life for the sheep. We have yet to learn what feet-washing means. The symbol we guard most seriously, but, alas, the real bowing and wiping is a rarity.

Christ may well repeat to His disciples to-day the significant question: "Know ye WHAT I have done to you?" John 13: 12. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me," covers the entire history of our renewed being in all its minutest details. How sadly potent was it at our late council that some had forgotten John 13: 13. Strong men sometimes say and do very weak things, and excite pity and sadness while they fancy "they are doing God service."

If we would "look only unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith," we would not get into such deep ruts of conventionalism and prejudice that we must be broken in pieces to be lifted out. Neither would we grow into such assumptions of dogmatism as to think that heredity and tradition are tantamount to divine authority. There be some who practically do not seem to "know whether there be any Holy Ghost." Acts 19: 2.

The Paraclete draws constantly on the fullness of our Advocate for our illumination and guidance, and development and sanctification. John 16: 13, 14, 15. "Learn of ME" is the all-inclusive requirement of Him "whose we are and whom we serve." Acts 27: 23. This is corroborated by James 1: 5. There is but one possible link to effect such conjunction between the head and all the members alike. "Let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." This wanting, "let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the LORD." And this is said by the very James over whose secondary conception of justification by works so much ado is made. Would it not be more logical, and divinely theological, to interpret Scripture as a unit, than to seize on payments that have an aspect of discrepancy, and offer such minor-keyed passages as the great square-all of the whole?

In JESUS are his all, the treasures of wisdom and knowledge;" and the better we become acquainted with HIM, as friend with friend, the more freely will we accept, and the less disposed to exercise that Lordship which belongs only to Him who is King of kings and Lord of lords." Luke 22: 25, 26, 27; Matt. 20: 25-28. Oh that we knew how to believe, and by faith to live, and by life to win and mold and govern. Love is indeed greater than faith, for "GOD IS LOVE;" but faith comes before love, and only by faith does Christ occupy the heart and bring with him all the fullness of God. Eph. 3: 17, 18, 19.

Once vitally knit with Christ by the spirit through faith, why should not all the phenomena of such a fact naturally follow? But we are "slow of heart to believe," and then boldly refer to divine limitations what is wholly due to our lack of trust in the veracity of Jesus. Again and again in these last days do we see marvelous responses to faith in utter ignorance of the true symbols of life, so that Christ may well reiterate the old rebuke and no less commendation, "I have not seen so great faith, no, not in Israel." It is hard for even the lofty-souled John to understand the liberality of his Lord and Master. Luke 9: 49, 50.

Christ is Alpha and Omega; and from the first faintest pulse of the divine life, through the ages of the ages, will abide the order of the triple graces as given in 1 Cor. 13: 13. "All things are possible to him that believeth," is as true to-day as that "with God all things are possible." Love is still the beautiful reciprocity as delineated in 1 John 4: 16. The practice referred to in 2 Cor. 10: 12, was deemed unwise in Paul's time, and is equally perilous to-day. We have One Standard, and to Him every soul is to seek conformity, and this will give us our true position in the Mystical Body, so that we express the divine idea as revealed in Eph. 5: 27. This will lubricate the joints of the Divine-human organism, and gloriously illustrate the beautiful picture drawn by the Holy Spirit in Eph. 4: 16.

THERE are lessons to be learned in adversity that can be learned only in adversity. A thoughtful person strives to profit by any educational advantage that is offered him, and all the more if the advantage is rare or costly. He makes the most of a visit to foreign lands, or of the instruction of same famed personal authority. When, therefore, in the soul's course of training, the great Teacher provides special circumstances and facilities, it is well to use these, also, considerately and wisely. A peculiar trial is sent us, a burden we can hardly bear. This lesson, that is designed expressly for us, and for which we pay the dear price of keenest suffering, we must not waste it,—how shall we fully gain its benefit? Only as in any other exceptional opportunity, by earnestly seeking to improve it. When the Master enjoins, "Seek ye my face," let his child reply, "Thy face, Lord, will I seek." Let us follow him even though he has chosen a desert place for our communing with him; and let us try there to learn what he desires to teach. Hallowed are the days spent thus apart from human helpers, and alone with our Lord, listening for his word of correction or of comfort, watching to see what he will do. Blessed is the strength that is imparted by such near presence of the Lord, and profitable forevermore are the patience and hope wrought out by God's discipline of sorrow.—Scl.

From Lost River, W. Va.

ACCORDING to previous appointment, the members of the Lost River church assembled in church council March 21, for the purpose of choosing some help in the ministry and deaconship. The following brethren were elected and duly installed: S. W. Fitzwater, S. Mathias, and H. Moyer, as ministers, and S. W. See and Wm. Halterman as deacons. Elders S. H. Myers and S. A. Shaver, from Virginia, were present at the council. They held some meetings at this place, and elsewhere in this vicinity, until March 29, when they started on their homeward journey. Crossing the great North, or Shenandoah, Mountain, they got into a snow drift (as Bro. Myers reports).

We, too, in our daily voyage towards the place we call our home, encounter many obstacles, but we must be quite as zealous as those Brethren, and get down and push our way through! Let us be as anxious to reach our homes as they were to reach their homes, and we will undoubtedly reach our destination. However, dear brethren, you have our earnest sympathies, and hope you will not forget us, but come again. We earnestly solicit a share in your prayers, that the good Lord might buoy us up in our most holy faith that finally, when time is no more, we might exclaim with Paul, 'I have fought the good fight; I have kept the faith, and there is henceforth laid up for me a crown in heaven."

Macoupin Creek Notes.

THE above church met in council on Saturday May 2, with our elder M. J. McClure and the other officials all present.

The first business was the restoring of a dear young sister to fellowship. The ministers generally, should be more prompt in teaching and advising our young members never to go to places unless they can thereby honor their holy profession.

We appointed our Communion for Sept. 18, at 4 P. M. A series of meetings is to be held in connection with the feast. A committee was appointed to confer with an evangelist. I would suggest that churches be very careful in selecting ministers to hold series of meetings. Procure not only men in the order but those that contend for it wherever they go.

A delegate was elected to represent this church at Annual Meeting. The home treasury was replenished and the Missionary as well as the Book and Tract Work not forgotten. We feel to thank God that our members contribute so liberally to those calls.

All of the above business, with some other minor business, was done in less than one hour, in the presence of two adjoining elders and ministers. Bro. D. Vaniman of McPherson, Kans., was also with us and gave us words of counsel. Come again! MICHAEL FLORY.

Echoes from the Highway.

THE District Meeting of California, held with the brethren in the Conejo church, Ventura Co., was harmonious. Considerable business was before the Meeting. Bro. T. J. Nair was Reading Clerk and Bro. M. M. Eshelman, Writing Clerk. Our District as a District will be represented at Annual Meeting by letter. Bro. D. A. Norcross is our delegate to represent the Covina congregation at Annual Meeting. Bro. T. J. Nair is the delegate from Lordsburg congregation.

Next evening after our District Meeting the Communion meeting in the Conejo congregation was held. It was, apparently, a season of great enjoyment to all who took part in the soul-strengthening services. Two weeks later we were with the Lordsburg congregation at their love-feast season, at which about ninety members communed. The meeting was a good one indeed. Good order prevailed and everything passed off in a harmonious manner. The congregation at that point, in common with the adjoining congregation (Covina) is enjoying quite an influx of members into their territory by immigration; also now and then some by baptism.

Sunday following the Communion at Lordsburg there was a good turn-out of hearers and participants at their Sunday-school, children's meeting and regular services. At 3 P. M. we attended the Brethren's meeting at Glendora Three precious souls were added to the church that day by baptism at that point. In the evening we attended services at the "Christian" church in Los Angeles to hear a revivalist. His sermon was passably orthodox, but, oh, how he did spoil (?) his pious influence (at least with some), by announcing at the close that he would lecture there the second night following, and "would charge for admittance and that the audience should come with their buttons well sewed on as the main thing would be much fun!" Well might the skeptic say, "People are getting tired of their Jesus and coming over to us for something to entertain their people."

President Harrison's trip through California was one of great demonstration. In Los Angeles seven thousand school-children strewed the street, over which he traveled, with flowers. I had to wonder how it would be if the meek and humble Jesus would come in person. I fear the tendency of the times is more for man worship than to worship the Lord God.

Now that it seems there is a requirement for a change in our church name and some one has made the motion, which, I believe, has been seconded that it be "Dunkard Brethren," so let us decide by acclamation. As names add nothing to vital Christianity at any rate and the name proposed will be sufficient for convenience' sake, in designating our body to the understanding of others, it is good enough. J. S. FLORY.

Epistolary.

To my Cousin, Charley Minnick, of Middletown, Ind.:—

YOUR letter was received some time ago. You spoke of being discouraged and feeling sometimes as though you would lay down your cross and give up. No, never give up, but look to Jesus; he will help you bear it! "He is our refuge and a very present help in time of trouble." His grace is sufficient for you and I and all.

Just here is where Satan will take the advantage of us! He wants us to feel that we are nothing in the eyes of God, and that it is no use to work for him, but this is a mistaken idea. If we humbly trust in the Lord, he will help us. We are tried and perplexed in many ways, but if we are faithful, all will prove a blessing in due time.

We have our faith tried in various ways to test our love for Jesus, and if we will be patient, ever trusting his word, in due time he will exalt us.

Be not cast down! Hope in God! Think what our dear Jesus passed through and that now he is in glory! Take up your cross and look to him who taught us to bear it! His smiling face is behind the cloud, if you live faithful and fight manfully the good fight of faith, battle for the Lord as a valiant soldier and use the Sword of the Spirit. Use "above all the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." At last you will receive a crown of life that never fades away.

Your dear, aged father-in-law has passed away, but he has only gone before and is now waiting for us on the other shore. His work is finished here and the Lord has called him home to rest from his labors. I trust we shall live faithful to our promises here, so that we may meet him in that better land, where we shall be free from sorrow and reign together forever with Jesus in his kingdom!

Take courage, bear the cross and in the end all shall be well with you. "All things work together for our good if we love the Lord." We know not what God has prepared for those who love him. Only a few more years and God will call us from our labors to join his holy ranks. By and by we will cross over Jordan, as the children of Israel did, over into the promised land.

The District Meeting of the Southern District of Missouri and Arkansas.

THIS Meeting, we are glad to say, was a very pleasant one, and we believe that all the members present had the cause of Christ at heart. All business which came before the Meeting was discussed in a Christian spirit. The brethren labored not to know any one after the flesh, but aimed to decide all questions in harmony with the Word of God. We had a two days' session. The first day was spent in considering the queries which came before the Meeting. The second day was spent in the interest of our District Mission. We find that our field is large and the laborers few. Eld. Samuel Click is our delegate to Annual Meeting.

At the close of the District Meeting we had a very pleasant love-feast. About eighty members communed. Quite a number of members were present from a distance, including a number of ministers, who rendered us valuable service during the Meeting. Some of them remained with us over Sunday, and preached at three different places. The association with those of like precious faith was indeed pleasant to us. It added much to our spiritual strength, and the ties of Christian affection were made stronger. May God grant that we may often meet and encourage each other! J. J. TROXEL.

From the Ridgely Church, Maryland.

OUR church is prospering. It is but seven years since it was organized, and but eight years since the first brethren settled here. We now number sixty-nine members. Most of them emigrated from Pennsylvania. There have been added to the church by baptism, seventeen members inside of eighteen months. We have Bro. J. Y. King as our elder, and Bro. L. R. Brumbaugh in the first degree of the ministry. We are under the care of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, which has helped us to build two meeting-houses, and kindly cared for us while we had no minister.

I will take this method of answering many questions that are asked, in regard to our country. We have fine, level land, good for grain of all kinds, and especially desirable for fruit. Our land is cheap, climate healthy, fish and oysters plenty and cheap. There will be, under the present prospects, a large crop of peaches and strawberries. We have railroads very convenient, also steamboat navigation to Baltimore. We are ninety miles south of Philadelphia, or seventy miles south-east of Baltimore.

Now, as Annual Meeting is in our State, a great many will no doubt come from all over the Brotherhood, and some may want to see our southern country. You can come to Baltimore, and there take the steamboat across the Chesapeake Bay to Denton,—our County-seat. Inquire for the Brethren, some of whom are living close to town. I will answer all letters of inquiry, if stamps are enclosed, and am also willing to show you our country. I expect to go to Annual Meeting, if God permits, and hope to meet many of my dear Brethren. The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the fundamental doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins and the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5. 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

85 cts WILL pay for the MESSENGER from June 1, 1891, till the end of the year.

WHY can we not have a ministerial meeting in Northern Illinois? What say you, brethren?

THE Brethren in Southern Kansas are succeeding finely with their Old Folks' Home arrangements.

THERE is, occasionally, a selected article in the MESSENGER. It will always pay to read such, for they are selected with great care, and usually contain the very best of thought.

BRO. EDMUND FORNEY, whom we met at the West Branch feast, attended the feast at Naperville, May 16 and 17. He reports a good meeting, which passed off very pleasantly. An election was also held for a minister, which resulted in the selection of Bro. Aaron Solleuberger, who was duly installed in his office.

AFTER June 1st, the address of Eld. Samuel Click, of Nevada, Mo., will be Bridgewater, Va.

ON page 332 of this issue will be found a special notice from the B. and O. R. R., that will be of interest to those west of Chicago.

MANY of the State Districts are holding ministerial meetings in connection with the District Meetings. This is to be commended, as it not only affords those skilled in the work of the ministry an opportunity to give their experience, but it enables younger ministers to gather much valuable information, and profit by the many good suggestions offered.

BRO. LEVI TROSTLE, who attended the feast at Sterling, Ill., May 17th, reports an excellent meeting with good attention and the very best of order. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, and still some were not able to get in. The work in Sterling seems to be encouraging, and those who have the mission in charge are hopeful, and I mean to continue their efforts with renewed zeal.

WE CARE not how sudden a man's conversion is, just so it is genuine. Paul's conversion was very sudden but it was so thorough, that no one had any reason to question it. By our fruits we are known, whether the fruit appears early or late. We never concern ourself whether a man's conversion was completed in one day or in one year, but we are concerned about whether it is genuine or not.

A MINISTER should never think that he is too old to study. He may be too far advanced in years to have charge of a church, but certainly he should continue to think as long as he has the proper use of his mind. The longer the mind is cultivated, the fresher it will remain. This may be regarded as the secret of mental activity in old age. He may give up work, but should not give up study.

THERE will be no paper next week, on account of all connected with the paper being at the Annual Meeting. Then it is our custom to send out fifty papers each year, and it is convenient to drop out one at this time and the other at the end of the year. Besides we are remodeling and enlarging the office, so as to afford more room and better facilities for several departments of our work. A week's lay-off from the paper will enable the workmen to make the needed change in the rooms, and also enable the office hands to properly get their parts in order. The next issue will contain some account of our trip east, and as much information concerning the Annual Meeting as we can get to the office up to time of going to press.

THERE is a movement on foot to establish an Old Folks' Home in Northern Illinois. The late District Meeting authorized the Trustees to "locate and establish the Home, appoint Solicitors and accept donations, and report a plan for its government to the next District Meeting." Joseph Amick, Edmund Forney and M. S. Newcomer are the Trustees. The movement is a good one, and should be substantially encouraged on every hand. We have the poor with us, and it is our duty to properly care for them, and there is no way of doing it to better advantage than in a well-managed Old Folks' Home. The Trustees have decided that all the churches in Northern Illinois, desiring to offer a location for the Home, should make their claims known to the Trustees not later than July 15, 1891. The Trustees will then examine all of these claims and decide on a location. The Committee has further decided that they will not want less than ten nor more than fifteen acres of land. Bro. Joseph Amick is Foreman of the Committee.

THE Committee at this place reports that they have received in all, $14,404.19 for the Western Sufferers.

THIS issue closes all remarks concerning our church name. Our Brethren in Council at Hagerstown will render the decision, and of course we will all acquiesce.

CONTRIBUTORS who have written us, making inquiry concerning articles that have not yet appeared, will please have a little patience till after the Annual Meeting. Fixing to move into our new editorial room, getting up the new Juvenile Quarterly, and much other work, prevent us, for the present, from giving such letters proper attention. We will attend to them by and by.

IN Cincinnati, Ohio, a boy, sixteen years old, died while his father was away in Canada on business. The father's ride home was a long, lonely one, full of deep sadness, but the cup of sorrow was made to run over when, on arriving at home, he learned that the boy had died from the effects of cigarette smoking, the bad habit having been contracted unknown to the boy's parents. How careful ought parents to be concerning the habits of their children!

WE are in receipt of Minutes of a number of District Meetings. They all contain matter that is interesting to us. But the Minutes of Northeastern Kansas contain one feature of importance. It not only tells where the money comes from, but says just what it was paid out for, that each member of the District may know just what was done with every cent of the money. This is right, and should be the practice of all the State Districts. We also notice that Bro. J. S. Mohler represents that District on the Standing Committee.

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper for May 9, 1891, contains a very able article from the pen of Prof. Totten, Professor in the Scientific School at Yale University, claiming that our present dispensation will close in 1899, at which time the 6000 years from Adam will be completed. While he does not venture to name the day or hour, still he concludes that March of that year will mark the beginning of the millennium. He discusses the question from a Bible and scientific standpoint, claiming to be no prophet, but simply a hard worker and an interpreter of the Bible, history and science.

WE do not feel disposed to find fault with past Annual Meetings or those who had the management of them, but we do think that it behooves our people to carefully watch every department of the Meeting, and discreetly guard it against degenerating into a worldly appearance. These Meetings should be kept as free as possible from all secular affairs. They are intended for religious work, and nothing should be permitted on the ground, designed to disturb a devout religious feeling. We go to the Annual Meeting for the purpose of enjoying it spiritually; we are led to regard it as a heavenly place in Christ Jesus, where we may have a foretaste of heaven itself. Give us some plain food to eat, a suitable place to sleep; then let us take in all the spiritual and social good the meeting may afford. So far as worldly matters are concerned, we have enough of them in our battle-fields at home; we want none of them at the Annual Meeting. We pay our money that our souls may have a feast of good things. So let us unitedly labor for Christian simplicity in these meetings. Great regard should also be had for our long-established and well-merited reputation for Christian hospitality. Unless we are careful, selfishness may make deep inroads among us, and destroy that strong, brotherly feeling that has so long existed among us.

THE Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo., has placed on our desk a neatly-printed and well-bound volume entitled, "Alone With God," by J. H. Garrison, editor of the Christian Evangelist, and author of several works. The title is very suggestive, and in keeping with the contents. The work is largely devotional, and may be read with profit. It contains over one hundred forms of short prayers that will be especially interesting to those who feel the need of making the subject of prayer a study. It is a good book to have when you feel "to steal awhile away" and be alone with God. The book contains 243 pages; price, 75 cents. It may be ordered from this office.

BIBLE TALK.

BRO. D. L. MILLER has always been regarded as a busy, hard-working man, but for the last ten years he has been crowded with work to his full capacity. His trip to Europe and Palestine; the writing of his book of travels; his editorial work on the MESSENGER; his work on the Mission Board, and many other public duties, including his labors in the ministry, are only a part of the duties that have occupied his time and attention. Yet he has found time to prepare and deliver a number of Bible Talks in various parts of the Brotherhood, that have proved exceedingly interesting and instructive. Several evenings ago we, with a number of others, were invited to his house to witness an exhibition of about seventy Bible views, projected on a large screen by the use of a magic lantern. Bro. Miller has collected photographs of a number of places in the Bible lands, and by use of the lantern he places them on the canvas on a very large scale, making the places appear almost real. He then explains each point of interest, thus giving those present much valuable information as well as a correct impression in regard to the appearance of the country.

The different views of Jerusalem, Mt. Olivet, Mt. Moriah, where the temple stood, and the Garden of Gethsemane were exceedingly interesting. He started into Palestine at Joppa and gave us views of many points until Damascus was reached. Near the middle of the exercises he showed a large, beautiful view of the River Jordan, looking almost as natural as nature itself. Just then sister Miller started up that soul-reviving old hymn: "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand." The effect on those present was striking indeed, causing one to almost feel that he was standing on the banks of Jordan, sure enough. We never before saw Palestine so well illustrated.

We wish Bro. Miller could spend several years traveling among the churches delivering his Bible talks. They would be a source of edification, instruction and confirmation to the thousands who have but little knowledge of the Bible Lands. By the use of his lantern the talks are made much more instructive and impressive, as it enables him to show just how the different places appear to the traveler who visits the Holy Land. It also enables him to point out and describe things of interest. All present enjoyed the talk very much, and felt greatly benefited by what they saw and heard.

AT THE FEASTS.

A DRIVE of twenty-five miles across the country brought us to Lanark, Saturday, May 16, for the purpose of attending the feast in the city. We had not been there for over seven years. Everything looked familiar save the trees around the church, which have grown to be quite large, giving the place a lovely appearance. As we sat at our old, accustomed place, behind the stand, and saw the members coming in, some of them occupying the very seats where we used to see them years ago, memories crowded upon us thick and fast until we were much affected. We had learned to love the Lanark church dearly and spent many of the best years of our life in the interest of the cause here. We thought of the changes, of the then and the now.

Many of those who worshiped here have gone to the land beyond the vale, while some are at work in distant fields. A few—may the good Lord help them—have turned aside, and work for us no more.

The feast was a good one. Over two hundred members communed. We never saw finer order and better attention. Talk about not being able to hold feasts in cities. Here, right in the City of Lanark, the order cannot be excelled. On Sunday, for morning services, the large house was packed, and seats had to be placed in the aisles. Many of the leading citizens of the place were also present. It looked like old times. When we heard their earnest singing, noted their intense interest in the Word preached, and beheld their zeal for the cause, we said to some of the members, "There is plenty of life in the old church yet." She has had her ups and downs as few churches have endured, but she has passed through them all, and now bids to rise higher in the scale of usefulness. Bro. Geo. D. Zollars is their elder, and seems to be much interested in the work of the church. They also have a flourishing Sunday-school, that is doing an excellent work. A number of ministers from the adjoining churches were also present, much to the comfort and satisfaction of the members. We felt that it was good to be there.

On the Monday following we attended the feast at West Branch. The attendance was not large, but the spirit and interest of the meeting were excellent. The ministerial help was quite ample. This congregation seems to be in good working order, and is firmly settled in the principles of the Brotherhood. It is one of the oldest churches in the State and has passed through many deep afflictions, but there are better days ahead, for the church is in peace and union, with a good ministerial force. Bro. M. S. Newcomer is their elder.

COUNCIL-MEETINGS.

It is to be feared, that the real value of properly conducted council-meetings in local congregations is very much underrated. Such meetings ought to be held quarterly and, if possible, should be attended by every member in the congregation, and especially by all the officials and their wives. Everything within reason should be done to make these meetings desirable, enjoyable and profitable.

They should be opened promptly on time so as to forcibly impress the members with the idea of promptness. We have known the officials, while counciling, to hold the congregation in waiting for hours. This is very unwise policy. It tends to make the members impatient and often gives rise to much dissatisfaction. They ought not to be kept waiting one moment. If the meeting is appointed to commence at 10 o'clock, the members have a right to expect the service to begin at that time.

The officials should have all business in proper shape, so that the work of the meeting may move off in good, business-like order.

The spirit of the meeting ought to be guarded with uncommon care. The spirit of kindness should pervade every part of the meeting; especially should the officials show great kindness and forbearance towards each other, and also towards all the members. In no instance should the elder lose his temper and speak unbecomingly of any of the sheep of his flock. A meeting characterized by this spirit of Christian kindness not only strengthens and gives the members confidence, but it affords no excuse for enemies to criticise the work and discourage the weaker members.

The business of the meeting should be conducted in a manner that will enable each member in the house to hear all that is said. There are places where the officials around the table do much low talking that can not be heard by even a third of the congregation. This is always very unsatisfactory. It is far better for the elder, who presides in the meeting, to require that each one, having anything to say, speak so as to be heard by all present.

At these meetings the elder will greatly strengthen the cause by delivering a short, well-prepared address on the various parts of church government and official duties. At one meeting he might state the duties of the officials and their wives. There are hundreds of members who know little of these duties. A short talk on this subject would also remind these officials more fully of their duties. Another talk on private and public trespasses would be beneficial. Then there might be talks on the prayer-covering, wearing of jewelry, plain dressing, honest dealing, careful conversation, care of young members, attending places of amusement, and a score of other good subjects. Thus conducted council-meetings would become the source of much valuable information to the members, especially the young, and would be looked forward to with pleasure. In fact, we ought to make these meetings as pleasant as possible. It will be well for the elder to bear in mind that, by properly instructing the members concerning their various duties, they become much easier to govern. Preparing these talks for delivery will afford the elder a line of study that will prove both pleasant and instructive. It will likely induce the members to have more confidence in the elder's knowledge of church government, and therefore give him that much more influence for good.

Council-meetings that always leave behind them nothing but sadness, are indeed very unfortunate transactions for the church. The elder and all his helpers should make the character of these meetings a special study, for the more interesting and pleasant these meetings, the greater good may they be expected to accomplish.

Where proper care is taken to conduct these meetings in the manner set forth, it will be easy to induce all the members to attend, and it is also their duty to be present. And when present they should be treated with becoming respect, and made feel that they are welcomed.

Sisters ought to be encouraged to take an active part in the work of church meetings. They generally have clear conceptions of right and wrong, besides possessing a rare zeal for religious work. Then they carry an influence that the church cannot afford to lose in her work.

We offer these suggestions, believing that if heeded, they may aid in making our council-meetings more profitable to the church and her work.

WAYS AND MEANS.

BY P. FAHRNEY.

ANNUAL MEETING, by a single ruling, could remove one obstacle in the way of those members of the Brotherhood, who are zealously working to establish the doctrine of the Brethren in large cities. Paul says: "At Rome, be as the Romans."

If Annual Meeting would do nothing more than to define the word "Hospitality" as it is to be understood by members of the church in the future, surely much good would be the result.

Ways and means could be adopted that would lessen the burdens and embarrassments of members in the city during seasons when excursion trains are run at cheap rates.

It is embarrassing to refer to this matter without even going into details, but if Annual Meeting will, at any time in the future, appoint a committee to adopt ways and means to promote church work in cities, I should then be willing to go before such a committee and give a statement of my experiences and observations during twenty years of life in this city.

Chicago, Ill.

[We suggest that Bro. Fahrney write out his experience for the consideration of the Mission Board. It is as good a committee as the Annual Meeting is likely to find. Our readers will do well to study the term "Hospitality," as used by Bro. Fahrney.—ED.]

ARE MEN TO FURNISH ATTRACTIONS FOR THE CHURCH, OR GOD?

DR. John Hall struck the right note the other night at the Presbyterian Union, Chicago, where he was the special guest of the occasion, when he held that the ministerial princes and palatial churches are the great hindrances to the evangelization of our cities. The need of the time is competent, godly ministers to occupy central halls and preach the Gospel to the poor, and pastors to go out and in, visiting and exhorting from house to house, as in former times. But will Dr. Hall's words be heeded? Will not the churches and the ministers admire the sentiments expressed, but still do as they have been doing? The effort to make Christianity attractive has very nearly deprived it of all sympathy among those who, of all men, need it most. Yet the rage for decorative art grows apace, and the great city churches of the Man "who had not where to lay his head" look more like the voluptuous halls of the great princes of the Gentiles for the great display of art and the gratification of æsthetic tastes.

"Touch lightly here," some will say. "Remember the alabaster box of ointment that one thought was wasted on the Lord." Ah, yes; we remember. Would there were ten thousand women with their alabaster boxes going through our streets anointing the feet of the foot-sore messengers of peace, who, without having where to lay their heads, are still devoting their lives to the work of the ministry among the poor. That would be Mary-like indeed. But what has that to do with lavishing God's tithes on frescoes and carvings and flowers to gratify and call forth the admiration of the rich and great? When the salvation of millions is at stake, it were a sin inexcusable indeed to condone the hindrances in the way of the Gospel chariot. Let the demand be made loud and long that all the churches leave off their trying to rival the world in art and architecture in the name of the Lord, and come down to the plain preaching, the foolishness by which it has pleased God to save them that believe.—Christian Instructor.

From Frankfort, Ohio.

APRIL 4, I reached Frankfort, Ross Co., Ohio, and until the 9th remained there with our colored members in that place and vicinity, visiting all of them at their homes, besides calling with a number of their friends. We had six meetings in the Brethren's church-house in Frankfort, with a large attendance all the while, save at the last meeting, but with a good interest at each gathering.

On the last evening, April 8, we had a smaller attendance on account of the effort made to draw the people away to another meeting. This last-named meeting was held by the members of another denomination in order to raise money for their minister, and to do this the membership had been solicited prior to the meeting, and quite a number had promised to give a dollar and come to the meeting on the night of the 8th, and there give their dollars, and also to get up and tell the meeting how the money had been obtained. The understanding was had by all that the money should be obtained in some way different from that of their regular or ordinary labor. If given by a carpenter, his gift was not to be made at his trade. If by a farmer, his dollar was to be obtained not at farming but in some other way; and if it was the gift of a wash-woman, she was to obtain her dollar in some other way than at the washtub.

The meeting was large and exciting, we were told, all because many attended to see the gifts bestowed, to hear how each had obtained his gift, and also to hear the music. We were told of one who gave her experience in obtaining her dollar by getting down on her knees, and blacking the boots of a white man in the street.

On the next morning, before leaving to meet our brother, Henry Frantz, at Chillicothe, I called to see one of the Methodist ministers who said he had gone to the meeting the night before, but being taken sick there, had come home before the close. He said they obtained something near forty dollars at the above meeting.

I asked him if he did not see that they were running into idolatry, and referred him to 1 Cor. 10: 7. He said "I can not approve of this kind of meetings, but we must have the money." I told him never to give up the Gospel for money, gave him some tracts and left for the train.

Brethren, the work is now out in "the highways and hedges," and every effort should be made to save some out of the millions that are now, as it was in the days of Paul at Athens, "wholly given to idolatry." Acts 17: 16. Let us not look only at the poor negroes of whom I have spoken, but let us look at home and amongst the so-called educated and intelligent white people who are to-day as vain in their religion, and as far from the path marked out by Jesus Christ, as the poor and ignorant negro. May the Lord help us all to see what a field is now opened wide for all his people, and how few the workers are! Now is the time to let our light shine! Let every one procure the sacred oil, that both vessel and lamp may be filled, and the light shine that all may see.

As to the work amongst the colored people, I will say it is more encouraging at Frankfort, Ohio, than I have found it at any other time. The members, though few, are zealous and hopeful, and speak of no opposition now, as heretofore, and the efforts now made by the colored people of other denominations to keep up their work, show it is on the wane.

At Circleville there are more members and two speakers, but these have been much afflicted the past winter; they have no church-house of their own, and are now compelled to meet in their dwellings. But they, also, are hopeful of a better day and do all they can to support their families, and also to keep the work moving. The work amongst the colored people needs the constant attention of the Brethren, that the Word be not caught away by the enemy, and that it be not choked out.

LANDON WEST

Aged, Infirm, and Orphans' Home.

THE Trustees elected by the four Districts of Kansas, respectively, to put into successful operation the work of the above-named Home, met at the Pleasant View meeting-house, Reno Co., and proceeded to elect the fifth trustee, after which they proceeded to organize, by electing the writer as Foreman; S. L. Myers, Assistant; A. L. Miller, Treasurer; M. W. Metsker, Secretary; J. B. Wolf, Assistant.

They next proceeded to consider the location (a privilege granted by the several Districts) and changed from the south half of the south-west quarter, to the west half of the same quarter, as, in their judgment, they can erect more suitable buildings, with less money, than those formerly alluded to, on the south corner. Building is to be done as soon after the next Trustee meeting, Aug. 3, 1891, as practicable.

The necessary articles of association, constitution, and by-laws to secure a charter were then written out and signed, a charter obtained in harmony with the laws of the State of Kansas, and the design of the institution.

When the by-laws are more fully matured at the next meeting, there will be a more extensive report given for the benefit of those desiring to donate. I remark, however, that the Home is to be built and supported by donations, endowment notes, bequests, etc., and the institution is not to be run in debt.

We also call the attention of the respective solicitors, appointed by the former committee, to collect their subscriptions, if any, and forward all moneys collected,—cash or otherwise,—to A. F.

Miller, Treasurer, Booth, Reno Co., Kans. (who will receipt for the same), before the first day of August, 1891.

As some promise to pay or donate as soon as the project was properly set on foot and others said, "After harvest," to such we say, "You need not wait for a solicitor. Send in your funds at any time, as above.

We feel assured, that there are many dear brethren and sisters, whose hearts are beating with sympathy to the poor and needy. This was clearly demonstrated by the liberal donations to the Western sufferers. Many are wishing for an opportunity to put up a standing monument, one that shall never crumble to dust. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me;" will be the inscription written in the Lamb's Book of Life. To all such we say, "We make you welcome. You need not wait for a special invitation. Every one as he purposeth in his heart, will find a blessing in giving. ENOCH EBY.

Wayside Gleanings.

—WE have organized a Sunday-school in the Round Mountain church. It will be conducted by the brethren and sisters. The first Sunday we had sixty-three scholars and we expect more. It is opened at nine o'clock and we have preaching afterwards. The net was set to catch the Brethren in a Union Sunday-school, but we had decided at our church council that we would have a Sunday-school at the church-house; so when they could not get the Brethren to have a union Sunday-school, they organized one at the same hour in the school-house, about one mile from the church. The prospects are good that the Brethren will have the largest school.

—I attended the District Meeting of Southern Missouri and Arkansas, held in the Mountain Grove church, Texas Co., Mo. One of my objects of going was to get acquainted with the brethren. I was really glad to find so many of the Brethren there, and to form their acquaintance. The meeting was truly a very pleasant one. Bro. Samuel Click is to represent the District on the Standing Committee.

—The Brethren have found about twelve members in the City of Springfield, Mo. Bro. Baily has preached some for them. Brethren Harvey Barnhart and Holderman were going to preach for them as they passed through.

—South-western Missouri has some fine land. There is some nice country south-west of Springfield, and also a good fruit country. It would be a good place for Brethren to settle.

—We are having fine weather. We find that we have plenty to do, financially and spiritually, to keep us busy. SAMUEL WEIMER.

District Meeting.

ON Wednesday evening April 29, I boarded the train at Central City, Iowa, for Cedar Rapids, where I remained during the night with our dear brother and sister Tisdale. The next morning, in company with brethren Johnson and Lehman from the Garrison church, we again boarded the train for Brooklyn, Iowa, where the District Meeting was to be held. At 4 P. M., the same day we reached our destination, and were taken to the hospitable home of brother J. S. Snyder and wife, where nearly all the delegates from the different churches had already convened. We attended services the same evening, and the next day, May 1, we assembled at 9 o'clock, and, after the usual devotional exercises, the meeting began by electing Bro. Jno. Zuck, Moderator; Bro. Henry Taylor, Writing Clerk, and Bro. Jno. Seibert, Reading Clerk. All the churches were represented by delegates except one, which was by letter. All the queries that came before the meeting were properly discussed, and disposed of in a Christian manner. Bro. Jno. Zuck was chosen to represent the Middle District of Iowa on Standing Committee at Annual Meeting, and another brother as alternate.

On Saturday we again met for worship at 11 A. M. and at 7 P. M. for Communion services. Bro. S. S. Gochenour officiated at the meeting. Dear old grandma Snyder, who is now in her ninety-first year, communed with us, perhaps, for the last time on this side of eternity. She is looking forward to the time when she can meet with those gone before. The next morning, at 9 A. M., we had a meeting for children and young people. We were pleased to see so many seemingly happy faces occupying front seats, while they were kindly admonished by brethren Gochenour and Seibert. The prospects are good for an ingathering of precious souls at this place, and as the good seed has already been sown, may they not put off the one thing needful.

At 11 A. M. Bro. Jno. Zuck preached an able discourse, and at 3 P. M., Bro. Snyder, in a few, well-chosen words, closed our meetings at this place. Then the parting moments came. O, how sad!

We reached our home May 3. May God bless Bro. Snyder and his wife, for making our sojourn among them so pleasant, and finally bring us all to a home where parting and tears are unknown!

Death of Sister Angie Eby.

WITH sadness we chronicle the death of Angie (Yarger) Eby, wife of Bro. Levi H. Eby, at Lincoln, Nebr., about noon May 9, 1891, aged 33 years, 1 month and 7 days.

Our dear sister was born in Stephenson County, Ill., April 2, 1858, and joined the Brethren church in 1878 at the age of twenty years, and remained a faithful member until her death. Her father died on her 20th birthday. After that she, with Mother Yarger, moved to Mt. Morris, Ill., where she attended school, completing the Academic course, June 28, 1882.

March 1, 1883, she was united in marriage to Bro. Levi H. Eby, son of Enoch Eby, and soon after moved to Brown County, Kans., where they lived until the following year, when they moved to their present home, near Summerfield, Marshall Co., Kansas.

Last year Bro. Levi was called to work in the mission field, at Lincoln, Nebr., which left the greater care of the home on sister Angie. She did the best she could to encourage the work, and to do her part.

Last fall Bro. Levi moved his family to Lincoln, and lived in his own hired house where sister Angie died. Affliction came to their family. The two little daughters being prostrated with scarlet fever, Bro. Levi also with quinsy, left sister Angie and mother to do the nursing. The two little daughters of the writer were also taken with the scarlet fever after Bro. Levi's family were over it, and mother came to help nurse them. In the meantime sister Angie became ill, but we hoped for the better. Mother still abode with us, fearing to change until the time of infection was past. Thus we were deprived of being with Bro. Levi's in their affliction.

On last Wednesday, May 6, a little son was born to them, but only breathed a few times, and was no more.

Kind hands and medical assistance did all they could. Notwithstanding all this, imflammation set in, which soon ended her sufferings. Her many friends will sympathize with Bro. Levi, who desires to be remembered in his bereavement. Feeling to be resigned, he says, "Not my will but thine be done." The remains of mother and child were taken to Summerfield, Kansas, for interment.

Sister Angie was loved and respected by all who knew her, and I doubt not many of her former associates and friends, who read these lines, will drop a sympathizing tear, knowing that we sorrow not as those who have no hope, but we look beyond, where we shall all meet again, and that, too, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more. Gleanings.

OUR Sunday-school has started out with a good attendance, and fair prospects, with Bro. Joseph Snitemau as Superintendent, and an able corps of officers and teachers. All are members of the church.

Bro. G. B. Royer made a mistake in a recent number of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, in reference to the Mission Board of Southern Iowa selecting some brother to preach a missionary sermon at District Meeting. The plan would be a good one and will be worthy of future consideration. The sermon, however, was preached at District Meeting, and we hope the good work received a new impetus. The members present contributed $4.15 to the cause.

"When shall the meek inherit the earth?"—seems to agitate the minds of some of our members at present. The question of most vital importance, it seems to me, is, "Who are the meek?" Are we of that class or not? God's Word is sure and he will bring about his own purpose in his own time.

We think our members should seriously consider the importance of sending their children to the Brethren's schools when desiring to educate them. There are many cases over the Brotherhood, where members with sorrow saw the mistake after it was too late. Even non-sectarian schools often poison the minds of our children, and sometimes start them on the road to infidelity. Let us keep the salvation of our children in view.

What will it profit though we gain the whole world, and lose our own soul, or the soul of our children? PETER BROWER.

WE have had two weeks of clear, cool weather, and on the morning of the 7th we had a light frost in places, which did no damage, however. Farmers were behind hand with their spring work, but are now making up for lost time. Although corn planting is a little behind the usual time for this latitude, most of the corn is now planted. The spring was unusually wet and the ground hard and lumpy. Fruit promises abundantly, except early apples and some varieties of late ones.

Bro. J. B. Wolfe is one of the directors of the "Kansas Old Folks' Home," and has just returned from a trip to Reno County in its interest.

Our aged elder, Martin Neher, and wife are visiting their sons in Oklahoma.

Bro. J. H. Neher gave us a telling sermon last Sunday on the sacrifices we all have to make in this world. On account of sin we are all compelled, willingly or unwillingly, to make great sacrifices to his Satanic Majesty of the lower regions. In fact, life, and everything else, must finally be given up. The Lord asks one sacrifice, that of a broken heart and contrite spirit. Sin occasioned the sacrifice of the life of the Son of God.

He made all the sacrifice that we are ever called upon to make, and thus gave us, by example, the proper position in the arrangement of heaven that we are called upon to occupy.

From Philadelphia, Pa.

THE Brethren's new church was dedicated May 3. The services were conducted by Bro. W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, assisted by the writer. Bro. Swigart worked faithfully for some time for our city brethren, filling their appointments every two weeks. The rest of the appointments were filled by ministers from the surrounding churches.

Having disposed of their church on Marshall Street, the brethren, for some time held their meetings on Columbia Ave. Finally, by hard work, connected with an open heart, zeal, and good management, they built themselves a neat, comfortable little house of worship on the corner of Carlisle and Dauphin Streets. The first Sunday (April 26) we were here, we preached in the hall to an attentive little congregation. Since we have our services in the new church our congregations have more than doubled. We trust they will still continue to increase. We find the Philadelphia church warm-hearted and devoted and, so far as we have noticed, strong on the cardinal doctrines of the church. While she is not quite what we would like to see her in the application of some of the principles of the church, yet we believe there is loyal blood enough to take a moderate stand. Having learned a little of her past history we wonder sometimes that there are yet as many members in the city as there are, for surely they have had their full share of trials and reverses. There must have been considerable strength and loyalty. Brethren, let us not look with disdain upon such, but rather do all in our power to lift them up. We all have room for improvement.

We believe that, with proper efforts, combined with discretion and charity, much good can be done here in the East. Let us not be too hasty in our judgment and condemnation. We have already seen, in our little experience, sad results from premature judgment and hasty condemnation. It is needful that we understand fully the real condition of things and the nature of the surrounding circumstances, coupled with clear convictions of right, before we can wisely judge. So long as we can see an approach to the church and a coming nearer to Christ, however gradual it may be, we have encouragement.

We learn too that there is a difference between city work and country work. Many of our brethren have already learned this fact and others must learn it if we want to be successful. We need not sacrifice Gospel principles, but we must adopt different methods and be susceptible to different adaptations. We may have more to say about city work as we learn more.

The Brethren here sustain an interesting weekly prayer-meeting. They opened their Sunday-school in the new church last Sunday, under very favorable prospects for the future in this line of work. May we all pray and labor that we may become purer and holier and that God's name may be glorified in all our works! T. T. MYERS.

Queries Answered.

To Gertrude A. Flory:—

YOUR queries in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 17 are before me. You ask, "Who are the poor?" Further on you ask: "To whom is it our duty to give aid?" I answer, "To all who need our aid if we are able to give it. We are commanded to love our neighbors as ourselves and to judge not that we be not judged. In the case of the widow referred to shall we let her and her child suffer for the necessities of life, lest she take a part of what we give her to buy something she does not need? No; let us obey the command of Jesus, — give to him that asketh thee and from him that would borrow of thee turn thou not away. We are responsible to God for our own acts only, and if those who are needy do not use the means we give for a good purpose they will have to give an account of their stewardship.

In regard to the second case I say this: If we were sure that the portly, rugged man is really to blame for his condition it might be right to let him go hungry until he was willing to work, but if we know nothing of the circumstances of those seeking aid from us I think we should obey the Sacred Scriptures and give to those that ask us.

Christ, in giving the parable of the "Good Samaritan," does not tell whether the man that fell among the thieves was worthy of the aid he received or not, and it is not likely that the Samaritan knew anything about him except that he was wounded and needed help. That was enough for him to know and that should be enough for us. Our Savior's command is, "Go thou and do likewise. It is far better to give to many who do not need or deserve our help, than to let one really needy person go unrelieved. How terrible it would be to hear from the lips of our divine Master in the last Great Day, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these ye did it not to me."

In regard to associating with those who live in open rebellion to the teachings of the Bible, I will give you my views. The servant is not greater than his lord. Our Savior died to save sinners, and his blood is sufficient to cleanse the vilest. He says they that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. He came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. He ate with sinners. If we hold ourselves aloof from sinners how can we obey our Savior's command, "Go ye unto all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Can we win souls to Christ by refusing to associate with them?

All people who know us can tell by our lives whether we are Christians or not, and if we are Christians they will know that we disapprove of all acts of wickedness. We should learn to hate sin without hating the sinner. You say truly that Christ's example teaches the Christian to be kind, helpful and courteous to all mankind, to seek the sinning whenever and wherever there is a possibility of winning them to righteousness. Do you not think we would be more likely to win sinners to righteousness by treating them courteously and with kindness, than by standing aloof from them lest we should be defiled? We have all sinned and we all need pardon. Our Savior is no respecter of persons. He is just as willing to forgive and receive the vilest sinner into his kingdom as he was to receive us. Now, dear sister, I have given you my views on the above subjects and I wish to assure you that I do so in a loving spirit and that, although we may differ in our views, I trust we may both be led by the same spirit,—that of love and obedience to our Heavenly Father. When we lack wisdom let us ask of God, who "giveth liberally and upbraideth not."

I like your views in regard to women's work. I think the wife and mother's place is with her family. If our Savior had intended for women to preach he surely would have chosen some among his apostles. It is woman's duty to do all the good she can, but her first duty is to care for her own family if God has given her one.

From New Hartford, Iowa.

WE are now located in Butler County, Iowa, at the above-named place, and as many of the Brethren and friends of the Dallas Center church (where we formerly resided) requested us to let them hear from us, we pen the following:

We are well pleased with our new home, but we miss the church privileges, as wife and I are the only members here and we have not been to a meeting of the Brethren since Easter Sunday, when we worshiped with the Brethren at Waterloo. True we have two churches in our village, but yet we feel more at home with the Brethren.

We would be very glad if some of the Brethren of the surrounding churches would pay us a visit

We have not handed in our church letter yet, as we are a little at a loss to know just where we belong, as there are several churches within a radius of about twenty miles. As we are engaged in the furniture business, and have no help, we can not well get away from home much just now. So, brethren, come and pay us a visit. We would be very glad to see some of the Brethren.

To the Brethren of the Dallas Center church we often revert in our thoughts. We remember them with pleasure, and often think of the many seasons of worship we have spent with them. It was at this place that we united with the church of our choice and we have spent the most of our Christian life with the Brethren at that place. We would ask you all to remember us at a Throne of Grace, and ask you to pray for us that we may never depart from the simplicity of the Gospel. We find the MESSENGER a source of much spiritual food and read it with an eagerness we never realized before. A. W. HAWBAKER.

THE brethren and sisters and friends met on Sunday, April 26, for the purpose of re-organizing our Sunday-school. The school opens under encouraging prospects. Parents and children are taking an active part. Bro. Aaron Sollenberger and the writer were chosen to conduct the school. May God help us, as parents, to bring up our children in the way they should go.

Our love-feast was held May 16 and 17. Bro. Edmund Forney officiated. Bro. David Martin, from Kansas, and Bro. S. E. Lehman, from Franklin Grove were also with us. On Sunday forenoon we had a children's meeting. The Brethren spoke principally to the children, but there was not food only for the lambs, but also for the older sheep. We had a very good feast, and hope that we were all strengthened in the faith, and more fully prepared to fight the battles of the Lord. Oh, for more grace to serve the Lord!

We also held an election for a speaker. The lot fell on our worthy brother, Aaron Sollenberger. May he, though young in years, take hold of the work willingly and serve the church to the best of his ability! May the Lord help us all to be more diligent in our calling!

A Word of Caution.

BRETHREN, look out for a deceiver, a man who claims to be a doctor. He is a heavy-set man, with a light mustache and of a dudish appearance. He claims to be Dr. King, the Quaker doctor from Philadelphia. He places a glass tube in your hand, then he walks around in the room and tells you how you feel, and where your ailments are, better than I could tell you. He says he can cure you for $35. You give him the money or your note. He leaves you medicine and promises to be around again in ten days, but that is the last of him. So beware of him, and when you read this, clip it out and send it to your County paper, so that, if possible, this deceiver may be stopped from imposing upon the poor afflicted people. JOHN A. MYERS.

From the Marlow Church, Indian Territory.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements the Brethren met and organized a church at this place. Brethren A. Molsbee and H. Brubaker, of Nocona, Texas, was with us and officiated. Bro. Geo. Shamberger was chosen as Secretary pro tem, and the letters being read, the church now proceeded to elect officers. Bro. A. J. Detrick was chosen Secretary, B. F. Ihrig, Treasurer; Emma Detrick and Netty Worrel, Solicitors for Missionary and Tract Work; the writer as church correspondent. Fifteen united with the church by letter, and one dear sister that had wandered away from the fold, was restored. Two were received by baptism two weeks ago, and two more came and were baptized at the organization, making a total of twenty members now enrolled. Two of them are ministers, and one is in the deacon's office. Bro. Geo. Shamberger is our elder. There are nine more members living near by, who are expected to hand in their letters soon.

This will make a total of twenty-nine members in, what will be known as, the "Marlow church," Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory. Brethren pray for the little vine that is planted here, that it may be watered by the dews of heaven, and that many more may be gathered into the fold of Christ. May these precious souls who have said by their actions that they would rather suffer "affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season," hold out faithful, that we may at last receive that crown of righteousness that fadeth not away, with all the redeemed in heaven! WE, the undersigned committee, hereby acknowledge the receipt of $163.96 of the brethren and friends of the Prairie View church, and Mount Zion Mennonite church and their friends. May the Lord abundantly bless the donors, is our prayer.

Notes of Travel.

MARCH 13 wife and I left our home, for a visit to some of my children, and also to attend the District Meeting of Middle Indiana. After visiting a daughter in Logansport and one in Barnettsville, Ind., I preached in the Brethren's church at the latter place on Sunday.

At Homer, Champaign Co., Ill., I visited one of my sons, and preached in the Methodist church at that place on Easter Sunday. There are only four members residing at Homer. One brother, who lives in the country, also attended the meeting. Bro. J. H. Moore formerly preached at this place occasionally, and they still remember him. The brother from the country, mentioned above, talks of buying a lot in town and building a meeting-house for the Brethren. He has a daughter in town, who is a member. My impression is that the wants of the members at Homer should be attended to. God has a people there and the duty is laid upon us to help them. The Brethren of Southern Illinois should take an especial interest in this matter.

On my eighty-fifth birthday, April 1, wife and I attended the District Meeting. Since our return home I have been suffering severely with neuralgia which has affected my entire system, but I have somewhat improved during the last few days. SAMUEL MURRAY.

From the Cheyenne Church, Kansas.

THIS little band of believers is still striving for the right. No trouble of any kind affects our peace. We, as a church, did not ask for any aid during the past winter. One family, however, was supplied with help. Our County was not so much affected by the drouth last year as the other portions of Western Kansas, and this year the prospect for good crops is excellent.

The District Meeting of this portion of Kansas convened near Norton, Kans. Bro. John Ikenberry was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. B. B. Whitmer, alternate.

Our Sunday-school was re-organized recently, with the writer as Superintendent. The outlook for a successful term's work is encouraging.

LATER.—During the last few weeks our church at this place has decreased somewhat in number, but, we trust, not in zeal. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. We have preaching every two weeks, after the close of the Sunday-school exercises. All our services are held at the "Star" school-house, near Bird City. It is a fine, commodious building and affords ample room for our meetings.

At the last council of the church the writer was chosen to represent the Cheyenne church at Annual Meeting. O. C. SLIFER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

TWO BAPTIZED. We have lately received two by baptism,—one an aged man, past his three score and ten. We are moving along nicely in this, the Falling Spring, congregation, Pa., for which we thank the Lord.—Wm. A. Anthony, Clay Hill, Pa., May 12.

CORRECTION.—I wish to make the following corrections in my communication on page 302 of MESSENGER. Instead of J. M. Mohler I meant to say "D. M. Mohler;" instead of W. A. Weaver, "A. A. Weaver;" instead of D. M. Eller, "N. D. Eller."—John Bowman, Warrensburgh, Mo.

FROM GARRISON, IOWA.—WE organized our Sunday-school April 26, with Bro. E. H. Stouffer as Superintendent, and Bro. J. B. Lehman, Assistant. We enrolled ninety scholars, and hope that all will feel a deep interest in the work, and that the Lord will bless our humble efforts.—Lizzie Johnson.

REJOICING NEWS.—April 25 Bro. D. H. Weaver, of Longmont, Colo., came to Fort Collins, Colo., and preached three soul-cheering sermons for us. Sunday morning, at 11 A. M., he preached on baptism and its design. He handled this subject with ability. We then went to a large lake near by, where, in the presence of many witnesses, one dear soul was buried with Christ in baptism. This was the first baptism in this part of Colorado by our people. Bro. Weaver referred in his discourse to much of the Scripture that sustains our practice and we hope, will awaken a general interest in our position.—D. M. Click.

ANNUAL COUNCIL. — May 7 the members of the Upper Codorus church met in annual council at the Black Rock meeting-house. A good deal of work was on had, but all was disposed of in a satisfactory manner. We held a collection for mission work, and hope that the funds may be spent in such a manner as to meet the approbation of God. — E. S. Miller, Sec'y.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.—The members of the Middle Fork church, Clinton Co., Ind., held their quarterly church meeting to-day. We expelled one member, received four by letter, and elected Eld. Solomon Blickenstaff delegate to Annual Meeting. We appointed our Communion for May 24, at 4 P. M. All business passed off pleasantly. — John E. Metzger, May 5.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ORGANIZED.—The Jonathan Creek congregation met April 5, to re-organize the school that had been suspended during the winter. Bro. Q. Leckrone was elected Superintendent. An able corps of teachers was also chosen, and the school opened with the most flattering prospects for a large attendance and earnest work. Let each one lend a helping hand to further the good cause. We can do much by being promptly at our places each Sunday, with our lessons well prepared. Let us labor earnestly, and great good will surely crown our efforts. —Marion Leckrone.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.—I am in receipt of the following notice from Mr. B. H. Griswold, General Passenger Agent of the Western Maryland Railroad: "Excursion tickets will be sold from all points on our line to Hagerstown, from May 25 to June 5; good to return until June 15, at one fare for the round trip. On Sunday, May 31, special trains will be run to Hagerstown; one from the B. & C. V. R. R.; one from the main line; and from the Baltimore and Harrisburg Division. All these trains will arrive at Hagerstown between nine and ten A. M." In addition to the above I would suggest that some one should learn how many persons would likely go from his station, so that the ticket agent may provide himself with the necessary number of tickets to supply all. — E. W. Stoner, Union Bridge, Md.

A PLEASANT LOVE-FEAST. — The Walnut Valley church, Barton Co., Kans., held a very pleasant love-feast on the evening of May 2. A number of brethren and sisters from the adjoining churches were present. Ministers present were, brethren Enoch Eby, John Hollinger and Jasper Perry, of Seward, Kansas. The Brethren gave many good admonitions. An election was held for a deacon. The lot fell on Bro. Joseph Filbrun, who was duly installed. On Sunday morning the first service, a children's meeting—was held at 9: 30, after which there was public preaching. In the evening we met again for preaching. Thus ended a pleasant and profitable meeting to all who took part in the services. We ask an interest in the prayers of God's children, that we may be successful in bringing souls to Christ! — Michael Keller, Great Bend, Kans.

KIND WORDS FOR THE MESSENGER. —I love to read the GOSPEL MESSENGER, because it comes with so much of the spirit of Christ through its pages. The isolated ones can appreciate the benefit of it more highly than those who have ministers to preach to them regularly. We have no minister to preach for us, except the GOSPEL MESSENGER. I hope and pray that the brethren and sisters, that shall soon meet at the General Conference of the Brethren church, will go with the spirit of love, and that all the business relating to the church shall be transacted in the spirit of love, so that all may be done to the honor and glory of God, and for the good of the church. Brethren, let us try to get a little nearer to Jesus in all of our deliberations, and not do as some of the popular churches are doing,—getting nearer the world, and farther away from God! We would like very much, if some minister could come and locate here and preach for us. If any of the ministering brethren are passing through here, we would like them to stop with us and hold a few meetings for us. The first Lord's Day of each month would be the most suitable, as the other Sundays are taken up by other denominations at the church-house in Darlington. We live at the crossing of the Omaha and St. Louis railroad, and the B. B. & Q. railroad.—S. S. Garman, Darlington, Mo.

Literary Notes.

TRACT ON DANCING.—"The Christian and the Modern Dance," by Rev. G. F. Pentecost, of Minneapolis, Minn., is the title of a 20 page tract, recently published, by the Mennonite Publishing Co., Elkhart, Ind. The tract is an excellent exposition of this modern form of amusement, in which the author draws a very correct line between the church and the world, and it will be a benefit to all who read it.

A brother in the Mennonite church made the proposition to have it printed and kindly furnished the necessary means for that purpose. Price, postage prepaid, 100 copies, $2.50; 12 copies, 35 cents; 1 copy, 4 cents.

Biblical Commentary on the Prophecies of Isaiah. By Franz Delitzsch, D. D., Professor of Theology in the University of Leipzig. Authorized Translation from the Third Edition. By the Rev. James Denny, B. D. in two volumes. Vol. I., 8vo, cloth, 520 pp. $2.50. Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

This translation of Delitzsch's Commentary on Isaiah (one of the "Foreign Biblical Library" series, edited by the Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll, L. L. D., Editor of The Expositor), represents the third edition of the original work. Adapted for English readers, yet nothing has been omitted of importance.

The clergyman and theological student will find in this Commentary a work of surpassing interest. Isaiah has been called the Evangelical Prophet of the Old Testament, because of his many references to the Messiah, descriptions of his birth and death, etc; therefore the book of Isaiah has always been one of the great points of controversy between the Christian and the non-Christian. The Christian minister must preach from Isaiah, must often go to Isaiah for the most brilliant prophetical utterances attesting to the truth of the religion of Jesus of Nazareth. The work of Delitzsch is scholarly, exhaustive profound and reverent.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

WINTER.— In Branton Township, Mifflin Co., Pa., May 1, 1891, Mrs. Eliza, wife of Eli Winter, aged 53 years, 7 months and 7 days.

Deceased was a consistent member of the Brethren church over fourteen years. Her Christian graces were many. Her deeds of love and kindness were without respect of persons. We believe she lived and died without an enemy. HANNAH YODER.

COFFMAN.—In the English River congregation, Keokuk Co., Iowa, May 1, 1891, sister Barbara Coffman, aged 70 years, 4 months and 28 days.

Sister Barbara was born in Virginia in 1820. In 1841 she united in marriage with Bro. David Coffman (who preceded her about ten months).

Ten children blessed this union, of whom three preceded their parents to the spirit world. In 1854 brother and sister Coffman moved to Iowa and soon after to this congregation, where sister Coffman spent the remainder of her days. She united with the church in her young days, and was strong in the faith.

Funeral services from Rev. 14: 13 to a large concourse of relatives and friends.

PETER BROWER.

BREON.—On Crystal Plains, Smith Co., Kans., April 19, 1891, Philip Breon, aged 83 years, 5 months and 10 days.

Deceased was born in Pennsylvania, Nov. 9, 1807. In 1830 he was married to Miss Polly Riphart of Schuylkill County, at which place he afterwards located and lived for a time. In the winter of 1848 he moved to Des Moines County, Iowa, near Burlington, where he resided for two years, after which he located permanently in Wappello County. Here he lived for twenty-five years, and then again moved West in 1875, to Crystal Plains, Smith Co., Kans. Thus a great part of his life was spent as a pioneer on the prairies of Iowa and Kansas. His remains were interred in the Crystal Plains cemetery, in the presence of five of his children and a large number of friends. The services were conducted by Lewis Larne of the Brethren church, from Job 7.

CLARA L. BREON.

THOMAS.—At Omaha, Nebr., April 23, 1891, Daniel Thomas, aged 80 years.

Uncle Dan, as he is well known, formerly lived at Mt. Etna, and Eureka, having come here in 1856, and lived in the County until a few years ago. DAVID MARKLEY.

LEWIS.—At the home of her son, Peter Lewis, in Omaha, Nebr., April 6, 1891, of La Grippe, sister Mary Ann Lewis, aged 72 years, 4 months and 27 days.

Grandmother Lewis (nee Ramer), was born in Hamilton County, Nov. 9, 1818. From there she, with her parents, moved to Dearborn County, Ind., and, in 1833, to Ripley County, in the same State. She was united in marriage to Bro. J. S. Lewis Sept. 1, 1836. Shortly after her marriage she and her husband united with the Brethren church. Both remained faithful unto the end.

Sixteen children were born to them,—nine sons and seven daughters. Seven are members of the Brethren church. She, with her husband and family, came to Minnesota in 1855, and settled near where the village of Lewistown now stands, where she has since made her home. Her husband died in the year 1880. Sister Lewis died while visiting with her son in Omaha. Her remains were taken to her home and placed beside those of her husband in the Brethren's cemetery. Funeral services by Eld. David Whetstone in the Brethren's church to a large concourse of relatives and friends. LULU WIRT.

BLOUGH. — In Mt. Carroll, Ill., May 5, 1891, Bro. Henry Blough, aged 78 years, 6 months and 15 days.

The deceased was a faithful, exemplary member of the church for about forty years, and his departure was very sudden. After eating breakfast he spoke of having pain in his head, sat in his chair by the stove and calmly fell asleep in Jesus, to await the glorious resurrection. Funeral services by Eld. Geo. D. Zollers and others from Rev. 14: 12, 13. J. J. EMMERT.

STOUFFER.—At his home in Uniontown, Carroll Co., Md., April 15, 1891, of dropsy and heart trouble, Mr. Elias Stouffer, aged about 72 years.

Deceased was never married. He was a well-known and a beloved citizen of the place, always upright and honest in all his dealings. Truly his walk in life was an incentive for good to any one. M. JORDAN.

ROYER.—At Ephrata, Pa., April 28, 1891, sister Mary C. Royer, wife of Bro. Henry Royer, aged 38 years and 18 days.

Deceased was a faithful sister and died in good hope. She was a daughter of Dr. D. E. Shirk,—now a brother. Services by Eld. Christian Bucher, of Lebanon County, Pa., from 1 Pet. 1. JACOB B. KELLER.

SHANK.—In the Des Moines Valley church, Iowa, April 27, 1891, of apoplexy, sister Fanny Shank, aged nearly 82 years.

The subject of this notice was born in Lancaster County, Pa. Her maiden name was Hoover. She was married to Samuel Browr, of Morrison's Cove, March, 1827. She moved with her husband to Iowa in 184[illegible]. Seven children blessed this union. Samuel Brown died in 1863, and in 1871 she married Daniel Shank, of Dallas County, Iowa, who survives her. She has always been a faithful member of the church. Her remains were taken to the Libertyville church for burial. Funeral discourse from 2 Tim. 4: 6, 7, 8, by brethren Wolf and Holder. Peace to her ashes. S. M. GOUGHNOUR.

SWIHART.—At Sedan, Dekalb Co., Ind., May 8, 1891, sister Rebecca Swihart, aged 96 years, 4 months and 25 days.

G. I. PATTERSON.

CORBIN. -- In the Mexico church, Ind., May 9, 1891, James M. Corbin, aged 81 years, 3 months and 5 days.

Deceased has been a member of the church for six years. He was the first inmate of the "Old Folks' Home" of the Middle District of Indiana. He has suffered since last June with gangrene on his foot, but bore his suffering with Christian courage, and died in hope of immortality.

Funeral services from 1 Pet 1: 24, by Jacob Barnhart and Jacob Fisher.

NEFF. — At Ladoga, Ind., Feb. 14, 1891, Jacob B. Neff, aged 59 years, 1 month and 8 days.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

This little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising "—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill. one of America's best writers of Sunday school music

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music "—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3 00; by express, $2 60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

ANNUAL MEETING NEWS.

In company with brethren Joseph Amick, G. B. Royer, their wives and others, we left Mt. Morris, Tuesday evening, May 26th en route for the Annual Meeting. At 10:30 we were in Chicago, and soon found ourselves comfortably quartered at the Windsor Hotel. The next day we visited Bro. Wm. R. Miller, 441 West Van Buren Street, one of the ministers in the Chicago church. He is engaged in the mercantile business. Our call with him was short but pleasant. We next called at Dr. Fahrney's office, on Hoyne Avenue, but he was not in. His son, however, entertained us pleasantly, and showed us through the large four-story building that is used in the Doctor's medical business. We were somewhat surprised at the large amount of business the Doctor is doing.

We learned that the Mission Board of Northern Illinois was to meet in Chicago the next day for the purpose of selecting a lot on which to erect a church for the use of the Brethren at that place. We have not yet heard the result of their efforts.

At 2 P. M. we were at the Baltimore & Ohio depot, at the foot of Monroe St., where several were in waiting for the train that was to leave at 2:55. Among them were Bro. T. J. Nair and family, of Lordsburg, Cal., and Bro. Frank McCune, of Iowa. Our friend, W. C. Shoemaker, General Traveling Agent for the Baltimore & Ohio, was also soon on hand with a number that he had just brought in from Mt. Morris, so that by the time the train started, a goodly number were on board. Mr. Shoemaker proved no little assistance to those who were so fortunate as to favor the Baltimore & Ohio with their patronage. Mr. L. S. Allen, Assistant General Passenger Agent, showed us much kindness in not only special favors that we received, but also in low rates procured for our people. The Baltimore & Ohio has always been friendly to our people, and we will do well to give it our patronage as much as possible.

We found the service on the road excellent, and the cars neat and comfortable. The road-bed was in good condition, and the train ran very smoothly, making also excellent time. The weather was pleasant, no dust whatever, and taking it all in all, it was perhaps as enjoyable a ride as we have had in a long while.

Passing from the great prairies in the West, to the mountains in the East the next day, was quite a change of scenery to us. We reached Harper's Ferry at 3 P. M. Thursday, where we had to wait till after 6 o'clock. Years ago, when the Annual Meeting was at Broadway, Va., we stopped here several hours, and examined most of the points of interest. But little change has taken place during these years. The old John Brown Fort still stands as a historic relic. It is a small brick building, standing in the rear of a livery stable. We passed up the stone steps to the Catholic church on the mountain side. The steps are cut out of solid rock, and in order to reach the church one must pass up this steep point — a distance of nearly 100 feet. About 4 o'clock it commenced raining, and put an end to any further observation.

Harper's Ferry stands in West Virginia, and at a point where the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers unite. Just across the latter, to the East is Virginia, while just across the Potomac to the North is Maryland. Hence three States may be seen at one time, and yet all separated by streams.

It was shortly after six when we left. A run of a few minutes brought us to a little station called Weverton, on the Maryland side of the Potomac. Here we waited one hour for the train running up to Hagerstown, which point we reached at 8:30. It was still raining. Our company was met at the depot and soon found resting places for the night. We spent the night with Bro. Elmer Wolfe, Secretary of the Lodging Committee. The next morning we were taken to the house of Bro. S. H. Miller, and there assigned a room for use during the meeting. Bro. Miller spent last winter in Silver Springs Park, Fla., about twenty miles from Keuka, hence we feel much at home with the family. This was Friday morning; it had rained all night, and was still damp and cool when we started to the Annual Meeting grounds, shortly before 8 o'clock. A walk of two blocks brought us to the place selected for the Meeting, on the South-east side of the City. Hagerstown is quite an old place, with a population of about 12,000 inhabitants. It suffered more or less during the war from both armies. General Lee with his entire army, passed through the place a time or two, and a number of battles, large and small, were fought in the vicinity. The city is well built, good clean sidewalks and many shade trees line the streets, and is surrounded by a fine farming and fruit country. Our Brethren are also very numerous in this part of the State. Three congregations corner in the city, near where the Brethren's meeting-house stands, viz.: Beaver Creek, Manor and Welsh Run. The Annual Meeting ground is properly in the Beaver Creek congregation. The site is well selected, consisting of about eight acres in all. The Kee-Mar College for young ladies occupies, with campus, nearly half of the ground. This part is well set in large shade trees, and is covered with a heavy coat of green grass. The buildings are large, neatly constructed and commodious. They have been set apart for the use of the meeting. Here the Standing Committee has splendid accommodations, perhaps as good as that body has ever enjoyed, several rooms being at its disposal. The remainder of the building is filled with beds for the accommodation of delegates and visitors.

The other half of the ground contains a number of temporary buildings erected for the special use of this meeting. First in importance is the Tabernacle, which is made of poles and boards—being covered with boards,—but is not rain proof. It is 115x120 feet in size, and stands on a reasonably steep hill-side, with the stand for the Standing Committee about one-third the way down, in such a manner as to place the larger part of the congregation on the hill-side above the Committee. The arrangement, in this respect, seems good, and is likely to give entire satisfaction. The building will seat about 5,000 persons, and is lighted by electricity.

We next come to the large Dining Hall, 140 feet long and 72 feet wide, and so arranged as to seat at the tables 1,000 persons, and still afford a separate place for the Standing Committee and delegates to take their meals in a way that they will not be disturbed or crowded out. The cooking arrangements are quite complete, and are presided over by D. A. Lahman, of Nappanee, Ind., who has had charge of that department for five years. He seems to understand his business, and says that if they can get the food to him, he can cook it as fast as it can be used in that building. He has two boilers, holding about ten barrels each, side by side, and one, the same size, just between and above them. The latter is kept full of hot water, while the one to the left is used for making coffee, and the other for cooking meat and potatoes. In it can be cooked four ordinary beeves at one time. The arrangements for frying meat are so complete that enough for 400 persons

"Study to show thyself approved unto God: a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE END OF THE WAY.

My life is a wearisome journey,
I'm sick with the dust and the heat;
The rays of the sun beat upon me,
The briars are wounding my feet;
But the city to which I am going,
Will more than my trials repay,
All the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward,
I often am longing for rest;
But he who appoints me my pathway,
Knows just what is needful and best.
I know in his Word he has promised
That my strength shall be as my day,
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

He loves me too well to forsake me,
Or give me one trial too much;
All his people have been dearly purchased,
And Satan can never claim such.
By and by I shall see him and praise him
In the city of unending day,
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

When the last feeble step has been taken,
And the gates of the city appear,
And the beautiful songs of the angels
Float out on the listening ear;
When all that now seems so mysterious,
Will be plain and clear as the day;
Yes! the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

Though now I am footsore and weary,
I shall rest when I'm safely at home.
I know I'll receive a glad welcome,
For the Savior himself has said, "Come!"
So when I am weary in body,
And sinking in spirit I say,
"All the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

GIDEON'S WORK FOR GOD.

BY LIZZIE H. DELP.

God wrought the mighty deliverance of the Israelites from the bondage of the Egyptians. But the miracles and wonders were soon forgotten, or remembered only as legends. They served Baal and Ashtaroth. Is it any wonder that Gideon inquired, "Where be all the miracles that our fathers told us of?"

The Midianites, Amalekites and the Arabians regarded the Israelites as common prey, and, crossing the Valley of the Jordan, they encamped on the fertile hillsides of Manasseh and Ephraim. Each year witnessed their forays upon the fattening herds and ripening grain. They swept through the land like a consuming fire. The Israelites, unable to resist in their own strength, fled to the caves in the mountains in despair. This continued for seven years until the only alternative seemed to be starvation in the mountain fastnesses, or death at the hands of the Bedouins. Still they did not remember the warning of Moses and Joshua; still they faithfully worshiped Baal and Ashtaroth.

Gideon was summoned by a special messenger from heaven to deliver Israel. He obeyed the voice of the Lord. The people were angry at his audacity in destroying the temple, dedicated to the worship of Baal, but they soon rallied around his standard, and he had a large army at his command. The Lord wished to display his miraculous power, and he needed only a few. One hundred and twenty thousand Midianites are encamped on the hills that overlook the plains of Esdraelon. The Israelites are encamped on the slope of Mount Gilboa. The cowards in Gideon's army were glad to retire after they had a view of the enemy. Still too many remain. Near their encampment is the "Spring of Trembling." The soldiers are brought to this spring and here they are again divided; the Lord needed but three hundred to carry out his design. Gideon divides his little army into three companies. Each man is furnished with a peculiar torch which burned with a low-smouldering light, but sometimes blazed up suddenly. The pitcher served to conceal the lamp. In view of the methods of warfare of those days, the plan adopted was admirably fitted to secure the end in view. As a thief in the night, the little army crossed the Valley of Jezreel, and surprised the host of the Midianites.

Gideon gave the appointed signal, the torches cast a lurid light over the scene, and amid the crash of broken pitchers and sounding trumpets is heard the war-cry, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon!" Tabor and Carmel and the hills of Ephraim repeat the shout and the trumpet peal with a thousand echoes. The startled Midianites were thrown into a state of confusion, and the whole camp was transformed into a dark and terrible scene of mutual slaughter. Israel thus viewed the destruction of their enemies. When the morning came, the field of battle was covered with the slain. Then Gideon ruled over Israel in quietness for forty years.

The story of Gideon is a symbol as well as a history. God chooses the few who believe in him to do his special work. It is unbelief that makes cowards. God chooses his men to carry out his work as truly as he called them in the past. Elijah, alone, old and wearied with disappointment and care, had courage to face the four hundred bright-robed priests, chanting litanies to Baal. The schools of Hillel and Shammai were overturned by the lowly doctrine of the Nazarene. There are mighty men of learning and power among the Deans and Canons of England, but the Lord chose John Bunyan to give to the world a "Pilgrim's Progress."

It is far easier to honor the heroism of the past, than to be brave in the present. Christ has promised, "As thy day thy strength shall be," "my grace is sufficient for thee." If we are willing to toil and suffer, and be strong for God, then we shall enter the many mansions at last. The crown unfading, and white robes are awaiting those who fight the good fight of faith and finish their God-given work.

SHALL TRUTH PREVAIL?

BY W. A. ROSE.

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5: 21.

We might ask, "How can we prove all things and know at all times what is good and right in the sight of God and man?" We answer, "By the perfect law of liberty." The apostle James says that "whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deeds."

We wish to notice in the first place, what is necessary that we may be proper judges to hear the two great witnesses, the Old and New Testament, for in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word shall be established. What is necessary in order that we may become a proper judge or juror in the civil courts of the United States? In the first place we must be old enough to know right from wrong, and we must be twenty-one years old. In the second place we must be citizens of the United States. In the third place we must have an unbiased mind in regard to the case that is to be tried before us.

If these qualifications are necessary to fit us as a judge or juror in the courts of the United States, are they not much more needful to qualify us as judges when the sacred words of God's Truth are brought in question? In the first place we should be old enough to know good from evil, we must be citizens of the kingdom of our Lord and Savior, and our minds must be controlled by the mind or spirit of Christ. For what man knoweth the spirit of man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the spirit of God. Now we have not received the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given us of God. If we have not the spirit of Christ, we are none of his and therefore cannot say with the apostle Paul, "But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit," for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God.

We must have a spirit of candor, and our minds must be unbiased, and not trammeled with early training or prejudice, but we must cast from us everything that will have a tendency to unfit us for receiving with meekness the engrafted Word that is able to save our souls. Like Timothy we should know the Scriptures that are able to make us wise through faith in Christ Jesus. Are we now ready to be led by the spirit of Christ, and to hear the whole Truth and nothing but the Truth, as it is in Christ? If so, we will proceed to prove all things, and to hold fast that which is good. It might be well to prove ourselves first. Paul, in writing to the Corinthian brethren, admonished them with language like this: "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith: prove your ownselves; know ye not your ownselves, how that Jesus Christ is in you except ye be reprobates?"

In Romans 12: 1, 2, we have this language: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Let us examine ourselves, then, whether we are in the faith. What faith has the apostle Paul reference to? He referred to the faith once delivered to the saints,—that faith that he admonished Jude to contend earnestly for,—the faith that is built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner-stone, not what you or I may believe to be right or accept as our faith, but let us have "thus saith the Lord" upon the subject.

Christ came as a witness, a leader and a commander to his people. Isa. 55: 4. To-day he is seated upon the throne of his Father, wielding the scepter of righteousness, and swaying the destinies of his subjects. As such let us submit to his every command. Christ's greatest command, after receiving all power, both in heaven and on earth, was to go and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Upon the last part of this text rests the foundation of the church in regard to trine immersion, and yet it seems strange to me that we, as a Brotherhood, should be so united in regard to obeying the last part of the great commission while, at the same time, we are so divided in regard to the first part,—that which relates to teaching the Gospel to all nations.

Brethren, let us lay aside all prejudice and be candid and just to one another. Let us qualify ourselves that we may be proper judges.

We ask, then, to whom was the command to teach all nations delivered,—to the apostles and ministers of the church of Christ, or to the church as a body? Let us settle this in our minds first, for upon this hangs the weight of the whole responsibility, for if the command was given to the apostles and ministers of the church of Christ, then they alone are held responsible before God for the great missionary work of the church,—the teaching all nations whatsoever Christ has commanded them. Are we, as a church, ready to admit this fact? If not, then where does the responsibility rest? We have a similar case recorded in Matt. 16: 19, where Christ says to Peter, "And unto thee will I give the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. Now the question is, "To whom were the keys of the kingdom, and the power to open and shut the doors and make the laws thereof, given? If to Peter, then Catholicism is right and we are wrong, and to-day we should have a continued Priesthood and the voice of the Pope should be held sacred above every other law upon the earth. But we cannot receive this view of the subject, neither can we hold the apostles and ministers of the Gospel responsible for the extension of the kingdom and carrying out the commands of the Master. The facts in the case are such that if the Gospel of Christ is not taught in its primitive purity to all nations, the church is responsible and will be so held at the day of judgment. Having the responsibility of teaching the Gospel to all nations placed where it should be,—in the church,—we ask, "How shall this great work be accomplished?" Shall we call our ministers and say to them, "Go, teach the Gospel and extend the kingdom of Christ to all nations, working with your own hands to support the wants of the flesh in regard to food and raiment? If so, let us call none but unmarried men to the ministry.

Paul, though unmarried, was well educated,—brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, one of the most learned men of his day. He spake as the Spirit gave him utterance. If we could call such men as Paul to the ministry, then we could have some excuse for not assisting our ministers. But how is it with a large part of our ministers to-day? The most of them have large families to support; they lack the proper amount of education and, beyond all, that great gift of God that the apostle Paul possessed,—of speaking in and through the Holy Ghost.

Let us take Paul himself for a witness in this matter, 1 Cor. 9: 3–14, "Mine answer to them that do examine me is this, Have we not power to eat and to drink? Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas? Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working? Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also? For it is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that plougheth should plough in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ. Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."

We cannot hide behind Paul in this matter, for his testimony is against us, neither can we hide behind Christ and the rest of the apostles, for Christ says unto the apostles, when he sent them forth to preach to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, "Provide neither gold nor silver nor brass in your purses nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves for the workman is worthy of his hire." Also, Luke 22: 35, 36, "And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse and scrip and shoes, lacked ye anything? And they said, Nothing. Then said he unto them, But now he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip."

So say we. But suppose he that is sent has no purse nor scrip, shall he be compelled to work two-thirds of the time that he may procure purse and scrip to preach the Gospel the other third, when there are thousands in the church that have both purse and scrip, who are held just as responsible before God for preaching the Gospel as the minister!

"But," one will say, "do not the Scriptures teach that the Gospel is to be furnished without money and without price," and we hear them quote Isaiah 55, "Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come and buy wine and milk without money and without price." From this we would infer that the great Gospel feast and the plan for the redemption of the souls of men was to be furnished without cost to the world, and so it was. But how about the price or sacrifice God made in sending his only begotten Son from the portals of eternal glory to this sin-cursed earth to suffer and die the ignominious death of the cross, that we through his death and suffering might be called the sons of God, and if sons then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. Ah yes, though he was a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation to all that obey him. I would ask, How can they obey unless they hear, and how can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach except they be sent? The truth is that God has provided the plan of redemption without money and without price to us, but let us not lose sight of one great truth, and that is when we are born again and become the sons and daughters of God by adoption, whereby we cry, "Abba Father," and have the spirit of Christ bearing witness with our spirits that we are the sons of God, are we not as such placed in the same position to fallen man as the Father and Son were at the beginning, and if the love of the Father and Son was so great, how are we affected in regard to the salvation of the souls of men? If we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his, but if the spirit of Christ dwell in us, then we will have the same love and regard for the salvation of the world that our Blessed Master had, and we will be ever ready to make sacrifice for his cause.

Again we hear one excuse himself by quoting 1 Tim. 5: 8, "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." Did you never think that this Scripture would apply as well to our spiritual house as our temporal? God pity the brother or sister that has no spiritual home or house to provide for! I hear the apostle saying, "We have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Speaking to the church he says, "For we are builders together with God; ye are God's husbandry; ye are God's building; ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifice acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." The church of Christ is our spiritual house and home, and the same result will follow if we provide not for its wants as if we neglected our temporal home,—spiritual poverty and the end eternal death.

But I hear some brother or sister saying, "Surely the apostle Paul teaches that we are to give to the poor saints, and he does not say anything about ministering to the wants of the apostles and teachers of the Gospel." "It hath pleased them verily, and their debtors they are, for if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things." Rom. 15: 27. To settle the question we have only to ask, "Of whom did the Gentiles partake of the spiritual things which they had received?" Surely from none other than the apostles and immediate followers of Christ, who left all the possessions they had in this world and followed the Master, and after his death taught and promulgated his Gospel.

In considering the glory and development of the soul or spiritual body, we find, by referring to 1 Cor. 15: 41–44, this language: "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body."

We ask, "Why the great difference in the spiritual body at the resurrection? One is spoken of as the glory of the sun, another as the moon, and another as the stars, and we are told also that the stars differ in magnitude and glory. What does this all mean?" Simply that there is a difference in the size, capacity or development of the spiritual body. One spiritual body has more glory than another because of greater development and capacity for enjoyment and happiness. Why is this? I answer, "Because their spiritual bodies have not been fed on the same kind of spiritual food." If the natural body is not fed on proper food, it will not develop into a full-grown man or woman. If we should feed a child on one-fourth the amount of food that it should have, its body would become dwarfed and weak. Again, if we should let the child have all the food necessary and of a proper kind, and not allow proper exercise, the same result would follow. The same thing is true of the spiritual body or soul. What, then, is necessary that we become full-grown men and women in Christ Jesus? I answer, the right kind of spiritual food, and an ample amount of work in the vineyard of the Lord and Master. Christ makes this very plain in speaking to his disciples at the well of Samaria, when he says unto them: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." The disciples wondered among themselves how this could be and asked, "Hath any one given him to eat?" He answered by saying, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work. Say not ye, There are four months and then cometh harvest. Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest, and he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together."

Thus it will be with each member of the church of Christ. If we put forth all our energies and employ all the opportunities with which God blesses us, to the advancement of the cause and kingdom of the Master, the spiritual meat that expands and develops the soul will be ours and the enjoyment of the great feast, spoken of by the prophet Isaiah, will be fully realized. He says, "Wherefore spend ye money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good and let your soul delight in fatness."

Entertainment.

WHATEVER we do, we should try to make our work worth something. This is a day when people want to be entertained or amused, rather than instructed and benefited. But the honest, faithful man will do his duty, regardless of popular whims. To do good, honest work is to stand in all times and places.

This question of entertainment is becoming a great evil in many churches. I do not know that such is the case in any of our own congregations, but in many places they are catering entirely too much to this entertainment folly. Especially is this true in musical performances. A choir takes the place (?) of the congregation, during the song service. The socials, festivals, etc., take the place of prayer-meeting. As a result these various institutions, properly belonging to the church, have gone down, and Satan is triumphant. What is the matter? Too much entertainment! What is it for? All for a show! Shame, shame!

Not long since, in a little town of about 2,000 people, we attended a church service in one of the so-called liberal churches, and when the pastor announced that grand, soul-stirring old hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," to our utter disgust about a half dozen frivolous folks jumped to their feet around an organ, and sung that hymn in such a flippant manner that it seemed to us that, as in the days of old, it was enough to "repent the Lord that he had made man."

Some people may call that glorifying the Lord but I can't see it that way. Think of it! Only about a half dozen out of probably two hundred, who claimed to have been redeemed by the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, to sing, and that not for the glory and honor of God but for show, and the glory of themselves. To say nothing of those who sing thus, will these willing mutes ever sing the Song of Redemption? I doubt it!

REWARD OF MERIT.

If there be any system in religion it is based upon the principle of reward of merit. Notwithstanding our having become wholly unprofitable, there still remained a germ of honor and integrity which heaven counted worthy of the death of the very Son of God. Matchless worth indeed! Would to God that we could value ourselves according to our real worth! We may become steeped in sin and unprofitable indeed, still there remains in every human being, no matter how sinful, a jewel of greatest worth. Can we ever value ourselves as we are valued by our Heavenly Father? I fear not.

I would not be understood as trying to "puff up" the human race, but we all know that we are never so careful of ourselves as when we realize, through others, the high esteem in which we are held. It is under such circumstances that our souls enlarge, and the best resolutions of our lives are formed. Indeed, in this sense, as much as in any other, we are our brother's keeper. Show love and esteem for your fellow-man and it at once puts him upon a higher plane. Reject him and he will commit suicide. But we must not digress.

Sin, it is true, can greatly reduce our value, even to total extermination; but righteousness, on the other hand, can enhance our value, even to the extent that all the material universe is no comparison to one saved soul. Upon this principle heaven shall be filled with the souls of the redeemed, and hell with the souls of the damned. The man who raises up against the dictates of the Son of God merits his portion in hell. We say this because the laws and judgments of our God are true and righteous. Upon the same principle, the man who meekly, though courageously, endures his cross, serving the Lord according to his Word, merits heaven.

I know that there are many who think that merit leads toward hell only and not toward heaven, but where is the correctness of such a conclusion? Merit that does not reach as far one way as the other, is no merit at all. If we cannot merit life through the works of Christ, neither should we merit death through the works of the devil. The one is the sequel of the other. A righteous man can no more go to hell than a sinful man can go to the abode of the blessed. Sinful and righteous men diverge just as sin and righteousness do themselves. In fact, there is no sin without the sinner; neither is there righteousness without the righteous, and their destinies are as diametrical as as are their acts, and equally just.

OUR VOYAGE.

BY HANNAH SUTPHIN.

JESUS said, "Peace be still," and there was a great calm. The angry billows were hushed into silence, the rocking ship glided smoothly on to the desired haven, and the sea-sick mariners were soon in their homes, relating to the loved ones the perils of the past night, with their wonderful deliverance from the raging tempest.

Life is but a sea with its endless diversity of joys and sorrows, clouds and sunshine, calms and storms, over which humanity is making its perilous voyage from the cradle to the grave. The vessels on which we sail are hurried on in their silent courses as swiftly as the flight of time can move them, and they will land us ere long upon the unknown shores of eternity. We are all out upon this uncertain sea of life. The currents of time are bearing us rapidly through the perils of the deep. There is no stay of time nor check of tide. Our sails are set for the eternal shore. Onward over the dangerous sea of life, across the dark river of death, we hasten. We meet our fate or fortune beyond the tossing tempest of time.

We should, therefore, study well the perils and safeguards of our journey through this world. In all the calms and storms of life we should keep our bearing and hold our course well for the port of peace, until we pass beyond the shadows of the tempest, and enter the haven of endless joy, for we are all sailing either for the blessed harbor, where we will anchor safely in the haven of eternal rest, or we are drifting recklessly among the breakers, doomed to sink for want of a sure anchor amidst the perils of storm and tempest,—to rise no more for ever.

If we would make ours a successful voyage, and reach at length the desired haven in triumph, we must board the old ship of Zion.

THE SILENT STONE.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

IN No. 19, current volume of MESSENGER is a reference to the Tabernacle, erected for the use of Dr. Talmage, and its indebtedness of $225,000. There is also an allusion to three prominent stones projecting from its walls, representing Mars Hill, Mt. Sinai, and Golgotha, and what those stones might say, could they speak.

The stone from Mars Hill would likely say, "In all these things,—these fine walls, costly, cushioned pews, rich carpets and very expensive organ, ye are too superstitious. Though I am a stone, fastened in this wall, far from my native country, yet I have heard the ringing eloquence of Paul, rolling in thunderous tones from Mars Hill, confounding the Grecian philosophers, and striking the death blow to idolatry. My presence here is only to attract attention, and make you more superstitious, and possibly take you farther away from the UNKNOWN GOD."

The stone from Mt. Sinai would probably say, "I have seen the Lord Jehovah in all the majesty of heaven, in terrible power. The whole mountain of Sinai quaked, and trembled at His presence. His voice none could endure. Through that mighty voice he spake, and said, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me, neither in the heavens above, nor in the earth beneath.' Yet you are making an idol of this Tabernacle, and you are worshiping its grandeur in your hearts more than you are worshiping God, your Creator."

The stone from Golgotha might say, "I have heard the dying groans of the Savior of mankind. I have given rest to the wearied limbs of the Son Man,—he that was so poor that he had not where to lay his head, he that taught men to be humble, he that taught us to remember the poor. He that taught by his servant, to 'owe no man anything,' yet here I am in this wall, with a debt over me, and around me, upon God's own house. Can God be honored this way? Can the poor find a welcome place here? Are the wings of the Almighty overshadowing this place? Are the songs of Zion pouring forth from every heart, or do not the pipes of the great organ drown every voice? Is the Gospel without money or price to the poor and needy?"

A sermon from each of those stones might shake the foundation of the great Tabernacle.

JESUS AND THE LAW.

BY G. M. THRONE.

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."—Matt. 5: 17.

THE Sermon on the Mount may be looked upon as sounding the keynote of the policy of Jesus. In these utterances his aim was to show that his purpose was spiritual elevation, and not political advancement. He is standing at the door-step of God's new temple. He must determine between what is fictitious and what is real. A repudiation of the law and the prophets will bewilder the Hebrew mind, but a cleansing of them from rabbinical glosses and interpretations will be helpful. A separation of secular from spiritual will be an upward move. The covenant made with Abraham, concerning an earthly inheritance, is about to give way to a covenant based on better promises. The law given through Moses must retire before the law of the Spirit that came by Jesus Christ. But before this takes place that which has been gained to the world for future use, must be gathered up and incorporated into the New Law. All that receives the authorization of the Lord will go into his kingdom. To touch or to change anything which is regarded as unalterable law by the Pharisees and Scribes will enrage them, but in the discharge of duty Jesus will know no will but that of his Heavenly Father. His purpose, at all hazards, will be carried out.

There was danger from the bold contrast about to be instituted between the precepts and statutes of the law of Moses and the precepts of Christ. Our Lord would be charged with an attempt to subvert the Jewish Scriptures. This leads him to preface these contrasts with an assurance that he came not to destroy but to fulfill the law and the prophets. This has led many to regard the Ten Commandments as still in force, because Jesus came not to destroy but to fulfill. But let it be observed:

1. He did not say this of the Ten Commandments any more than of the other parts of the law. The Scriptures make no such distinctions of moral, judicial and ceremonial as theologians make. The phrase, the law, as used here in distinction from the other phrase, the prophets, evidently means the five books of Moses, which were so styled by the Jews, while "the prophets" include all the rest of their Scriptures, or all that was taught by the prophets concerning the Law, and concerning the Messiah.

2. It is true that moral principle and the great laws of righteousness are eternal and unchangeable, but as these did not originate with the Ten Commandments, neither do they end with them. They existed before they were embodied in two tables of stone, and they continue to exist after those tables are removed.

3. Our Lord does not say that any part of the Law as such should always continue to have authority, but that not even the smallest part of it should pass away until all be fulfilled.

The Jewish leaders had so perverted the law of Moses, that this was its tendency. There was no help but to set it aside and begin afresh. To reform the law was a more difficult task than to give a new one. So he culled out of it its eternal truths and set it aside. He fulfilled the law by transmuting it into human lives. Is it not singular that Jesus should be charged with destroying the law, when the law itself was charged with the duty of leading men and women to the Christ? People then were a great deal like people now. When their opinions and prejudices were opposed, they cried out, "He breaks the law."

1. The types of the law were fulfilled in Christ, and these typical institutions ceased to have authority, when they were fulfilled in him. See the Epistle to the Hebrews.

2. The prophecies of the Old Testament were fulfilled in Christ. See Luke 24: 25–27; 44–47.

3. Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. Rom. 10: 4.

All the high purposes contemplated in the law are realized in Christ's Gospel, and being thus realized, the law passes away. "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." When we have the full corn in the ear, all is fulfilled that was contemplated in the blade and the ear. The blade and the ear then cease their functions and pass away.

READ THE BIBLE.

BY W. W. CUPP.

THERE being so very much in the Bible it is not at all surprising that there are so few who are thoroughly acquainted with it, but it is a sad thing to know that there are many who know scarcely any of its teachings.

In this day of Sunday-schools, Bible-classes, prayer-meetings, as well as other religious services there can hardly be any excuse for not being well acquainted with the Bible. We find many who, though well informed on other topics, have a very limited knowledge of the Scriptures. For this there must be some cause. What is it? It is, to some extent at least, the inclination of many to speak lightly of the Bible. Even professing Christians are not free of this sin, and many, especially the young are sometimes ashamed to be seen reading the Word of God. This is sad, and we should do all in our power to effect a change in it. No one can afford to be ashamed of reading the Words of Eternal Life, for Christ will be ashamed of such on the Judgment Day.

There are many reasons why it pays to study the Scriptures. When we speak of reading the Bible we do not mean in the sense that some one reads a newspaper, but rather as we read Latin and Greek.

Read to understand, read to reason and think, to view the teachings from every stand-point. It pays to read for the culture that it gives. It is the greatest literary production of all ages, and well may it be, when its writing has been guided by an All-seeing Power.

We should read it so as to be able to give a reason of the hope that we have. Many will try to entrap us, and it is necessary that we be well-informed to defend ourselves. Others, also, will come, asking for knowledge, and we should be able to give it, and thus be the means of doing good,—of leading some soul to Christ.

Read and study the Word for its moulding influence. There are many things that modify character, but no book has such grand precepts, neither has the life of any man been such a perfect example, and if we study Christ's life and follow him, we are assured that we will gain eternal life.

The Bible contains the words of eternal life. Will it not pay to read that which teaches us how to live forever? How can we neglect that on which so much depends!

We talk and read too much about the Bible and don't read enough in the Bible. Through Bible helps we get explanations of many things we would otherwise not understand, but it will do us much more good to take the Bible and study it as we study any text book.

It is said that the Germans are taught the Scriptures as they are the other branches, daily, and as a result we find that the German people know more about the Bible than most Americans.

Many are anxious to improve the mind and no volume will cultivate each faculty more than the Word of God. Let us read the Bible more systematically and understand it more fully.

The founding of Bible departments in our church schools is a move in the right direction. No doubt those who have attended them are better prepared to study for themselves. Can we not improve in this? We ought to be anxious to work a reform in that on which so much depends.

GENTLENESS.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

WHOEVER understands his own interest, and is pleased with the beautiful, rather than the deformed, will be careful to cherish the virtue of gentleness.

It requires but a slight knowledge of human nature to convince us that much of happiness in life must depend upon the cultivation of this virtue. The man of a wild, boisterous spirit, who gives loose reins to his temper, is, generally speaking, a stranger to happiness; he lives in a continual storm; the bitter waters of contention and strife are always swelling up in the soul, destroying his peace, and imparting a baneful influence to all with whom he is connected. He excites the disgust and ill will of all who are acquainted with his character, and but few can be found to wish him success in any of his undertakings.

Not so in the influence of gentleness. This virtue will assist its possessor in all lawful undertakings; it is exceedingly lovely and attractive in its appearances; it wins the hearts of all; it is even stronger than argument, and will often prevail when that would be powerless and ineffectual. It shows that man can put a bridle upon his passions, that he is above the ignoble vulgar, whose characteristic is to storm and rage like the troubled ocean at every little adversity or disappointment that crosses their path. It shows that he can soar away into the bright atmosphere of good feeling, and live in a continual sunshine, when all around him are enveloped in clouds and darkness, and are driven about like maniacs, the sport of their own passions.

The most favorable situations in life, the most lovely objects in nature, wealth,—all that is calculated to increase the happiness of man, lose their charm upon a heart, destitute of this virtue.

Alvada, Ohio.

"WE need not go far to find places just as sacred as those to be seen in Palestine. Have we not the Christian home, hallowed and dear with golden ties of kinship? Father and mother are there, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, husband and wife. It is a nursery for the young, a retreat for the toil-worn and aged. It is the castle of purity, the royal palace of the best affections."

"IF we could make each man love his neighbor, we should make a happy world. The true method is to begin with ourselves, and so extend the circle around us. It should be perpetually in our minds."

THE SEA OF DOUBT AND GROUND OF FAITH.

BY J. HANNA.

Number Four.

Now, that we have read upon nature's page of an Infinite Creator, let us turn to that of Revelation, and see whether the two,—the only sources of information, open to man, bear like testimony. Ah, we need not read of the creation; we need not read that "with God all things are possible," to discover their harmony, for his very name, "God Almighty," proclaims it! Now, since they claim the same Author, we will see whether the claim is verified by indications of the same hand.

Need we go farther than a blade of grass, or feather, or even a hair to see the same characteristic in nature? And yet, how many, accepting nature as it is, will quarrel with Revelation, because of its reserve? Ordinarily, a man would be considered very unwise to refuse food, because he does not understand how it maintains life; (for although he study its different processes, his observation, and not his reason accompanies them;) and in a like manner is the provisions for the soul. "For after that in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

Now are not these similarly simple provisions for us who by wisdom know not, proof of the same Provider? Do we not, in each "walk by faith" that receives them? Then let not reason assume an independence with regard to Revelation, to which she has not attained in nature. Reason in trying to fathom the depths of mystery's waves, may become dizzy and fall, while faith, diverted from them, to her guiding star, goes steadily on, for while reason, measuring by its own limits, is bounded, faith, leaving him to measure who ordains, is boundless. Still, although faith is beyond reason, it is not, like credulity, unreasonable.

We will next compare physical and spiritual laws, and we find that the violation of either brings disorder, and disorder, death, or in either realm, we find physician and remedy, if the violation be not unto death. We also find a natural and a spiritual resurrection from respective dormant states. Again, we behold a similarity, in that different effects are produced by different relations to the natural and spiritual. The light may guide or blind, the heat revive or consume, attraction maintain or crush form, and the Rock of Salvation be converted into "a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense, even to them which stumble at the word." Their similarity,—yea, identity of workmanship, we must admit, for we even behold in revelation as in nature, that which is above human power, and thus ascribe it to God.

"New things do I declare unto you before they spring forth I tell you of them." Ah yes, we know that infidelity even stalks, at times, alongside of prophecy, to explain (?) by a method, originating with its necessity, that which (for very shame) it can no longer deny. However, to illustrate the absence of prophetic power from the uninspired mind we instance an unfulfilled prediction of Voltaire. Could infidelity ask more? "In less than a hundred years," said he, "Christianity will have been swept from existence." Whether or not the report be true that his old printing press has since been used to print the Word of God, and that the very house in which he lived, is now serving as a depot for the Geneva Bible Society, it is evident from the over two hundred new translations of the Bible during the last century, and from the enthusiasm with which the Revised Translation into the English language was received (a London publisher having advance orders for over a million copies), it is evident that Christianity still exists.

The New Version was immediately reprinted in about fifty editions, and even wired, from the first of Matthew, to the end of Romans, from New York to Chicago,—the first telegram of so great a length wired. Yes, Christianity still exists, while infidelity is a very dwarf beside it.

THE TONGUE.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

In the anatomy of all God's creatures both brute and human, serpents and all the innumerable feathered inhabitants of the forest, this little organ, called the tongue, is an indispensable part of their organization, though they differ widely in many of their distinctive attributes. In the "human form divine," there are many different organs, composing the body, and each has its own, and very important, function to perform. The eye, the ear, the nose, hands and feet, all have their respective offices to fill.

In case of disease or accident, in order to sustain or retain life in the body, an arm or limb, or a portion of one or more, may be amputated, but the tongue is the only member of the body without which we cannot live. Although so small a part, yet it is the principal organ of speech and taste, "a boneless muscle," and may be the means of both good and evil.

When we examine the Scriptures, we find a great many good things spoken of in regard to this particular organ. In Prov. 10: 20 we find these words, "The tongue of the just is as choice silver." "The tongue of the wise is health." Prov. 12: 18. "A wholesome tongue is a tree of life." Prov. 15: 4. "A soft tongue breaketh the bone." Prov. 25: 15.

The holy prophets and apostles of old gave many admonitions in regard to the uses of the tongue. The Psalmist David exhorts us to "keep thy tongue from evil." Ps. 34: 13.

Not only do we learn that good things are spoken of this member, but we also find a few evils alluded to in the Scriptures. Job expresses a great desire to 'be hid from the scourge of the tongue." Job. 5: 21.

"A lying tongue is but for a moment." Prov. 12: 19. "Death and life are in the power of the tongue." Prov. 18: 21. The prophet Jeremiah seems to be utterly disgusted with the Jews and laments that they are all so treacherous and untruthful and breaks out in these words: "They have taught their tongues to speak lies. Jer. 8: 5. The apostle James tells us plainly that "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, this man's religion is vain." Jas. 1: 26. The same apostle also sums up the whole matter in these words, "Even so the tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature, and it is set on fire of hell. The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." Jas. 3: 5, 6, 8. "He that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile." 1 Pet. 3: 10.

The poet very graphically sets forth the works which this little member is called upon to perform:

"I am so very small a thing,
It seems quite strange to say,
In life how great a part I take,
And how the world I sway.

"In all affairs I take a part,
Of politics or state;
In quarrels I am always there,
Be they 'mongst small or great.

"In tenderest message, sweetest verse,
In foulest scandalous tale;
In parent's blessing, widow's curse,
Or orphan's piteous wail.

"In prayer or praise, my power's confessed,
In opera or play,
In giddy throng or holy desk,
I always have my say.

"A little spark I cause, indeed,
A mighty fire to rise;
A little member, but I drive,
Where'er I list, the wise."

Death of Bro. Valentine Reichard.

Our dear brother, Valentine Reichard,× was gathered to our fathers April 17, after a short sickness, caused, as is thought, from heart failure. He departed this life at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, F. Winders, where, we believe, everything that could be done was done for his alleviation and comfort.

Bro. Reichard was born in Washington County, Md., Nov. 5, 1813. He was married to Catherine Wolf Oct. 26, 1841, with whom he lived harmoniously until July, 1888, when sister Reichard died. To them were born ten children, seven of whom are living.

Our aged brother's life was occupied in farming, but later in life he became a graduate of the University of Eclectic School of Medicine, of Cincinnati. He was a successful practitioner of that school of medicine for many years in the vicinity of Fairplay.

In April 1846 he and wife united with the church of the Brethren, and in 1848 he was elected deacon in the Manor church, where they lived and served faithfully in that office to the time of their death,—a service of about forty-five years. His genial nature, his firmness and perseverance won to him many warm friends, and the Manor church and the community in which he lived has sustained a keenly-felt loss. His kind, encouraging words and affectionate manners to the young converts, and the weak and erring ones were of great value. The young ministers, when contending with arduous ministerial duties, were the recipients of his fatherly council and cheering words. His readiness in song, his timely council in the church, and his liberal hand all unite in making us feel our sad loss, which, we believe, is his eternal gain. His age was seventy-seven years, five months and twelve days.

A Sad Occurrence.

Last Wednesday, May 13, between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, an explosion took place in one of Geo. W. Wilson's steam saw mills, near Wilson's Mills, Grant County, W. Va., on the W. Va., C. & P. Railroad, which resulted in the death of four men.

Bro. Edwin Miller was employed as general manager of the mill and to all appearance everything was in good running order—previous to the time of the accident. Bro. Edwin had, for a moment, left his post as sawyer to give some instruction to the man attending the edger saw, when instantly, without a moment's warning, the boiler and engine were blown to atoms, killing Bro. Edwin Miller and another young man instantly. A third man was so badly hurt that he died in the afternoon of the same day. The fireman and the fourth man lived two days and nights and then died from the effects of their wounds. Bro. Miller's age was forty-one years, seven months, and twenty-seven days. Their bodies were horribly lacerated,—almost beyond recognition.

Bro. Edwin leaves a loving and affectionate wife and five small children. The funeral services of the deceased were conducted by Bro. Jonas Fike, of Eglon, Preston County, W. Va., at Maple Spring church, to a large and sympathizing congregation. Bro. Miller has been a warm and consistent member of the Brethren church for upwards of twenty-two years. He made the Bible his study, and many were the pleasant hours that we spent together in sweet Communion, talking of Jesus and his love. He was somewhat isolated from the church, but frequently attended church, besides superintending and teaching children in Sunday-school near his home.

The thought has been forcibly brought to our minds that life is very uncertain. We are made to see the necessity of heeding the Savior's warning when he says, "Be ye therefore ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

Whilst our heart-felt sympathies are with the bereft family, yet we are not without hope. We have many reasons to believe that our loss is his great gain. The time will come when we, too, will be called from time to eternity, hence the necessity of being ready. I. O. Thompson.

Communion Meetings.

May 2 we were permitted to enjoy a good feast with the members of the Walnut Valley church in Barton County. Not so many were present from a distance as usual, but there was good interest. The church elected Bro. Joseph Filbrun to the office of deacon. May 4, I met with the Salem church, near Nickerson, in council, preparatory to their Communion to be held on the 9th; at which time Bro. Daniel T. Dierdorff was advanced to the second degree in the ministry, Bro. Joseph Calvert elected to the ministry, and brethren Elmer Price and Samuel Moats to the office of deacon. They were all duly installed into their respective offices, with great solemnity. The spirit, manifested on such occasions, shows that the church appreciates the importance of electing church officers, whose qualifications are similar to those which are plainly set forth in the Scriptures. We hope the Salem church will be greatly edified by their faithfulness.

Our happiness and enjoyment were greatly marred on the last day of this meeting by receiving a telegram of the sad demise of our dear daughter-in-law, Angie, wife of L. H. Eby, who endeared herself much to us by her faithfulness to Christian principles, and sisterly affection to the family to which she was wedded. But while we deeply deplore our loss, we shout for joy for the victory obtained, and the safe arrival in the Father's house.

We next enjoyed a love-feast occasion with the saints in Kingman County, at the residence of Bro. Samuel Bowser, May 14, at which time and place Bro. Jacob Bowser was elected to the ministry and installed according to the order of the Gospel, as defined by the church. Last but not least, we had a most glorious feast here at Pleasant View, May 16. Eleven congregations were represented by members, and ten churches were represented by eleven ministers. Suffice it to say that while the spiritual blessings were so abundantly bestowed upon us, we also were made glad to see the gentle showers of rain, so much needed. The rain continued till the ground was well saturated and many drooping spirits were cheered. The church also decided to advance Bro. A. F. Miller to the second degree of the ministry. Thus ended one of the best meetings we ever enjoyed, and all the people say, "Amen."

To-morrow we start to our Annual Conference, to enjoy another reunion with the Brethren; and to engage in the important duties of the Meeting. This we will do if the Lord permit.

The Baltimore Bible School.

You possibly have heard of the Boys' and Girls' Bible School under the management of Bro. J. T. Quinlan 1315 Light Street, Baltimore, Md. I had a desire from the first starting of this work of faith among the poor, to visit it. Often I had heard of the earnest love and zeal of our dear brother, and as the Lord has now granted me the privilege of a personal inspection, I feel like saying as did the queen of old when she visited King Solomon, "It was a true report I heard of Bro. Quinlan's love for dying souls in that wicked City of Baltimore; it exceeds the fame I heard."

The object of the school is to save and rescue children and the work is kept up by brethren and friends of the school, as Bro. Q. is poor in this world's goods, though rich in grace. The school was started in 1886, in a rented room. Ought not we to buy a home for God's poor to worship in? It will cost us a little money and some trouble. I ask each one, receiving this, to copy such part as is suitable, changing the date and signing his own name. Then let him send a copy to each of his friends. Let each one send a dime, wrapped in paper, to E. J. McGaughy, 1315 Light Street, Baltimore. Can we not all do this in his name? Then "shall the King answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40; Prov. 19: 17; Mark 14: 7; 1 John 3: 17; Heb. 7: 2, 4, 5. May God's Holy Spirit go with this, and be in the souls of all who read it, so that my words may be really messages from the Lord. Pray for the success of the work, and that we "be accounted worthy to escape the many things that shall come to pass and that we may stand before the Son of man." Luke 21: 36.

Another love-feast and Communion season is past, and we trust, all who were present feel built up and much strengthened spiritually. Our meeting opened May 23 and closed the following day. The ministering brethren present from abroad were Wm. Hipes and Eld. Saylor. Others were expected but were not permitted to be with us. The brethren gave us some good talks upon the ordinances of the evening, and did not shun to declare the Word of God in its purity and simplicity. Many were the remarks, "What a pleasant feast," and we feel it was good for us to be there. May the many good lessons, presented to us, be treasured up in our hearts and put to practice in our lives, that we may thereby be enabled to overcome the enemy with his many allurements and evil devices. We are glad to note, that our feast was well attended, and our hearts were made to rejoice to see that so many of our aged sisters were permitted to be present with us and enjoy this blessed occasion. It may, perhaps, be the last time in this world, but what a blessed thought it is to the Christian mind, that if we are faithful we shall, at the end of the world, be counted worthy to be guests at the great marriage supper of the Lamb!

An election was held, in connection with our feast, for the purpose of calling several brethren to the office of deacon; and we are glad to announce that the choice fell upon two very highly esteemed brethren, namely, Wm. D. Tisdale and Geo. Hagerman. They, with their beloved wives, were duly installed, and we wish them God's blessing upon all their undertakings for good. The office of a deacon is a holy vocation and will afford the means of gaining a great deal of spiritual knowledge. "They that use the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Jesus Christ." These are the words of Paul, as recorded in the third chapter of first Timothy. The duties, concerning the office, are plainly set forth in the above-named chapter and are worthy of much meditation. We feel confident that these brethren will endeavor to magnify their calling and do all they can to promote unity and love. To this end we all unite in one prayer.

Pray for us, brethren, that the Lord's work may prosper in this part of his moral vineyard and many precious souls be brought into the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. J. K. Miller.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 25, 1891.

From the Tuscarawas Church, Stark Co., Ohio.

The church here is still moving along about as usual. The dear brethren and sisters are trying to build up the cause we love, in this part of God's moral vineyard. We admire their earnestness and zeal, but here as elsewhere some do not put forth their efforts, or are slow to assist those who are willing to work for the Master. A large majority of our members however, are active in the good cause. May God's blessings rest upon them and his faithful workers every-where!

We re-organized our Sunday-school at the Eden and Zion meeting-houses. The attendance is good and quite an interest is being manifested in Sunday-school work among us. Amos Yutzey is the Superintendent at the Zion house. He is alive to the work and knows how to awaken an interest in a Sunday-school. We are confident good will result from these exercises here.

We held our spring council May 7. The Annual visit reported, and it was ascertained that quite an unusual amount of business was before the meeting. The business passed off nicely, and we feel hopeful for the future. We decided to hold our Communion meeting June 13, commencing at 5 o'clock in the evening. A general invitation is extended to all who may desire to be with us upon said occasion, especially ministers. May God bless us all and richly bestow his grace and, when life's work is done, give us a home at his right hand! Reuben Shroyer.

ANNUAL MEETING NEWS.

may be fried in ten minutes. Our first meal in the Dining Hall was to-day at noon. We pronounced it the best meal we ever ate in an Annual Meeting Dining Hall. It consisted of bread, well-cooked beef, butter, apple butter, potatoes cooked in beef broth, hash, pickle, tea or coffee; price 25 cents. The food was plain, substantial and well-prepared.

There is also a lunch-stand, 140 feet long, where a lunch may be had at any time very cheap. We noticed other small lunch-stands at other points.

The ticket office this year is very convenient. Here meal tickets are sold at twenty-five cents each. Each ticket is good for one meal in the Dining Hall. There is also a good Baggage Room, where one may deposit his baggage and receive a check for it.

The MESSENGER has a good office provided, very conveniently located near the Tabernacle. Just to one side of us is the office of the Book and Tract Work.

The entire premises are lighted by electricity, furnished by the City. The water supply is from the mountains, twelve miles away, being the same source from whence the City obtains its water.

The Committee of Arrangements, so far, has done its work well. The officers are: David Long, Foreman; W. S. Reichard, Secretary; A. B. Barnhart, Treasurer. They showed us no little kindness in the way of accommodation and aiding in the procuring of information. Most of the people are lodged in town, each one paying for a sleeping place. Places are assigned by the Lodging Committee.

At an early hour we went to the Standing Committee room, where we had the pleasure of meeting a number of the members composing that body. In the center of their room is a large table for the use of the officers of the Committee. The room is quite large, and one end is taken up with about twenty-five very neat-looking beds, which are for the exclusive use of the Committee. The Committee this year is a very strong one, having on it many of the ablest elders in the Brotherhood. At 8: 30 we left the room, this being near the time the Committee had set to organize.

At the appointed time they opened their work with a season of prayer. After that the roll was called, and the Districts responded as follows:

Oregon,	M. M. Bashor
California,	Represented by letter
Southern Kansas,	D. Vaniman
North-western Kansas,	J Ikenberry
North-eastern Kansas,	J. S. Mohler

After the roll call it was then asked whether any were present not entitled to serve on the Committee on account of having been on the two previous years, or any who indulge in the use of tobacco or any other unbecoming habit, contrary to the order of the general Brotherhood. One reported that he used tobacco moderately, it being recommended by his physician. No one was objected to. After that it was announced that the election of a Moderator would be in order. Each member of the Committee then wrote, on a slip of paper, the name of the brother desired for Moderator. These slips of paper were gathered up by the Reading Clerk of last year, and read off aloud, one by one, till all were read. A number in the room kept tally. It was found that no one of those voted for had received a majority of all the votes cast, though two of them led out ahead of all the rest. It is a rule in the Standing Committee, that, in order to hold office in that body, one must receive a majority of all the votes cast. Another vote was then declared necessary. So each delegate took another slip of paper, and wrote his choice for Moderator. These were gathered up and read in the same manner as before; it was then found that Eld. Daniel Vaniman, of McPherson, Kans., had received quite a large majority of all the votes cast. He was then declared elected. Balloting in like manner was then taken for Reading Clerk. The second ballot resulted in the election of Eld. M. J. McClure, of Oakley, Ill. In balloting for Writing Clerk, the first ballot gave Eld. D. L. Miller a good majority. Hence the meeting was declared organized with Daniel Vaniman, Moderator; M. J. McClure, Reading Clerk; D. L. Miller, Writing Clerk. The organization is entirely new, but gives excellent satisfaction.

There is much very important business to come before the meeting, and we look for good results. Some very important work will come up through committees that have been appointed to consider and report on questions of special interest. Among these are the consolidation of the Mission Board and the Tract Work; the revision of our Hymn Book and Hymnal, and the propriety of publishing a New Testament with Notes by our Brethren.

At 10 A. M. there was preaching in the Tabernacle to a small but attentive congregation. The damp weather kept many away. Members were coming in most of the day. At six in the evening quite a number came in from the West. We look for large numbers to-morrow from all parts of the Brotherhood.

We must not fail to mention a very clever act upon the part of the B. & O. R. R. At a convenient point on the ground, the company has erected a large tent, well supplied with chairs, and invites all who feel disposed, to come in, take a rest and enjoy themselves. Many a weary one will thank the B. & O. R. R. for this.

At 8 P. M. there were services in the Tabernacle. Bro. J. G. Royer preached to a good assembly on the subject of "Youthful Lusts," bringing out many points of interest to all present, using for the basis of his discourse 2 Tim. 2: 22, which says, "Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart." He clearly set forth what lust is, and urged his hearers to flee from it, to run from it, and then grow in grace by following the good things named in the verse. The sermon was practical and well received.

The day closed with prospects of better weather.

SATURDAY MORNING.—The clouds had passed away during the night, and the sun shone out brightly, giving promise of a fair and pleasant day, which was fully realized.

Streams of people kept pouring in all day, and by night there were nearly 3,000 members on the ground. One train over the B. & O. R. R. brought in over 400 from the West. It was a day of general greeting. Kindred met and greeted each other, who had not seen one another for years. Many years ago there was a strong emigration from this part of the East to the far West. The cheap railroad rates now enable many to return to their old homes and kindred. To hundreds the meeting of loved ones is the occasion of great joy. Old gray-headed men and women visit the scenes of their childhood, and try to recall the happy hours in days of yore. They take delight in looking over the old farm to find things to freshen the memory. They remember the old roads, the hills, the streams, the mills, the barns, and scores of things that recall pleasures or sad reflection.

And still it looks like a strange land; the trees in the yard are larger, some of the hills appear steeper, the cities and towns have grown greatly, many of the old houses and barns have been replaced by others. A new generation of people have come and taken possession, their faces are stranger, their voices are not familiar. Some of the visitors look in vain for something to remind them of loved ones they left behind. Weary of the old homestead, they visit the cities of the dead, and view the resting place of all that is mortal. Glad to visit the old home, and yet sad because father and mother cannot meet them at the door. They weep over them at the grave, and then turning their faces to the West again, they think of that happy meeting in the land beyond.

Monday is generally our day for social enjoyment, but to-day has been one of special enjoyment. Somehow the churches all seem to be in peace; we meet without any disturbing elements—there seems to be a feeling of perfect harmony. Not one unkind word have we heard since we came upon the ground. There seem to be no enemies. No one is shunned, the members seeming to have the greatest confidence in each other.

So far the town people are treating us with great kindness. Five hundred doors were thrown open for the reception of the people, and on every hand we seemed to be welcomed. All the members of the Committee of Arrangements seem to be so approachable and obliging - none of this stiffness we sometimes see to our regret. There is great sociability upon the part of the members of the Standing Committee, causing a general good feeling to exist between that body and the members generally.

At 10 A. M. we had an excellent sermon by Bro. James Sell, of Pennsylvania, using the following for his text: "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the noon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Songs of Sol. 6: 10. He traced the people of righteousness from the morning of religion, through the dim light of the moon to the day of clear sunshine in its splendor under the influence of Christ, the light of Christianity, and further showed that the church was becoming a power to be dreaded by the power of darkness. Bro. Sell possesses a strong poetic element in his make up, which shows itself clearly in the occasional gems of thought that fall from his lips during his discourses.

At 3 P. M. Eld. John Wise, of Conway Springs, Kans., preached an excellent sermon to a good congregation in the Tabernacle from Heb. 11: 24, 25, where it is said that Moses chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. On account of work with the Hymn Book Committee we could not hear the discourse, but those who were present spoke of it as one of Bro. Wise's excellent and practical discourses.

From 7 to 8 P. M., the streets leading to the ground were lined with people wending their way to the large Tabernacle for evening services. Nearly 3,500 people were present to listen to Eld. L. H. Dickey, of Alvada, Ohio, discourse from the language of the Savior where he says, "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor." He treated the suject under the two heads of serving and being rewarded, showing that man was made in the beginning for service, with duties assigned him, and at the end was an ample reward. When Bro. Dickey was about one-third through with his discourse, peals of heavy thunder were heard coming from a dark cloud hanging over the valley to the east. Many thought it was going to rain soon, and caused quite a disturbance by leaving the congregation. The services were then closed in good order. No rain, however, fell during the night.

At noon to-day, the Standing Committee adjourned till Monday. There is much work before the body, but they are disposing of it quite rapidly.

The Examining Committee on Tract Work did not have much to do this year, and accepted but one of the tracts placed in their hands for examination.

The Hymn Book Committee was in session nearly the entire afternoon. Many Brethren came before them to present the wishes of their Districts as well as their individual suggestions.

SUNDAY MORNING.—The sun shone out brightly for an hour or two, but a heavy fog and the clouds came over the valley, and threatened rain. Still the people came from every direction. At 9 o'clock several thousand were present when the song services commenced in the Tabernacle. One hour was devoted to singing, during which time many beautiful and soul-inspiring songs were sung. While this was going on the people continued to assemble, and by the time meeting was opened at 10 o'clock, there were about 7,000 in and around the Tabernacle. Eld. Enoch Eby preached from Phil. 3: 10, concerning Christian experience. He made many good impressions, and aroused in the hearts of his hearers those feelings that tend to lift up and strengthen. He was followed by Eld. John Wise with very appropriate remarks.

At 2 P. M. there was children's meeting in the Tabernacle. The little folks sat in front. Among them were the children from Bro. David Emmert's Orphans' Home. At the beginning the services were greatly disturbed by a heavy shower. That soon ceased and the work went on. The children were addressed by brethren J. G. Royer, A. Hutchison and John Wise, with special song services led by Bro. Wm. Beery. The exercises were interesting to both the old and young, and we feel that the meeting did good.

At 3 P. M. Eld. J. G. Royer preached to not less than 8,000 people from Isa. 55: 10–13. He treated largely God's special power manifested in the conversion of sinners, and the work of the church for the good of the people, and also of the joys the Christian will experience in the coming reunion.

There were also services in the Tabernacle at 7: 30 in the evening; preaching by Eld. John Wise on the Christian Graces, to a very large assembly. It was estimated that there were 18,000 people on the ground in the evening. Being well lighted up rendered it very pleasant.

All the churches in the city, so far as we could learn, opened their houses to the Brethren, who filled their pulpits for them. The following is a list of the places of meeting, so far as we could obtain them. There were other appointments however:

Zion Reformed church, mission talk to Sunday-school at 2 P. M., by Isaac Frantz, of Dayton, Ohio. Missionary sermon in the evening at 7: 30 by I. J. Rosenberger, of Covington, Ohio.

Christ Reformed church,—morning service at 10: 30, by D. L. Miller, of Mt. Morris, Ill. Evening service at 7: 30 by I. D. Parker, of Ashland, Ohio.

St. Paul's M. E. church, morning service at 10: 30 by Henry C. Early, of Harrisonburg, Va.

Washington Square M. E. church, evening service at 7: 30 by A. Hutchison, of McPherson, Kans.

M. E. church, Funkstown,—10: 30 A. M., by S. F. Sanger, of Bridgewater, Va.

Free Will Baptist,—services at 7: 30 P. M., by Jesse Stutsman, of Ohio.

Brethren Church in City,—morning service at 10: 30 by J. C. Murray, of Nappanee, Ind.; evening service at 7: 30 by Jacob Rife, of Boston, Ind.

St. Paul's U. B. church,—J. B. Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon, Pa., at 10: 30 A. M.; J. C. Murray, Nappanee, Ind., at 7: 45 P. M.

St. John's Lutheran church,—morning service at 10: 30, J. T. Myers, of Green Tree, Pa. Evening service 7: 30 W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, Pa.

St. Mark's Lutheran church,—morning service at 10: 30, J. M. Mohler, Lewistown, Pa.

Bethel M. E. church,— Henry Frantz, New Carlisle, Ohio.

Christian church, services 10: 30 A. M., W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, Pa.; 7: 30 P. M., James McClure, of Illinois.

A number of the ministers filled appointments in the country. It was indeed far from a day of idleness.

At 3 P. M. there were probably not less than 15,000 persons on the ground. Some estimated it higher. The order was generally good. Still the more sacred we can hold the day, and the more careful we are about what we allow on these grounds, the better it will prove for the cause.

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 1.—Thousands of members are on the ground, and more are coming. This is a day of special sociability for most of the visitors, but a day of hard work for those who are on committees.

At ten o'clock we have preaching, after which a collection will be taken up for the Orphans' Home of this place. The Home is under the control of Bro. David Emmert, who has a similar work at Huntingdon, Pa. There are perhaps twenty orphans in the Home here, and they are deserving of sympathy. These institutions, under the management of Bro. Emmert, have cared for and found homes for hundreds of orphan children. They are doing a grand work for suffering humanity, and are worthy of any aid we may be able to render.

At 1: 30 P. M. is our Missionary Meeting, arranged for by the Missionary and Tract Committees. Bro. D. L. Miller is selected to preside at the Meeting.

The following topics were agreed upon, and assigned to the Brethren named:

1. "The Importance of Missionary and Tract Work," Eld. John Wise, of Kansas.

2. "The best Method for securing the Sympathy and Help of all the Members in the Church," Eld. S. F. Sanger, of Virginia.

3. "Hindrances to the Work and how to Overcome them," Eld. J. H. Moore, of Illinois.

4. "Scriptural Ground for Supporting Missionary Work," Eld. Daniel Hays, of Virginia.

5. "Missionary Committees should send only suitable Men, as set forth in the Scriptures, and by Annual Meeting," Eld. S. R. Zug, of Pennsylvania.

6. "The Blessings offered to the Cheerful and Liberal Giver," Eld. D. E. Price, of Illinois.

7. Eld. Joseph Lahman was appointed to make the closing speech and to arrange for a collection.

We complete this report on Monday morning in time to get it in the paper this week. Will report the rest of the Meeting in next issue.

J. H. M.

BRETHREN JOSEPH AMICK and D. E. Brubaker, of this place, attended the feast at Franklin Grove, Illinois, the week before the Annual Meeting. They report the largest love-feast ever held at that place. About five hundred persons were present, and some were not able to get into the house. Bro. Levi Trostle was ordained to the eldership. The members of Northern Illinois have much confidence in Bro. Trostle, and we feel that he will greatly aid the elders of the District in their work.

THE Brethren at Pine Creek had a very rainy time for their feast, hence the attendance was not as large as usual, still they report a good meeting, much to the encouragement and edification of the members. The Brethren at Waddam's Grove had their feast at a very disagreeable time on account of the rain. Bro. G. B. Royer, of this place was with them, and says that the spirit and interest of the meeting were excellent. It is not always the large congregations that afford the most enjoyable feasts, for the Lord can and does bless the work of the few as well as the many.

MUCH matter, including several railroad notices, intended for the last issue, did not reach us until the paper was on the press and partly run off. A number of love-feast notices also came too late. Things of this kind, however, happen every year about the time of the Annual Meeting, and the only remedy for it is to always get matter to us in good time. Matter intended for early publication always receives our immediate attention, while we usually take our time to examine essays and poetry. Those whose notices did not appear in the last issue will understand, from this, that they were received too late for publication.

The Brethren's Juvenile Quarterly, for the third quarter of 1891, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be ready for mailing soon after the middle of June, in time to be used the first Sunday in July. The lessons are prepared especially for the little folks, and we think will be greatly appreciated by them. The lessons will be in the Gospel of St. John, following the International line of study. Our long experience in Sunday-school work convinces us that this line of study is the best that has yet been offered to the public for general use, hence we follow it in our Quarterlies. The price of the Juvenile Quarterly is: Three copies, per quarter, twenty cents; six copies, per quarter, twenty-five cents; ten copies and over, per quarter, three cents each. Send in your orders at once.

"THE British and Foreign Bible Society, during the eighty-one years of its existence, has issued from its London house alone, 29,000,000 complete Bibles, nearly 32,000,000 New Testaments, and 11,845,000 portions of the Bible. This makes a total of 72,500,000 books issued from the London headquarters."

MISSIONARY WORK IN JAPAN.—"The editor of a Japanese newspaper recently collected statistics of growth from all the Protestant churches of Japan, showing their increase during the last three years. From thirty-eight churches they have grown to one hundred and fifty-one, and from thirty-seven hundred members to eleven thousand six hundred; and private letters from Japan represent that our missionaries there are fairly staggered by the work opening before them, and that the next year is to be the most memorable one in the history of that country. More than one thousand miles of railways are already completed in Japan, and new treaties have been concluded already with Germany, Russia and Mexico, and also with France and the United States, though not yet ratified by the last two countries."

THE AMERICAN REVISION.—Many of our readers have seen "the American Revision" of the New Testament, the Revised Version with the American Emendations incorporated in the text instead of being placed in the margin, or in an appendix, as in the Oxford edition, the authorized Revision. Those who have studied it pronounce it the most satisfactory and correct translation of the New Testament ever made. In the Old Testament also, the American emendations were placed in the margin while the suggestions of the British committee are in the text. It was agreed that no American editions with the American amendments should be published for fourteen years after the first publication. That period is drawing to a close and Dr. Philip Schaff, President of the American committee, now states that the committee has been at work during the interval preparing an American revision, which will be ready for publication when the time-limit has been reached. This edition will differ from the authorized Oxford and Cambridge editions as follows: (1) The American appendix is to be incorporated in the text, and a corresponding appendix to be substituted, in which the preferences of the British edition are indicated. (2) Chapter headings to be taken from the words of the text. (3) The references to the quotations from the Old Testament in the New. The work on the New Testament is about half done, and will be ready for publication by 1895. Its publication will be a notable event in Bible history.—Christian Evangelist.

"REV. DAVID SWING said in a recent sermon what has come to be gradually known among intelligent observers: 'What most deeply injures the pulpit of our day is the excessive growth of all material things—houses, furniture, money and all display—a palace in the foreground, with a small, half-doubted God far off in the rear. The clergyman's dinner is richer than his worship. We are all so near alike in this humiliating defeat that we are interested in keeping silence. The Roman soothsayers wore a wise, solemn face while they were passing a Cæsar or a Brutus, but they smiled when they met each other. Their most sincere study of birds was reserved for the birds served with wine at the table.' Exhortations to 'come to Jesus' from the lips of such men are ludicrous, rather than solemn."

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIBSON.

Dear Children:—

IT is with great pleasure I write you again. How pleasant it is to agree in the divine work of our Lord and Master in working together unitedly! We have stood together in the aid and support of our children's mission so far, and God has blessed it to his own glory. I am glad to inform you that our last report shows the largest amount we have received in the spring since our mission began. For this I do feel to thank the donors and our Heavenly Father. May we all, with renewed courage, go on in the work with greater zeal than we have in the past.

Now and then I read an account of a children's meeting in the GOSPEL MESSENGER, which thrills my soul with joy unspeakable. I rejoice that the children are getting the proper nourishment.

We are responsible for the training of the children God has given into our care. We can, by proper training, bring blessings upon them that will be as lasting as life. I am made to rejoice in reading of so many dear children remembering their Creator in the days of their youth, before the evil days come.

Much depends upon the proper nourishment given to the young from the older and stronger in the Lord. If love be the ruling element, there is but little danger, but if there should be constant censure, neither old nor young will grow in the inner man.

If we have the grace of God in our hearts, we can have a blessed experience of the Spirit's power. Then it is that we honor all men, love the Brotherhood, and fear God.

Dear children, whenever you feel the gentle wooings of the Spirit, please do not turn him away. He is calling you to be children of God, and is pained by being turned away by the hardness of your heart. He has loved you so dearly as to give his life for you, and is only asking your love and life in return, to be spent for him in his service. If we love him truly, devotedly and tenderly we will feed the lambs, the sheep and also the flock by doing them good with all our God-given powers. We can do this by giving our pennies, dimes and dollars to forward his cause in the spreading of the Gospel to a lost and ruined world. We should give our time, talents and means, that none should die in their sins and be lost. God forbid that we withhold that which is his. Nay, verily, give it back to him with a heart bounding with great love for the cause of Christ, who is the Redeemer of the whole world.

If our amount increases by Christmas as it has the forepart of the year, we will again more than reach a hundred dollars. Let us work, and the Lord will bless our labors of love. If he has numbered the hairs of our heads, he also will number the pennies we give to bless his name. He is recording who, when, and where, and for what cause all this was done. Do you not know that those, who even give a cup of cold water in his name, will obtain their reward? This is the promise from Jesus himself, so, dear children, take courage and do not falter by the way. He knows all your griefs and sorrows, your pains and anguish, and will heal all with his great love, if you turn him not away.

May we still hold in reverence the work he has given us to do, by being regular in our contributions every fifth and twelfth month of the year. May the Lord bless us all, is the prayer of your unworthy co-laborer in Christ Jesus.

Our Communion meeting was held last Saturday and Sunday, and was a refreshing season. Many of our dear brethren and sisters were with us from far and near to enjoy the season of refreshment. Brethren Wm. Thomas, of Boone; A. W. Woodward, of Gowrie; John Diehl, of Carroll City and Bro. James Hardy, of Aurelia, were with us and labored faithfully in dealing out the Bread of Life to the dying children of men. One hundred and twenty members were present at the Communion. We were made to rejoice to see so many present.

After the first services on the afternoon of Saturday, two precious souls were led down into the liquid stream and buried with Christ by baptism. May they have the prayers of God's children to encourage them on their Christian pilgrimage!

On Sunday we held a choice for a minister. The lot fell upon Bro. David A. Miller (brother to D. L. Miller). May the Lord strengthen our dear brother and his wife with the strong arm of his power!

When I look around and consider how many of our dear friends and associates are standing out of the fold of Christ, resisting the tender entreaties of the Holy Spirit, it makes one feel sad. May they see their condition before their sun goes down! Wm. E. Trostle.

The Brethren of the above church met at the Free Spring meeting-house May 9, preparatory to our love-feast. The visiting brethren reported all to be in peace. This is as it should be, for where there is strife and contention, the spirit of God does not dwell. Everything passed off in peace and harmony. One sister made application for baptism, which was attended to the day following. May she from henceforth walk in newness of life, that she may obtain the crown in reserve for God's people.

They organized a Sunday-school at the above place by electing brethren C. G. Winey and John Zook, Superintendents. As the success of a school depends largely upon the energy put forth by those who have it in charge, we hope all will put forth the proper effort.

Our love-feast occurred May 18. A large concourse of people had assembled. Our ministerial force consisted of Bro. J. G. Royer, of Mount Morris, Bro. Andrew Spanogle, of Lewistown, and Bro. Adam Beaver, of Union County, who discharged their duties faithfully. By their labors the congregation was much revived.

This church has passed through troublous times during the last few years. A cloud appeared to hang over it as black as the darkness of Egypt, but by the mercy of God and the prayers of the saints, the Lord has permitted a ray of light to shine forth, and I believe a glorious day is dawning for her future prosperity.

We have four houses in this congregation. One, at Goodville, is being rebuilt this summer, and is expected to be ready for the fall love-feast. We express our sincere thanks to the brethren and friends who have so liberally responded towards its erection. May the Lord bless our efforts in the building up of Zion, is my prayer!

May 16 a Communion meeting was held in the above church. The meeting had been appointed only about two weeks before, and as it was primarily intended for the benefit of the home church, a general invitation was not given. It was a very enjoyable meeting to all present. We expect, however, to have a love-feast in the fall, due notice of which will be given through the Messenger.

The North Beatrice church has an "evergreen" Sunday-school which was re-organized the second Sunday in April with C. H. Price as Superintendent, and M. L. Sollenberger, Assistant. With an able corps of teachers we have a Sunday-school that is doing a good work, the full extent of which will manifest itself only when "the sheaves are gathered in."

Parents, let us all remember that to have a good Sunday-school, it is not only necessary to have the children present, but to be present ourselves, and, by our presence and words of encouragement, as well as by our money, if necessary, to show that we regard the Sunday-school worthy of our support.

The members of this congregation hold weekly meetings under the name of "Bible Class" or "Prayer-meeting,"—either of which would be an appropriate name, taking into consideration the work of the meetings. These meetings are not held in our church-house, but in the homes of the members.

On last Sunday one was added to the church by letter. J. E. Bryant.

From the Spring Run Church, Pa.

Our love-feast occurred May 17. On Sunday morning our Sunday-school session was followed by the regular church service. The Sunday-school seems to be working earnestly. Bro. J. A. Myers is Superintendent and brethren S. W. Bollinger and M. M. Ruble, Assistants; sister Nancy Hanawalt, female Superintendent. These officers, with a good selection of teachers, seem to be putting forth every effort to make the school prosper. May success crown their efforts! As I entered the female Bible Class, taught by the Superintendent, I was made to think of the many seasons I spent there as pupil as well as teacher. It made me feel sad that it is not my lot to be there now, and yet I felt glad to be with them once more. In the class the subject of giving was brought up and discussed. We came to the conclusion that our schools ought to do more for the missionary cause, and I hope they may do so in the future.

Bro. Samuel J. Swigart, of the Dry Valley church, preached on Sunday forenoon, and Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh filled one of the outside appointments. Five presented themselves for baptism and expressed themselves as being tired of sin and desirous of leading a Christian life. Some of them were well advanced in years, and heads of families; the others were young in years. All were made to rejoice in coming into the church. There was one baptized at the council one week previous. Thus the good work goes on.

At 4 o'clock P. M. the services of our love-feast began. They were conducted by brethren J. B. Brumbaugh and S. J. Swigart. A large number of members communed and many spectators were also present. The meeting was a good one. All seemed to enjoy it. The brethren set forth the Word in an earnest and impressive manner. Spectators, as well as members, listened with attention. We hope that many were impressed with their duty and will soon make the good choice.

Such seasons are "showers of blessing," sent to us to refresh us spiritually, just as the vegetation of the earth is refreshed by the gentle summer rains. If only all our members could be made to feel the importance of more earnestness, there would be as many at Sunday-school as at church, and the work would advance much more rapidly than it now does. Even their presence there would give encouragement.

While seated at the Communion table we were made to wonder how many of us would again have the privilege of enjoying a like feast, and if there might be some there who would not again partake of those sacred emblems until the great supper at the evening of this world.

These feasts of love, how close they bring us together, and how near to our Savior! The picture of his sufferings and death is brought so vividly before us. Let us all try to do more for him in the future, because he has done so much for us! Christie H. Sunderland.

May 9 the members of the above church met for council, at which three were received by letter and more are expected to unite with us soon. It was decided to have the writer correspond with Bro. D. Vaniman, of McPherson, Kans., to hold some meetings for us, in connection with a love-feast.

We expect to establish several new points for preaching in the near future; also to organize a Sunday-school. A commendable spirit seemed to pervade the minds of all who were present at the meeting. May the Lord be with the little flock at this place in our sore trials! We had no crops last year and many have had no crops for two years. Corn is now $1.00 per bushel, and this prevented many from planting so that they might have a crop this year. Those that did plant have a splendid prospect for a good crop, as corn is now over eight inches high.

We are much in need of ministerial help. We hope that some minister may be induced to move among us to help in the work of proclaiming the Word of Truth. A. J. Peebler.

A Terrible Accident and "Death by the Rail" at Troy, Ohio.

"Death always comes veiled in mystery and draped in sadness," but the following has in it some elements of peculiar sorrow.

On the night of May 21, about 9 o'clock, Bro.

Samuel D. and sister Hetty Megarity, a bride and groom of less than three weeks, while crossing the railroad at Troy, were struck by a rapidly-moving train, and in an instant the horse was killed and thrown into the ditch, the vehicle a total wreck, and the occupants were carried along on the pilot of the engine. The husband was taken about fifty feet, and the wife about one hundred feet. Bro. Megarity's right leg was broken in three places between the knee and hip joints. When sister Hetty was found, her soul had gone to him who gave it. Both her limbs were broken and her neck was broken twice, causing instantaneous death.

Previous to the time of the accident, it had been raining, and the side curtains of the vehicle were down so that they saw not the peril they were in, and knew nothing of the presence of the train until the fatal blow was struck. Bro. Megarity says, "The first I knew of the situation was a flash of light, and the next thing I knew I was crawling out of the ditch on to the pike, calling for Hetty." The neighbors hearing his cries for help, soon came to his assistance.

Sister Hetty gave her heart to God in her early youth and this is a source of solid comfort to her heart-broken husband, parents, brothers and sisters.

Their reception and infare was to have been on May 24, but this dispensation reversed their plans and there was a burial and a house of mourning instead, and on the same day. What uncertainty attends all human affairs! "We know not what a day may bring forth." Joy and sorrow follow each other as "light and darkness chase each other around the earth."

This was one of the largest and saddest funerals it has ever been my lot to attend. Services and interment took place at the Upper Stillwater church, near Bradford. The age of our departed sister was twenty-one years, two months and twenty-eight days. Bro. Megarity, with broken bones, a bruised body, sad heart and sore bereavement, is resting fairly well and some hopes are entertained for his recovery. "Son of man, behold I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke." "Watch therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour." "And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." D. D. Wine.

A Fatal Accident.

On Sunday morning, April 26, brother and sister Thomas N. Longley left their home (situated five miles north-east of South Bend) for the purpose of attending services at the Wenger church, a short distance south-east of the City. While driving across the street car track on Pearl Avenue, the king-bolt of the buggy broke off and let the front of the box down suddenly, and with such force as to throw the occupants of the vehicle forward on their heads, and tearing the seat out of the buggy. Sister Longley struck on her head. Her left shoulder was dislocated and her neck was broken, resulting in immediate death. She was carried to a house near by and medical aid was had, but all earthly help was vain. Bro. Longley was not seriously hurt, but the shock was hard for him to bear, he being about eighty-five years old.

Sister Longley was a consistent and faithful member of the church for many years. She was a daughter of Bro. John Witter (deceased) and was born in Wayne County, Ind., Dec. 12, 1812. She died at the age of seventy-eight years, four months and fourteen days. Five children survive her. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. D. Whitmer and the writer. H. W. Krieghbaum.

Bro. G. W. Studebaker came May 23 and preached three times for us. One dear sister came out upon the side of the Lord, and was baptized yesterday. Her husband was not quite ready to come yet. Our prayer is that he may soon decide to follow the noble example of his wife. We have meeting now only once in two months, as our elder, G. W. Studebaker, has other appointments to fill. He has had a growing interest ever since he commenced to preach for us,—nearly two years ago, but as he is getting well advanced in years and living thirty miles from us, we do not expect more of him. We need a ministering brother to move here. If any of the churches have from three to five speakers, they will please think of the little vine at this place.

As far as temporal wants are concerned, they can be just as well supplied here as anywhere. To this fact the writer can testify, as he has lived here for eighteen years.

We organized a Sunday-school this spring, with the writer as Superintendent. We expect to use the Brethren's Quarterly with the beginning of next quarter. I was pleased to see that we are to have a Juvenile Quarterly for the children. I have also examined the sample copies of the Brethren's Quarterly, and am much pleased with it. John A. Studebaker.

Our feast is past, and we hope that the spiritual strength, which it is designed to give, is duly appreciated. After the examination services three were received by baptism, and on Sunday three by letter. Those baptized were young. May they receive the Shepherd's tenderest care! Bro. Joel Gnagey officiated at the feast, assisted by brethren D. M. Pike and Peter Knable. Bro. Eikenberry was with us on Sunday.

The writer had an engagement for a week's meetings in another congregation, but having taken La Grippe and being troubled with a severe cough, it became impossible to do any preaching and I could not, therefore, fulfill my engagement. I hope that those brethren and sisters will be charitable under the circumstances.

I have some fears that my lungs are affected and that consumption may be the result. Brethren, pray for me that I may soon be able again to wield the Sword of the Spirit. G. W. Lowry.

Bro. Silas Hoover commenced a series of meetings at the Fairview meeting-house on Friday evening, May 8. The new church not being dedicated, it was the request that Bro. Hoover should preach a dedication sermon on Sunday, which he did. His text was, "So they dedicated the house of God." A very interesting sermon was preached to a large audience. An afternoon meeting was also held at the same place, at which Bro. Hoover spoke on the subject of the covering.

We organized a Sunday-school May 10. Bro. Elijah Thomas was elected Superintendent. May 17, we held our first session. Fifty-seven persons were present, and the exercises were very interesting, but much more interest would be taken in our work if the Brethren's Quarterly were used.

As previously announced, our love-feast occurred May 23 and 24, at the Franklin Grove meeting-house. I need not tell you it was enjoyable and soul-inspiring, for my words would hardly do justice to the occasion. Brethren J. Amick and D. E. Brubaker, with many others, from Mt. Morris were in attendance; also many from the other neighboring churches.

"The Word of Life" was well spoken unto us. In addition to the other exercises of the meeting, we also witnessed the ordination of our dear brother, Levi Trostle. On Sunday afternoon we enjoyed the pleasure of having talks to our Sunday-school. Sister Salome Stoner taking the lead by request, was followed by brethren Barwick, Forney and others. We all appreciated these exercises very much, and we say, "Come again, dear brethren and sisters."

Love and union seem to pervade all hearts in this congregation; and to keep the flame aglow, brethren and sisters, let us try to keep out of our hearts all petty annoyances that so much mar the peace, happiness and prosperity of church and nation. This we can do by being attentive at the house of worship, Sunday-school and prayer-meetings. C. H. Hawbecker.

Notes of Travel.

I wrote my last at Brooks, at which place Bro. David Brower joined us, he being on his way to Annual Meeting. He is the delegate from the Coquille church. We arrived at Watson, Mo., in due time. Here wife met four of her brothers, three of whom she had not met for thirty years. I held two meetings at this place. Nine members are living here, but no minister. If they could have some faithful minister to labor for them, there could soon be a church built up.

May 15, Bro. Fred Garst took us to the Squaw Creek church, Holt County, Mo., to their Communion, which occurred May 16. Here we met Eld. S. B. Shirky, who has charge of this congregation. About ninety members enjoyed the very pleasant Communion services. I held two meetings on Sunday, May 17; then took my departure for Tennessee.

Wife and I arrived at Jonesborough May 22. Here I met my dear old father, Benjamin Bashor, who is now nearly ninety-four years old. He is still enjoying good health. I left him yesterday morning, sitting on his chair, reading his old Bible. At this writing I am in Bristol, Va., at the house of Bro Jacob F. Good, on my way to Annual Meeting. M. M. Bashor.

We have the pleasure of reporting that one more young sister has been added to the fold at this place. She made application and was baptized the third Sunday of the present month.

May 22 the brethren and sisters met at the Union Grove house, at 10 o'clock, for religious services prior to the love-feast which was held in the evening. Notwithstanding the very inclement weather the tables were more than filled with brethren and sisters. Ministers from a distance were brethren D. F. Hoover, Geo. Sala, Isaac Branson, I. J. Howard, Isaac Wike, and C. Davis.

Next day quite a number of brethren and sisters went to the Summit church to attend the love-feast at that place. Ministers at this feast were brethren J. Spitzer, Isaac Branson, Levi Winklebleck, Geo. L. Studebaker and C. F. Eiler. Some time ago the Brethren at this place held an election for two ministers and two deacons. Ministers elected were brethren Levi Holder and Charles Wood. On Sunday morning the brethren elected to these offices were duly installed into their offices. We hope they may be the means of doing much good, and be an example for others.

From the English River Church, Keokuk Co., Iowa.

THIS church met in regular quarterly council May 23. All business passed off harmoniously. We appointed our love-feast for Sept. 12 and 13. A series of meetings is to begin one week previous and to continue over the feast. We also expect to hold a series of meetings at the church in North English some time later.

Bro. David Brower, from Oregon, stopped with us while on his way eastward, and preached four interesting sermons to large audiences. He also preached two sermons at the North church. Bro. David seems to have lost none of his zeal for the good cause during his nineteen years' absence from here.

The weather has been very dry until recently. Since then we have been having copious showers. Now everything looks prosperous. God surely does bless his people, both spiritually and temporally. May we rightly appreciate and apply his blessings, that it may be well pleasing unto him! PETER BROWER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

INFORMATION WANTED.—I desire to ascertain the post-office address of George H. Krewson. His former address was Numa, Iowa. —Phebe Krewson, Cincinnati, Appanoose Co., Iowa, May 18.

ENCOURAGING NEWS.—The regular appointments at Litchfield, yesterday, were well attended and quite interesting, Our Sunday-school is flourishing with an attendance of about ninety. Our great need now is a local minister. —G. W. Gibson, Girard, Ill., May 25.

TWO BAPTIZED.—The Brethren of the Red Oak Grove church, Floyd Co., Va., met in quarterly council May 9. Just previous to the opening of the exercises, two dear sisters expressed a desire to unite with the church, and their request was complied with. The business of the meeting passed off pleasantly. The next day (Sunday) the funeral sermon of Bro. Daniel Ekis's little son was preached by Eld. W. H. Naff, who delivered an affecting discourse on Job 1: 21.—Asa Bowman.

PROSPEROUS CHURCH. —The Cherokee church, Cherokee Co., Kans., is in a flourishing condition, notwithstanding that we have lost a few of our number by emigration. Bro. Leonard Wolf preached an excellent missionary sermon on the last Sunday in May, which, we hope, will leave lasting impressions. Our Sunday-school, under the superintendence of sister Clara Houseworth, is getting along finely. The Young Disciple is a great benefit to us in Sunday-school work.—Henry Shideler.

PLEASANT LOVE-FEAST. – The Bethel church, Mo., held her love-feast May 16. Our large meeting-house at Squaw Creek could not accommodate all. The best of order prevailed. Bro. M. M. Bashore and our elder, S. Shirkey, were with us. Most of our brethren and sisters were present. We truly had a meeting long to be remembered. —Jos. Andes.

IN THE FIELD.—May 8 I went to Hacker's Valley, W. Va., and commenced a short series of meetings May 10. I rejoice that the preaching seemed to benefit both saint and sinner. One man expressed himself as having heard more Gospel during my meetings than he ever heard before. I think that some good might be done at the above-named place by the proper effort.—H. S. Claypool, Salt Lick Bridge, W. Va.

ONE ORDAINED TO THE ELDERSHIP.—The quarterly council in the Olathe church, Kans., occurred May 2. Brethren George Myers and D. B. Barnhart were with us, and assisted in the labors of the meeting. Bro. George E. Wise was ordained to the eldership. Bro. Isaac Crist is laboring, at this writing, in Anderson County. May his labors be blest to the saving of many precious souls.—A. M. Sharp, Gardner, Kans., May 30.

PLEASANT LOVE-FEAST.—The members of the Buck Creek church, Henry Co., Ind, have just enjoyed a pleasant love-feast. There was a full representation from neighboring churches. Ministering brethren present, besides our home ministers, were, brethren Solomon Blickenstaff, George L. Studebaker, Jacob Rairigh, Lewis Kinzie, John McCortley, David Hoover and George Painter. The feast will be long remembered by all.—J. L. Oxley, May 17.

ENJOYABLE LOVE-FEAST.—The Brethren of the Falling Spring congregation, Franklin Co., Pa., held their love-feast at the Hade house May 20 and 21. It was truly a feast of love. Bro. D. L. Miller, of Illinois, Bro. John Zuck, of Clarence, Iowa, and Bro. McLean, of Bijou Hills, South Dakota, as well as ministers from adjoining congregations were present. They broke the Bread of Life to us, both to the encouraging of the saints and the edification of all, we trust. There was a large attendance, and the best of order prevailed.—Wm. A. Anthony, Clay Hill, Pa., May 28.

FLOURISHING SUNDAY-SCHOOL. — I am living somewhat isolated from the main body of the church, and do not have the privilege of meeting with the dear ones in the sanctuary of the Lord as frequently as I would like. We have organized a Sunday-school in this (the Mt. Hope) church, with Bro. J. H. Neher as Superintendent. The school is prospering to such an extent that we bespeak a bright future for it. Ministers passing through this section of country, are invited to stop with us. Notify Bro. J. H. Neher, J. W. Burns, or the writer, Crescent City, Oklahoma Territory, and we will meet you at Guthrie. —A. J. Peebler, Mt. Hope, Oklahoma.

A GOOD PLACE TO BE. —It was good to be at our Communion, May 23 and 24, at the Oak Grove church, Hancock Co., Ohio, for we had a good meeting. Brethren S. M. Loose, John Krabill, J. C. Whitmore and Jacob Heistand came to us and labored for us during the services. Our Sunday-school is in a prosperous condition under the superintendence of Bro. Jas. Deary. Honest, conscientious zeal makes any good cause to prosper. An earnest, straight-forward advocacy of true principles cannot fail to produce good. Oh, that we may, one and all, ever labor to the honor of God, and the advancement of his cause, with unabating zeal and faithfulness.—J. W. Chambers, Alvada, Ohio, May 24.

CORRECTION.—In GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 19, on page 299, in my report from Loraine, I stated that I was to do "some work for the Missionary Board of the Northern District of Missouri." I should have said "The Middle District of Missouri."—H. W. Strickler, Loraine, Ill.

FROM THE INDIAN TERRITORY.—The Brethren of the Owen's Prairie church met in quarterly council April 25. All business passed off pleasantly. We agreed to have our Communion meeting July 18, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. The meeting is to continue over Sunday. Ministerial aid is greatly needed here. We would like to continue our meetings until July 26, if some brethren can be with us. Henry Troxel.

ONE BAPTIZED.—On Saturday, May 16, the members of the Hurricane Creek church, Bond Co., Ill., held their regular quarterly council. The presiding elder, Henry Liligh, from the Mulberry Grove church, was with us. Everything passed off pleasantly and in harmony, as it should, where brethren dwell together in peace. The church decided to have a Communion meeting Sept. 12. We expect Bro. Michael Flory, from Girard, to be with us at that time. One was baptized, and one received by letter, at our council.—Cornelius Kessler, May 20.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL. — The members of the Okaw church met in council May 19. One member was expelled, seven were received by letter. Bro. J. R. Henricks was elected as our Sunday-school Superintendent for third quarter. All business was disposed of harmoniously. Our love-feast occurred May 23. We had a crowded house and a feast of good things for the inner man. About two hundred communed. Ministers present were brethren Menno Stouffer, J. W. Metzger and J. M. McClure. On Sunday Bro. Stouffer addressed the Sunday-school children, after which Bro. McClure spoke to a full house and gave us all a good lesson. We were made to think what kind of a record we are making for the world to come.—E. F. Wolf, La Place, Ill.

INQUIRIES ANSWERED -I have received a number of letters of inquiry about this country, and would say in reply that we have a good, healthy climate, fine water and soil. Pasture is plenty, and there are good chances here for those, who have but little means, to get homes. Land is cheap. Plenty of land can yet be had at five dollars per acre. There are no Brethren here excepting myself and companion. Will not some of our Brethren come to this country and see what we have? One tract of fine land, 5,940 acres in extent, called the Howard Ranch, is now for sale. All is under fence, and would be a most beautiful place for a colony of Brethren. People are as sociable here as in the North, but poor farmers according to our way of thinking.—H. Wyland, Carlisle, Lonoke Co., Ark.

PROSPERING SPIRITUALLY.—The East McPherson church is moving along through sunshine and shadow, with determined efforts to plant the Standard of Truth within her borders. All the members are in sympathy with Sunday-school work, and the result is a Sunday-school, growing in interest. If the children who attend our Sunday-schools receive the proper training, there need be no fears that the church will lose her integrity. I am pleased to state that the churches in Kansas, as a rule, are alive and prosperous spiritually. We are taught by crop failures that earthly things will perish, hence the need of sowing to the Spirit. "What shall the harvest be?" —is a serious question. Now is the only time given us to prepare an answer for him who will demand it at the time of reaping.—J. P. Puterbaugh, May 28.

ONE APPLICANT FOR BAPTISM.—On Saturday, May 16, we held our quarterly council, which passed off pleasantly. Three were received by letter. We agreed to hold our Communion meeting Aug. 14, at our home. On Sunday there was an applicant,—an aged man,—for baptism, but as he is sick he requested baptism to be delayed until he got able to be taken to where there is much water. This is another warning to the young, not to put off the one thing needful until old age, lest you cannot attend to it.—Sallie E. Cart, Morrisonville, Ill., May 20.

THREE BAPTIZED.—Friday evening, May 8, a series of meetings was commenced at the Asher Glade schoolhouse, Garrett Co., Md. The place is one of the regular preaching places in the Markleysburg congregation. The meetings were continued until Sunday, May 17, when, in the presence of, we believe, the largest crowd of people ever gathered at the above place, two young brethren and one young sister were buried with Christ by baptism. We also received one by letter during our meetings. May God's blessing ever be with all his dear children! The preaching was done by the home ministry. Our preparatory council will be June 13, and our love-feast June 20.—Jasper Barnthouse, Markleysburg, Pa.

PLEASANT LOVE-FEAST.—Our Communion meeting occurred May 20 and 21, and we can truly say that we had a good meeting. We trust we have all been benefited by the admonitions and instructions we received, and I hope we have all renewed our covenant and formed new resolutions to live a life more devoted to the cause of Christ. Ministering brethren present with us were J. G. Royer, A. Myers and A. J. Myers. The evening succeeding our meeting a few of the brethren and sisters met at the home of Eld. W. Howe, to hold a love-feast for the benefit of an aged sister and a brother. The occasion was a very solemn and impressive one.—Sarah Spanogle, Lewistown, Pa.

COUNCIL MEETING. The Kansas Center church met in quarterly council May 2. The business of the meeting was disposed of pleasantly and, we trust, in the fear of God, as he is the discerner of hearts and knows all our motives. May the Lord help us, as a Brotherhood, to maintain the purity of the church! Our elder, M. E. Brubaker, has again returned to us after several months' visit in the States of Virginia and Illinois, but is, we are sorry to say, afflicted and not able to do much in the ministry at present. We hope, if it be the Lord's will, that he may again be restored to his usual health. A brother and sister, who had been with the Progressive element, returned and were received by the church and will now, as they expressed themselves, help us to labor in the vineyard of the Lord. Health is good and the prospects for the coming season are promising, owing to the nice rains we are having. We feel to praise God for his goodness, and ask him to renew a right spirit within us. We appointed our fall love-feast for Sept. 19.—Sadie J. Dresher, Lyons, Kansas, May 21.

DEACONS ELECTED. The Brethren of the North Morrill church, Kans., held their love-feast May 26. Weather was somewhat disagreeable, yet the meeting was a pleasant one and, we hope, a profitable one to all present. At our council-meeting, preparatory to the feast, brethren Henry Frye and John Nance were called to serve the church in the office of deacon. May the Lord sustain them in their work, and help them to feel the importance of the position they occupy!—T. A. Eisenbise.

Literary Notes.

The Epic of Saul. By William Cleaver Wilkinson. Octavo, pica type, cloth (gilt top), 386 pp., $2.50. New York and London: Funk & Wagnalls.

"The Epic of Saul" is the product of over seven years of literary work, and the realization of a purpose cherished by the author from boyhood. "Long choosing and beginning late" are words that may fitly be borrowed from Milton to describe the author's experience. A personal visit to Palestine was in the course of preparation of the manuscript, felt to be indispensable, and was accordingly made. The subject of the poem is Saul of Tarsus, in the course of his career preceding and culminating in his conversion to Christianity. It is written in blank verse, is about 8,000 lines in length, and is divided into fourteen sections, or, as they are called, "books." The poem adheres to such facts as are furnished by the Scriptural narrative, but allows full play to the imagination where that narrative is silent.

During the seven years that Mr. Wilkinson has been at work on this epic, extracts have, from time to time, appeared in The Century, The Independent and other journals as independent poems, and have called forth many expressions of praise from literary critics.

She leaves her fond parents and many friends to mourn her departure. Services by Bro. William Harshbarger, assisted by Bro. Howard Keim.

S. E. RETTINGER.

Deceased, in the last years of his life, was much concerned with regard to a higher and holier life than we generally see. He thought that if greater exertions were made by members of the church, the possibilities of the higher attainments would be so manifest, that there would be a greater ingathering into the church. Such and similar sentiments, caused him much solicitude. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. F. M. Smith, from the Baptist church in Hudson from Rev. 12: 13, 14, to a very large concourse of people. THOS. D. LYON.

American Wonders.

YELLOWSTONE PARK is beyond all question one of the World's great wonders, and the Union Pacific Excursion in July will be the event of the season. Ask your nearest U. P. agent about it. 22t4.

Cool Retreats.

THERE is Denver, cool, clear, inviting; Colorado Springs, the home-like; Manitou, that pleasant abode; Idaho Springs and the famous baths, and Boulder, a lovely resting place at the foot of the mountains. Garfield Beach, on Great Salt Lake, as a bathing resort is not equalled in this or any other country; nature's champagne flows the year round at Soda Springs, Idaho; the Columbia river, broad and grand, is without a peer for a summer tour, while the beauties of Coeur d' Alene lake, and the splendid new region of the Pacific North-west opens up a line of tourist travel, unsurpassed in America. You can have your choice of climate, any kind of sport, and every condition of superb scenery on the manifold lines of the Union Pacific System. 22–34.

Garfield Beach on Great Salt Lake, Utah.

THE famous health resort, Garfield Beach, on Great Salt Lake, 18 miles from Salt Lake City, is reached via the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," and is now open for the season.

This is the only real sand beach on Great Salt Lake, and is one of the finest bathing and pleasure resorts in the West. Owing to the stimulating effect of the brine on the skin, or the saline air upon the lungs the appetite is stimulated, and after a bath, the bathers are ready for a hearty meal, and feel greatly invigorated.

Fine bath-houses, accommodating 400 people, have been erected at Garfield Beach, in connection with which there is a first-class restaurant and a fine, large pavillion built out over the lake. All of these are run by the Union Pacific, which guarantees a first-class resort in every respect.

For complete description of Garfield Beach and Great Salt Lake, send to E. L. Lomax, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent, Omaha, for copies of "Sights and Scenes in Utah," or "A Glimpse of Great Salt Lake." 22–34.

An Expert Opinion.

THE "Medical and Surgical Journal" for March 1891, says editorially:

"This pretty little city of Idaho Springs, Colorado, is situated in a beautiful park about 37 miles from Denver, and is about 7,500 feet above sea level. It is thrifty, prosperous, and has become noted for its hot and cold mineral springs, which contain medicinal properties of extraordinary value. Idaho Springs as a health resort cannot be excelled this side of the world-renowned Carlsbad Springs of Germany, whose waters and the waters found at Idaho Springs bear almost an identical chemical analysis.

"In the early stages of consumption these waters, combined with the invigorating air of this beautiful climate, are almost a specific. We take pleasure in recommending these waters to all suffering from coughs and catarrhal affections. It is the best place to go to for the cure of phthisis. Those of our colleagues who have been sending their patients to this grand health resort all join in praising the satisfactory results received from the invigorating waters and climate. We would therefore urge physicians to advise their patients, threatened with consumption, not to procrastinate, but to try, before it is too late, the salutary effects of the waters of Idaho Springs. The Union Pacific are making special efforts to carry the public to and from this famous resort, with all the modern comfort and ease which the tourist seeking health and pleasure can desire." 22–34.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

THIS little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same. Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising."—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3.00; by express, $2 60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

RECENTLY we attended a very interesting and pleasant love-feast at James Creek. The ministerial help was small but sufficient to make the meeting profitable.

BRO. J. B. B. attended the Spring Run love-feast, and says that the Brethren there had a large and good meeting. Five were added to the church, and the prospects are good for more.

WE have been reminded that in publishing the Minutes of our District Meeting (of Middle Pennsylvania), we have marked Lower Conewago, "Not Represented." This is a mistake as Bro. John Wolf was sent as a delegate from that church, and is so marked on our list, but was accidentally overlooked in the printing. We are sorry that the mistake was made.

BRO. SWIGART was with the Brethren at Newry, Pa., at the same time, and as Bro. Holsopple was with us at James Creek, we left two home appointments to be filled without a preacher except Bro. Moomaw, a Normal student who was only lately called to the work. He kindly agreed to fill one of them, and as it was his first effort, we were glad to be informed that he did very well. The Chapel appointment was filled by Dr. Brumbaugh, who is always willing to assist in the good work when called upon.

ANNUAL MEETING NEWS.

Number Two.

WE closed our last report Monday morning, June 1. The day was a real pleasant one, perhaps the most enjoyable day with which we have been favored during the Meeting thus far. The very best of order prevailed on all parts of the ground; in fact we never witnessed better order. The gathering on the ground was quite large, and continued to increase during the entire day. Nearly fifteen car loads of people came in during the day, nearly all of them being members. By evening there were nearly 8,000 members on the ground, to say nothing of those not members. The railroads reported that more than 10,000 persons had come to the place over their lines up to Sunday evening.

At 9 A. M. was the song service in the Tabernacle, attended by several thousand persons. These exercises were led by Bro. Wm. Beery. At times a thousand voices joined in the singing, and it was indeed soul-inspiring. At 10 A. M. Bro. Lewis W. Teeter delivered an able discourse on "Christian Victory," using 1 John 5: 4, as the basis for his subject. At the close of the service Bro. John Wise made a plea in behalf of the Orphans' Home, at this place, under the management of Bro. David Emmert. A collection was then taken up, resulting in the raising of nearly $220.00.

At 1:30 P. M. was the time of our Missionary Meeting, the program of which appeared in last issue. The large Tabernacle was well filled, mainly with members. The meeting was presided over by Bro. D. L. Miller, and the different speakers were limited to fifteen minutes. The spirit of the meeting was excellent, and the reasons for encouraging the Missionary and Tract Work were both instructive and encouraging. We felt that it was the best missionary meeting that we ever attended. At the close of these speeches a collection was taken up and $261.00 raised. Outside of the meeting $31.60 was raised, making in all $292.61 raised for the Missionary and Tract funds. To this add the $220.00 raised for the Orphans' Home, and we have over $500.00 raised to-day.

Soon after the close of the Missionary session the Educational Meeting was held, of which Bro. J. G. Royer was chairman. Interesting papers were read pertaining to the interest of education, and the work being done by the different schools. The school at McPherson, Kansas, was represented by S. Z. Sharp; the Huntingdon, Pa., school by H. B. Brumbaugh, the school at Bridgewater, Va., by E. A. Miller, and the school at Mt. Morris by J. G. Royer. Each of these brethren made a very encouraging report concerning their school work, and urged the importance of our Brethren both encouraging and patronizing the schools conducted by the permission of the general Brotherhood. Bro. Royer closed with a touching address, relating the experience of the early settlers in this country, who had to travel many miles to meeting, and enjoyed but few school privileges compared to our times.

Bro. M. M. Bashor, of Oregon, preached in the Tabernacle at 8 o'clock in the evening to not less than 6,000 persons. There were probably nearly 10,000 on the ground during the evening.

TUESDAY MORNING.—The sun shone out brightly, the balmy air was refreshing, and the ground was in excellent condition; no mud and no dust. This was the morning for the opening of the General Conference. People continued to pour in. It was estimated that there were 10,000 members on the ground, and at one time there could not have been less than 20,000 people present. It is perhaps the largest Annual Meeting we have ever had. Promptly at 9 A. M. the Standing Committee mounted the large platform and took their seats at the long tables. There were probably forty other persons on the stand, generally aged ministers. In front of the stand, which was about fifty-two feet long, sat nearly 300 delegates from nearly all parts of the Brotherhood, extending from California to the Atlantic. The meeting was opened by Eld. Enoch Eby, using hymn No. 253:

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode—
The church our blest Redeemer sav'd
With his own precious blood."

The opening exercises were very impressive. Then followed the announcing of the organization: Daniel Vaniman, Moderator, M. J. McClure, Reading Clerk; D. L. Miller, Writing Clerk; also the reading of Acts 15, and a short address by the Moderator, setting forth our Gospel reasons for these Meetings in order to maintain unity and peace among us, and enable us to work more harmoniously together in all departments of church work. Next was the reading and explaining of the rules for the government of the Meeting. The Meeting was then declared ready for business. The deferred business was then called for.

The first matter presented for consideration, was the divorce question,—both the majority and minority reports. The discussion on this question lasted till noon, when the Meeting adjourned for dinner. At 2 P. M. the discussion was resumed and continued one hour longer. The speeches showed ability and careful research, and will be found well worth reading, as they stand in the Full Report. Both propositions were voted down, leaving the divorce question just where it was before.

The committee appointed by last Annual Meeting to consider and prepare a plan for consolidating the Mission Board and Tract Work, reported favorably, recommending the consolidation, with the request that their report be placed upon the Minutes, to be acted upon by the An-

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

DEAL GENTLY WITH THE CHILDREN.

Deal gently with the children
But a few short years your own,
The home nest soon is empty,
And the little birds have flown;
And when no more returning,
They leave that home behind,
The thought will cheer your loneliness
That you were good and kind.

Deal gently with the children
Who gather round your knee;
Check not in sudden anger
Their merriment and their glee,
Their play that is so noisy,
So wearisome to-day,
Will seem like sweetest music then
When they have gone away.

Deal gently with the children
Fast changing every hour;
Still strive to make them happy,
While yet within your power;
Each smile, each word of kindness
Each joy to childhood given
Is like a step upon a stair
That lifts us up to heaven.

Deal gently with the children
You too were once a child;
Remember you were happy
When those around you smiled;
And oh, remember always—
Whatever else you do—
To live as you would have them live,
For they will be like you.

SUNSHINE IN THE HEART.

BY J. W. KEISER.

WHEN we want light in our rooms, we unbar the shutters and let in the sunshine. Nature has taught us that dark rooms are unwholesome. In like manner every Christian, who wants to be happy under all circumstances, must have his heart windows open toward heaven. He must let the warm rays of Christ's countenance shine in and dwell there. It will remove all fears and doubts. It will scatter the chilly mists. It will turn tears into joy and gladness. The happiest Christian we know of is the one that is happy under all circumstances, —in sorrow as well as in joy, in poverty as in riches, and in all the trials and disappointments of life. Happiness does not consist in the size of one's purse, or in the size of one's house, or in the number of one's butterfly friends. The fountain of peace and love is in the heart. As long as that keeps sweet and pure and satisfied with God's will, there will not be much danger of harsh words from the lips or of scowling clouds on the brow.

Some Christians excuse their bad temper or their gloomy appearance by the plea of ill health, whereas much of their dyspepsia or other ailments may be the result of mere worry or peevishness. The medicine they need cannot be got of the doctor or at the drug store. A large draught of Bible every day and throwing open of the heart windows to the promises of the Master, a few words of honest prayer, a good deed or two of kindness to the first person you meet will do more to brighten your countenance and help your digestion than all the drugs of the doctor.

If you want to get your aches and trials out of sight, hide them under your mercies. You cannot create spiritual sunshine any more than you can the morning star. Your happiness or misery is very much of your own making. Although your cup of vinegar may be mixed with gall to make it the more bitter, you do not need to partake to such extent so as to become gloomy or despondent. Christ's sunshine in the heart will banish every doubt and drive away every cloud from your spiritual sky. Discontent and despondency gnaw at the core of faith and starve every grace. They never remove one sorrow but kill a hundred joys.

Then, how important it is that we should have our heart windows constantly thrown open toward heaven so we may, at all times, receive of that sunshine that will shine in our hearts and souls, that those, out in the cold world, away from our Father's house, may see in our very countenance that we have been with Christ and learned of him. Let those of us, who have taken upon us the name of Christ, keep a clean conscience. Let us keep an eye on the promises that God has made to those who obey his Word. Keep a nightingale of hope in the soul that can sing away the dark and gloomy hours when they do come! Keep your faith growing brighter and brighter unto the perfect day! Never let a day pass by without trying to do some one some good, thus keeping step with the Master on the way toward heaven. No matter how hard the wind may blow, if the Lord is with us, all is well.

Though this may not always be an easy world to walk in, or an easy road to travel, yet it is possible to walk through it with clean and spotless robes. Sin may assail, but it will be as the waves that beat against the goodly ship as it sails in the great ocean, the waters of which find no admittance within its walls. Oh souls, weary and sin-sick, hand yourselves over to the tender mercies of Christ and receive that spiritual sunshine that will illuminate the soul and admit you into those mansions that are held in reserve for all those who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

I PRESS TOWARD THE MARK.—Philpp. 3: 14.

BY J. L. SNAVELY.

THE apostle did not regard his dependence, and earnestness of soul, as an evidence that he had already "attained" the prize, or was perfected in his Savior's image. He continued, by further labors and progress in holiness, to finish his course, and obtain the prize. While there were, at times, hinderances, yet it appears, there was but one object, —"To press toward the mark." This engaged his attention to the exclusion of all interfering considerations. Sometimes things went wrong, — somebody did wrong,—sometimes he was injured, wounded and grieved, and likely discouraged, but he never halted nor ceased to push forward, and do the work appointed him by the Lord. He never said, "If this is the way things go, I will leave the church. I am just as well off, outside, or somewhere else," etc.

There are thousands in our present day, even those who are most perfected and matured in the life of faith and grace, and in whom we may expect to find a good example, who still need an exhortation to follow the honorable example of Paul. The adversary of men is still here, and those who will follow the example of Paul, in "pressing toward the mark," lawfully, need not expect to avoid opposition, and opposing elements, and have things more pleasant than Paul had in his day. This is the judgment and testimony of many Christians, but in this respect there is indeed a great difference among professors, as some expect in the garden of the Lord all peace and sunshine, but it is true, we are sometimes hindered in our work,—something goes wrong, or somebody does wrong; we have been injured and grieved and felt discouraged; we cannot forget the unkindness we have felt; we keep brooding over it, until our temper becomes so inflamed, that we feel like having resentment or redress in some form, and finally, if we are not very cautious, we grow remiss and languid in those things we have already attained.

This is just what the adversary wants. What does he care for your rights or feelings. He wants to hinder the work; and the longer you halt, and wait, and complain, and speak evil of each other, the better he is suited. There is but one thing for us to do, and that is to see that we are in the path of duty,—running according to the Lord's time table,—pressing on to the mark.

In order to run in such a way as to obtain the prize, and not to be deceived by Satan, we must put away all malice, bitterness, wrath, anger, clamor, and evil speaking. We must be kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, "even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you." If things do not go right, do not be discouraged. Do not wait for the devil and his servants to make them right. They will never do it. Do your duty in the strength and fear of the Lord. There is no doubt but what we have all wronged and been wronged. Who is it that has not? We have been abused, and lied about, but were we not forewarned of this? We may well take the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering, affliction and patience.

Yes, my brother and sister, we may be wronged, we may be abused, and slandered, and tried,—we may not have thought that the trial of our faith would come in this way. Of course not,—but that is no reason why it should not come in the way it did. Satan is busy; if you hesitate and draw back, and do not press on in the right, Satan will have the advantage over you. If you begin to mourn and lament over the wounds and abuses you have received, the devil will be rejoicing, and planning for another attack just as malicious.

What shall we do? "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand!" Push on, and do the Master's will! Arise and go forth in the name of the Lord God Almighty, gather new strength, determine that Satan shall never defeat us. Time is short, death, judgment, eternity, is hastening. Soon our work will be done. We are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. Heb. 3: 14.

TRUTH.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

"WHAT is truth?" A more important question could not be asked. Though the query came from no earnest seeker after truth, perhaps half in mockery, half in jest, yet as the question has come down the ages, how many earnest souls have repeated what Pilate lightly uttered, "What is truth?" How many multiplied thousands, because of their adherence to the truth, in the midst of a wicked and perverse world, have suffered the most agonizing tortures and death?

During the three years of our Savior's public ministry how much error he exposed! The self-righteous religionists of his day were weighed in the balances of divine truth, and were found wanting. He tore away the mask of hypocrisy and outward sanctity, by which they were enveloped, and exposed the rottenness and vileness within. Since that time the word Pharisaism has become the synonym for hypocrisy and outward acting in religion.

We often wonder if those Jewish leaders were sinners above all sinners. We wonder how much better many other communities and individuals would appear if subjected to the same test, if brought face to face with the same divine truth. But the time is coming when "every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." Then those eyes that are as a flame of fire shall penetrate the secrets of every heart, and all shall be exposed to the gaze of angels and an assembled world.

"Seeing then," as the Apostle Peter hath said, after speaking of the dissolution of all earthly things, "that all things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" In the light of eternity how different things appear from what they do when viewed from a worldly stand-point. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

No wonder that human judgment is so often at fault. We might say mostly at fault, when it has no better criterion from which to draw conclusions than outward expressions. There are so many things to influence this that it is impossible for a mere outward observer to certainly know one's real character. Mistakes are so common and so unavoidable, that it is best to leave all censure or praise with him who can make no mistakes.

Could only truth have prevailed in the world since the first dawn of creation, there would have been no suffering, no crushed and broken hearts. Error has changed this once lovely world from a Paradise to a Pandemonium. It changed the pure and holy worship of Jehovah to the degrading and shockingly cruel worship of demons. So prevalent had it become, so widely had it extended its influence in the world that in the time of our Savior's sojourn here, truth had almost been swept from the world. Error, with all its monstrous train of evil, had prevailed, with but little check for about four thousand years. "Darkness had covered the earth, and gross darkness the people."

Paul in the first chapter of his letter to the Romans gives a description of the debased condition of the Gentile world at the time of the advent of the Christ. The spiritual condition of the Jews was perhaps but little better. Bigotry and hypocrisy characterized them.

When the beams of divine truth penetrated this mass of corruption, lo what a commotion! Satan and his emissaries bestirred themselves to the utmost, to hinder the advancement of truth. But their rage was impotent. In spite of hellish wiles, in spite of fierce and cruel opposition, the benign power of truth steadily advanced. Cruelty, oppression and all the more revolting forms of vice gradually relaxed their hold on the human heart, until now, after nearly nineteen hundred years since truth fell unadulterated with error from the lips of him who spake as never man spake, a large portion of our world is more or less influenced by it.

But while truth has done so much to ameliorate the condition of mankind, to free him from the shackles of tyranny, to elevate the masses, in a word, to teach him the brotherhood of man, and the fatherhood of God, yet there is much, very much for her to do still before humanity has reached that high standard, as set forth by the Apostle Paul in Eph. 4: 13.

Oh to have the life of the Christ inwoven into our lives, to be one with him, "to know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death! This, indeed, is to be completely under the transforming power of truth.

And this should be the goal that each one of us ought to strive after. "Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." The more opposing forces that are brought to bear against us, the greater strength will we develop if we overcome them, and the greater will be our reward in the great beyond, for, "If so be that we suffer with him, we may be also glorified together."

What if we are not appreciated, and are misjudged and unjustly accused! God knows our motives; he knows our hearts. It is our high privilege by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report, to approve ourselves as the servants of God.

But for the certainty of the final triumph of truth, the condition of many in this world would be distressing indeed. A life of constant, unrequited, unappreciated toil is their sad lot, and this would be unbearable but for the blessed assurance of Holy Writ, that "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." A "needs be" is in every trial, in every affliction! "Oh, then, dear Lord, complete within me thy cleansing process, consume the dross in thine own way!" is the cry of every earnest soul.

We all make many blunders. This is incident to the weakness of the flesh, and our want of knowledge. Such blunders, such weaknesses are to the saint the greatest source of grief, but there is always one refuge for the burdened soul. That refuge is Jesus, and he bids us cast all our care on him, for he careth for us.

Let us, then, be encouraged. Soon every opposing force will be met and overcome. Soon we will have achieved the grandest and most glorious victory,—a victory over every error. We will be a trophy of divine grace, evolved from a world under the baneful influence of sin and error.

FAULT-FINDING AND EVIL-SPEAKING AMONG BRETHREN.

BY C. F. WALKER.

1. Was David careful of his words? "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips." Ps. 141: 3.

2. Why should we be so careful of our words? "Death and life are in the power of the tongue: and they that love it shall eat the fruit thereof." Prov. 18: 21.

3. How will they affect our case in the judgment? "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 12: 37.

4. What did the Psalmist decide to do? "I said, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue: I will keep my mouth with a bridle, while the wicked is before me. I was dumb with silence, I held my peace, even from good; and my sorrow was stirred." Ps. 39: 1, 2.

5. Is it sometimes necessary to withhold even the good things we might mention?

6. In what case is this always best? "Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips." Prov. 27: 2.

7. Who is a perfect man? "For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." James 3: 2.

8. What course do some pursue? "Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit. Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son. Ps. 50: 19, 20.

9. Is this practice forbidden? "Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge." James 4: 11. "Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people; neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the Lord." Lev. 19: 16.

10. What does the talebearer do? "A talebearer revealeth secrets: but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter." Prov. 11: 13.

11. How will the faithful do?

12. Shall we countenance tale-bearing? "He that goeth about as a talebearer revealeth secrets: therefore meddle not with him that flattereth or enticeth with his lips." Prov. 20: 19.

13. Is there strife where there is no tale-bearer? "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." Prov. 26: 20.

14. What, then, is the cause of strife and discord?

15. How does the Lord regard those who sow discord and strife among Brethren? "These six things doth the Lord hate; yea, seven are an abomination unto him. A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren." Prov. 6: 16, 19.

16. If our brother's conduct is not right should we talk about him? "Speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men." Titus 3: 2.

17. Even if the trespass be personal what should we do? "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother." Matt. 18: 15.

18. How may we know that we have passed from death unto life? "Because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." 1 John 3: 14.

19. How much should we love them? "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." John 15: 12.

20. If we do this, will we talk much of their faults?

21. What course should we take? "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4: 31, 32. "Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me." Rom. 15: 30. "Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble." 1 Pet. 5: 5.

22. Who shall at last abide in the tabernacle of God? "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor." Ps. 15: 1–3.

23. Of what shall we think finally? "Brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Philpp. 4: 8.

"He who wants to be led of God, will be sure to find God ready to lead him. But he who is led of God, must go as God leads. He must not choose his own way, and then expect God to go with him."

WHY WE MAY BE DECEIVED.

BY LEVI HOFFERT.

THERE are many deceiving themselves by false hopes. We are told to be "doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." James 1: 22. Will we heed this warning? Let us see what kind of "doers" we must be. Paul to the Romans makes it plain, "But ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you." Dear reader, we may be doers of the Word but only formalists, and so deceive ourselves. If we, as Paul says, "obey from the heart," we can know that our obedience is sincere and without a mere form. Further, we may obey in part only, deceiving ourselves. See James 2: 10. A partial obedience will likely share the same fate as non-obedience. We see that, had Peter refused to let his Lord wash his feet, he would have been cut off and would have had no part with the Lord. We can look around us and see many of our dear friends,—professed followers of Jesus,—even worse than Peter. We try to reason with them, that they should practice feet-washing, but they will not be obedient. And why will not the Lord require as much of us as he did of Peter? Oh, let us not deceive ourselves! Let us submit as Peter did and be blessed!

We may be deceived by others. "Take heed that no man deceive you." Matt. 24: 4. "Let no man deceive you with vain words." Eph. 5: 6; see also Col. 2: 8.

Now, while it is true that we may deceive ourselves, it is equally true that we may be deceived by others. An infallible rule by which to be governed in both cases is, to set up the words of Jesus as our standard. Our life must correspond with the truth according to the New Testament Scriptures. Lastly, the most doleful part of deception is, if not very careful, we may go on all through life and not be awakened to the true state of our condition until we are before the judgment seat of Christ.

NATURE'S TEACHER.

SELECTED BY J. A. CLICK.

NATURE does not spread for man a soft couch to lull him to repose: nor does she set around that couch abundant supplies, which require only the stretching out of his hand to obtain. For the animal races she does so provide. She prepares food and clothing for them, with little care of theirs. She spreads their table, for which no cookery is needed; she weaves and fits their garments without loom or needle, and her trees and caves and rocks are their habitation.

Yet man, said to be favorite, and so he is; but thus does she deal with her favorites: she turns him out naked, cold and shivering upon the earth, with needs that admit of no compromise; with delicate frame that cannot lie upon the bare ground an hour, but must have immediate protection; with a hunger that cannot procrastinate the needed supply, but must be fed to-day and every day; and now, why is all this?

I suppose if a man could have made of the earth a bed, and if an apple or a chestnut a day could have sufficed him for food, he would have gotten his barrel of apples or his bushel of chestnuts, and lain down upon the earth and done nothing till the stock was gone.

But nature will not permit this. I say, will not permit it, for hers is no voluntary system. She has taken a bond of man for the fulfillment of one of her primary objects,—his activity; because, if he were left to indolence, all were lost. That bond is as strong as her own ribbed rocks, and close pressing upon man as the very flesh in which it is folded and sealed. So is this solid and insensible world filled with meaning to him: the blind and voiceless elements seem to look upon him and speak to him and the dark clothing of flesh and sense which is wrapped around him, becomes a net-work of moral tissues, and everything says, "Arouse thyself! Up and be doing, for nature, the system of things, will not have thee here on any other terms."

But what, again, does nature demand of this activity? The answer is, Discretion. Immediately and inevitably a principle of intelligence is infused into this activity. Immediately the agent becomes a pupil. Nature all around says even to infancy, what all human speech says to it, "Take care!" It is, all over the world, the first phase of the parent's teaching, the first of the child's learning,—"Take care!"

This phase but interprets what Nature says to all her children. Not as an all-indulgent mother does she receive them to her lap, but with a certain matronly sobriety, aye, and "the graver countenance of love," she says, "Take care!—smooth paths are not around thee, but stones and stubs, thorns and briars; soft elements alone do not embosom thee, but drenching rains will visit thee, and chilling dews, and winter's blast, and summer's heat; harmless things are not these around thee, but see! here are damps and secret poisons, the rough bark of trees and sharp points of contact. Thou must learn, or thou must suffer."

Aye, suffer! What human school has a discipline like Nature's? In these schools we are apt to think the punishments are cruel and degrading. But Nature has whips and stripes for the negligent. Her discipline strikes deep; it stamps itself upon the human frame—and upon what a frame! All softness, all delicacy; not clothed with the mail of leviathan, nor endowed with interior organs like those of the ostrich or the whale, and yet a frame strong with care, while weakest of all things without it.

What a wonderful organ, in this view, is the human stomach,—the main source of energy to the system, strong enough to digest iron and steel,—working like some powerful machine, and yet, do you let it be overworked or otherwise injured, and it is the most delicate and susceptible of all things,—trembling like an aspen leaf at every agitation, and sinking and fainting under a feather's weight of food or drink. What a system, in this view, is that of the nerves, insensible as leathern thongs in their health—trembling cords of agony in their disease!

Do you not see the wonder which nature and humanity thus presents to us? Do you not see man as a frail and delicate child, cast into the bosom of universal teaching? Aye, that teaching comes out to him in tongues of flame, and it penetrates his hand in the little, seemingly useless, thorn, and it assails his foot with stones of stumbling, and it flashes into his eyes with the light of day, and it broods over his path with the darkness of night, and it sweeps around his head with the wings of the tempest, and it startles him to awe and fear with the crash of thunder. The universe is not more filled with light and air and solid matter, than it is filled and crowded with wisdom and instruction.

CONTENTMENT.

BY GEORGE S. GRIM.

CONTENTMENT which brings satisfaction is a jewel most precious and rare. Happy is the man who finds it. We may seek it in wisdom, but it is not there. We may seek it in honor and fame, but it is not there. We may seek it in pleasure, but it is not there. We may seek it in riches and heap up gold and silver until we are rich beyond the dream of avarice, and search there for satisfaction, but we have it not. Our heart is like the horse-leech,—it crieth, "Give, give, give,"—still there is nothing but an aching void left that earth can never fill.

Again, among the sons of men there are not a few restless spirits whose uneasy souls are continually panting after an unknown good or object, the want of which they feel, but the nature of which they do not comprehend. These will hurry from one thing to another and from place to place. They do little else but make a hopeless attempt of doing a great work, but they make a complete failure in life, even if they succeed in gaining some perishable objects. It is not that precious thing which the world cannot buy.

Give us Christ, and our heart's desire is filled. Contentment gives us all things, though we have not where to lay our heads in this world, as Christ has said. With contentment we have peace and love towards God and man, which never can be taken from us.

When the time shall close, here on the earth, with our career, it will be well if we have laid up treasures in heaven where moth and rust do not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal.

"BE NOT CONFORMED TO THIS WORLD."

BY E. S. MILLER.

WE understand from the Scriptures that we shall not be like the world. There are a great many things in which we can be like the world, if we are not very careful about ourselves,—things which injure our characters, and are a great hinderance to the cause of our Blessed Master. All of this we can easily avoid, if we only keep close to the line of Gospel truth. If we take the advice of Paul to his son Timothy, when he said, "Take heed to thyself, and to the doctrine continue therein and thou shalt save thyself and them that hear thee," we shall be as lights to the world. We as Christians are to show the paths of righteousness, and thereby be the means of saving others, but if we are just like the world in our conduct, in our business and dealing, driving sharp bargains, and, perhaps, taking advantage of our fellow-men, we are a hinderance to the cause. We are to be a peculiar people,—different from all others. When our brother trespasses against us, we generally take the course of the world, and tell everybody else first. Very often we try to put our brother down as low as we can, instead of taking the Master's advice,—going to him and telling him his faults between us and him alone. By a kind and forgiving spirit we may show our love to him.

If we are a peculiar people, the Savior's language applies to us when he compares the church to a sheepfold, and the members as sheep. We know that sheep are known from all other animals by their coat. No matter how far away from the flock or among what other animals, they are always known because they have a similarity of coat or dress. What a glorious thing it would be if every member of our beloved Brotherhood would be as well known as to where they belong when they are away from the flock! What an amount of preaching it would do to the unconverted, and what an ingathering we might have here in the church, and much more in the church above!

But when we look over the church and especially over the ministry who are called as watchmen upon the walls of Zion, and see the great difference, there is not the similarity that there used to be among the old brethren. Oh, what a pity that we can find some who, if taken to where they are not personally known, are not recognized as Brethren because they look so different, and I am afraid there is a reason for it.

When the Bible so plainly tells us to be of one mind, and that we should all speak the same thing, it seems to me we should be willing to yield, and not insist upon having our own way.

The great trouble is, we compare ourselves too much among ourselves, and generally select one to compare with, who suits our notion best. The consequence is that, after awhile we will have quite a different appearance, and then, if we get away from home, we are not recognized as Brethren. Then we certainly will feel that we are not quite what we ought to be or what we profess to be. Let us examine ourselves and see whether we are in the faith! Let us try to live up to the line of the Gospel, and be of one mind, striving together for the cause of our Blessed Master; then, after awhile, if we prove faithful, we all shall meet each other on that celestial shore of immortal glory, and meet our loved ones gone before!

A BIG FIND IN EGYPT.

THE big find, of which we give an account below, happened near the once celebrated City of Thebes, which, at one time, was the capital of Upper Egypt. Even in the time of Moses it was a grand city, and in its zenith, was the most magnificent and wealthy city in the world. It was about thirty miles in circumference, but at present is in a complete state of ruins. Here may be found some of the most remarkable ruins in the known world. A few years ago the body of Pharaoh, the king who attempted to follow Moses across the Red Sea, was found near Thebes, and now this additional find renders the old buried ruins still more deserving of study, in the estimation of those interested in ancient history.

"On February 6 a discovery was made in the necropolis of Thebes, second only in importance to the discovery of the royal mummies at Dehr-el-Bahari by M. Maspero in 1881. About half a mile from Dehr-el-Bahari a pit has been found containing several hundred magnificent mummies. These, like the royal mummies, had evidently been removed from the tombs and concealed in this receptacle, as a precaution, by the servants of the priests, probably at the same time and for the same reasons which caused the royal mummies to be placed in the receptacle where they were found by M. Maspero. This removal is believed by M. Maspero to have taken place in the reign of Aauputh, son of Shasang, of the Twenty-second Dynasty, (circa 966 B. C.).

"The coffins hitherto found all belong to the Twenty-first Dynasty, and are those of the priests of Ra-Amun and their families. The pit is about forty-five feet in depth, at the bottom of which are two corridors filled with coffins and treasures of every description. In the lower corridor—which as yet has only been explored—it is computed that there are some 200 coffins, and the second corridor is believed to be not less extensive. The shaft is forty-five feet deep, its mouth is about twelve feet in diameter, and its sides are of rough limestone. One of M. Grebaut's native assistants, who was superintending the work of hauling up the mummy cases, told me that he had been the first actually to enter the corridor, where the mummies and the treasures lie. The shaft had been excavated only as deep as is the mouth of the corridor; and he crept on his hands and knees, and stood in what he describes as being like a palace of enchantment. The corridor, he said, is some ten or twelve feet high and 250 feet long. It runs in a northerly direction from the shaft toward the Theban hill. At the end there is a short corridor, branching from it at right angles, and at some height above the floor at the end is the entrance to a second very long corridor, full of treasures, which has been sealed up for the present by M. Grebaut.

"Groups of mummies are placed at intervals in families. The number in each group varies from two to six or seven, father, mother, and children, and around them, exquisitely arranged, are vases, models of houses, models of dumabiehs, cases and boxes full of ushabtis, statuettes, and every conceivable treasure of ancient Egypt. Without even a speck of dust upon them, this profusion of treasures had remained unlooked at by any eye for nearly 3,000 years. He said that photographs had been taken of the place in its undisturbed state which he declared to be that of a perfectly kept and well-arranged museum."

THE POWER OF EXAMPLE.

SELECTED BY A. W. ANDERER.

EXAMPLE is power. It is alike so in the circles of wealth and refinement and in the haunts of poverty and ignorance. It tells every-where, and makes its mark for good or evil all over the world of men and thought. All history is but a reiteration of the power of example—power to bless and refine or to blight and ruin humanity. Unless its teachings impress us with this truth, we are indeed poor students of human history. One has well said that "history is philosophy teaching by example."

Example is power for good. Every man has influence, more or less, in his sphere of life, and that influence, in the very nature of the case, must tell on his fellows. If he be a good man, his example must and will do good. It cannot be otherwise. A pure and virtuous life, like the sun in the heavens, must shine and bless, brighten and warm in the moral world. So it has ever been, and so it ever will be. Truth and purity, like so many gems in the life and example of the good man, cannot but shame and condemn error and vice in others.

> "A fault doth never with remorse
> Our mind so deeply move
> As when another's guiltless life
> Our error doth reprove."

Example is also power for evil. There is no estimating the extent of a bad man's influence in the world; its moral reach is indeed fearful. "One sinner destroyeth much good," is the testimony of the wise man, as well as the practical teaching of all experience. An instrument of incalculable harm in any community is the man who arrays his life and example against virtue and religion; and yet thousands of our fellow-beings seem only to live that they may blight humanity with the influence of their wicked lives and evil example. Their work in the world is that of destruction, for they literally "destroy much good."

Cicero gave his followers the best of counsel when he said to them: "Be a pattern to others, and then all will go well; for as a whole city is infected by the licentious passions and vices of men, so it is likewise reformed by their moderation." And a greater than Cicero has said: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

> "——Our lives,
> In acts exemplary, not only win
> Ourselves good name, but do to others give > Matter for virtuous deeds, by which we live."

SUGGESTIONS.

BY JOHN HERR.

WHEN speaking or writing of the sin of covetousness, do not forget to tell what we should covet.

—Be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves, but not as cunning as a fox and as pernicious as an adder.

—Encourage, promote, and bid God-speed, rather than allow jealousy to retard progress in a good cause.

—Follow unheeded public rebuke and menaces with chastisement, lest they become like rules in a school-room, —allowed to be broken.

The hypocrisy of the hypocrite is worse than the depravity of the depraved, —the one is open and unpretending, the other false, deceitful, and assuming to be what it is not.

Cleanliness is next to godliness and should be carefully observed at the time of feet-washing as well as at all other times. Do not permit the water to get filthy, but avoid it by frequently supplying fresh. Clean water and dry towels for the hands is an absolute essential to cleanliness on such occasions.

"THE arm of the weak is the world's strength, and the little property of the poor is the world's riches. Just what our specific duty to others may be, depends largely upon our condition as well as theirs; it depends, too, upon times and places and circumstances. But there are no conditions of either party, no circumstances, that ever shut out the unselfish and self-giving attitude of one of right impulses. An aged but always physically active Christian woman became suddenly helpless with paralysis. While carried rapidly down into the valley of the shadow of death, a helpless prisoner to a helpless disease, she was told that a near relative was laid by with a severe cold. The stammering tongue immediately replied, "Ask her whether there is anything we can do for her." Her attendants and family smiled at one who could move neither head nor limb thinking of ministering to the sick in a distant home. But that question of that mother in Israel had already done more to touch the hearts and to inspire the motives of those who heard it, than she could have done, perhaps, had she been herself the busy bedside minister that she would have been if she could. And so there is never one so weak as to lose all strength for others, never one so poor as to have no substance to divide with others. Ministry is possible to all."

"A MAN must not yield to despondency, nor sit down inactive, despairing, because he is in darkness. Sometimes a few steps onward or upward are all that a person needed, and for want even of that little activity he may remain all his life beneath the cloud. Perhaps you have been ascending a mountain with the mist so thick before you that a few feet from you not an object was visible, and so wet that it was like a dripping rain. Timidity and despondency say, in such a case, you had better turn back, at any rate lie by in the first shelter. But perhaps you will find a clear sky with a little more travel upward. Courage and hope say, Go on!"

"TRUTH, being founded on a rock, you may boldly dig to see its foundations without fear of destroying the edifice; but falsehood being laid on the sand, if you examine its foundations you cause it to fall."

NO CROSS, NO CROWN.

SELECTED BY SAMUEL T. HARNES.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."—Matt. 16: 24.

LUXURY should not be used by Christians because of its inconsistency with the spirit of Christianity and of the spirit of Christ. Excess in apparel and pleasure should not be allowed among Christians, because that which invents it, delights in it, and pleads so strongly for it, is inconsistent with the true spirit of Christianity; nor doth the very nature of the Christian religion admit of it, nor he who hath saved us and called us with a holy calling,—not according to our works but according to his own purpose, who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel, that all the pleasures of mortal life, in which the world lives, might be denied and relinquished.

Excess in apparel and pleasure is not only forbidden in the Scriptures, but it was the ground of that lamentable message by the prophet Isaiah to the people of Israel, "Moreover the Lord saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet: therefore the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion. . . In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their cauls, and their round tires like the moon, the chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers." Isa. 3: 16-19.

If we, then, willingly forsake the vanity and fleshly satisfactions of the world, we must encounter with boldness the shame and sufferings. If the Christian religion admitted the possession of this world in any other sense than the simple and naked use of those creatures, really given of God for the necessity and convenience of the whole creation; for instance, did it allow all that pride, vanity, curiosity, pomp, with whatever may delight and gratify their senses, would dictate, then what need of a daily cross, a self-denying life, working out our salvation with fear and trembling?

For this reason it is that nothing less than immense rewards and eternal mansions are promised, that men and women might be encouraged to seek the things that are above, having the treasure and heart in heaven. There is to be no idle talking, no vain jesting, but rather to seek first the "kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6: 33.

Christ well knew on what foolish trifles and vain pleasures, as well as grosser impieties, the minds of men and women were fixed and how much they were degenerated from the heavenly spirit of life unto a lustful seeking after the enjoyments of this perishing world. He foresaw the difficulty that all would have to relinquish and forsake the worldly pleasures, so, to induce them to it, he did not speak to them in the language of the law that they should have an earthly Canaan, great dignities, a long life and the like, but rather the contrary. He speaks to them in a higher strain; he assures them of a kingdom and a crown that are immortal, that neither time, death, grave nor hell with all its instruments shall ever be able to disappoint, or take away from those that should believe and obey him. He tells them further that they should be taken into the near alliance of loving friends, yea the intimate relation of dear brethren and co-heirs with him of celestial happiness and a glorious immortality.

If it be recorded that those who heard not Moses were to die, much more shall they who refuse to hear and obey the precepts of this Great and Eternal Rewarder. Therefore it pleased him to give us in his own example of what his disciples must expect to drink deeply,—namely, the cup of self-denial by a daily cross, denying the pleasures of life for a season. Christ came not to consecrate a way to the eternal rest in the pomp of this world, but by forsaking all that is pleasing to the carnal mind,—suffering the loss of all, on the one hand, and the reproach of ungodly men on the other. "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." Matt. 16: 25.

Christ commands us to seek another country and to lay up treasures in the heavens that fade not away. He therefore charges all never to be mindful about what shall we eat or what shall we drink or wherewithal shall we be clothed, Matt. 6: 31, "because," said he, "after these things do the Gentiles seek," but having food and raiment, let us therewith be content. He who would be his disciple, let him take up his cross and follow him. O, who will follow him, who will be a true disciple? We must not think to steer another course, or drink of another cup than the Captain of our salvation hath done before us. No, for it is the very question he asked James and John, the sons of Zebedee, when they desired to sit at his right and left hand in his kingdom. "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?"

Whoever would come to Christ must readily abandon every delight that would steal away the affections of the mind and turn it from the divine spirit of life.

The things of this world may be used as if they were not. Having such things as are necessary and convenient, the Christian is to be therewith content without the superfluity of the world, for, unless there be an abiding in Christ, it will be impossible to bring forth much fruit, which God requires at the hands of his followers, wherein his Father is glorified. It is clear that such as live in the vanities, pleasures, recreations and lusts of the world abide not in him, neither know him, for they that know him depart from iniquity. Those who abide and delight in those bewitching follies are ignorant and insensible of him who continually stands knocking at the door of their hearts, in whom they ought to abide, and whose divine power they should know to be the cross on which every beloved lust and alluring vanity should be crucified, that so they might feel the heavenly life to spring up in their hearts, and themselves to be quickened to seek the things that are above, that when Christ shall appear, they might appear with him in glory.

THE RENDING OF THE VEIL.

BY DAVID E. CRIPE.

THE veil separated between the holy place of the temple and the Holy of holies. Into this sacred precinct, the high-priest alone could come, and he but once a year. This place contained the ark of the covenant, the mercy-seat and the golden cherubims. But what gave the greater sacredness to this spot was the fact that the Lord had promised to dwell there. When Jesus expired upon the cross, the earth quaked and "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom."

The rending of this veil is very significant. It shows the completion, the putting aside of the Old Dispensation as an empty shell from which the life was gone, and the ushering in of the New,—the free and open dispensation of mercy. When the veil was rent, the sacredness, the holiness of that inner sanctuary was gone, the mystery which naturally and necessarily enshrouded that sacred precinct was cleared away, and everything was exposed to the common gaze. Man could see that the Lord was not now there.

To the Jews,—following in the very hour of their seeming victory over Jesus,—the rending of the veil was a severer blow than the destruction of the temple itself by the Romans some years later. That they could ascribe to the malignity of the heathen, but this was caused by some super-human power, plainly by the hand of the Lord whom they sought to worship there.

The veil was not rent by accident; this was evident to all, neither did the earthquake rend it, else it would not have been rent from the top to the bottom. This shows that the power came from above, from God himself.

At the moment when Jesus said, "It is finished,"—the instituting of the New Dispensation, and, perhaps, also the fulfilling of the Mosaic Law,—he gave up the ghost and the veil was rent. Before this Jesus had always reverenced both the Law and the Temple. At one time he commanded his followers to observe and obey the teachings of those who sat in Moses' seat, and frequently he worshiped in the temple, and also endeavored to purify it. Now the dispensation of mercy had taken the place of the Law, and God had no further use for the temple or the temple service.

The rent veil is also typical of the New Dispensation; there is to be no mystery, no veil between man and his Maker; no spot of earth is now more sacred than every other; we are not required to make yearly pilgrimages to Jerusalem to worship, but it is desired that man be found praying everywhere, and he can now worship God acceptably under his own vine and fig-tree. No Levitical priest is now required to mediate between man and God, for we have now a Great High-priest, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. Heb. 4: 15.

As the veil which kept sacred the religion for one nation only, was rent in twain, so was the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile broken down. All may now stand on an equal footing before God, and each one must answer for his own course in life.

As the rending of the veil is typical of the fulfilling and putting aside the Old Dispensation and instituting the New, so does the rending or taking away the veil that is over the heart of man change him from the old to the new. Paul, in writing of the Jews, says, "Unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away." 2 Cor. 3: 15, 16.

Every heart loves and worships something, else it were not human. Whatever this may be, it is an idol enshrined in the inner sanctity of the heart, hidden, yet suggested by the veil that is upon it. The veil of which Paul writes, prevented the Jews from understanding the prophecy of the promised Redeemer, that he should be despised and rejected, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Their idea was that he who should redeem Israel, should come as a conqueror with power and great glory. This hope was the idol of the heart, which the Jews worshiped, and which prevented them from understanding Moses and the prophets.

Paul says when the heart shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away. When once the heart can be made to realize that Christ died for man, then this veil of the heart is rent, and its inner sanctity becomes as empty as was the Holy of holies, when the veil of the temple was rent.

It is possible that we, too, may read the Scriptures, or endeavor to serve God, and still have a veil upon the heart. If the cares, the pursuits, or the enjoyments of life have so engrossed our thoughts that they will steal upon us even in our hour of devotion, then the veil has not been wholly removed from our hearts. If our weakness, our prejudices and our habits are allowed to rise above our love for the Master and his cause, if we are not willing to sacrifice all these for him we serve, then we have still an idol in the heart and a veil over it. If the heart has not been emptied, swept and garnished, the Good Spirit will not come in. God will bear with many mistakes, shortcomings and imperfections, but he cannot share the heart with the power of darkness. If he cannot have the whole heart, he will not dwell there. But if the heart turns to the Lord in sincerity and in truth, the promise is that the veil will be taken away. "Only fear God, and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you." 1 Sam. 12: 24.

GOD'S WAYS.

BY C. M. MORELOCK.

WHO has not wandered in the forest and admired the beauty and grandeur of the trees, planted by the God of nature, and might we not, from these same trees, learn a lesson of trust and patience?

There are many things we do not know, but we shall know hereafter,—many things that we, in our blindness, cannot see any good in or, indeed, any reason for, that, in years to come we will know was only one of "God's mysterious ways his wonders to perform." How often have we seen a gnarled and crooked tree stand for years, defying the storms, when it seems to us to be of no use whatever, but rather a hindrance to the young trees that start up beneath its wide-spreading branches, and would make good and useful trees, could they have the sunshine, rain and dew that the crooked tree keeps from them. How often have we seen persons that seemed to do no good in the world, but by their influence have kept others from doing right! Our Father could have easily removed them, but he does not, and we shall not know why until we pass the "pearly gates."

Who has not seen the tender, graceful sapling, growing beside the unsightly one? The woodsman needs one,—he takes the good and leaves the diseased one. So we have seen a family in which one seemed the brightest and best,—the arm that father and mother hoped to lean on in their declining years, but almost without warning the dear one is taken from them. In their anguish they cried: "Why was this one taken?" But we can give no truthful answer but this: "He knoweth best."

The majestic pine, towering above the rest of the forest, the various kinds of oaks, the beautiful evergreens, the hickory, maple, gum, chestnut, and many other kinds of trees,—all have their various uses,—all fill the places that God intended they should. Let us do the same and wait in patience to know why these things are so, trusting ever the One who rules alone! By and by, when the veil is lifted, we will feel and know that our Father knew what was best for his children!

ENCOURAGE CHILDREN.

BY JACOB ETTER.

WE do not generally praise our children enough when they do well, and we are apt to find too much fault with their shortcomings. A word of encouragement will do much more towards helping them on in the right path, than any amount of censure when they fail.

Some are afraid of making their children vain by speaking of their excellencies and showing their own pleasure at the fact, or in allowing them to believe that they possess any beauty of form or feature.

Of course there is a great difference in children. Some have so much egotism and are ever talking of what "I can do," that one has to use some judgment in these matters; but there are far more who feel that they can never do anything just right, because so much fault has been found with them, and that some other child is so much smarter, prettier and better than they, that a little word of approval when they really do a good deed, or a pleasant remark about something in their looks that is prepossessing, will kindle a warmth of feeling and love for you, that will not soon wear away, because you have made them feel that you perceive qualities in them that are worth noticing. This stimulates them to strive to ever be noble and good, so that others may prize them.

Do not pass your little acquaintances on the street unnoticed, but give a cheery greeting and smile to each. It will cost you nothing and may bring a ray of sunshine to them. Their little hearts are so sensitive that they vibrate at the slightest touch, and will often thrill with pleasure, or shrink with keenest pain at some trivial action of yours. Let us be more patient, more loving, more sympathetic with the little ones, doing all we can to guide them in the right way, and show by our actions that we have faith in them and expect them to grow up to become useful, intelligent men and women.

If we endeavor to get our children interested in reading the Bible, we will, no doubt, become interested ourselves, and teach them by example as well as by telling them the story of the cross, so that their young hearts will become impressed and gain a knowledge of the Bible in their childhood days. We should teach them that the pleasures of sin are not to be compared with the happiness of the redeemed.

Let us not be so timid in regard to our duties in our families! Our thoughts and convictions may be good, but we too often come short of acting them out. These features are noticeable to the young and leave a bad impression.

The bread that is cast on the water, returns again. "We reap as we sow,"—a truth hard to learn, but it shines out at last as the hand on the wall. Let us sow more love, that we may reap in return! If our love were more simple, we should take God at his word, and our lives would be all sunshine in the sweetness of him whose love never fails!

THE SUMMONS.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

A VISION of the night came unto me. In my dream I stood looking at the western sky, and my eyes were curiously fixed upon a star. Somehow, to me it had an apparent motion, and I gazed long and earnestly upon it. It seemed to be hurrying in from some limitless ocean of space, hastening on through inter-stellar and inter-planetary spaces, and the wonder came upon me: "How near will it come to me, how far will it pass me by?" It was swift in its motion, even as the prayer of a child, that in a moment of time reaches up through all the depths of existence to the great heart of an infinite God.

In it there was not so much of a physical force as the quick movement of thought. Its light and its glory were white, even as the splendor of the robes of the immortals. And still it swept toward me, and still I wondered, but there was no fear within my heart; and then, as I gazed, a transformation came, and behold, it was a white dove, which was swiftly winging its way toward me, and again I wondered, "How near will it come to me, how far will it pass me by?" And even as I wondered it swept close to me, and then in a moment it was fluttering on my breast and nestling in my arms, and I placed my hand upon it, and stroked its soft plumage, and then the great truth burst in upon my being, "It is God's messenger, and he is calling you home." And still there was no fear within my heart, and I could only wonder at the depth of that Infinite Love which cared so much for one of the least of his, that a white-winged messenger should be sent, bidding him to the home of many mansions!

And then from his banks of eternal light a great joy pulsated down through the azure, and enwrapped my being; a new life glowed in every vein, and great and exceeding happiness came unto me, as if already the hand of the Master was on my forehead in a benediction that should last through all of God's undying years.

But the morning came, and behold it was only a dream! But when my eyes close to the lights of earth, and I awaken in the glow and glory of an immortal day, God grant that his peace may be upon my soul, even as it was in this vision of the night!

"IT is an axiom of common life, that one way to drive a person toward untrustworthiness is to distrust him. Conversely, the throwing one on his sense of undivided personal responsibility is likely to increase his efficiency in any form of work committed to him. Putting a person 'on his mettle,' as it is sometimes called, is nothing more than allowing him the fullest opportunity to show what kind of stuff, or metal, he is made of,—'mettle' and 'metal' being merely different spellings of the same word. This rule of mettle is a rule that holds all the way down from old age to childhood; and in no case is it likely to be more applicable than in that of the growing boy. A certain clear-headed and true-hearted mother who thoroughly understood how to help her boy by showing her confidence in him, was, one day, re-assured in her attitude of confidence by his saying to her, 'A fellow can't do anything wrong, when his mother trusts him so.' Many another boy would feel that, even though he did not quite say it, if only he were granted the opportunity to feel what it means to be trusted. Give the magnet a chance to show the value of soft iron; and give the Damascus blade a chance to show the value of hard steel. Give to each metal its right of mettle."

THERE needs no argument to prove that the less a man knows about wrong practices of any sort, the less likely he is to go astray. All that anybody needs to keep him safe is to know the right way and stick to it. A nervous passenger said once to a captain of a vessel, "I suppose you know where every rock and shoal is along this whole coast." "No, sir," the old sailor answered, "but I know where they are not." And the timid traveler needed no further assurance.—Sel.

"THE motives of the best action will not bear too strict an inquiry. It is allowed that the cause of most actions, good or bad, may be resolved into the love of ourselves; but the self-love of some men inclines them to please others, and the self-love of others is wholly employed in pleasing themselves. This makes the great distinction between virtue and vice."

ANNUAL MEETING NEWS.

nual Meeting of 1893, thus giving the Brotherhood two years to consider the plan proposed.

The committee appointed by the Annual Meeting of 1890 to report upon the propriety and cost of preparing and publishing Notes on the New Testament,—in keeping with our understanding of the Scriptures,— also reported favorably, and informed the Conference that Eld. L. W. Teeter was now engaged in preparing Notes on the New Testament, and desired that this Meeting appoint two competent Brethren to assist in the examination of the Notes before publication. The Meeting accepted the report and appointed the following brethren to assist in the examination referred to: R. H. Miller, Jas. M. Neff.

A petition from Oregon called for aid in defraying the expenses of her District delegate to the Annual Meeting. It was decided that the General Brotherhood pay one-half of the expenses only.

The trustees of the proposed school at Lordsburg, California asked for permission to establish and conduct their school in harmony with the principles of the Brotherhood. The petition was granted, and the following elders appointed to take the advisory oversight: Enoch Eby, J. S. Flory, J. W. Metzger.

In answer to a petition from North-western Kansas and Colorado it was decided that elders cannot go into other church territory and organize new churches without the consent of the adjoining elders.

Two papers, one against the proposed new song book, and the other favoring it, were both referred to the Hymn Book Committee. The Meeting also authorized the preparing and publishing of a new German Hymn Book for the use of the German members, and appointed the following brethren to compile the work: S. R. Zug, J. H. Longanecker, Jacob Aldinger.

A paper from Middle Missouri, asking for further action on the tobacco question, was returned, the Meeting feeling assured that we already had enough of decisions on that question.

Several other papers were either returned or tabled, among them one asking that the Annual Meeting be permanently located. The sentiment in favor of this request was not strongly manifested. One speaker said that as long as we had four or five calls ahead for the Annual Meeting, he saw no necessity for considering the propriety of permanently locating the Meeting.

The Meeting adjourned at 5:30 P. M., with the very best of feelings. The audience was, at times, immense, and yet we had most excellent order. A good deal of ground was passed over, as we have mentioned only a part of the queries that came before the Meeting, to be acted upon. The Moderator held the speakers to the point very closely, thus permitting no time to be wasted. No one was allowed to speak until the Moderator announced the speaker's name to the Meeting, so that it could be distinctly heard.

WEDNESDAY morning came with some indications of falling weather. The people came from their resting places seemingly much refreshed and real cheerful. They came from the city almost like so many bees from their great hive. We presume Hagerstown never was so full of people. All over the city are lodging places at twenty-five cents per night, and the people seem to be well accommodated; in fact we have yet heard no complaints. The dining hall seems to be well patronized. We learn that over 8,000 meal tickets were sold in one day. The cooking arrangements are excellent, and while the method of handling the people in the dining room is not as complete as at some former meetings, yet the well-prepared food, and the way it is served at the tables, is very satisfactory indeed. We always occupied a place at table No. 1, and had a good chance to observe all the movements. Certainly no one, so far as we could see, had any reason to complain.

The crowd had diminished some, but the tabernacle was full to over-flowing. In the middle of the day the weather was quite warm, causing the people to seek the shady places. At 5 P. M. a rain, accompanied by considerable wind, approached from the North-west. It was just after the close of the afternoon session. The large railroad tent was blown to the ground, but no other damage was sustained. It rained just enough to make it a little muddy in the roads.

At 8:30 A. M., the Standing Committee took their places at the tables on the platform. The Meeting was opened by Eld. J. D. Trostle, of Kansas, using hymn No. 47:

"Come let us all unite to praise
The Savior of mankind!
Our thankful hearts in solemn lays
Be with our voices join'd."

The first business before the Meeting was the reading of four papers, part of which call for a change in our church name. It was decided that these papers be placed in the hands of a committee of five brethren to report an answer to this Meeting.

The long report of the Hymn Book Committee was read and accepted to be placed on the Minutes as deferred matter till the Annual Meeting of 1892. The report provides for the publishing of a new book, adapted to the general wants of the Brotherhood, and so arranged that it may be used in connection with our present books. In case the report is adopted by the next Annual Meeting, it will then require at least one year to compile the work. Hence there are no prospects of getting the book under two years.

Another paper asked for a modification of our method of restoring deposed ministers. The Meeting declined to make the change asked for.

A paper from Southern Kansas, asking that secular business meetings on the Conference grounds be discouraged, was returned on account of its indefinite character.

Middle Pennsylvania asked whether it was in harmony with our understanding of the Scriptures for members to wear gold spectacles. The Conference laid down the broad, yet clear principle, that the wearing of gold, in any manner, as an ornament, was positively forbidden in the New Testament. A paper from Southern Illinois also asked concerning the wearing of gold, and was returned with the request to enforce and carry out what the Gospel and Annual Meeting say on that point.

Northern Illinois asked that, at love-feasts, sisters be granted the same privilege in the breaking of the bread and passing the cup that is enjoyed by the brethren. Placed on the Minutes, and deferred one year.

Michigan asked the Annual Meeting to fall back to the old way of distributing the Minutes. The Meeting declined to do so, claiming that the present method was a good one, and was giving excellent satisfaction.

Middle Indiana petitioned Annual Meeting to decide that all the State District Clerks send to the Writing Clerk of the Annual Meeting marked copies of the Minutes of their District Meetings at least two weeks before Annual Meeting, so he can have printed, on one sheet, all the queries and petitions intended for the Meeting, for the use of the delegates during the Conference. This is an important decision and will enable the delegates to better understand just what is before the Meeting.

There was also a query before the Meeting in regard to musical instruments, but the Conference declined to make any change.

A query from North-western Ohio asked for Scriptural authority for non-ordained ministers to assist in anointing. The discussion on this question was both interesting and instructive. It was finally submitted to a committee of three to critically consider and report at next Annual Meeting. The following brethren were appointed to constitute the committee: W. R. Deeter, J. B. Pence, D. C. Flory.

Western Maryland asked whether it was right to baptize a penitent man, who is in jail under the sentence of death. There was some interesting talk on this point, and while the Meeting declined to act on such a plain question, it was clearly manifest by the speeches made, that it is the duty of the church to baptize and receive into the church any person who brings forth fruits meet for repentance; that Christ came into the world to save sinners.

A query from Eastern Maryland, asking the Annual Meeting to define the difference between "disowning" and "disfellowshipping" called out a number of remarks. The meeting recognized no difference whatever.

At the request of the Second District of Virginia it was decided to pay the Tract Work one-third of the net profits arising from the Annual Meeting.

A paper, requesting that the decisions of the Annual Meeting be made advisory only called out several very strong speeches, but it was the decided opinion of the delegates and Meeting in general that the decision of 1883, Art. 4 was in keeping with our understanding of the Scriptures and the authority of the Annual Meeting, and that we need not make any change. In the decison referred to it is stated that all decisions of the Annual Meeting supported by either the "thus saith the Lord," or the spirit of the Scriptures, shall be regarded as the rule for all the churches having cases covered by the decision.

A number of other papers were considered and disposed of. The session closed at 5 P. M., having acted on nearly forty queries and petitions.

THURSDAY morning gave promise of a pleasant day for the closing of the council. Hundreds departed for their homes, still the large Tabernacle was well filled when the Standing Committee came in at 9 A. M. The meeting was opened by Bro. W. R. Deeter, using hymn 282:

"Lord, in thy presence here we meet:
May we in thee be found!
O, make the place divinely sweet,
And let thy grace abound."

The first question before the meeting was the report of the committee on name, which recommended that we continue to print and write our name "German Baptist Brethren Church." The report gave rise to an interesting discussion, in which many valuable points were brought out. The recommendation of the committee was endorsed however.

Considerable time was taken up in reading the reports of the Mission Board and Tract Work. These reports are published in both the Minutes and Report, and will be found interesting and profitable reading. The missionary work at our Annual Meeting is becoming a very important feature, and generally elicits considerable interest. The work of the Board is to be considerably enlarged, and we may therefore expect still greater results from their efforts. The field is not only widening, but better prospects are becoming more apparent, and we hope, before many years, to see our people pushing their principles into every part of the Union, and later into every part of the available world.

Nearly twenty-five papers were acted upon during this forenoon session, and the meeting closed at 12:15. We regard it as one of the best meetings we ever attended, characterized by a brotherly feeling, highly commendable indeed. A number remained to hear Bro. B. C. Moomaw's discourse in the Tabernacle at 1:30, but large numbers were seen approaching the different depots. Hastily, but reverently, they took the parting hand, not knowing that they should ever meet again. Still we hope to meet in another Annual Conference, in the Middle District of Iowa next year, as that is the place selected for the next Meeting.

We reached home Saturday at 1 P. M., finding all well, and the work in the office moving along smoothly. We are now at our post, to see what we can do to interest and instruct our readers concerning the things that pertain to our common spiritual interest.

We expect to have the Full Report ready for mailing very shortly. Our reporter tells us that it will be the most complete report of our Conference we have yet had. The speeches were more to the point, arguments generally clearly stated, and no time taken up discussing points of order.

It fell to our lot to preach in the Chapel on Sunday morning, so we took for our subject Acts 15, explained the cause and character of the council at Jerusalem, what lessons we may derive from the narrative, and also gave the audience a description of our late Conference at Hagerstown, and said considerable concerning the work and spirit of the Meeting. We preached on this subject because we were requested to do so, and we never had better attention. Some of the brethren thought that if all the ministers, who were at the Annual Meeting, on their return home, would preach a sermon on the work of the Conference, that it would not only be much appreciated, but it would greatly benefit the members in the way of strengthening their confidence in the Annual Meeting, and also increase their zeal in the missionary cause, as well as the work in their local congregations.

In the evening Bro. D. L. Miller preached his farewell sermon to the students. It was a touching discourse, causing general sadness on account of his contemplated trip to Europe, Asia and Africa. Many felt impressed with the thought, that they would probably see his face no more. The discourse will appear in the MESSENGER shortly. J. H. M.

AT MILLEDGEVILLE, ILLINOIS.

A FEW days after the last issue,—just before Annual Meeting,—went to press, we were taken across the country, a distance of nearly twenty-seven miles, for the purpose of attending the feast at Milledgeville. We wrote out this report for last week's issue, but it was unavoidably crowded out by the "Annual Meeting News." Hence we give it now.

The meeting was not largely attended, but the occasion was a very enjoyable one, and the members seemed greatly encouraged and revived in the work of the Lord. This congregation has passed through a painful trial. Their Christian integrity and strength in the faith were put to a severe test on account of some members going off with the Progressives. As most of the families in the congregation are related, this separation of religious ties between husbands and wives, parents and children and other relatives, produced a sorrow that was doubly painful. We heard not one unkind word concerning the division, but many expressions of painful regrets that such must be the course of events in a Christian congregation. The general desire seems to be that the Lord will so overrule matters as to restore all parties to their former church relations in peace and union.

We desire to suggest that our Brethren in Northern Illinois visit the members at Milledgeville as much as possible. They greatly need your assistance, and will certainly appreciate a visit from any of the members, and especially the ministers. They have set themselves earnestly to work to regain what was lost, and in their efforts should have the sympathies and prayers as well as the assistance of all the sister congregations. We can show our love for the cause, as well as our zeal for the welfare of others, by helping these weaker churches. J. H. M.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER has been spending some time on the mission field in Wisconsin. He is expected home this week.

BRO. D. L. FORNEY informs us that one has been received into the Pine Creek congregation by confession and baptism since the Annual Meeting.

ON account of other pressing duties, while at Annual Meeting, the Missionary Committee did not meet. They expect to meet sometime before July 1, and the answer to all petitions will be reported immediately thereafter.

BRO. T. T. MYERS reports one addition to the church at Philadelphia, where he is now located. He seems to be much pleased with his new field of labor, and is also greatly interested in the work. He tells us that he has good congregations, and the very best of attention paid to the Word preached.

THE address of Michael Claar is changed to Queen, Bedford Co., Pa.

THE Full Report is now in the hands of the printer, and we expect to have it ready for mailing shortly. It will probably read the best of any Report that we have yet published. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.25; twelve copies, $2.50. Send in your orders at once.

A NUMBER of ministers are expected to visit us this week; among them, brethren Daniel Vaniman, Enoch Eby and S. W. Hoover. The dedication of the College Chapel, the Commencement Exercises, the meeting of the Mission Board, and our love-feast, all coming within a few days of each other, is calculated to bring us scores of visitors to Mt. Morris, and afford many pleasant seasons and associations.

THE Independent very appropriately says that one stands astonished before the generosity of Baron De Hirsch. His munificence passes all past parallel. He now proposes to give ten or fifteen million dollars himself, and enlist other wealthy Jews with him in carrying the persecuted Jews out of Russia, and colonizing them in Australia or South America. The world will honor him. With their money some of these wealthy Jews are going to make a telling record in behalf of their race.

THE Annual Meeting was in session sixteen hours, and acted on seventy-six papers:

First day,	18 papers,	6½ hours.
Second day,	34 papers,	6½ hours.
Third day,	24 papers,	3 hours.
Total,	76 papers,	16 hours.

Making an average of twelve and one-half minutes to the paper. When we take into consideration that four hours were spent on one paper, and that the other seventy-five papers were acted on inside of twelve hours, it will be readily seen that no time was wasted. About twenty papers were either returned or tabled.

MEN whose conversion is genuine, will not be all their life-time producing a little good fruit. Where there is more evil than good, you may know that the heart is unchanged, and hence no conversion. If people would now and then sample their own fruit, they would know more about their condition. Buying at his own measure would startle many a man who thinks he is converted. The thirty-five inch yard stick and scant bushel of wheat would bring many a man to his senses if he would pause and look at them. The day of reckoning is coming when we must look at them. We are quick in condemning these things in others, why not in ourselves? It is because our conversion is not genuine. Let a man examine himself.

THERE is no small amount of complaining upon the part of both the religious and secular press concerning the ungodly things that are creeping into many of the popular places of worship. In an article in the Christian Standard we have the following sensible remarks: "The abandonment of the whole praise service to hired performers is perhaps the greatest reproach to the church in this matter. * * * Could a choir, composed wholly of infidels, beer drinkers, scoffers, unconverted Jews, variety actors, comic opera singers, or other irreligious characters, perform acceptable service in a Christian congregation? Such pretended worship is rendered in more than one church in this land to-day. And even if such hired psalmodists are clean men and women, can their service be fitly regarded as praise to God?"

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8. 12

"IT is said that for what it costs to fire one shot from one of our largest cannon, a missionary and his family can be supported over two years in Japan. Would we not better spike the cannon and send the Gospel abroad?"

M. BEAULIEU, a French writer, in an able article on the condition of the Jews, attempts to give an estimate of their numbers. While it is not possible to give exact statistics, he believes that the aggregate will reach eight or nine millions, of whom from seven to eight millions are in Europe. Russia has at least four, and possibly six millions; Austro-Hungary has 1,650,000 and Germany, 600,000. England has 100,000, France, 80,000, Holland, 80,000, Italy, 50,000, all the European States numbers more or less great, but in the Balkan States there are about half a million. America has about the same number, and it is hard to find a country where the Jew has not penetrated. Indeed, there is no other race so cosmopolitan. There are supposed to be about 200,000 in Asia, the old home of the race.

DO NOT.—The following from an exchange is to the point, and we give it for the benefit of our ministers: "Do not preach your own doubts or the doubts of others. Your people have doubts enough of their own, and can always pick up more. Do not preach science—not even the science of theology. Your pulpit is not a lecture-platform, nor your church a class-room. Do not try to be some one else. There is only one person worth imitating; and the way to imitate is by living in him. Do not substitute gush for good sense, rhapsody for reason, and asseveration for argument. The Americans are a strong people and they need a meat diet. Do not mistake noise in a sermon for eloquence, or noise in a prayer for devotion. Do not try to save the Truth; the truth can take care of itself. Save men."

THE Sacramento, California, News speaks of the War Problem as follows: "When a six-pounder gun can, as is claimed, throw a projectile of that weight at least five miles, which projectile can then pierce a six-inch armored steel plate, without being itself flattened, and when torpedo boats can destroy any armored vessel now, or ever likely to be, afloat, what is the use of throwing money away over expensive navies?" asks the San Francisco Star. "Better cultivate the arts of peace by destroying poverty, and make every nation supreme within its own borders, thus removing every pretext for war. It is infinitely cheaper to kill poverty, by opening the gifts of nature to all, than to kill men by perverting blessings to curses, through the manufacture of instruments of war. Kill poverty, and then men could scarcely be hired to kill each other."

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.—The responsibility of carrying on the Lord's work in the world and of giving regularly and according to ability is resting upon Christians as never before. All religious enterprises are feeling the impulse of the increased interest and support. There are significant indications of the spread of the spirit of giving to the Lord. There are many thousands of Christians throughout the country who are receiving the blessings promised to those who bring all the tithes into the storehouse of the Lord, and the number is growing of those who share in the mysterious prosperity mentioned in Prov. 11: 24: "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth." Let those who have tried the other part of the verse, "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, and it tendeth to poverty," now try and see if the promises of God to those who give liberally are worth anything. If they will accept the testimony of those who have tried them, they must believe that they are sure to all them that trust in him.—Baptist Missionary Magazine.

AWAKE THOU THAT SLEEPEST.

BY L. ANDES.

WE want to call the attention of our dear brethren and sisters to the article, "Our Resources and our Field," as given by Bro. S. P. Weaver, on page 203 of GOSPEL MESSENGER.

Is it not startling, and should it not fill our very hearts and souls with awe? Surely, can we not put forth greater efforts to become awakened to a sense of the duties that we owe to our Master,—Christ,—and to the souls of men?

Two things manifest themselves among us, viz.: either we are willing to say that men and women will be saved in any church of whatever sort, or, if we are not willing to acknowledge that, we must acknowledge that we are wofully indifferent concerning the welfare of the souls of men. Should we not awaken and go to work?

Look at our church census as found in MESSENGER of April 21, page 249, copied from the Governmental statistics. Is it not enough to send a chill through our very beings? Think! Only one person a member of the Brethren church to nine hundred and ninety-nine outside of it,—not of the population of Africa or China, but of these United States of America,—a land of liberty and Bibles! Think of it, that our church has been in this country now for about one hundred and seventy years, and yet it only numbers as many thousands as the country's population numbers millions.

Just now we think of a church organization, only about ninety years old, which already numbers nearly one hundred thousand members. This shows what the proper zeal and effort may accomplish.

Brethren, it requires work, zeal, effort, diligence, perseverance, prayer, watching, and what else? Why, more consecration of ourselves and all we have unto the Lord. We must not have our hearts and minds engaged so much with the transitory things of this life only. When we come together let us talk about the best methods of saving souls, and enlarging Christ's kingdom on earth, rather than spend most of our time in discoursing upon the subject of "hard times," the crops, the prices of grain, etc.

Let us all awake to a sense of our duty, and then go to work to do it, before it is forever too late!

THE GIFT OF GOD TO BE STIRRED UP.—2 Tim. 1: 6.

BY LANDON WEST.

WHILE so many of the brethren and sisters are going to and enjoying their attendance at the Annual Meeting at Hagerstown, Md., this morning, June 1, 1891, I sit to read the words written by Paul to Timothy, and given from his prison at Rome just before being brought before Nero the second time.

While every word and thought is impressive, in this farewell address, I find some that are new to me this morning, and that impress my mind not a little. Among these I name that found in the sixth verse of the second letter and which I have given for the heading of my essay: "The Stirring up of our Gifts." It is plain and easy for all of us to obey, and the intimation is that God has imparted to each one of his servants a gift, to be used by that servant in glorifying the name of God, and that the gift, whatever it may be, cannot and will not glorify the Father's name unless stirred up,—put into active service, and there kept in service, so long as we can live and use it. The thought is presented that the gift is subject to the control and use of the one receiving it, that without being stirred up and used it will produce no fruit, hence not glorify God's name, and that this gift and the neglect to use it is to be accounted for by the slothful servant, whenever the Lord shall come. The awful result of the neglect of this privilege and duty is fearfully described, by our Savior, in the parable of the talents. See Matt. 25: 14, 30; Luke 19: 20, 26.

But what is the gift we have received and which each and all of us should keep stirred up, and must keep stirred, to be not slothful servants? My answer is, It is love. John says, "Love is of God," and "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." 1 John 4: 7, 16.

The gift of love is imparted to us, is given to us. It is a gift to us. God first loved us and we learn to love him. Jesus loved all men and died for all, 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15, and now men hear of his love and his death for them, and they learn to love him. They believe on him and obey him. They are baptized into his death, and hands are laid on them and prayer is made for them that the Spirit of God may come on them and in them.

The first and greatest gift of the Spirit of God is love. Paul says the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, etc., Gal. 5: 22, but love is the fruit, and what he names after love is what is tasted of the fruit. What we and others realize from love and by loving others, and above all by loving God, gives joy, peace, etc.

When we see and feel that God loves us, and see, too, that we love Jesus by keeping his commandments, then we feel joy, we have peace, and the more we keep this gift of God's spirit stirred up, the more will we taste of love to God and love to man.

This gift we all have. If a man did not love God, he would not hear his Word, would not believe on his Son, would not repent, nor be baptized into his death, hence would never come into the church. But love brings him, and now, when he comes in, love is the element intended to rule him, to lead him, and to fill him, in word and deed. But it cannot do this unless it is stirred up, time and again. Remember, the leaven was only a small lump in the three measures of meal and it went to work until the leaven was as large a bulk as the meal. It was all leaven. So it is with the gift of God that is to be stirred up. The gift is not as large as the man or woman who receives it; it is only a pound, Luke 19, but if it is kept stirred up, as it should be, it will finally be as large as the man, its vessel. He will be filled with it, and this is the commandment. Eph. 5: 18.

Remember, too, that this gift and its fruit is an abiding principle. They are eternal. "Now abideth faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is love." "Love never faileth." 1 Cor. 13: 8, 13. This is to make the man eternal, for he is filled with an eternal principle. And this is why our Savior says: "He that eateth of this bread shall live forever." John 6: 58. And again, "Whosoever liveth and abideth in me shall never die." John 11: 26.

But how are we to keep it growing? By stirring it. Have you not seen the baker or the cook stir the leaven? And why was it done? It was done to insure its working and to hasten the movement. So it is, my brethren and sisters, if you want to stir up the gift of love, that was prayed for when you was yet in the water, on the day of your new birth and baptism,—you must go to spreading some of the love God has given you, amongst others. Tell what Jesus did for you, and for all men, and show, too, that you love God, our Heavenly Father, for his great love to all men. Show also that you love Jesus and want to keep his commandments. Show your love for others by feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and doing good unto all men.

When you stir this gift of love, in showing your love to God, to his Son, and to your fellowman, you will soon find that, instead of losing the heat, you are all the while being warmed up. You will find, too, that the more you give, the more you have; the more you show of it, the more others will feel and you will feel. Remember, it is the stirring of the fire that makes it burn, and the more blaze, the more heat and the wider it goes. So it is with the gift of love. If not stirred, it will die, but to stir it is to increase it, to give more heat and a larger, brighter blaze, and is to keep alive forever. The slothful servant did not use his talent because he did not love his master, hence his love was not increased, and that which he did receive as a gift was taken away from him. So, to keep our gifts and talents of which God has bestowed so many upon us, we must use them, and that is to stir them.

THEN AND NOW.

THE world is bad enough, but there was a time, not many generations ago when religion in the country was at an extremely low ebb. Looking at the condition of Christianity then and now gives room for still more hope in the future, as the following will certainly show: "In 1816, the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in a pastoral address, deplored the prevalence of Arian and Socinian sentiments in their denomination. Heterodox faith and immoral living were joined hand to hand. Intemperance prevailed to an alarming extent. To become stupidly intoxicated did not seriously injure a man's reputation nor interfere with his influence. The decanter was in every home—on every side-board. Neither total abstinence nor prohibition had been thought of. Temperance sermons were not preached. In the presence of this great evil the pulpit was dumb. Members of Christian churches, in good standing and full membership, drank to intoxication without seriously compromising their religious reputation among their brethren and neighbors. The highest church officials often drank intoxicants immoderately. Everybody drank more or less. They drank on all occasions. The doctor could not visit a patient without being offered a stimulant. At marriages, at births, at funerals, drinking was indulged in. When friends died, mourners stifled their grief with liberal potations. A New York pastor, as late as 1820, has left on record the statement that it was difficult to make pastoral visits for a day without becoming drunk. Lyman Beecher gives an account of an ordination in which the participating ministers drank until they were in a state bordering on intoxication. He was so disgusted with their conduct that he took an oath before God never again to attend an ordination of that kind. One man—his testimony is quoted by Dr. Dorchester—said that he could reckon up among his acquaintances forty ministers who were either drunkards, or so far addicted to drink that their usefulness was impaired. He says that he was present at an ordination at which two aged ministers of the Gospel were literally drunk. Another testifies that a great many deacons in New England died drunkards. He said that he had a list of one hundred and twenty-three intemperate deacons of Christian churches in Massachusetts alone, forty-three of whom became sots. But this means much more than an habitual use of spirituous liquors—sometimes to excess; it means the general demoralization and impoverishment of men. A party flourished in Orange County, New York, in the early part of the present century, organized for the express and avowed purpose of destroying, not only civil government, but the Christian religion, with all that such a determination implies.

"The Rev. Peter Cartwright in his autobiography gives a dark picture of the moral condition of the portion of Kentucky in which his childhood and youth were spent. He was born in 1785 and died 1872. He tells us that the state of society in Southern Kentucky was desperate. The most abandoned and ferocious lawlessness prevailed. Refugees from justice, murderers, horse-thieves, highway robbers and counterfeiters, actually formed at one time a majority in the portion of Kentucky of which he spoke. Before the coming in of the nineteenth century, a majority of the citizens of Kentucky were infidels, and the almost certain concomitants of vice and dissipation were not wanting. At one time, such was the disregard for religion in Kentucky that the Legislature of the State dispensed with the services of a chaplain."

WE are still doing what little we can for the Good Lord, holding meetings regularly every Lord's Day, with fair congregations and fair interest. Though we have not many conversions, yet a few drop in occasionally. Two,—a middle-aged man and his wife,—were baptized at our council-meeting, May 18.

Our love-feast passed off very pleasantly, May 26. In the morning we were threatened with rain, but it soon cleared up, and we had a beautiful day. People came pouring in by every road, and by every conceivable way, so that by 10 o'clock we had a very fair congregation indeed. The ministerial help was ample. Besides the ministers from the adjoining churches, Bro. D. S. Caylor, of Somerset, Ind., and Bro. Joseph Shepler, of Peru, Ind., were with us. In the afternoon we were very pleasantly surprised to have Bro. Landon West, of Ohio, drop in among us. This was quite a treat to as, as Bro. West had not been here for sometime. We met again at about 4:30 P. M. for examination services. When we found that all the members could not be seated at the tables that had been prepared, more tables were added but even then there was scarcely room for all.

Many members came from adjoining congregations. This is just as it should be, and added much to our enjoyment. Upon the whole we think we had one of the very best feasts that we ever did have. Much love and union seem to pervade the entire congregation. We were very much crowded. Many spectators could not get even near the door, and this may account for some of the confusion outside of the house. The best of order prevailed, however, in the house. The ministers present gave us good Scriptural talks on the different subjects as they came up.

Next morning we met again for morning worship and breakfast. After breakfast each of the brethren gave us a farewell address. These were highly appreciated by all of us. May God help us to so live, that we may all meet around God's throne, never to part again, where we shall have no more sorrow, no more pain, no more sad farewells,—where we will be permitted to meet with loved ones gone before, and above all with the Blessed Lamb of God and the holy angels.

Lincoln, Nebr., June 1.

From the Prairie Creek Church, Wells Co., Ind.

THE members of the above-named church are in love and union, zealous and earnestly contending for the faith that was once delivered. We have a good, live Sunday-school with sisters Rachel Minniear and sister Martha Huffman as Superintendents, and a good corps of officers and teachers.

We have regular services at the Sugar Grove house every second and fourth Sunday; also a weekly prayer-meeting, where we can hear our our brethren and sisters tell of the goodness of God. Here the aged father of three score and ten, and also the lambs of the fold, ten to fourteen years of age may take part to profit. May God bless the lambs of the fold!

On Sunday, May 3, after Sunday-school, we were called upon to administer baptism to a young lady, one of our scholars; also yesterday, May 31, two more came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. May they adorn their profession with good works, and live faithful to the end, is our prayer!

We are sorry to chronicle the death of our aged and beloved sister Minnich, wife of brother Michael Minnich, who passed away May 25 of that dreaded disease, consumption. We trust that our loss is her eternal gain. Funeral sermon by Eld. G. W. Sala, assisted by the writer.

To John and Rebecca Knisley.

Beloved Fellow-Pilgrims, and Heirs of Eternal Life:—

YOUR beautiful Christian letter is here. It made me glad to know that the home of your hearts is in the love, and worship, and service of God. This is what man was made for, and to miss this is to be miserable. He that lives in the blessed secret of Philpp. 4: 6, 7, 19, has a foretaste of Heaven on earth. God has made ample provision for our justification from all past liabilities, and our emancipation from all dominant unrighteousness, and the complete subjugation of all indwelling corruption. The whole Gospel is full of the divine asseveration, directly or by implication that the perfect atonement, made by Christ on earth, is also to be experienced on earth through the ministry of the Holy Ghost.

God in Christ has undertaken to be our Savior, and if we allow Him to have His own way with us and in us, the work will be done in such a manner that "He will not be ashamed to be called our God." Heb. 11: 16.

Parents do not like to see cripples, and dwarfs, and idiots, and Ishmaels in their families. Physical symmetry, and intellectual power, and moral integrity is the glory of a household. So in the family of the Everlasting Father. He begets in His own likeness, develops by His own Spirit, and perfects His offspring in the beauty of Holiness. Emmanuel is the Model for all the rest. "As He is so are we in this world." 1 John 4: 17.

In the Upper Realm, when we stand in His Presence, the Beatific Vision will stamp and stereotype the soul with the last and highest glory of Divinity. 1 John 3: 2, and Philpp. 3: 21. Great things has God in reserve for His Elect; and Elect are all who want to be. When we give God opportunity He will reconstruct our shattered, defiled, devil-plagued humanity into the very Facsimile of Deific purity and glory. So great, so marvellous, so overpowering is the announcement of the Divine intentions, that, like Thomas, we are determined not to believe without tangible evidence. Jesus is co-equal with God, and we are to be joint-heirs with Jesus, behold his glory, and share it. Philpp. 2: 6; Rom. 8: 17; John 17: 22, 24.

God has spoken it, and will not reverse it. A "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" waits for every true believer in Jesus. And only those are believers who "live by Him," and walk even as he walked." John 6: 57; 1 John 2: 6. To believe is to live, to live is to work, and "all of God." To work for acceptance is to reject the Cross with all its implications and issues. And not to work is to advertise our unbelief and lack of justification. Christ has "finished his work," and that is to clear out of the sinner's way every judicial impediment to justification. Now we can approach as penitent criminals, with all our ill-desert and self-condemnation, and receive as a gift by faith, all that the God-man has secured for us by his vicarious sufferings. That brings life, even the Life of God, and out of that life springs all acceptable obedience. The obedience is the result and not the ground of acceptance. That Faith-life has in it the Love, and Power, and Righteousness, and Holiness, and Peace, and Joy of the Ever Blessed God." Ah, my dearly beloved in the Lord, such a Gospel is worth preaching, worth accepting, worth living. "It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. 1: 16. "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift." 2 Cor. 9: 15.

The word "fear" is often found in the Bible in connection with the Christian Life, and yet perfect love casteth out fear." The law begets a "fear that hath torment," while the Gospel generates a fear that is the very essence of Love, and the security of Holiness. The fear of guilt is the foreflashing of the pit, while the awe and deference of "the assurance of faith" is the sweetness of the soul's wedlock with the Eternal Bridegroom. Love gives boldness on earth and at the final judgment; but it is the reverential boldness of humility and gratitude. A believing soul is a saved soul, and a saved soul must needs break out in the hosannas of a blessed consciousness and uplifted anticipation, and occupy its consecrated powers "in labors more abundant." Cling to your anchor, "CHRIST in you the hope of glory."

He died for you, he intercedes for you, all that he is and has he will share with you forever.

With what music, with what measure,
Saints below and saints above!
Will ye sing the sacred treasure,
In this paradox of Love?
Paradox of Love Eternal,
Paradox of Love Divine,
Oh! what power of thought Supernal
Shall explore so rich a mine?

The Annual Meeting.

THE newspapers of Hagerstown, and other cities, had much to say of our late Conference. The following we clip from The Globe, published at Hagerstown, Md.

"Saturday afternoon crowds of German Baptist Brethren and visitors from every section of the United States arrived on every incoming train. Soon our streets presented an active appearance as the streams of people constantly poured down our thoroughfares on their way to the Conference grounds, private residences or hotels. Many people are taking advantage of the low rates offered to visit friends in the city and County from distant western points. The arrivals over the various railroads centering in the city on Saturday were: Cumberland Valley, 1,200; Norfolk and Western, 800; Baltimore and Ohio, 1,370; Western Maryland, 500; making a total of 3,870 arriving over the railroads alone.

The efficacy of the liberal advertising that was done by the various railroad companies was proven in the assemblage of the thousands of people who filled the Conference Grounds yesterday from early morning until late in the evening, who crowded the incoming and departing trains, thronged the numerous pikes and roadways centering in this city, lined the sidewalks, crowded the hotels and boarding houses, filled our homes, enjoyed our hospitality, admired our city, attended our churches, or gave up their thoughts and leisure to secular matters. It is estimated from conservative figures that there were at least fifteen thousand of such within the gates of Hagerstown yesterday, drawn through curiosity in many instances and in many more through a desire to participate in the devotion of the Brethren on the Conference Grounds.

The best of order prevailed and the management commended the officers in charge for their prudence and influence, stating that at no previous Annual Meeting had there been a more strict observance of their wishes. The quiet manners of the Dunkards seem to be contagious, and nothing is done to mar or interfere with the exercises in which these people are so earnestly engaged.

The 'Hamilton' showed seven pages of names on its register; the 'Baldwin,' nine; 'Franklin,' seven; 'Central,' two; 'Hoover,' four. Besides the great number of other hotels and private boarding houses, all the hotels sold meal tickets and not more than half of their guests registered. The Seminary is filled to its utmost capacity, over 700 persons being lodged there. The engagements which were made by the committee in soliciting lodging from private houses, were all filled.

The arrivals by rail on Sunday were: Baltimore and Ohio, 1,400; Western Maryland, 2,488; Cumberland Valley, 1,200; Norfolk and Western, 300; total 5,388. Owing to the wreck on the Norfolk and Western, no trains were run on that road yesterday, with the exception of six cars from St. Louis via Chesapeake and Ohio and connecting with the Norfolk and Western at Basic City. The Western Maryland brought the greatest number, principally from over the Baltimore and Cumberland Valley and the Gettysburg branches. The trains on these roads were so crowded they came through direct, leaving crowds of passengers standing at the depots of intermediate stations, unable to haul them.

At 11 o'clock conservative estimates placed the attendance on the grounds at 13,000. An enterprising young man from an elevated position counted 4,942 assembled in the Tabernacle during preaching in the morning. At the 3 o'clock afternoon services fully 6,000 people were jammed into the Tabernacle.

All parts of the United States are represented at the meeting, the credentials of upward of two hundred delegates having already been passed upon and accepted. Messrs. E. W. Stoner, of Union Bridge, Md.; D. E. Price, Mt. Morris, Ill.; and Daniel Hays, Moore's Store, Va., constitute the committee on credentials."

A Voice from the Far West.

AFTER receiving several letters of invitation from brethren, scattered around in the North in the Spokane country, wife and I left Moscow May 1, on an extended tour among the members, to give them such encouragement as we were able to give.

Our first stop was at Tekoa, where we found four members. Here we had one week's meetings, in the Congregational meeting-house. Our next point was Waverly, where we found eight members. We had one week's meeting at this point in the Congregational house, and closed with, seemingly, a good interest. From here a brother took us across the country to the County Poor House. Bro. Dawson is the Superintendent of the Institution, and we were very kindly entertained here over night by our brother and his kind companion. Everything here presented a very clean and inviting appearance. We certainly think that Bro. Dawson and wife are the right persons in the right place.

Our next point was Spokane and Mondovi. As we had about four hours lay-over at Spokane, we took a stroll about the city. We were made to wonder what there was there to cause people to build up such a wonderful city. The surrounding country is rocky and rough. We had a good sight of the wonderful Falls which are a grand sight indeed.

At Mondovi we were met by Bro. Samuel Forney, a son of Bro. John Forney, of Kansas. We remained here one week and preached the funeral of his son, a young man of promise, who died last fall with typhoid fever. Five others of the same family were down at the same time with the same disease. The congregation was very large. All seemed to sympathize with the afflicted family.

We closed our labors at this point with seemingly an excellent interest. We had many invitations to continue and come again. There are only two members at this place.

Our next point was Medical Lake, where there are two members. Here we had two meetings with good interest. The waters of the Lake have strong medical properties and many invalids resort here, to bathe in its healing waters.

During our visit with the dear Brethren they received us every-where with tears and a hearty welcome. None can realize the fellowship and company of the Brethren like those dear isolated ones, scattered through this western country, who have no church privileges, and have not heard a brother preach for a year or more. Perhaps none can realize the magnitude of the mission work in this vast Western country until he is here and knows of the urgent calls to come and give us the Bread of Life. Calls come from North and South, East and West, "Come and help us!" I don't know how to describe the condition of things at this place any better than to compare it to a five hundred acre field of corn, with only a ten-year-old boy to cultivate it. Certainly the weeds will grow, under such circumstances. May the Lord open the hearts of the Brethren to contribute freely to the noble mission work, that the great want may be measurably supplied at least. We want men sound in the faith,—men that can stand alone. There are plenty of men who can stand when surrounded with Brethren to hold up their hands, but, to be a successful missionary, he must be able to face opposition. He must be able to stand alone, and yet not alone, but relying on the promise, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." SIDNEY HODGDEN.

Our love-feast, held May 21, was largely attended and much enjoyed by our membership. Eld. Daniel Vaniman, of McPherson, Kansas, led in the services, with remarks very appropriate to each part of the services. He was ably assisted by brethren D. Kimmel, of Kansas, Isaac Cripe and A. L. Culp, of Indiana, also T. Krider, J. Smith, J. Horning, Silas Gilbert, Levi Bookwalter, A. Brubaker, F. Cotterman, of the adjoining congregations.

I was somewhat unfortunate in making my report of the District Meeting of Southern Ohio, as a copy of the Minutes, as published by our efficient and prudent clerk, proves. My notes of the meeting are correct, but relying on my memory I got some things wrong and thus misrepresented the sentiment of the District. I beg pardon for my carelessness and mistakes.

My report in No. 19 makes the sum for the Home Mission about thirty-five dollars too high. It also says, "The Meeting decided it to be inconsistent to install brethren into office who use tobacco," instead of "who raise tobacco." Further "discouraged members in assisting to open and conduct Sunday-schools of other denominations;" instead of "recommending the kneeling posture in prayer on all such occasions, and did not forbid praying every-where." Having given the report of our District Conference for twenty years, I feel it proper to make these corrections.

The Old Order Brethren held their Annual Meeting on Pentecost week, near Trotwood, about six miles from Dayton. This is the fifth Conference held in the Miami Valley since their withdrawal from the Brotherhood in the fall of 1881.

They had a nice place for the meeting, had made ample preparations for it, and with courtesy, fed free, all who would partake of their hospitality. They had preaching on Sunday and Monday, with Communion on Sunday evening. Their council was held on Tuesday, with H. D. Davy, Foreman; A. Frantz, Reading Clerk; Samuel Murry, Writing Clerk. Some four queries were before the council which were answered by as many sub-committees. These queries and answers were handed in, and the public council began.

Query 1 decided that members should take no part on either side in petitioning for gravel roads, etc.

Query 2 says: "Members should not put up boards, 'No Hunting,' etc."

Query 4 is unintelligible.

Query 4 is concerning dehorning cattle. This caused considerable talk. The sub-committee decided that it came under the head of cruelty to animals, but the herders from the West, and others, claimed it was on the side of mercy to dehorn cattle, as it made them docile, etc. They then split the difference and tabled it.

Query 5 brought out some consultation about their German Hymn Book.

Our Brethren attended the meeting largely. On Council day careful estimate gave us quite a majority.

Wayside Notes.

May 15, in company with wife, little son, Eld. Abe Molsbee, brethren Joe Brubaker, Philip Eby, and sisters Mollie and Dora Brubaker, we started for a drive of nearly fifty miles to attend the feast with the brethren and sisters of the Pleasant Valley congregation, Clay Co., Texas, May 16. The meeting will long be remembered. Thirty brethren and sisters surrounded the tables, ranging in age from about twelve to upwards of eighty years. Two dear sisters were not present on account of sickness. May the Lord comfort them in their affliction!

Saturday May 30, the members of the Nocona church met in council to set the time for the first District Meeting of Texas, Oklahoma and Southern Indian Territory, which will be held, the Lord willing, Aug. 6, at 9 A. M. The love-feast will be held May 8. A Ministerial Meeting will be held in connection with said Meetings. A good representation is desired. Any brethren or sisters, visiting Texas, are cordially invited to make it a point to be with us during these meetings.

While in council on Saturday, we also organized a Sunday-school, to be held in a brush arbor (as we have no meeting-house), where the above meetings are to be held. One more was also added to our number by letter.

We have had an over-abundance of rain this spring. Crops are a little late. Wheat is good and harvest will begin in a few days. Oats, also, is promising a good harvest; corn also looks well for the late start it got.

While penning these few thoughts my mind is carried, with a longing desire, to be with the many brethren and sisters that are assembled at Hagerstown, Md. Our prayer is, that the Lord may so overrule the Meeting, that all that is done, may be to his honor and glory! A. J. WINE.

Nocona, Tex., June 2, 1891.

From Williamsburg, Pa.

On the evening of May 16, we met once more in a love-feast capacity. That enjoyable occasion is now past, but will not soon be forgotten. In spiritual food and enjoyment it was rich indeed. The number that communed was not so large, but the promise of the Savior is even to the two or three that are gathered together in his name. Bro. John Snowberger and wife, from Colorado, were present with us. Bro. John gave us much good instruction while with us. On Sunday morning Bro. Snowberger addressed the Sunday-school, after which the truths of the Gospel were held forth by brethren J. Koontz and Wm. Ritchy. Bro. Snowberger preached for us in the evening. His last words shall not soon be forgotten: "Is our name written in the Lamb's Book of Life?" May the Lord bless our dear brother and sister in their good work! MILA STRALEY.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Pleasant Council.—The Wyandot church met in council May 9. A good deal of business came before the meeting, but all went away, I think, stronger in the faith of the Lord than when we went there. The church elected the writer as correspondent. Our elder, S. M. Loose, was with us at our late council. Our love-feast will occur Oct. 17.—Alverly Buxton, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Impressive Meetings. — Bro. A. Hutchison came to us on May 23, and preached six very able sermons. Many were quite interested in the meetings and wanted our brother to stay longer, but he had to close in order to attend Annual Meeting. There were no accessions, but many good impressions were made. Even the faith of some of the Mormons was shaken. We pray that the seed sown may bring forth much fruit. Bro. Hutchison ought to be kept constantly in the field by the Missionary Committee. He is the man for frontier work. —Andrew Chambers, Glen Easton, W. Va., June 3.

Quarterly Meeting.—We the Golden Springs church, Nebr., met in quarterly council May 30. Much business came before the meeting, but the Lord helping us it was disposed of in a Christian manner. Our elder, G. W. Stambaugh, was with us, who installed Bro. John Bare into the ministry, and brethren Chas. Himler and G. Bare into the office of deacon. We are now in a prosperous condition, and ask an interest in your prayers, that we may continue so to be. May the Lord bless us all, is our prayer! We organized a Sunday-school April 25. The Superintendents are brethren John Bare and Caleb Light. There is good attendance and great interest.—J. C. Himler, June 6.

MINISTER ELECTED.—In my notice of our Communion meeting, I forgot to say that we held an election for a speaker. The lot fell on our worthy brother, Jacob Reichard. May he, though young in years, take hold of the work willingly, and serve the church to the best of his ability! —Sarah Spanogle, Lewistown, Pa., June 1.

MINISTERS AND DEACONS ELECTED. —Our quarterly council for Lower Bedford County, Va., occurred May 23, 1891. It was deemed necessary to call a minister and two deacons to aid in the work here. Bro. J. C. Beahm was chosen as our minister, and Wm. E. Beahm and Henry N. Hershberger as deacons. Pray for them, Brethren, that they may prove faithful in their calling! The church in Bedford is in a healthy condition, and we are hoping for a bright future.—J. A. B. Hershberger, Bedford City, Va., May 25.

QUARTERLY COUNCIL.—The members of the Ludlow church, Darke Co., Ohio, held their quarterly council-meeting May 16, at the Pittsburgh house. The usual amount of business was transacted. Among other things it was decided to organize, for the first time, a Sunday-school in the Painter Creek house. Bro. John Neher was elected Superintendent, Bro. Abraham Minnich, Assistant. Bro. A. Hutchison, of Kansas, attended the meeting, and remained during the following week, holding seven excellent meetings.—C. E. Culp.

PLEASANT COUNCIL.—The brethren and sisters of the Centre View congregation met May 21 to work in the vineyard of the Lord. All business passed off pleasantly. We had hearty exhortations by the brethren, to cling nearer the cross and live higher and nobler lives, that others may see that there is no salvation unless we walk as the Savior directs. There was a collection taken for the mission cause by the solicitors, and liberal contributions were given. Thus this church is working on, striving to win the prize that is promised at the end of the race to the faithful in Christ! — Amanda Wilmore, Centre View, Mo., June 2.

MINISTERIAL AID DESIRED. — We are having pleasant weather at present, and having been blessed by a good rain, how thankful we should all be! Our crops look well at present. We have more calls to hold meetings than our ministers can attend to. People come from a distance of thirty miles to see if our brethren can not come to hold meetings for them. If any of our ministers are going through Wallace on their way home from the Annual Meeting they will please stop. We will meet any one if notified in time, and will make the necessary arrangements for a meeting. Any one wishing to stop will be met at the train by notifying either J. K. Shively, or Allen Cripe. —Wallace, Lincoln Co., Nebr.

INTERESTING MEETINGS. May 20 Bro. Isaac Billheimer came to West Lebanon, Warren Co., Ind., and commenced a series of meetings which he continued until Saturday, the day of our love-feast. This occasion was indeed a feast of love. The meeting was conducted by brethren I. Billheimer and J. E. Frederick. The services were enjoyed by all that were present. The house was crowded to the utmost, and many could not gain admittance. There was fair order for so crowded a house. The members of the church seem to be in harmony with each other. May the Lord bless this little flock that they may hold out faithful until the end, is my prayer!—Mrs. Mary C. Parrish.

TEN ACCESSIONS. – Bro. Michael Claar came to us May 16, and held meetings for us until the 31st. He preached the Word in its purity and with power. May 23 two persons were baptized, and on the same evening we held one of the most enjoyable love-feasts ever held here. About seventy-five brethren and sisters were seated around the tables of the Lord. May 30 we were all made to rejoice when seven more precious souls were added to the church by baptism. Three of them were Sunday-school scholars. May 31 one more came out on the Lord's side, making ten additions so far, as a result of our meetings. The meetings closed with much interest. May the Lord be with those lambs of the fold until death, is our prayer!—S. R. Albright, Roaring Spring church, Pa.

MATRIMONIAL.

"What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

ROTHROCK.—At Davenport, Nebr., May 26, 1891, of whooping cough and measles, Galen Forney Rothrock, aged 1 year, 3 months and 29 days.

Deceased was a son of E. L. and Susan Rothrock. Funeral services were improved by the Brethren. D. H. FORNEY.

KLEPINGER.—In the Lower Stillwater church, Montgomery Co., Ohio, May 22, 1891, Ethel May, only child of brother Perry and sister Susie Klepinger, aged 2 months and 13 days.

Little Ethel's short life was one of sickness. After two months of intense suffering her pure spirit took its flight, to join the angelic band in the spirit world. All was done that could be done, by the hands of a loving father and mother, but the Lord saw fit to remove the tender bud from earth, to transplant it in heaven, there to bloom forever.

The family circle is broken, her place is vacant, but we know she is in the arms of Jesus.

Funeral services by Eld. John Smith, assisted by Bro. L. A. Bookwalter, to a large congregation. MARY C. WENGER.

SHELLER.—In Lanark, Ill., May 28, 1891, Bro. Samuel Sheller, aged 73 years, 4 months and 26 days.

Deceased was a member of the Brethren church for many years, and after a tedious and, at times, severe sickness has been called "up higher." M. M. SHERRICK.

ROYER.—In the Naperville church, DuPage Co., Ill., April 27, 1891, Carrie Odell Royer, daughter of friend Miles and Tillie Royer, aged 8 years, 5 months and 5 days. SIMON E. YUNDT.

BEAHM.—Near Lowry, Bedford Co., Va., May 14, 1891, sister Annie E. Beahm, aged 58 years, 1 month and 3 days.

Deceased was a daughter of Peter and Fannie Showalter, of Rockingham County, Va., and the wife of Eld. H. A. Beahm, who moved to Bedford County fifteen years ago. She was the mother of fourteen children, three having preceded her in infancy. Sister Beahm had the pleasure of seeing them all but the youngest (only eleven years old) come into the church of the Brethren, of which she had been a faithful member for nearly forty years.

Sister Beahm called for the elders when affliction came to her and was anointed. She was a help to her husband in his ministerial duties. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a faithful Christian, beloved by all who knew her.

The bereaved family have the sympathies of the church and entire community. She had all that ready hands and willing hearts could do during her illness, but all was unavailing.

Funeral services by Eld. Samuel Crumpacker. I. A. B. HERSHBERGER.

MILLER.—In the Dunning's Creek church, Bedford Co., Pa., April 2, 1891, sister Rachel Miller, aged 37 years and 22 days.

Rachel Miller was born March 11, 1854. She was the daughter of Jesse K. and Catharine Smith. She was married to Michael S. Miller, Jan. 18, 1877. They connected themselves with the Brethren church, August, 1878, and Bro. Miller was called to the deacon's office June 23, 1889. She leaves a husband, a mother, two brothers and three sisters. Her father preceded her ten months, as did also her only son seven years of age, and also two sisters. She was a kind, loving and affectionate wife and a good counsellor. She was a reader of the MESSENGER from its infancy. During her affliction she read the Old and New Testaments from beginning to end, together with many other good books and papers. She complied with the teaching of the Apostle James in calling for the elders of the church and being anointed. She expressed herself as having no fears for the future, and greatly enjoyed the seasons of devotion that were held at her home.

All that kind hearts and hands could do was done to relieve her during her long suffering. Funeral services were held by brethren J. B. Miller and Levi Rogers from John 5: 25, 28, 29. MICHAEL S. MILLER.

HORNISH.—In the Poplar Ridge church, Defiance County, Ohio, May 17, 1891, Cora Viola Hornish, aged 27 years, 7 months and 15 days.

The subject of this notice was an influential young sister in the Brethren church. She was called away early from the stage of action, and from a family of four children and a dear companion. We have the assurance that she made her calling and election sure. May her dear companion accept of the offers of mercy, and prepare to meet the loved ones who have gone before.

Funeral occasion improved by the writer to a large concourse of sympathizing friends, assisted by Simon Long. GEORGE W. SELLERS.

JINKINS.—At Mt. Vernon, Ill., Jan. 28, 1891, sister Anna Jinkins, at the early age of 32 years, 11 months and 8 days.

Funeral services from 1 Thess. 4: 14 by the writer. O. Z. HICKS.

BEEBE.—At Central City, Iowa, May 26, 1891, of cerebro-spinal meningitis, after an illness of six weeks, Susie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beebe, aged 15 years.

The funeral services were held at the house by Eld. J. D. Mason, of the Congregational church from the words, "She is not dead but sleepeth." Six young men bore the body to its last resting place, and her classmates were nearly all in attendance. Her life has passed away in its beautiful springtime. From suffering and pain she is now at rest. While it is hard thus, in the flower of youth, to lay this body in the tomb, yet the spirit lives, and we meekly bow to the decree of him, who whispers from above, "She will not perish." LIZZIE M. ROGERS.

BOLIARD.—At Eglon, W. Va., May 19, 1891, Bro. Peter Boliard, aged 72 years.

Deceased leaves a wife and a large family of children and grandchildren. Bro. Boliard was a deacon for many years. Funeral discourse by Eld. S. A. Fike. RACHEL WEIMER.

SULLIVAN.—In Mexico, Ind., March 10, 1891, Rosa Sullivan, daughter of Noah and Lizzie Sullivan, aged 10 years, 5 months and 11 days.

SULLIVAN.—At the same place March 27, 1891, Elmer S. Sullivan, aged 2 years and 15 days.

SULLIVAN.—At the same place Amy A. Sullivan, March 30, 1891, aged 11 years, 11 months and 2 days.

SULLIVAN.—At the same place, March 30, Arkites Sullivan, aged 9 years, 2 months and 4 days.

SULLIVAN.—At the same plaec, April 12, 1891, Joseph S. Sullivan, aged 3 years, 10 months and 20 days.

Thus, in less than one month, were these bereft parents called to part with five of their beloved offspring, torn from their embrace by that child-life-destroying disease, diphtheria. Two,—Amy and Arkites,—died on the same day, not over twenty-five minutes apart. Owing to the contagious nature of the disease, it was not deemed advisable to hold funeral services at the time of interment, but on the third Sunday of May the combined funerals of the five took place at the Brethren's house at Mexico, near which the five newly-made graves are located. The departed ones are not lost but gone before. Funeral services by brethren J. J. Fox and Frank Fisher. J. M. REPLOGLE.

KARNS.—In the bounds of the Walnut Valley church, Barton Co., Kans., March 23, 1891, Freddie Karns, son of friend Henry and Alice Karns.

On account of sickness, the funeral was postponed until May 17, when the occasion was improved by Rev. Hall, of Great Bend, assisted by the writer. JOHN CLAPPER.

JOHNSON.—In the bounds of the Walnut Valley church, Barton Co., Kans., May 21, Mary Alice Johnson, wife of friend Johnson and daughter of friend Samuel Golladay. Funeral occasion improved by the writer from Job 14: 14. JOHN CLAPPER.

BRUBAKER.—In the Black Water congregation, Franklin Co., Va., May 14, 1891, of pneumonia, sister Julia, wife of Louis Brubaker and daughter of John and Sarah Bowman, aged 30 years, 7 months and 17 days.

Excursions to California.

An excursion, in charge of M. M. Eshelman, Immigration Agent, will leave Chicago over the "Santa Fe Route" the first Tuesday of each month, and Kansas City the following morning, during the year 1891, commencing July 7.

Parties wishing to avail themselves of the privileges of these Excursions, should write Mr. Eshelman at Chicago, in care of J. M. Connel, 212 Clark Street, or George Hagenbuch, 1050 Union Avenue (opposite Union Depot), Kansas City, Mo., stating when and where they wish to join one of these Excursions, and he will give them full information, and if desired will reserve berths in Tourist Sleeping Car for them. Do not fail to write him; he will do you good.

GEORGE L. MCDONAUGH,
Traveling Agent.

An Expert Opinion.

THE "Medical and Surgical Journal" for March 1891, says editorially:

"This pretty little city of Idaho Springs, Colorado, is situated in a beautiful park about 37 miles from Denver, and is about 7,500 feet above sea level. It is thrifty, prosperous, and has become noted for its hot and cold mineral springs, which contain medicinal properties of extraordinary value. Idaho Springs as a health resort cannot be excelled this side of the world-renowned Carlsbad Springs of Germany, whose waters and the waters found at Idaho Springs bear almost an identical chemical analysis.

"In the early stages of consumption these waters, combined with the invigorating air of this beautiful climate, are almost a specific. We take pleasure in recommending these waters to all suffering from coughs and catarrhal affections. It is the best place to go to for the cure of phthisis. Those of our colleagues who have been sending their patients to this grand health resort all join in praising the satisfactory results received from the invigorating waters and climate. We would therefore urge physicians to advise their patients, threatened with consumption, not to procrastinate, but to try, before it is too late, the salutary effects of the waters of Idaho Springs. The Union Pacific are making special efforts to carry the public to and from this famous resort, with all the modern comfort and ease which the tourist seeking health and pleasure can desire." 22–34.

Grand Excursion to Yellowstone National Park and Other Western Resorts.

THE Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," proposes to run, in July, 1891, a grand excursion from Omaha to Yellowstone National Park, Great Shoshone Falls, Idaho, Ogden, Salt Lake City, Garfield Beach, Denver, Clear Creek Canon, the famous Loop, and other points of interest. The Union Pacific will furnish six horse Concord Coaches, which will carry the party from Beaver Canon, Idaho, to and through Yellowstone National Park. These Coaches will also be taken to Shoshone Station, and used for the ride to Great Shoshone Falls.

From Beaver Canon to Yellowstone National Park, the trip will occupy three days going, three days returning, and eight days will be spent in the park. Excellent tents and good equipment for camping out will be furnished by the Union Pacific, en route from Beaver Canon to the Park, and while in the Park the tourists will be quartered at the various hotels.

The very low rate of $250.00 per passenger has been made from Omaha. This rate includes Railroad, Pullman, and Stage Fare, Meals and Hotel bills from the time of leaving Omaha until the return of the excursion, in all 30 days. No half fare rates.

Only thirty-five passengers can be accommodated, and as accommodations are limited EARLY APPLICATION for same should be made.

In ordering tickets, send money for same by express, to Harry P. Deuel, City Ticket Agent, U. P. System, 1302 Farnam St., Omaha, Nebraska.

No children will be allowed on this trip. For further information relative to this excursion and itinerary, apply to Garfield Beach on Great Salt Lake, Utah.

THE famous health resort, Garfield Beach, on Great Salt Lake, 18 miles from Salt Lake City, is reached via the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," and is now open for the season.

This is the only real sand beach on Great Salt Lake, and is one of the finest bathing and pleasure resorts in the West. Owing to the stimulating effect of the brine on the skin, or the saline air upon the lungs the appetite is stimulated, and after a bath, the bathers are ready for a hearty meal, and feel greatly invigorated.

Fine bath-houses, accommodating 400 people, have been erected at Garfield Beach, in connection with which there is a first-class restaurant and a fine, large pavillion built out over the lake. All of these are run by the Union Pacific, which guarantees a first-class resort in every respect.

For complete description of Garfield Beach and Great Salt Lake, send to E. L. Lomax, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent, Omaha, for copies of "Sights and Scenes in Utah," or "A Glimpse of Great Salt Lake." 22–34.

The Monon Route.

The equipment of this line is not surpassed by that of any road in the land. All trains are vestibuled, from the engine to the parlor and sleeping cars. They are run through solid, without change of any character, between Chicago, Indianapolis and Cincinnati, heated by steam, lighted by electricity, and fitted with every device that adds to the comfort or convenience of passengers.

The day train, known as "The Velvet," consists of a Parlor Car, Ladies' Car, Smoking Car and Dining Car. This train leaves Dearborn Station at 9: 40 A. M. daily, arrives at Indianapolis at 3: 20 P. M. and at Cincinnati at 6: 45 P. M.

The constantly increasing travel via the Monon demands additional accommodation. Hereafter the night train, known as "The Electric," will consist of a Compartment Sleeping Car, a regular Sleeper, a Ladies' Car, with an additional Sleeper for use of Indianapolis passengers. The entire outfit has been built by Pullman expressly for this line, and is simply the best. The addition of a Compartment Sleeping Car to the equipment, fills the bill. Families traveling together will appreciate this special accommodation, while those preferring the regular Sleeping Car can have their choice. This train leaves Dearborn Station daily, at 8: 35 P. M., reaches Indianapolis at 3: 45 A. M. and arrives at Cincinnati at 7: 35 A. M. Passengers in Indianapolis Sleeper can occupy their berths until 7. 00 A. M.

Seats in Parlor Cars, berths in Sleepers and compartments in Parlor Cars can be secured at City Ticket Office, No. 73 Clark Street.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

THIS little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same. Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising."—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday-school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3.00; by express, $2.60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

ANNUAL MEETING OBSERVATIONS.

As we, through the kindness of Bro. Moore, our very efficient Office Editor, were relieved from the duty of making notes of the business transactions of the Meeting, we accepted an outside position from which we made some observations which we note for the pleasure, or otherwise, of our readers.

Annual Meeting has become not only an important factor in the church, socially and administratively, but it is also commanding the attention of the outside world from a business stand-point, so much so that it may become a question after awhile, as to who shall run it. Of course, we have no objections to file against our railroads, as they are a great accommodation to us, especially at half fare rates, and without them it would be impossible for us to enjoy the annual reunions which have so much to do in learning to know each other, and also, in keeping united as one people. Yes, railroads are good things for Annual Meeting, and then, Annual Meeting is not a bad thing for railroads whose lines happen to run by the places accepted as the location for the annual church gatherings.

Our first observation was that it brought quite a large number of our friends to Huntingdon as they passed to and from the place of meeting. While the College formed the center of attraction, we can assure those who stopped off, that the church here highly appreciated the visits made and the sermons preached for us. We greatly enjoy the association of Christian friends and will always be glad to do all we can to make those who call with us welcome and happy.

We would be glad to name all, but we cannot do this, and will use all alike by saying that the visits were enjoyed by both the church and the school, and we hope that we may have the pleasure of many more similar calls, whether they be before and after Annual Meeting or at any other time.

It is rather astonishing to know how much pocket money our people have when Annual Meeting time comes, and how freely it is used for this purpose. The sum of $50,000 is no small amount for a church as small in numbers as ours, to spend annually in railroad travel and for one occasion, yet this estimate is very low. Add to this $30,000 more for rooms and board, and we have no inconsiderable sum of money. Whether all thus spent, is the best possible use of it, we will not now stop to discuss. This is a problem that each one of us can work out at his own leisure.

Then the excursions, - we must not overlook them,—to the Gettysburg battle-fields, and to the Capital of our great country, were objective points that were well done by our people. Paul, Silas, Barnabas, and others of our ancient preachers visited the large cities, but their missions were somewhat different. At neither Gettysburg nor Washington were heard the clanking of chains, or seen the inner prison,—neither was heard, in the midnight hour, the voicing of song and prayer, nor were sinners made to cry out: "What must I do to be saved?" The attending circumstances were all different, and these must be taken into account in the great summation.

As much as we enjoy sight seeing and becoming acquainted with the outside world, we do most decidedly doubt the propriety of our brethren and sisters going on such excursions during the sessions of the Meeting. It does not look well, and it seems to us that it ought not to feel well on the part of those who thus go. In these things we ought to think beyond our own personal enjoyment.

When we thus go out, we may take with us the form of godliness, but do most wonderfully deny the power thereof. Such outside advertisements are against the blessed cause which we have espoused, rather than for it. Then, too, it is very nice to have the privilege of shaking hands with the President and the Governors of our States, but we are not sure that it is the best thing to use all such privileges. There is a spirit connected with such things that is not commendable. It is better, in most cases, to know that we may do such things than to do them.

We noticed that our remarks, made a few weeks prior to Annual Meeting, about courtesy, etc., when travelling, were remembered by some, but not by all. Lunching is not considered objectionable or rude unless we make it so, and from the appearance of some of the coaches, which were filled by our members, we fear the rules of ordinary decency were not too well observed. And the crowding in and out of the coaches was indulged in by too many that should know better. To this, however, there were honorable exceptions and we were glad of it.

A gratuitous observation: Those who will not crowd, and thus are last, generally fare best. Railroad companies, and especially during this Meeting, make it a rule to comfortably seat all their patrons, and when there are not enough coaches at first, to do this, more are added, so that the non-crowders often get the best accommodations —and they so deserve.

Much has been said to the praise of the management of the Meeting. This Committee surely did well and deserve the special thanks of the Meeting. But some of those who were to be accommodated, greatly interfered with the possibility of carrying out well-executed plans. And while they were the cause of many irregularities, they were loudest in complaining against the management. When rules and regulations are made for the general good, it is always best for us to submit to them. This is essential to order and we should not forget it.

We turn now to the general conduct of our people, which was most exemplary and elicited the warmest commendation of the citizens of Hagerstown.

It was remarked by some of our members that they never attended a meeting of this kind, where the members were so neatly and tastefully dressed. Our members can dress in the accepted order of the church and appear as neat and attractive as the devotees of fashion and style. Cleanliness and good taste are always admired by right-thinking people. Only the uncleanly, slovenly and untidy are made the subjects of unkind remarks, and we are not sure but what such people deserve censure, as there is no excuse for such people in this land of good fits, clean water and soap without limit.

Furthermore, it seemed to us that the people of Hagerstown were extraordinarily kind and considerate towards our people, and deserve a great deal of credit. After all, pure and undefiled religion before God is more than profession and form, and after enjoying the hospitalities needed, it would be a good thing for us to ask ourselves what we would do, were similar demands made of us. It is, sometimes, more blessed to give than to receive. Don't we want some of the blessedness too? If so, we must do in a way that will make it possible for it to come.

We have many more observations that we would like to make, but our space for this week is full and we close.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

"THY WILL BE DONE!"

SAVIOR! Savior! to-night the crown of thorns
Is pressing heavy on my brow;
Thou, who didst wear this chaplet once in scorn,
Help me to breathe in faith—"Thy will be done!"

The heavy cross I'm bearing day by day
Seems pressing all my spirit out;
Thou who knowest all the weary saddened way,
Bend down and hear my cry—"Thy will be done!"

On bended knee I've wildly, madly plead
For gracious human sympathy—
That boon has been withheld, my hopes are dead,
To thee I lift my eyes and pray, "Thy will be done."

Father! perhaps 'tis well it should be thus,
Some hearts are strangely formed,
They cling to earthly stays and props too much,
And such is mine—"Thy will be done!"

I beg for strength to be given day by day,
To "tread the wine-press now alone,"
With duty in my heart and truth to light the way,
Bravely to journey on—"Thy will be done!"

When out before my eyes this world shall fade,
And earthly trials be forever past,
Soothe all my griefs, give peace at last,
Thy way is ever best. "Thy will be done!"

"FORBID THEM NOT."

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To JACOB H. LONGENECKER,

Beloved Brother:—

I CONGRATULATE Eld. William Hertzler and his congregation and the entire community of Spring Creek and Derry, in the very interesting and instructive children's meeting held Nov. 16. It was the best I ever attended. The addresses of Eld. Samuel R. Zug and Bro. Jonas Price, Jr., were in a vein eminently calculated to lead the church to consider the necessary provision of the Gospel for modes of Bible instruction specially adapted to children and youth.

If anything is clearly established in the example and teachings of Christ, it is His interest in children, and His inter-colloquial method of instruction. I have no doubt there were few there who did not feel as never before, that Sunday-schools are warranted by the Gospel both in principle and fact.

The remarks of Bro. Samuel Hertzler were impressively pertinent. The preceding speakers had stimulated the ambition of the children to the highest pitch to excel in their Bible studies, and in their intellectual efforts in general. Bro. Hertzler sought to concentrate their aims on the high attainments of goodness, purity, usefulness. That was the clincher of the meeting. Alas, how low our aims, how low our acquisitions! How prejudice and jealousy and envy and self-seeking fetter us! How few the families brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord! How most children, even in professedly Christian households, are poisoned from their very conception by the virus of selfishness and worldliness! Even the Brethren are largely world-saturated without admitting it, and often without suspecting it.

John Baptist has a mission to perform in the close of the nineteenth century in preparing the way of the Lord. The Sunday-school fits in well between the family and the church. Its work is a glorious one, and to do it faithfully requires the courage of the Tishbite. The ministry is as much indebted to proper juvenile nurture as childhood is to the ministry. "Feed my lambs" is as divine and imperative an injunction as "Feed my sheep." To neglect the children is to blast and cripple both family and church. The whole current of the world's history, both secular and sacred, demonstrate this.

There is not a more blessed institute on earth to-day than the Sabbath-school. Neither church nor family can prosper without the practical illustration of the principles which give the Sunday-school all its uniqueness.

Persevere, my dear brother, in a work so manifestly sanctioned by Christ while on earth, and so evidently owned of God through all the centuries since. If there are any who would forbid the children to be brought to Christ, let them think that He has not changed His mind since Mark 10: 14 was written.

"WEIGHED IN THE BALANCES."

BY SAMUEL WEIMER.

"Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting."—Dan. 5: 27.

IT takes a certain number of grains of gold to make a dollar, and one grain or two less will never constitute a dollar. So it takes a certain amount of religion to form a Christian, and less will not do.

There is a counterfeit religion also. Religion is counterfeited as gold, silver, or notes may be, in imitation of the original, to deceive the public. A counterfeit silver dollar may contain, when placed upon the balances, the full weight of a genuine silver dollar, but never the amount of silver required to go into a dollar.

Now, those things which are used to polish the popular religions of to-day to make them shine, have no weight whatever on the Lord's balances. All this is found wanting. An empty barrel, when sounded, makes much more noise than a full one, but it does not take much of a detective to ascertain the difference.

It would seem that any person, with an unbiased mind, and familiar with the Word of God, certainly could ascertain the difference between pure religion, and that which is adulterated. Let us look to ourselves closely, that we come up to the standard required of a Christian. Nothing else will be considered weighty enough in the Lord's balances. We have plenty of room to begin at home.

Prayer is one of the requisites required to enter into our religion, and we cannot too strongly urge it. I would to God that it could be so powerfully impressed, that all our brethren and sisters, who are heads of families, would set up the family altar in their own home circle. Let them pray fervently, earnestly, eagerly, and with great warmth. Without complying with the command of prayer, we shall be altogether too light in the Lord's balances. There are some persons who can pray away from home and at prayer-meeting, but at home they are not so much as heard asking a blessing at the table. Let every Christian erect the family altar, and he will be no more without it than without fire on the coldest winter day.

Another trait, belonging to our religion, is honesty, and this does not only mean, "Pay your debts that you justly owe," but, "Deal fairly and squarely in all your dealings. When you promise your children anything, be as prompt with them as you would with anybody else."

We are also commanded not to forsake "the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb. 10: 25. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Prov. 22: 6. According to this the children are to go to meeting, to Sunday-school and to prayer-meeting, as well as the older members of the family. Let us watch lest we be too light!

CROWDING.

BY J. A. MILLER.

THE above subject was brought to my mind by noticing so many articles in the MESSENGER on the above subject.

Crowding generally retards progress and is often productive of evil consequences. Hence it is not the spirit by which the church should accomplish her important work, yet we sometimes notice a tendency in this direction. When a sentiment begins to grow in the Brotherhood, there seems to be a disposition to crowd it through before the church is ready to receive it, and often offenses are caused by this means.

Reformatory measures, which are good in themselves, are often retarded in their progress by this crowding process. The MESSENGER office is crowded with so many articles on the same subject, and some manifest such an intemperate zeal that the editors are obliged to reject some or publish them at the risk of offending brethren who happen to think otherwise. In this we would recommend forbearance on both sides.

This zeal is often manifested by good but enthusiastic brethren who forget to "make haste slowly." Such brethren are good helpers, but we should never let our zeal cause us to do anything that will destroy the general spirit of unity and peace in the church.

But the crowding does not stop in the MESSENGER office, but measures are presented to District and Annual Meetings, and the answer is returned, "We do not think it best." But it is soon arranged in a new dress, and presented again and again until it is partially granted, when the crowding begins in the local churches.

This often makes trouble in churches, and reason and moderate action are the only means that will preserve peace and union. Often brethren, zealously affected in other directions, will press these measures at the expense of the peace and union of the church. Measures, protesting against the use of tobacco and intoxicants and favoring schools or Missionary and Tract Work have all had their crowding seasons and zealots, as well as unreasonable opposers. We are not speaking against the measures, but against an over-zealous spirit manifested in bringing about such measures. Our work may be right, but we should labor to do it in the right way, too. But crowding will not do. It causes disaster and hinders progress. You can clear a crowded house by system much quicker than by crowding; and we can rid the church of error much faster if we take time to marshal our forces in a line of union. If we push and crowd the work, some conscientious hearts may be trampled under.
